BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO THURSDAY ,AUGUST 1, 1940

JULY ATTACKS COST GERMANY 240 PLANES

5 Families Homeless, as Fire Sweeps Hastings Village Block

5 FAMILIES HOMELESS

At Tavistock 6 Persons Escape Down Wooden Staircase When Fire Destroys Half of Business Block — Stratford Fire Department Sends Aid

Hastings, Ont., Aug. 1 (CP)—Five families were left homeless early today as flames swept through a block of buildings in the main business district of this Peterborough county town and caused damage estimated at $15,000.

James Harrell, Hollywood actor, is credited with saving Mr. and Mrs. Roy Johnson and their two children. They were asleep when he kicked down a door and groped his way into their second story apartment.

Police Chief William Wellman, his wife Mrs. James Reider and two children, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Killingbeck, Mrs. Carrie Drum, her son, and, Mary Godfrey lost their homes and most of their furniture.

A Canadian National Railways crew first noticed the fire. Firemen could do little at first because of lack of water but later got a pumper going. A second line of hose was operated from a tanning company's pump.. A call to Peterborough brought a pumper and six men to operate it.

6 Escape Blaze at Tavistock

Tavistock Ont. Aug. 1 CP)—Six persons escaped down a wooden staircase just two minutes ahead of the flames when fire destroyed half of the business block owned by Andrew Beacheler on the main street of Tavistock village today. Damage was estimated at $10,000.

Mr. and Mrs. John Thiessen and three small children and S. A. Barker who lived in apartments over the stores, barely had time to make their way out before the upper floors of the building were engulfed in flames. They lost all their possessions.

The combined barber shop, billiard hall and bowling alley, occupying half of the ground floor, was gutted, with total loss of all equipment and stock. Origin of the fire had not been determined.

Stratford fire department responded with pumper and ladder truck to assist Tavistock's volunteer brigade and were able to prevent the blaze spreading to adjoining buildings.

Navy Seaplane Tender Berthed in Delaware River Catches Fire

Camden, N.J., Aug. 1.—(AP)—While foremen poked through the still smouldering ashes of a paint factory fire believed to have taken nine lives, flames broke out in the $12,000,000 navy seaplane tender Curtiss berthed on the Delaware River.

Scaffolding inside one of the main stacks of the 9,000-ton tender blazed up last night but the fire was extinguished without major damage.

Officials of the New York shipbuilding company declared there was "no suspicion of sabotage" but that the Federal Bureau of Investigation would make a "routine" inquiry "as in all such cases."

The vessel is a sister ship of the Albermarle and was launched last April.

VETERAN FLIER LOSES HIS LIFE

Charles Doyle, Who Flew in First World War, Crashes in Rented Plane

Vancouver, Aug. 1 (CP)—Charles Doyle, veteran Canadian flier, is dead and Bruno Wowk, 21, in critical condition today as the result of an airplane crash yesterday in the yard of their Lulu Island home.

Wowk's 26-year-old sister Edna was the first to reach the scene of the crash. With two friends and Doyle's teen-aged sons, Douglas and Charles, she had watched the machine stunting overhead.

A trained nurse, she gave her brother emergency treatment. He was still wearing a plaster cast as the result of a fractured spine and hip suffered March 10 when a plane in which he was flying with James M. Jacobsen crashed in the same vicinity.

Doyle, 46, married and with six children, was working as a carpenter at the Wowk home. He recently completed an aeronautics course at St. Hubert, Que. He flew in the first Great War and more recently was attached to the Chinese Air Force as an instructor.

Wowk's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Nick Wowk, are at present in Winnipeg.

JOHN COUNSELL, K.C DIES

Toronto, Aug. 1.— (CP)—John Counsell, K.C., of Hamilton, widely-known lawyer and one-time rugby player, died last night in a Toronto hospital. He was 65 years old and had been in failing health for some years.

Born in Hamilton, Mr. Counsell received his education at Upper Canada College, the University of Toronto and Osgoode Hall.

Free Monthly Cable Greetings Parents, Children

London, Aug. 1.—(CP)—A free monthly exchange of cable greetings between British parents and their children removed to the Dominions under the government evacuation scheme was announced today by Sir Edward Wilshaw, chairman of Cable and Wireless.

The youngsters may wire their parents one of eight standard text monthly, such as "Arrived safely, well and happy, writing", and "Now going to school and like it".

Parents may send "have received your telegram, glad to know you are safe. Write soon". "Is there anything you specially require", or six similar replies.

Why The Weather?

Hot August! Many ask why August is so hot when the sun is lower (9 degrees on this date) than on June 21 when it is highest of the year, and also when there is one hour less of sunshine. Seasons always lag behind the sun. As summer approaches the sun gets higher, and in the first part of that season the heat is used to melt the snow and ice to evaporate the resulting water, to heat the atmosphere (which is turned over many times) and also the crust of the earth. For some time after August 1 the amount of heat received from the sun is greater than the amount radiated, and cooler weather will not come until these two balance. July is usually the hottest month of the year, but sometimes August has this distinction.

Duke and Duchess of Windsor Travel As Capt. and Mrs. Wood

Lisbon, Portugal, Aug. 1—(AP)—The Duke and Duchess of Windsor, travelling simply as "Captain and Mrs. Wood," were to sail for New York aboard the . American export liner Excalibur at 6 p.m today (1 p.m. EDT). The ship is due in New York Aug. 9.

En route to the Bahamas, where the Duke will take over his post as Governor and Commander-in-Chief, the couple will make the trip aboard the 9,359-ton cargo liner with Maj. Gray Phillips, the Duke's Secretary, . and his two aides de camp, Capt. George Wood and Capt. Vyvyan Drury.

For the man who renounced Kingdom and Empire for "the woman I love," the trip will be in strange contrast to his previous visits to the United States—in 1919, when he went there as official good will ambassador and was greeted with one of Broadway's first post-war showers of ticker tape, and in 1924 when, as now, he travelled "incognito" and, except for a formal visit to President Coolidge, devoted all his time to making the rounds of gay social functions on Long Island and elsewhere.

Also sailing on the Excalibur will be William Phillips, U.S. Ambassador to Rome, who is going home for a brief vacation; Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, Jr., U.S. Ambassador to Poland; John Cudahy, Ambassador to Belgium; and George Gordon, Minister of The Netherlands. Most of the other passengers will be war refugees of various nationalities.

(In London, the press published without comment the statement by U.S. Under-Secretary of State Sumner Welles that it would be a violation of American neutrality law for British warships to convoy the Excalibur.

(It was assumed, however, that British warships in the Atlantic would keep a long-distance watch on the Windsors' passage without infringing on American neutrality and would be ready to prevent any enemy coup that might damage the prestige of British sea power.)

ITALIAN TROOP CONCENTRATIONS HEAVILY BOMBED

"SEVERE DAMAGE"

Cairo Communique Announces Loss of Two Italian Subs Due to Fine Marksmanship of R.A.F. Pilots

Cairo, Egypt, Aug. 1.—(AP)—Italian troop concentrations in the vicinity of Kassala Sudan Post recently captured from the British have been subjected to ten raids in two days by the Royal Air Force a British communique today.

The R.A.F. reported that "severe damage" was done to the concentrations and machine-gun and anti-aircraft posts in raids Tuesday and Wednesday.

The British Air Force announced also today the sinking of two Italian submarines by British planes in the Mediterranean last month

ROOSEVELT'S BAN ON GAS CAUSES JAPAN CONCERN

Admiralty Spokesman States Move May Lead to Serious 'Repercussions'

WARNS POWERS

Tokyo, Aug. 1—(AP)—President Roosevelt's ban on United States export of aviation gasoline . to points outside the western hemisphere was interpreted by the Admiralty spokesman today as a move against Japan, Germany and Italy which might lead to "repercussions."

The spokesman also inferentially warned foreign powers against interference in the current round-up of persons—apparently mostly Britons—allegedly suspected of espionage. He said this was entirely an internal affair, and in this connection he warned newspaper correspondents against "illegitimate activities"

The American aviation gasoline embargo, he said, was "an attempt to kill two birds with one stone," namely the Rome-Berlin axis and Japan.

"Under whatever pretext the order of aviation gasoline was issued," he said, "it undoubtedly is designed to exert economic pressure on Japan.

(President Roosevelt signed the order yesterday in "the interest of national defence," a White House announcement said. Japan, although formerly a good customer for American aviation gasoline, has received practically none since a "moral embargo" was imposed by the United States last year for the

'We Guard Passage Of Alps to the End' Swiss Army Pledged

649th Anniversary of First Oath of Union of Swiss Cantons is Observed — General Guisan Says 'War is Not Ended; Armistice is Not Peace'

Berne, Switzerland, Aug. 1—(AP)—General Henri Guisan pledged the Swiss army anew today to defend the passage of the Alps "to the end" in a broadcast on the 649th anniversary of the first oath of union of the Swiss Cantons.

The commander of the army warned this nation which is holding steadfastly to neutrality and independence amid the European conflict that "the war is not ended; the armistice is not a peace."

He spoke first in French and then in German.

He recalled that all soldiers of the nation's citizen army of more than 500,000 were sworn to defend the nation with their lives when general mobilization began a year ago.

"We took the oath like our forefathers on Rutli Plains," he said. "Our watchword, our pledge, remains the same. We guard the passage of the Alps—guard them to the end."

His speech marked Switzerland's celebration of what one neutral diplomat called the "miracle of 1940"—the continued independence and neutrality of this little democracy amid belligerence and totalitarianism.

Tunisian Prince, English Poet Are Among 1400 Passengers

Alfred Noyes Confident Hitler's Projected Blitzkrieg Will Not Make Dent in Britain's Iron Defence

NO WAR POETRY

By JACK TRACY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

An Eastern Canadian Port, Aug. 1—(CP)—An ocean liner, landing 1,400 passengers here today, brought with it the most varied passenger list of any of the nine ships which have carried British travellers and European refugees to Canadian shores within the last month.

A Tunisian Prince, a French artillery officer on a secret mission, an English poet, a British labor peer and a titled Lord and gentlewoman, aged six and 15 respectively, were part of the ship's complement. There were also 600 British children going to homes in the United States and Canada.

All of the passengers came out here under private arrangements, as distinguished from the British government's evacuation scheme. A number of the children travelled in school groups.

Tall Prince Abdullah Ben Ayad of Tunis, who lost a leg fighting for France in the Dardanelles in the first Great War, arrived with the Princess Ben Ayad to take up residence on Montreal Island for duration of the war.

Supports General de Gaulle

The Prince is an uncle of King Farouk of Egypt. His wife is an Englishwoman, sister of Wing Commander Wright, member of the British House of Commons.

Like most Englishmen who come to this country, Alfred Noyes, the English poet, is confident that Hitler's projected blitzkrieg will not make a dent in Britain's iron defence. The poet brought out his wife and three young children.

He will lecture in Canada under the auspices of the National Council of Education, and then go to the United States on a lecture tour. The children will go to school in Canada.

"Greater East Asia" Name of Sphere Japan Aims to Dominate

Premier Kenoye Announces Plan for a Brand New Japanese State

AWAY FROM WEST

Toyko, Aug. 1—(AP)—The government of Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye announced today a plan for a brand new Japanese state, based on a sweeping totalitarianism at home and dedicated to an independent foreign policy which would extend Japan's domination southward over French Indo-China and The Netherlands East Indies.

In a statement of policy the government outlined a strongly centralized and unified state designed for creation of "a new order for greater east Asia," with the "yen bloc"—Japan and her continental satellites whose currencies are based on the yen—as the foundation.

The statement failed to take Japan any closer to the Rome-Berlin axis despite the totalitarianism at home. It pulled Japan away from other western powers, however, and called for an extensive rearmament program.

Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka said in an interview that Japan had discarded the policy of trying to win the friendship of "recalcitrant nations." As for the European war, he said Japan for the present would maintain a policy of non-involvement.

Make No Vain Efforts

"We strive to make whatever friends we can under the prevailing environment," he said, "but henceforth we will not make a vain effort to grasp the hands of those countries which cannot be turned into friends. The government is through with toadyism."

The government's statement coined the phrase "Greater East Asia" in naming the sphere Japan aims to dominate — previously it had been simply "East Asia," meaning Japan, Manchoukuo and the occupied sections of China.

Of this Matsuoka said:

"Needless to say, the term 'Greater East Asia' includes the South Seas. The final aim is establishment of a stabilizing force for a self-sufficiency embracing not only Japan, Manchoukuo and China, but also Indo-China and the East Indies."

He said Japan would try to fulfil her mission "in concert with those friendly powers which are prepared to cooperate with us."

SHIP IN DOCK NOT ALCANTARA

Armed British Cruiser Going to Shipyards at Vianna for Repairs

Rio De Janeiro, Aug. 1—(AP) — Maritime police, who had announced arrival of the battle-damaged merchant cruiser Alcantara early today, said after daybreak that the ship which entered the harbor was the North American freighter Mormacland.

The British Embassy said the 22,209-ton Alcantara, which fought and reportedly damaged a German raider in the South Atlantic last Monday, was expected here "soon."

It was reported the Alcantara were continuing pursuit of the raider, as indicated in an admiralty statement in London yesterday.

An Embassy statement said the sea battle occurred near the Brazilian island of Trinidade—well within the American neutrality zone—and that both ships were hit, the Alcantara suffering "slight damages." The Embassy said the raider mounted eight six-inch guns.

(New York shipping circles said the circumstances suggested that the raider was the 10,000-ton Narvik understood to carry disappearing six-inch guns. The Alcantara mounts 10 guns of undisclosed calibre.)

STANDARD BEER GLASS SET

Toronto, Aug. 1.— (CP)— The Ontario Liquor Control Board ruled today that a standard beer glass of 9 1-2 ounces will be served in all Ontario hotels. The order is effective Oct. 1.

Beer by the glass at present varies from seven to ten ounces.

CALDWELL RENEWS CALL FOR SECRET HOUSE SESSION

Statements of Key Ministers Soften Opposition Criticism but Fail to Silence Demands for Full Details of War Picture

Government Urged to Set Up Special Committee of Commons Which Would Sit Throughout Recess of Parliament

By CARL REINKE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Aug 1—(CP)—Statements from key ministers on Canada's war endeavor, while softening opposition criticism in the House of Commons, have failed to silence demands for full details of the war picture.

"Until we know exactly what the situation is, we as a Democratic parliament have not discharged our duty to the people of Canada," said Conservative Leader Hanson yesterday during discussion of defence estimates.

M. J. Coldwell (CCF Rosetown-Biggar) went farther and renewed the call frequently heard for a secret meeting of parliament to review more fully military and diplomatic activity. That also was the view of Rodney Adamson (Con. York West).

ENGINEER BLAMED FOR FIERY DEATH OF 43 PERSONS

Railroad Investigators Claim Engineer Failed to Follow Operating Orders

COACH ENVELOPED

Akron, O., Aug. 1—(AP)—Railroad investigators today blamed an engineman's failure to follow operating orders for the fiery death of 43 persons in 1940's second major United States train wreck.

They said failure to sidetrack a gasoline-electric coach led it to crash head-on with a 73-car freight train near here last night. The steel coach instantly became a virtual furnace.

"The crew of the 'doodlebug' (the

London, Aug. 1—(CP)—Germany continued to strike at Britain by air with raids during the night on both the east and west coasts. One German fighter was shot down, the Government stated.

The Air Ministry issued a communique saying:

"Our fighters intercepted and engaged a small force of enemy aircraft which approached the southeast coast yesterday evening. An enemy fighter was shot down. Two of our fighters failed to return from yesterday's patrols."

Earlier the Ministry of Home Security had announced that enemy raiders dropped bombs "at a few points in the neighborhood of the Thames estuary and the Bristol channel" last night, slightly damaging houses, no casualties were reported.

WAR ACTIVITY SPEEDING UP BUILDING

46.6 Per Cent Increase for First Seven Months of Year 1940 Over Year 1939, According to MacLean Building Reports Ltd.

JULY UP 32.4 P.C.

Construction activity continued through July without abatement bringing the seven months' total for the year to $154,741,100, a 46.6 per cent increase over the 1939 total of $105,575,000. Contracts awarded throughout Canada for the month of July, for all types of construction, as compiled by MacLean Building Reports Ltd., totalled $29,305,600. This is a 32.4 percent increase over the total of $22,129,700 for July 1939.

Ontario registered the largest provincial total with $11,985,700; Quebec, $4,319,200; Alberta, $3,084,700; Manitoba, $2,924,700; British Columbia, $2,531,600; Saskatchewan, $2,194,300; Nova Scotia, $1,698,500; New Brunswick, $488,800 and Prince Edward Island $78,100.

Building in Toronto and Montreal continues firm, consisting largely of private activity. Contracts awarded for Toronto and suburbs totalled $2,179,200 for July and $15,356,400 for seven months to date. The 1939 total for the same period was $14,239,300. Montreal Island total for July was $1,634,000 bringing the year's total to $11,536,600. This is down compared with the 1939 figure of $17,062,800.

N. Y. Tribune Advocates Mutual Defence Treaty for Canada, U. S.

In its leading editorial, The Herald Tribune said the United States "for its own protection and to implement the Monroe doctrine" should institute negotiations.

"The status of Canada makes possible the writing of such a treaty without our involvement in the European war," it added. "Though a member of the British Empire, the Dominion is a sovereign nation. She could enter into such a treaty without in anywise compromising her allegiance to England; and the treaty could be so drawn as to bring this country into action only when this hemisphere was directly attacked.

"But, though making no change in this country's status as a non-belligerent, the treaty could count heavily in preparation for a future that has now grown ominously close. Military conversations could be expressly provided for and could proceed forthwith. The sort of confusion that helped doom Belgium could be avoided. By an exchange of information preparedness could be pursued upon a co-operative basis."

In conclusion the Herald Tribune said:

"We offer the proposal as no strange or novel step in either American or Canadian policy. Rather would such a treaty be the logical and inevitable culmination of an old and previous friendship between two peoples As neighbors jointly threatened they would pledge their aid one to another."

AUTHOR OF 'SONGS OF A SOURDOUGH' REACHES CANADA

FLIGHT OVER EUROPE

By JACK BRAYLEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

An Eastern Canadian Port, Aug. 1—(CP)—Returning after 28 years to scenes he has pictured in poetry, Robert W. Service, gentle-spoken, mild-mannered Englishman who wrote tough bar-room philosophy, sees no inspiration for works on "this horrible war."

The widely-read genius of "songs of the sourdough" debarked here today with his wife and daughter and left immediately for his home in Vancouver.

He told a grim story of fleeing across Europe from German bombers and their spreading destruction. He told of towns blowing up and acquaintances being killed and mowed down.

No Inspiration to Write on War

"And you ask have I inspiration to write on this horrible war," he said with approaching bitterness. "Ah, no. On the contrary I want to put this business out of my mind for a while and try to contribute some more of my own particular style of writing."

Service was touring Soviet Russia when war broke out. He was ordered across the Polish border at Kiev and except for a few loose francs was without money. He was able at Warsaw to get enough money to finance his train fare to Riga. From there he entrained for Tallin. He went without food and managed to get a passage on board a ship bound for Stockholm. A letter of credit got him to Bergen and thence to Newcastle-on-Tyne. He reached his home in Nice four weeks after he left Kiev.

French Novel Abandoned

Back in France he began a new novel which had the French national lottery as the basis for the plot. When 40,000 words of the manuscript were completed at his Brittany cottage the German bombers came. They destroyed an adjoining town, killing 5,000 persons, many of them his personal friends. He took his family and fled to the coast leaving his uncompleted work behind. He embarked on a troop ship evacuating British soldiers.

Then he added: "I will never finish that novel. It was about the France I knew and loved. Even now the manuscript is probably in the hands of the Hun."

First Came to Canada 46 Years Ago

The last time Robert Service arrived in Canada he was an immigrant boy with $5 in his pocket. It was 46 years ago when he was 20 years old. He went to the Yukon where he picked up the material for the poetry for which he became famous. After 17 years he went back to England and for many years he has lived in France.

Jap News Agency Predicts Protest Against Blockade

Tokyo, Aug 1.—(AP via Radio) — Japanese Ambassador Mamoru Shigemitsu in London will "certainly protest sharply against Britain's new blockade of Europe, Domei, Japanese News Agency, declared today.

The Agency said Japan would not accept the new measure by which Japan's trade with Spain, Portugal and other neutrals stands to suffer. Ambassador Shigemitsu has been instructed to seek clarification of the new order in council, the agency said.

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

BUILDING PERMITS SHOW AN INCREASE

A building permit to J. C. McCarthy for $5,000 for the erection of a gasoline service station on Coleman Street was the big item on the July building list for the city of Belleville as total permits for the month amounted to $12,725.

Permits of $2,300 each to Mr. W. H. Morton for alterations to an apartment on Alexander St. and to L. A. Kells for erection of a residence on Dufferin Avenue, were the other two major permits issued with one for $1,500 to Harold Quincey for a dwelling on Coleman Street being next in line.

Alterations to dwellings and to the South Front St fire hall, now owned by Hastings Motors, the erection of one sun porch and several garages made up the balance.

Building permits for 1940 up until the end of July amounted to $99,500, or an increase of $28,170 over the same period during 1939.

JULY NOT AS WARM AS A YEAR AGO

The maximum temperature reached during the month of July, 1940, lacked just two degrees of equalling the high temperature recorded during the same month last year, according to figures reported from the pump house this morning. During the month just closed the thermometer climbed to 90 degrees fahrenheit for the hottest day in this district, while for the same period last year the highest temperature recorded was 92 degrees.

The minimum temperature recorded during July 1940, was 45.8 degrees, exactly 3.2 degrees cooler than in July, 1939, when the thermometer fell only to 49 degrees.

Rainfall during the month showed a considerable increase over that of one year ago when only 0.69 inches of rain fell making July, 1939, one of the driest on record. Exactly 1.87 inches of rain fell during the month just closed, showing an increase of 1.18 inches over the same period last year.

CONSTABLE ADAIR SENT TO COBOURG

Inspector Frank Gardner of the Ontario Provincial Police, announced here today that Provincial Constable David Adair, who has been stationed at O.P.P. District Headquarters in Belleville for some months, has been transferred to Cobourg to fill an O.P.P. vacancy caused by the enlistment of Constable W. Mennie, who joined the C.A.S.P. this week. Inspector Gardner also announced that Provincial Constable W. E. Smith who has also been stationed at the local O.P.P. headquarters for some years, had been given a leave of absence and would join the C.A.S.P. Monday. Constable Smith will attend an officers' training school upon his enlistment.

DEMAND FOR BERRIES STRENGTHENS IN WEEK

With several canning factories, principally throughout the Prince Edward district, now processing raspberries for jam, the demand for this fruit has strengthened considerably during the past week according to fruit vendors on the Belleville market Thursday morning.

A very favourable price is being offered by the canning companies, it is understood, while at least one large widely-known grocery firm is also in the market for quantities of the fruit. As blue raspberries are used almost exclusively for jamming purposes, the price of this variety of the fruit will be strengthened locally it is thought.

JOHN FOX LOSES GRAIN, MACHINERY AND BUILDINGS

OLD LANDMARK

Smouldering ruins encompassed by flame-scarred stone walls are the sole remaining evidence of another of Hastings County's pioneer landmarks.

Fire, striking swiftly shortly after five o'clock this morning, completely gutted the buildings, known as the old Klingbell property on the second concession of Thurlow near the Canadian National Railway coal chutes. A large barn, horse-stable, machine-shed, and house to which a substantial drive-shed was attached, fell prey to the flames which raced unabated through the buildings in the van of a strong wind. A wooden pig-pen in the vicinity was saved. Origin of the blaze is undetermined.

Six hundred bushels of grain, fifty loads of hay, farming machinery, implements and hens, housed in the barn are also a complete loss. Two stacks of hay standing eastward of the smouldering buildings were saved, but are in imminent danger in case of a change in wind direction. The buildings, crops and property are owned by John Fox, prominent Belleville farmer living on Donald Street. The loss is said to be partly covered by insurance.

Family on Farm Homeless

Homeless, their effects standing in a nearby pasture field is the family of Frank Maracle, occupant of the house. Maracle, his wife and nine children, including a month-old baby were sleeping, when the flames broke out.

Jack Maracle, member of the family, was awakened by dense clouds of flame and smoke pouring out of the barn door approximately fifty feet away. He raised an alarm and together with neighbours who dashed to the scene engaged in a futile effort to subdue the blaze.

Pails of water were carried from a nearby well but the supply soon gave out and the fighters were forced to stand by and watch the flames sweep through the remaining buildings.

The fire raged through the dry hay and grain in the barn and fanned by the strong breeze quickly ignited the other buildings. The fire-fighters turned their attention to the house and succeded in salvaging the major part of the Maracle household effects.

One Dozen Hens Burned

The livestock of Mr. Fox, including two young colts, fortunately were in pasture at the time. A dozen hens, the property of the Maracle family, were in the barn and were destroyed.

Interviewed this morning members of the Fox family stated, that the first intimation they received that the buildings were blazing came, when Mrs. Percy Sprackett, neighboring farmer telephoned the news. Mr. Fox was at a complete loss to understand the origin of the blaze. Combustion, he thought was out of the question as the hay was in perfect condition when placed in the barn. There was a possibility he thought, of a transient, who had sought refuge in the building dropping a lighted cigarette, but the Maracle family stated, that no strangers had been noticed in the vicinity of the buildings.

Sturdy Walls in Buildings

The barns, house, drivesned and machine-shed, were standing testimonials of the master-craftamen of a century ago. Sturdy walls well over eighteen inches thick constructed of stone, reflect the ability of pioneer workmen. According to Mr. Fox, the buildings were well over 100 years old and were built by a man named Klingbell. Years ago, they housed a large dairy, that supplied the city with its milk, and the large vats were still visible in the building attached to the house.

The fire will be a severe handicap to Mr. Fox as practically all his harvest machinery with the exception of a binder, mower and rake was destroyed by the flames. "I have not even got a pitchfork left", he laughed.

Farmers Interested In Crop Improvement Given A Lecture

About 45 farmers and others interested in crop improvement were given a very instructive lecture and demonstration on Wednesday evening when Mr. W. B. George, B.S.A., of Kemptville, lectured in conjunction with the Dominion Rod Row Test Plots on the farm of Mr Fred Campbell of Foxboro.

These test plots are operated in conjunction with the Dominion Experimental Farms as a means of demonstrating to farmers the different varieties of grains and also to demonstrate the value of commercial fertilizer in connection with the growing of good crops.

Included in the plot on Mr. Campbell's farm are eight different varieties of spring wheat twelve varieties of oats and ten varieties of barley. All were planted in the replicated rows system, a system considered the best for the demonstration of the differences in the growth of the different varieties of grains on a certain type of soil. The demonstration of the value of fertilizer is also included with these test plots.

Following the demonstration of the plots where Mr. George explained the differences in the growth of the different grains alidea demonstrating the value of early cut hay and other farming practices were shown. The meeting was concluded by Mr. H. L. Fair Agricultural Representative for Hastings County, giving a short talk on the work being done by the Hastings County Crop Improvement Association.

Red Raspberries Down to Two Boxes For Twenty-Five Cents

Apparently striking the lowest price to which they will descend during the present season, red raspberries held at two boxes for twenty-five cents on the Belleville market Thursday morning. Blue raspberries retailed at straight 10c the box. Huckleberries also held at the price they have been offered at for the past week, selling for 15c the quart or at 75c the six-quart basket. Gooseberries sold at 10c the box.

Apples retailed at 25c the basket or at 20c the half peck, while cherries suffered a slight decline, being offered at 65c the basket or at two boxes for 25c.

On the vegetable market potatoes also declined slightly with bushel lots being offered at from 90c to $1.00 or at 30c the peck. Tomatoes brought 30c the berry box or $1.25 per basket. Corn on the cob sold for 25c the dozen ears. Onions went for 25c the half peck or at 10c the berry box. Cauliflowers sold up to 15c each, cabbage up to 10c, while vegetables retailed for 5c the bunch.

GILBERT STREET HOUSE BURNS

Owned by Herbert Peters and Destroyed When Flames from Gas Stove Suddenly Blaze Up

A brick veneer and frame house, owned by Mr. Herbert Peters, Gilbert Street, just outside the city limits, was completely destroyed by fire early Thursday morning when a gasoline stove suddenly blazed up with the flames spreading so rapidly, that it was impossible to save the structure.

The fire started in the frame part of the building and in the summer kitchen as Mr. Peters was lighting the stove to get breakfast. The stove did not explode stated Mr. Peters this morning when interviewed by the Ontario Intelliencer but the flames spread so rapidly, that only part of the furniture was saved by himself and neighbours, who quickly gathered around, before the building was a mass of ruins.

The Belleville Fire Brigade answered the alarm with the small truck, but with no water pressure available they were unable to stop the spread of the flames and concerted their efforts to guarding other buildings in the vicinity and to assist in the removal of the furniture.

The building was partially covered by insurance.

OBITUARY

LATE MISS JANET A. DEACON

Wednesday afternoon, July 31st, the funeral of Miss Janet A. Deacon took place from the residence of her brother, Mr. William B. Deacon, 220 William Street. The service in the home and at the graveside in Belleville cemetery was conducted by the Rev. Dr. James Semple, pastor of Bridge Street United Church, assisted by the Rev. Canon E. A. C. Hackman of Little Current.

The bearers were Mr. Fred H. Deacon, Mr. John W. Deacon, Mr. Ernest Finkle, Mr. William Finkle, Mr. William Finkle, Jr. and Mr. Sidney Wright.

LATE ALBERT WHEELER

The funeral of Albert Wheeler, late of this city, took place on Wednesday afternoon, July 31st, from the residence of his son, Mr. Harold V. Wheeler, at Detlor, to the United Chuch in that village where service was conducted by the Rev. N. R. Flower of Bancroft, the pastor on the circuit.

Interment was made in the Detlor Cemetery. The bearers were Messrs. Bert Mason, William Tice, Jeff Rickett, Gordon Burkholder, Lorne Thompson and Edward Foster.

LATE MISS MARY L. MILLER, (Foxboro)

The funeral of Miss Mary Letitia Miller, who died in Montreal on Saturday, July 27th, took place from the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home, Campbell St., on Wednesday afternoon, July 31, to the United Church in Foxboro, where service was conducted by the pastor, the Rev. E. M. Cooke.

Interment was made in Foxboro Cemetery; the service at the graveside was conducted by the same minister.

The bearers were Messrs. O. Dafoe, J. Gowsell, J. Daniels, W. Wickett, S. C. Gay and C. Wilson.

THOMAS LOGAN, (Herchimer Avenue.)

Thomas Logan passed away early Wednesday evening, July 31st, in the Belleville General Hospital. Up until noon of the day of his death Mr. Logan was apparently in good health and at that time when about to enter his residence on Herchimer Avenue, Thurlow Township, he was seized with a stroke. He was conveyed to the hospital, but failed to respond to treatment and death ensued.

The late Mr. Logan, who was in his 68th year, was born in Glasgow, Scotland, being a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Logan. At one time he resided in Ottawa and Napanee and for the past thirty years he made his home in Belleville and vicinity. For over twenty-five years he was engaged as a car inspector with the old Grand Trunk Railway and later with the Canadian National Railways. Last January he retired from active service. By his fellow employees and by many friends and acquaintances he was held in high regard and sincere regret is felt at his sudden passing.

In religion Mr. Logan was a member of the Kingston Road United Church and fraternally he was a member of Camp Rob Roy No. 43, Sons of Scotland, and of the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen, No. 617 of America.

Surviving him are his wife, who was formerly Miss Jennie Holmes, one daughter, Miss Annie Logan at home, two sons, Mr. George Logan of Thurlow Township and Mr. William Logan at home. He was the last of his family.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

POLICE COURT

Without so much as appearing in local police court before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., today, Senator Salter Hayden, of Toronto, paid a fine and costs for speeding on the King's Highway. Senator Hayden was apprehended driving a motor car at an alleged excessive rate of speed by Motorcycle Patrolman Harry Caldwell as the motorist was coming out of Deseronto some two weeks ago.

In a letter received by Crown Attorney S. G. Robertson last week, however, Senator Hayden intimated his intentions of contesting the charge. However, in police court today His Worship Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., revealed that the Honourable Senator had pleaded guilty to a charge of speeding in a letter since received. The nominal fine of $5.00 and $2.50 costs were paid.

In all fourteen traffic cases were presented before His Worship this morning, none of which were for serious matters, speeding and careless driving counts being the more dominate. W. MacKinnon, Camp Borden, Robert McFarland, Napanee, Archie Davis, Belleville and Harry Conley paid minimum fines for speeding, while Terrence Roulke was convicted of operating a motor car without having obtained a driver's licence and Stanley Christenson was fined $10.00 and costs after having entered a written plea of guilty on a reckless driving charge. A charge preferred under section 39-A of the H.T.A. was withdrawn against Edward Gazley, upon the instructions of Inspector Frank Gardner of the Provincial Police.

His Worship announced during the court that instructions had been received by police to thoroughly check motorists for drivers' licences and those found to be delinquent in this matter will be arraigned into court and the maximum fines assessed.

United, Determined, Strong, Britons Take Posts of Vigilance

Grimly Confident Nazi Invader Will Never Establish Foothold on Soil of Motherland

BRITAIN IS AROUSED

This is the second of a series by members of The Canadian Press Staff in London dealing with Britain's metamorphosis since the French surrender. In today's story Edwin S. Johnson, native of Winnipeg, tells of the vast military preparations that have made the country a fortress. Johnson is C.P. war correspondent with the 1st Canadian Division in England.

By EDWIN S. JOHNSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Somewhere in England, Aug. 1—(CP)—United, determined and strong, Britons have taken up their posts of vigilance in the front line of Empire, grimly confident that the Nazi invader will never establish a foothold on the soil of the Motherland.

Just as in those critical times of long ago when the Spanish Armada sailed for England on an expedition of conquest and when Napoleon's legions were poised across the channel ready to strike, so the British people today have rallied to the call of warning which has converted their homeland into an island fortress.

It is a principle of military strategy that once an objective has been fixed, its attainment should be sought by employment of the strongest force possible at the decisive time and right place.

British Isles Selected

Military observers are convinced Hitler has selected the British Isles as the next objective on his blitzkrieg time-table and that the other elements of the formula will be applied when he regards the circumstances most opportune.

But whether or not he selects to force a final test of arms by an invasion of England or risks a stand-pat, drawn-out war of attrition, he will find his most powerful adversary prepared for any emergency.

After a traditional slow start, Britain is aroused and alert as never before in history. Her peoples realize the fight against Nazi Germany is the supreme test that will settle the future of mankind. They are still working feverishly repairing the deficiencies in the nation's armor and have taken full advantage of the pause in the German drive since France was over-run.

On the seas the British navy which has warded off the invader for centuries, commands a preponderant superiority over the foe. In the air British pilots have administered a crushing blow to the enemy. They have accounted for five opponents to every one of their own machines brought down and wrought havoc with German lines of communication, industrial centres and other military objectives. On land Britain's strength is growing mightier every day.

New Army Reconstituted

Since return of the B.E.F. from its nightmare experiences in Flanders, a new army has been reconstituted and re-equipped. More than 1,500,000 are now under arms, with a daily average of about 7,000 flocking to the colors. Behind this front-line force is an even larger army, the so-called "home guard" which embraces a good percentage of over-military-age veterans of the last war.

Shoulder to shoulder with these defenders stand the ever-expanding forces from the Empire along with vast reserves of raw materials and other resources. Britain is also receiving help from thousands of Allied soldiers who escaped the German yoke by fleeing to England and offering their services under her flag.

On every hand throughout the country there are grim reminders that British soil may become the Empire's battlefield at any moment. Fields have been protected against the possibility of air-borne attack, road barriers erected, direction signs removed and other defensive measures taken. A ceaseless watch is maintained on coast and sky; armed patrols are everywhere. Britain will not be caught napping.

Little Evidence of Might

Outwardly, however, there is little evidence of the real armed might of the Motherland. Her fighting sons, once they emerge from training camp, are absorbed into mobile "packets" which in effect are compact, self-contained armies, products of mechanized open warfare. They move quickly and silently from place to place, bivouack in well-concealed areas and constantly are in positions of fighting readiness.

In the evolution of these mobile tactics the 1st. Canadian Division which now forms part of a British army corps commanded by Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, has played a prominent role.

The Canadian General has been one of the leading directing forces behind the new technique. As far back as 1929 he was stressing the need of the very changes which now have been introduced. This is what he had to say 11 years ago:

"We must look forward in our war organization to smaller, faster, harder-hitting armies, with great endurance, staffed by officers who must think in terms of combination of units and concentration of force in areas measured in hundreds of square miles.

"New mobility has established that the old 'linear' battle is a thing of the past. Today a marching column is as likely, perhaps more likely, to be attacked in the rear or on its inner flank than to be attacked in front."

Apply New Methods

Those ideas he has developed and applied to meet the new menace.

In event of invasion the Germans will meet a nation of tenacious defenders. They will find every tree a pill-box, every hedge a manned parapet and every house a fortress. Plans laid are formidable and flexible since no action conforms to a text book set-piece or develops exactly as anticipated.

But Britain is ready. She has marshalled her forces behind the ramparts guarding her citadel, resolutely awaiting the threatened blow. If it fails to materialize she will get on with the job of making herself strong until the momentum of the effort will enable her to launch the decisive counter-offensive leading to the goal of victory and peace.

TORPEDO INVENTOR

SUICIDE, SAY JAPS

One of 11 Britons arrested by Japanese authorities on secret charges, Melville Cox, veteran newspaper correspondent died after a plunge from the second floor headquarters of the Tokyo police "while being examined" it was announced in the Japanese capital.

Enlists Norwegians

En route to Ottawa to raise an army of Norwegians living in Canada, is General William Steffens, who led the Norwegian army in the north against the Nazi invaders of Norway.

CATTLE RUSTLERS ACTIVE IN TYENDINAGA

Cattle rustlers stole seven head of cattle from the farm of Dorland Windover Tyendinaga Township farmer early this week Provincial Police were notified early today. The cattle were grazing in pasture and the disappearance was not established until Mr. Windover had herded his cattle when seven were found to be missing.

Provincial Constable W. E. Smith investigated the cattle stealing activities today following which it was reported that all clues lead the authorities to believe the cows had been loaded into a truck under the cover of darkness and rushed to a far distant market.

Trenton and District

Thirty-Six Recruits Signed For Frankford Platoon of Reg't.

FLIERS UP A GAME

Trenton, Aug. 1 — Thirty-six recruits were taken on strength with Headquarters Company of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, Second Battalion, at Frankford, last night. The recruits will form a separate platoon from the company now stationed here but will be one of the units of the company.

The platoon will be under the command of Second Lieutenant P. Lafontaine of Frankford. All new recruits will turn out for their first drill on Friday evening, at 7.30 p.m.

Of 52 men signed on as recruits 42 showed up for their medical examination last night and 36 were placed in category "A". "This is somewhat of a record," stated Major Angus Mowat, Officer Commanding Headquarters Company, this morning. "Usually there is not such a high percentage of men receiving "A" category. The new recruits are fine, well-built young men who are used to work and seem to have a great deal of ability."

A large number of recruits have been signed on at Stirling but as yet they have not received medical examination. This platoon will be connected with the Headquarters Company in the same manner as the Frankford platoon. These recruits have been drilling for nearly a week under Second Lieutenant Fred Houchin.

The Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment will go into camp at full war strength, according to Lt. Col. B. C. Donnan, Commanding Officer, on the tentative date of August 26. Each company commander has been notified to continue recruiting until sufficient men have been signed up and until the companies have been brought to full war strength.

Mayor Alyea to be in Charge

Mayor O. G. Alyea will be in charge of registration in Trenton, according to an announcement made here yesterday. Mayor Alyea will be assisted by a number of voluntary workers.

Curb Cruisers Active

Trenton police are putting on a drive to pick up all men who insult and molest women within the town limits. Recently a large number of complaints have been made by Trenton women, who state that men have been trying to pick them up. Two alleged curb cruisers were apprehended last night but formal charges have not yet been laid. Chief William Bain stated this morning that such offenders would be heavily punished.

Flyers Win First One

The R.C.A.F. Flyers won the first game of the Trenton District Softball playoffs here last night by defeating Wooler 11 to 5. The two teams are playing a three-out-of-five series for the Cobley trophy, and also the right to continue on in the O.A.S.A. playdowns.

The Flyers held the edge over their opponents throughout the game. Starting in the first frame they scored in every inning with the exception of the fifth. Wooler tried to keep apace the flyers but were unable to score in the last four frames.

Farrar on the mound for the Fliers, turned in the better effort by allowing the Woolerites only seven hits, six coming in the first five frames. From the sixth frame on, he held the Wooler batters helpless, allowing but one hit. Stacey for the Wooler lads, hurled excellent ball throughout the game, allowing ten hits, two being for homers. Both hurlers struck out seven of the opposition but Stacey gave up five walks to four by Farrar.

Snape with a homer and single and Gibson with a homer and a double were the best at bat for the winners, while McCall with two singles was the best for the Wooler team.

The line-ups:

R.C.A.F. Flyers: Snape, 2b.; Legris, s.s.; Weaver, r.f.; Gibson, c.; Richards, c.f.; Stevenson, 1b.; Charlebois, l.f.; Riggs, 3b.; Farrar, p.

English Channel Strong Defence Line Says Col. Geo. Drew

Hamilton, Aug. 1—(CP)— The English Channel is "a stronger line of defence than all the ordinary land defence lines that were ever built," Col. George A. Drew, Ontario Conservative Leader, told Hamilton Rotarians today when he brought a heartening word regarding British prospects. It was modified by a warning that Canada must hasten in the production of new weapons to meet "Hitler's engines of destruction."

What is most needed at the present time, he continued, are "new weapons of war which will give us the advantage of Germany." In the last war, he pointed out, Britain was superior and pioneered such devices as the tank and stokes gun.

Famed Commentator a Refugee

Prior to his new appointment he was controller of naval information at naval service headquarters at Ottawa.

Member Requests All R.C.M.P. in England Be Brought Back Home

Ottawa, Aug. 1—(CP)—A request that all members of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police Force sent overseas be returned at once for duty in Canada was made today in the House of Commons by Jean Francois Pouliot (Lib. Temiscouata). He said these men were organized for policing Canada and should not have been sent overseas.

(R.C.M.P. officers were sent overseas with the 1st Division of the Canadian Active Service Force as the divisional provost unit.)

Works Minister Cardin, Acting Justice Minister, said members of the force sent overseas were performing a duty related exclusively to Canada. Nevertheless, Mr. Cardin said he would take up the suggestion with Justice Minister Lapointe when he returns from sick leave.

Free Transportation For Soldiers On Leave Urged

Ottawa, Aug. 1 (CP)—Free transportation for soldiers on leave in Canada was urged upon the House of Commons Wednesday by G. H. Castleden, CCF—Yorkton, himself a war veteran. The argument was raised during discussion of defence estimates.

"This House has voted millions for the railways," Mr. Castleden said. "Surely something can be done to get passes home for the soldiers when they are on leave."

Harbor of Narvik 'Real Ship Graveyard,' Says Norse Paper

Oslo, Norway, Aug. 1 —(AP)— Damage totalling millions of dollars was wrought at Narvik, Norwegian Arctic iron ore port, by the struggle between Allied and German forces last spring a correspondent of the newspaper Aftenposten reports.

"The Loften railway carrying iron ore from Sweden was damaged to the extent of $5,000,000."

Hitler's Attempt to Invade Britain Will be His Funeral Says R.S.M. to Brother Here

The indomitable spirit of the British people; their steadfast resolve to fight to the last ditch im needs be; their superb confidence in the army, navy and airforce and their unshakeable hope of victory is exemplified in a letter received yesterday by Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Newman 296 Charles Street from a Victoria Cross hero of the last war, who at present is "doing his bit" in command of a squad of "parashooters" somewhere in England.

The writer is Regimental Sergeant-Major Fred W. Newman who was recommended for the Victoria Cross "for valor" in the last war and is the proud wearer of the D.C.M. with bar, Military Medal, the French Croixe de Guerre, with palm. He served with distinction in Gallipoli with the Royal Garrison Artillery, and at present is a group Sergeant-Major in an English defence area.

R.S.M. Newman writes in part:

"We are all in the pink, and ready for anything. Hitler and his hordes can come whenever he likes. We are ready and the sooner he comes and gets it over with the quicker he will be on Tower Hill (London's famous tower where international prisoners used to be incarcerated) or "Gravel Hill." It's a matter of indifference to us which place he chooses.

"We are getting a few 'eggs', (bombs) here, in fact a bit too close for comfort at times, but I can assure you it will take a lot more than a few to frighten us as a matter of fact they are steeling us to still more action."

Far Superior to Hitler's Men

"Our boys in all branches of the services, are far superior to any Hitler can put up against them, and believe me, the Old Brigade is behind them to a man and it will be only over our dead bodies that the Nazis can win. That will be never, while we can shoulder a rifle."

"We shall carry on to victory. The price will be heavy, but victory will assuredly be ours, for our spirit today is the same as it was before, unconquerable."

Hitler's attempt to invade this island will be his funeral for we shall put him where he belongs, in hell's farthest corner."

"You would be surprised," the letter continues, "if you could walk down the street and could see old and young with slung rifles, awaiting the word to go." Everybody does his work as usual in the daytime and at night does his "spotting" duty.

To sum it all up, we are all out to win, and win we shall, with your boys assistance, with your materials, etc., we have no fear of the day when Adolph will come (or shall we have to go after him)".

A younger brother of Mr. Newman, is also serving with the "parashooters" corps in England. He was wounded eleven times in the Egyptian campaign during the last war. A sister Miss Agnes Emma Newman is "doing her bit" with the V.A.D. corps.

Will Join Boys At Local 'Pub' After Day's Work

London, Aug. 1—(CP)— Setting what he hopes will serve as an example to his 2,000 parishioners, 63-year-old Dr. E. S. Woods, Anglican Bishop of Lichfield, has offered his services to help in the harvest at Shropshire.

Dr. Woods, lean and wiry, standing six feet, plans to live the life of an ordinary farm laborer and will turn out in the fields at dawn "by way of a wartime holiday."

"I shall work in breeches and stockings," he said, "and do as all the other laborers do."

"Will you," asked a reporter, "join them in a pint at the local pub after the day's work is done?"

"Why, yes, of course, I shall," he laughed.

2,227 CHILDREN EVACUATED

Ottawa, Aug. 1—(CP)—Since the evacuation of British children started between to and three months ago, 2,227 British children have been admitted to Canada for the duration of the war, according to a return tabled in the House of Commons today in answer to a question from H. R. Jackman, (Con. Toronto-Rosedale).

In addition to this number, 252 refugee children were admitted from Sept. 1, 1939 to June 30, 1940. Mr. Jackman was informed the government did not consider evacuated British children as refugees.

Nazi Submarine Is Believed Sunk By Destroyer

An East Coast Port, Aug. 1.—(CP)—Passengers on a liner arriving here Wednesday said a German submarine had fired a torpedo at a destroyer in their convoy and was believed to have been sunk by depth charges released by the warship. A woman passenger (name unavailable) said she had seen the wake of the torpedo as it sped toward the destroyer. It missed, she said, and the warcraft circled in a wide arc, dropping depth charges into the sea.

MASSIGLI RELIEVED OF POST BY GOV'T

Vichy, France, Aug. 1—(AP)—The French Government announced today that its Ambassador to Turkey Rene Massigli, had been relieved of his post and would not be assigned to a new one immediately. The reason was not given. Massigli played a prominent part in arranging the Turkish-British-French Mutual Assistance accord shortly after the war began.

Foreigner Census is Ordered in Seine Dept.

Paris, (via Berlin), July 29. — (Delayed) —(AP) — Prefect Achille Villey of Seine Department has ordered a census, starting Aug. 5, of all foreigners living in the department according to nationality, occupation and length of residence in France. Reports in neutral diplomatic circles meanwhile indicated that male British residents of Paris are being investigated. Whether they would be interned was not indicated.

WORK THROUGH AIR RAIDS

London, Aug. 1—(CP) — British factory workers are becoming accustomed to work right through air raids, the Ministry of Labor said today. Officials cited the bombing of a factory "somewhere in England" in which not one minute's production was lost, although one end of the factory was hit.

THE AMERICAS KNOW FREEDOM

Nazi No. 1 must know that he is fighting against the forces of justice and the growing weight of the moral world. So does Fascist No. 1 know the same thing.

Republics of the New World have thrown in their faces and the face of every totalitarian and fascist or nazi the gauntlet — they have declared for freedom from threat of any power that would impose its ways of political life upon nations which have known what freedom is.

The nazis and the fascists are gangsters in the organized world of nations, they want to break in and steal, they are the enemies of every noble impulse that animates mankind.

It is not to be wondered at that the two continents of the Western Hemisphere, a world which was unknown until less than four hundred and fifty years ago, should manifest its possession of freedom by nailing the destructive forces which are at work in the world.

Hitler knows who is meant. Mussolini knows that to all the American republics as well as to Canada he is one of those forces, against which the democracies must and will fight if need be. These republics speak the language of freedom—but the fascist and the nazi understand only the language of the destroyer, the taskmaster and slave trader.

CHILD REFUGEES

Only a child can know just what it is like to come to a new world as so many British refugee children have come out to Canada for the duration of the war.

The child's life is so much of it romance of the purest kind, there is romance in everything and the childish imagination creates if romance starts to dwindle and rebuilds its castles in the air, those filmy dwelling places of the young spirit which are as real as anything can be in this life.

Not to many children in history has such an occasion come as is coming to British children to visit a new world which by contrast with the old world, now in the grip of war, appears as something fresh to the newcomers, the memory of which time will never be able to efface. The war will be over some day, the sooner, the happier people will be, and then the young guests of Canada will return home but will carry with them much of Canada. It will never be a strange land to those who have spent in the New World some of the most trying days of Britain's history.

Then to Canadian children it means so much to have their English, Irish, Scotch and Welsh cousins to play with. The British children bring, young as they are, the foundations of culture of the Motherland for they are thoroughly of the Old Land because they have been cradled and nurtured in the richness of the British home and fireside. Canadian boys and girls will catch something of that culture, while they are inspiring the guests of the Dominion with something of the spirit of the Dominion.

To British subjects who have never seen the British Isles, Britain stands today dearer than ever before for what she is doing for the world and because of the fact that Canada with the other Dominions is taking part in that heroic preparation for defence which will become immortal throughout the ages. To the mature has come the great privilege of living in one of the greatest moments in world history and of passing on to posterity which is represented in the homes of the empire, to the young who remain in England, to the young of Britain who come to Canada, the United States and the Dominions and then to all the rising generations of the world of nations emancipation from the Hun threat and chains, from Hun violence, Hun distortion, and from Hun perversion of civilization.

To these little children, while the world passes through the furnace of trial to be purged of the dross and to come out pure gold, is given the privilege of being the first to mix in that new society which it is hoped will be begun when Hitler falls and drags down with him all the evils of a vile regime, his selfish ambition and his perversion of knowledge and science.

These children will have caught a vision of that coming day when the nations will rejoice in their security.

BLOCKADE FROM ARCTIC TO NORTHERN AFRICA

The British are prepared against any attempt of the Huns to invade their islands which have been the land of freemen and which will give so good an accounting of themselves by the time this Hitler-made war is finished that they will be free still and be the leaders of all free nations of the earth.

When France collapsed, it was thought by many that the German Fuehrer would at once start his blitzkrieg on Britain. Surprised and disappointed over the debacle of the Battle of France, the British people calmly set to work to complete the defences of the island against invasion if that should be attempted.

The New York Times says that there would be no surprise or panic in any English village if the Germans tried to invade but "there is also the possibility that Hitler may shrink until the end from exposing an expeditionary force to certain decimination," and notes that the fact that German bombers are attacking ships and ports more consistently than land objectives suggests that he may be concentrating first on the effort to turn on the British their own weapon of blockade.

"It would not be strange," says The Times, "if the war lord who dictated the armistice terms to France at the scene of the German surrender in 1918 were tempted by the same sense of drama and revenge to do his utmost to conquer England by starving her out. If he yields to this temptation, attempting blockade before invasion, it will be good news to the British, for this is the kind of war they chose in the first place since it enables them to use to the limit the strongest weapon they possess."

Now the British Government has applied the blockade from the Arctic Ocean to Northern Africa, and the navicert system has been put into effect which should prove a very effective control over neutrals who might wish to run the blockade. The navicert is Britain's protection as it is necessary for ships to possesses this in view of the fact that British ports are scattered over the world. It would be a serious handicap to neutrals to attempt to get along without the privileges of British ports and all that these signify.

Meanwhile Hitler's Huns at sea and his planes have not affected Britain's supplies which continue to make their way in from so many ports over so many ship lanes. The Hun may attempt to shake off the grip of the blockade but it will grow more and more powerful. Hitler's chance in that regard is nil.

"SNAPPING OUT OF IT"

(Los Angeles Times)

The man who boasts that nothing ever worries him is too sluggish mentally to get much good out of anything. There are two kinds of worry, however—that which is itself a form of lugubrious defeatism and the active, alert concern for the future which strengthens resolution and makes for realistic thinking. America has seemingly done with the first kind. It is beginning to see conditions as they are and from the new viewpoint it finds less and less reason for alarms and misgivings. The result, reliably shown in current business returns, is a recent general ten to twenty per cent. pickup in merchandising. It isn't that everything has suddenly become any less formidable. But we feel at last that we are going to be prepared for it, if and when it comes. That is because we are actually at work on our defences. The sense of doing something instead of temporizing has given us a new outlook. We are not hiding our heads in the sand but getting them out of it.

BRITAIN'S TRUE SECRET WEAPON

(Chicago Daily News)

William Stoneman, in a brilliant despatch to the Daily News, suggests, not without a touch of poetic insight, that the stoical courage of the people is "Britain's secret weapon in this war."

We trust and believe that this is true. In all men of character there are reserves of heroism. The Briton is slow to kindle, but his fires of patriotism, once lighted, are hard to extinguish. In this country, too, for all our peace slogans and our demagogic defeatism, there are deep embers of courage and determination that our possible adversaries would do well not to fan into flames.

Even now, most Americans are thoroughly aware that, if we are to live and survive in the kind of world the Germans and the Italians and the Japanese and the Russians are creating for us, it can only be by a return, for a time at least, to the hardness and energy of our old frontier days, when a man unwilling to fight was licked in advance.

1.—Scientists have lately been concentrating on a new and powerful substance known as U-235. Why the U and what is the 235?

2.—The season for summer colds is upon us. An eminent French doctor suggests that falling in love provides a magic cure. What is his reasoning?

3.—Is the following statement correct? France is three times larger than the Canadian Province of Quebec?

4.—Number 10 Downing Street is a world-famous address. The street was named for one of the most infamous turncoats in British history. Who was he?

5.—The star Nova Persei blazed into visibility in the year 1901, to be discovered by an Edinburgh clergyman. What event transpired on this earth at the time that that shaft of light first went winging its way to earth?

6.—Beer has been known to man only for the past 300 years. Right or wrong?

7.—One of England's men-o'-war is the battleship Temeraire. In what battle did a British ship of this name first receive the plaudits of the throne?

The Emotions, Lack of Oxygen, Heavy Meals, Can Cause Symptoms of Heart Disease

Like everybody else, I have often wondered why the heart was made the seat of the emotions. You hear or read of individuals whose heart was filled with rage, with fear, with hate, with jealousy, and other emotions.

As a matter of fact, these emotions may affect the heart in many ways causing it to beat more rapidly at times, to pound against the chest wall, to be irregular in its rhythm, cause tightening or partial closure of its blood vessels—angina pectoris, and other disturbances. That these emotions can cause symptoms exactly like those in true heart disease is now an accepted fact. This is especially true in young people. If there is already true or organic heart disease present, it is quite possible that these emotions may cause collapse or even death.

The three main symptoms in true heart disease are breathlessness, palpitation and pain under breast bone, yet all these symptoms can be caused by the emotions, particularly fear, anxiety, and rage.

Most health writers mention breathlessness or getting out of breath easily as the first symptom of heart disease. The first question asked by a heart specialist is "How far can you walk without getting out of breath?". From the answer to that question the physician or heart specialist often makes up his mind as to the real condition of the heart despite what the fluroscope (Xray) or the electrocardiogram show.

A favorite question also is whether the patient finds that he gets out of breath climbing a flight of stairs which formerly did not cause breathlessness, particularly if he has not put on excess weight. Sir James MacKenzie, the father of modern treatment of heart disease, was the first to point out that a heart might have murmurs and irregularities, but if the patient could climb a hill or walk a certain distance at a definite rate of speed without getting out of breath he had a "strong" heart.

It should be remembered, of course, that lack of oxygen or too much carbon dioxide in the blood due to a blocked nose or eating too much proteid food—eggs meat, fish—in proportion to fruit and vegetables, causes breathlessness.

A very heavy meal, particularly when gas forming foods have been eaten, can also cause breathlessness, palpitation, and pain under breast bone.

Paper Ware Saves Work

Modern Examples of It Are Smart and Colorful

Make it a paper wedding at your house this summer. Marry off food and those handsome cloths and plates of paper and save your energy, your table linen, china and glassware. Everybody's doing it, and the shops are hard pressed to keep the various items in stock. Of course, this paper tableware has come a long and handsome way from the old utility pressed-paper plates that lacked any decoration and looked just like a junior pie plate. We were surveying the situation in a paper-craft shop the other day and came upon paper-set tables as handsome as anything we have seen in the china department of a smart store. Of course, these were special tables but the items in stock for everyday use were beautiful as well as practical.

Color Schemes

The shops are showing pressed paper plates in white or cream with fluted or scalloped edges and wide borders in rose, green or blue. Team these up with one of those beautiful paper crepe cloths toned to match the various borders, and you have the nucleus of a nice table setting. These paper crepe cloths need the eye of a snooper or a Philo Vance to disclose that they aren't fine linen. Shown, too, are charming paper tablecloths in white strewn with a colorful flower design. There are napkins to match every cloth. Paper service plates, really handsome affairs, are also awaiting the summer hostess. These are in solid color to match the various plate borders.

To make things complete there are handsome cups and saucers, which like the plates can take it with aplomb, be the food or beverage icy cold or boiling hot. The cups come with a band of color in one of the basic tones to tie up with plates or with cloth and napkins. Dark blue seems to be the popular choice, judging from sales.

Informal Settings

If it is an informal luncheon, use those place mats that are so inexpensive but so good looking. The transparent mats have handsome flower decorations whose colors tone with the decorations on most table items. In the popular-price stores you'll find interesting cork table mats that belie their modest price. The transparent plastic mats can be washed and used again and again, but that isn't the case with the pressed paper place mats, unless they emerge from the tray unmarked and unstained.

In the kitchen, make use of paper pie plates and use paper muffin cups in your muffin tins. It will make washing up after baking a cinch. Make use of paper kitchen towels and paper dusters to ease the laundry situation. Place a paper liner in the refuse can. All these paper items will lessen the burden of housework and make for greater cleanliness, not only in the summer but all year round.

If the family is a large one, it is a good notion to place paper cup dispensers in the bathroom and in the kitchen. It saves glassware, and it does away with the breakages and constant washing up that always mark the greater use of glassware in summer. Besides, it is a move in the direction of greater hygiene, never more important than when the weather is hot.

War Hits Cows

(New York Times)

Occupation of the Channel Islands by the Germans has been a matter of special interest to thousands of fanciers in the United States of the Guernsey and Jersey breeds. Dispatches indicate that most of the cattle on the two larger islands, as well as the Guernseys of Alderney and Sark—all of which have been kept of pure strain for more than a hundred years—have been evacuated, as has the bulk of the human population of independent island folk, to England.

According to the figures of the Department of Agriculture, the 23,000,000 dairy cows in this country produce a yearly average of 4,350 pounds of milk, containing 171 pounds of butterfat. But the average production of the tested cows of the five dairy breeds, which include, in addition to those from the Channel Islands, the Holsteins, Ayrshires and Brown Swiss, is 11,863 pounds of milk, containing 500 pounds of butterfat.

Guernseys and Jerseys have played an important part in our agricultural economy. Thousands of foundation animals in both breeds have been imported to this country to lay the basis of an extensive breeding program which has been of immense benefit to our national dairy industry. Fortunately, native breeders have been able to establish on this foundation highly productive herds which now must be the seed-stock of the future.

We Can Win The War Cheerfully

(Windsor Star)

Defence Minister for Air Power has told the Canadian Rugby Union that, short of curtailment of essential military and industrial obligations, no reason exists why sports such as football should not go on as usual.

Mr. Power is right.

In England they have a slogan: "Let's win the war cheerfully"; and even in war factories government financed organizations are providing workers with amusements. At the same time, there has been little curtailment of British football, and, despite air raids and threats of air raids, the British theatre and cinema carry on as usual.

No reason exists why Canada should be different. If Canadian football players are required for military service, or in essential war industries, well and good. But if they are merely playing football while at the same time engaged in their regular and necessary occupations—playing it as a sideline—why should anybody want to stop them? It would be just as sensible to close up our movie theatres.

None of us is going to be hurt—or have our war effort lessened—by going out next Fall on some Saturday afternoon to see a game of football. The effect on us, indeed, should well be the very opposite.

Foresees in 1980 158,000,000 In United States

Washington—The National Resources Planning Board today issued a new study entitled, "Our National Resources," which discussed briefly problems relating to conservation and use of resources.

Starting with population, the report contained figures which forecast a population of 158,000,000 for the United States by 1980, by which time it would remain more or less stationary, or actually be on the decline. The study further showed that by 1980 the number of persons from 45 to 64 years of age will be almost double and persons over 64 will be triple the present number.

As to the problems involved, the report asked, "How will industry adjust itself to a decreasing supply of young labor?" and "How will industry meet a possibly changed demand for goods?"

Next discussed were consumption and production, under which headings it was observed that production and purchasing power, income and employment and investment were not easily kept in balance, thus producing periods of maladjustments.

In the field of transportation the board urged more effective planning. Many terminals need to be unified better, it said.

"Coordination of railroads, waterways, highways, airways and pipe-lines, so that each carries the traffic it can bear most efficiently, is one of the major problems facing the transportation industry today," the report stated.

Communication developments of the future were pictured as calling for continual watching in order to judge and deal with their effects on our national life.

Since America's store of energy resources is exhaustible, except that of water power, the report said that the remedies against a possible depletion of them seem to lie in promoting greater efficiency in the production of mineral fuels from the standpoint of recovery of useful materials, promotion of greater economy in the use of fuels and placing of a larger share of the energy burden of lower-grade fuels and water power.

Milking The Cow

(Atlanta Constitution)

—For the sake of those who have been worrying about the question, the New York College of Agriculture has asserted with due solemnity that cows do not have to be milked from the right side, custom to the contrary notwithstanding.

It would appear from the press release noting this earthshaking detail that the custom of milking from the right side of the bossy has its origin in the undramatic fact that most persons are right-handed and therefore find right side milking handiest. For the benefit of those novices who tackled the problem from the left side and suffered, it might be explained that an experienced cow sometimes objects to left side milking because it is a change from habitual practice. To cap the argument, the college points out that calves nurse from the most convenient side, whether right or left, and, do not waste precious minutes wandering from left to right.

Be all this as it may, right side milking might be said to be the safest, unless you know your cow.

Mrs. K. G. Bingham and Miss Margaret Bingham, Prescott, are the guests of Mrs. Bingham's sister, Mrs. M. J. O'Callaghan and Dr. O'Callaghan.

Miss Ruth Sills, bride-to-be, was guest of honor at an interesting party arranged on Tuesday evening by Miss Mary Crawford, Mrs. Cleo Colling and Miss Helen Smith. The affair was in the nature of a wiener roast at a cottage on the Bay Shore. About thirty guests were present and a delightful evening was enjoyed. Miss Sills was presented with a twelve piece set of pyrex ware.

College Hill Community entertained at a farewell party in the University Sunday School last evening in honor of Mrs. J. Brown and family who are leaving for Peterborough. Games, community singing and an amusing spelling bee contributed to the entertainment of the guests. During the evening Mrs. Cook and Mrs. Burley presented Mrs. Brown with a floor lamp and Mrs. Stanton presented the boys with a kodak. Rev. E. Farnsworth expressed the regret all felt at losing such a popular family from the community and conveyed good wishes for the success of Mr. and Mrs. Brown in their new field. Mr. Bird, principal of Prince of Wales School, referred to the fine work of the boys and the high esteem in which they are held by their associates. Dainty refreshments brought the happy evening to a close.

ST. JOHN'S MISSION

The Ladies of St. John's Mission were entertained at the home of Mrs. Osborne Cannifton Road. An enjoyable meeting and afternoon tea took place on the lawn. Several visitors were present. This week Mrs. Grimson and Mrs. McLeod gave an afternoon tea for the Ladies' Guild at their residence. The affair was well attended and a nice sum was realized for the Guild.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Afraid to Give Up Her Job

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm a girl of 23 years, very much in love with my boy friend. He had a job here but when he lost it he went back to his home town where he is now working. I have a job but don't earn very much—just enough to get by on. He intended to stay away only half a year when he left, but it has been almost two years now.

He wants me to come to his town but I am afraid to give up this job I have here. Or, he said, he'd come here, but I'm thinking that it would be foolish to give up what he has for an uncertainty. We're both desperately lonely and keep saying all along that things will get better. Would you advise me to quit my job and go to him, or take a chance on his finding employment here?

In Doubt

I think it would be better, under the circumstances, if you both kept your jobs until you see how things turn out. You say that each of you earns only enough to provide bare necessities, and it's always a great risk to attempt marriage on that. I may be an incorrigible optimist, but I can't help feeling that you're going to have a break before long. My best wishes to you.

Her Problem is His Mother

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've been going with a young man who is a steady worker, although he doesn't make much money. He saves all he possibly can toward our future. His mother, who is a widow, makes no effort to find work, and nags her son for money, from morning 'til night. He is willing to help her all he can, but there is a limit.

Do you think it would be wise to marry into this family? I can see a very miserable married life ahead with his mother interfering and causing trouble.

Wondering

To give the older woman her due, it is almost impossible for such women to find work these days. You find so much to criticize in this young man's mother that I cannot possibly see how you two could get along together under one roof; it would be most unwise to attempt such an arrangement.

All said and done, it seems to me that the decision is up to the young man—whether he wishes to put his mother in an institution or marry you. But before influencing him to do this it might be well to bear in mind that a good son is supposed to make a good husband.

Is He Engaged?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We had all lived in the same town but her family moved to the big city about a year before I did. When I reached there, they were settled and as I didn't know anyone else, I found it pleasant to go to their house, especially when they invited me to meals, rides and their social affairs.

But I wasn't in love with the girl, and never spoke an affectionate word to her. I thought she was modern enough to understand a straight, honest friendship between a boy and girl.

Now her parents seem to think there's an "understanding" and have said things about our future that make me wonder. I had a talk with the girl about it, but she said she'd always loved me, and then I didn't know what to do. When I left I said I was terribly sorry that she felt hurt, but I'm sure glad I had sense enough to maintain a "hands off" policy. Now, am I or am I not engaged?

Frightened.

If you haven't made love or built air castles that the girl misunderstood, certainly you're not engaged. And there's no reason in the world why you should be roped into a marriage with a girl who has taken so much for granted.

The whole situation is absolutely unmodern. Young men used to get into predicaments of this sort a generation or two ago, but nowadays girls are supposed to understand that friendship carries no obligations.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Must She Reciprocate?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

A group of four couples now and then give a dinner followed by cards. I am not one of this group, but on two occasions one of the party could not be present, and at the very last minute I was asked to fill in. On both occasions I accepted, hurried to put on my dinner attire, and arrived there just in time for dinner.

Now one of this group suggests to me that the proper thing for me to do is to invite these four couples to dinner and cards. Do you think that I am under any obligation to do this?

A. S.

I do not think that you are under any obligation to do this. And what's more I think that this suggestion is completely out-of-order. The social obligation is on their side, not yours. A person who is kind enough to "fill in" at the very last minute is a generous and understanding friend, and every member of this group should be most grateful to you. Ayone who expects that your courtesy should be rewarded by the suggestion that you return this last-minute invitation with hospitality has a distorted point of view of the courtesy that was asked of you.

If it is your wish to entertain this group at dinner-and-cards, that is another matter. This is, of course, a very pleasant thing for you to do, but it should be left to your own inclination, and any prompting or suggestion that this is your obligation is definitely inappropriate to the circumstance.

Mothers Have Not Met

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1.—My fiance and I are planning to marry in September. He, of course, knows my mother and she is very fond of him. I know his mother and apparently she is very fond of me. But our mothers have not yet met and I am very anxious to bring about this meeting as soon as possible. How shall I do it?

2.—My mother and I are planning that I shall be married at home. Our home is small, our budget is limited. I would like to be married in the late afternoon, say at five or six o'clock, with only the members of the families and a few very close friends present. I do not want to wear a formal wedding dress or bridal veil. Would it be proper for me to wear afternoon attire? What type of clothes would you suggest I wear?

Madelin

1.—If your fiance's mother knows that you and her son are engaged, she should have made the first social move as soon as possible after her son told her the "news". That is she and her husband too, if possible, should have come to call on you and your mother. This is the important call that starts the relationship between the two families.

However, since for some reason this call has not been made, the only thing left for you to do is to take matters into your own hands and graciously bring about this meeting.

I suggest that your mother invite your fiance's mother (his father too, if possible) and, of course, your fiance, to dine at your home on some definitely-suggested evening, or to lunch say on a Sunday, or to tea on Saturday or Sunday afternoon. This invitation will set the social ball a-rolling!

2.—I suggest that you wear a long afternoon dress of a simple type. Such a dress is graceful in chiffon or lace or light-weight crepe. An ensemble of long dress and bolero or other type short jacket is appropriate. The jacket may be of the same material as the dress, or it may be of an interesting material and color that harmonize. Have the dress in your favorite and most becoming shade. You need not wear a hat with this type of dress at a house wedding, or you properly may wear one of a becoming tiny flower hat.

Victoria, (Special)—On Tuesday last several of the ladies of the Rednersville War Emergency met at the canning factory of Mr. Lorne Brickman and did three hundred and ninety-six pounds of jam (396). The jam consisted of gooseberry, cherry, raspberry and currant. In another week or so they will be canning raspberry jam. The fruit donations are as follows:—Albury — Mrs. Frank Dempsey, gooseberries; Mrs. Joe Allison, gooseberries; Mrs. Will Peck, 16 boxes raspberries; Mrs. E. E. Bonter, 3 boxes raspberries; Mrs. Alex. Gilmour, 5 boxes raspberries; Mrs. Harry Dempsey, 1 basket gooseberries; Mrs. Harry Dempsey, 1 11-quart basket cherries; Mrs. Roy Williamson, 12 quarts currants, 4 boxes berries; Victoria—Mrs. Harry Cunningham, 20 boxes cherries; Mrs. Morton Weese, 10 boxes cherries; Mrs. W. J. Hubbs, gooseberries and cherries; Mrs. Melvin Pulver, gooseberries; Mrs. Lorne Brickman, cherries; Centre—Mrs. J. Cairns, gooseberries; Mrs. B. L. Redner, gooseberries and 5 lbs. of sugar; Rednersville—Mr. Bert Anderson, 20 lbs of sugar.

The Sunday Schools of each church Albury, Rednersville, Centre and Victoria, have each donated a hundred weight of sugar. Further donations of sugar would be appreciated.

Miscellaneous Shower For Bridal Couple

A miscellaneous shower was tendered Arthur Fennell and bride at Cherry Valley hall Wednesday evening. The flower-decked hall was filled to capacity. Phil Dodds presided for a short program which included community singing, vocal solo by Miss Alice Wiggins, piano duet by Miss Mary Wharmby and Mrs. E. Foster, reading by Mrs. Jack Beaumont, recitation, Joe McKibbon. As the wedding march was played, the recent bride and groom were seated in decorated chairs beneath a canopy of pink streamers and Mona Bell and Ruth Williams, dressed as a bride and groom, brought in a decorated wagon loaded with gifts. An address was read by Mary Wharmby. Both Mr and Mrs. Fennell expressed their appreciation. Lunch was served by the young ladies and a social time enjoyed.

The picnic for the children of the Church of St. Gregory the Great was held at the Outlet, Wednesday afternoon with a large attendance. Sports were in charge of the Oblate Brothers of Ottawa, who are spending the summer at Waupoos. A picnic supper was enjoyed.

Soap, Water Route to Beauty

"It is supposed that the daily bath has become an institution."

By HELEN FOLLETT

One doesn't have to have an ocean to be a bathing beauty. The demon tubber always looks as fresh as a daisy. Nothing like the good old scrubbing to give color to the complexion. The skin is an important organ of elimination. Soap and water and a heavy brush keep it active.

It is supposed that the daily bath has become an institution, but dress fitters say they don't believe it. The deadly "BO" is still insulting the public nose. Cleanliness is not only a health law, but it is the first law of beauty and several more besides.

Refreshing Cold Baths

The human hide is always on the go. New cells are forming, old cells are shedding. The old cells, if permitted to remain on the surface of the skin, give off an offensive odor, especially if they are filmed with salty chemicals exuded by sweat glands. Bathing with plenty of elbow grease removes cutaneous debris, hustles up the blood streams and gives softness and smoothness to the epidermal coat.

Cold baths are refreshing but not cleansing. A cold shower should follow the soapy cleansing, though not for long unless there is a quick reaction. Alternating hot and cold showers are recommended for the busy lady who chases around all day and expects to fare forth for the merry evening. They pick her up, put her on her toes and touch her cheeks with pink carnation bloom.

WEDDINGS

ERWIN—SECORD

A quiet summer wedding was solemnized by Father P. O'Leary at the Church of Christ the King, Sudbury, on July 24th at ten o'clock, when Maria Ida, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Secord, Sudbury, became the bride of John Joseph, son of Mr. Erwin and the late Mrs. Thomas Erwin, of Read, Ont.

The bride looked charming, attired in pale mauve with Queen's blue accessories. The young couple were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Ken Shillington of Sudbury.

Following the ceremony a dinner was held at the home of the bride. Later Mr. and Mrs. Erwin left on a short wedding trip to Belleville and on their return will reside in Sudbury.

Community Honors Canniff Ashley

Foxboro, (Special)— A very large number assembled on the church lawn on Monday evening in honor of one of their number, Mr. Canniff Ashley, who has enlisted in service for his country. Mr. S. C. Gay acted as chairman and after community singing of "Pack up your Troubles in your old Kit Bag", complimentary remarks were made by Mr. S. C. Gay, Mr. A. Gough, Mr. Everett Sills and Mr. Mac Longwell of Port Colborne.

Mr. Everett Ketcheson then read a very appropriate address and on behalf of the community, Mr. Gordon Walt presented Mr. Ashley with a Rolls Razor, onyx cigarette case and lighter, pen and pencil set, and military brushes for which Mr. Ashley replied very feelingly. A lunch was then served.

Mother's Nerves

A short time ago I wrote a column about how the mother in a nervous, run-down condition alienates her children and then blames the children, rather than herself. A good many mothers have written me to protest that they are in the best of health with nerves steady as a rock and still they have troubles with their children similar to those described. But I must insist nevertheless that either the mother whose letter inspired the column expects child-raising to be a cinch or she doesn't realize that her nerves have gotten the better of her.

I had on letter from a mere man about that column. He is a father who apparently feels strongly that my observations were right for he says, "I stand by and see my home being slowly destroyed by the very thing you write about." He goes on to explain that he and his wife have three children all under eight years of age. After the last child was born, the mother seemingly lost her health. She became irritable, nervous, over-wrought. Little things that formerly wouldn't have disturbed her for a moment, began to generate quarrels, outbursts, hysterics. This man has done everything, he says, to try and stop the quarreling that has been going on and that is making his home a home no longer. If he can convince his wife that the fact that her health is bad, and her nerves are on edge are the cause of her troubles, then there is hope for his restoration of happiness in the home. To do this he must have a great deal of patience He must be able to make his children understand the mother's condition without, of course, engendering any lack of respect for her, and fortify them against upsets.

Such a mother has a sharp command on her lips at all times. A continual barrage of shrill: "Put that down"—"Come here" — "Stop that", soon erodes confidence and understanding.

Several years ago a group of psychologists conducted a survey into the commands given by mothers. The results are quite enlightening, for they showed that mothers who were in poor health, who were tired and worn out, gave three times as many commands, that is arbitrary orders, as mothers who were well.

Obviously, the poorer the health of the mother, the less able she is to raise her family properly. If a mother realizes she hasn't been getting along with the children lately, then she would be wise if she went to see her doctor to find out what is wrong. If, like the writer of the letter I spoke of, a father reads this and realizes why family life has been in a turmoil of late, he should take whatever steps are necessary to get his wife's health and nerves back into a healthy state. He should also try to see what more affection and attention will do. It certainly would not go amiss, and I don't think I ever knew of an instance where it did any harm.

SHINING WINDOWS

by Kathleen Norris

INSTALMENT 22.

Joyce could look the situation soberly in the face now; she had thought Paul cared more than he did care; she had thought he would come back from his long absence as unchanged as she was unchanged herself; she had put herself in a false position; she had been carried away by a dream that already seemed to her as vague as a cloud. No one must guess, no one must know.

Paul did not love her. She knew that he did not love Elisa either, or any one. Playing good golf, tennis, swimming, going out on somebody's catboat and eagerly discussing seamanship, enjoying his meals, liking his clothes, popular wherever he went, the one thing for which Paul had no use and no need was an entanglement with any girl, least of all a girl whose people were doing their own work down on a forlorn California ranch! It was all horribly clear now, only she had not seen it before. Time went on. Hours, hours, hours. Nobody else asked her to dance, and Paul's dreadful father continued to sit beside her, murmuring to her.

"I'll tell you something you don't know. I'm going to kiss you before the evening's over. How's that? Yes, sir; I'm going to have a kiss from the prettiest girl in the room—"

When he took her out into the hall to show her a photograph of the winning polo team with himself up on a dancing pony, Joyce seized the opportunity to go to the dressing-room. She had hoped Pidgie Waite might be there, and that she could say: "Oh, let's find Paul and go home; I'm dead!" But there was no one there.

When she went out again Victor von Schwerin, animated, handsome, athletic, was talking to two elderly women who were evidently quite captivated by his charms. Joyce found herself face to face with Monty Lefanu. At the same instant Paul's father saw her, and started toward her. She had just a few seconds in which to appeal to the writer.

"Will you save me? Will you come in and sit down and talk to me? You'd do me such a favor!"

She had time for no more, but he understood.

"What was the trouble?" the Englishman asked, when after a few annoyed and puzzled moments the other man made some excuse to leave them.

"He was just—he happens to be Paul von Schwerin's father," she said. "I'm staying with them, so I have to be polite and I don't like him."

"I say, that's awkward, isn't it?"

"He's—I think been drinking a little too much," she said carefully. "I wish you'd talk to me—say anything, about anything."

"I shall talk like mad!" her companion assured her. "D'you know London? Strange thing that fire this morning; you didn't see it in the papers? That very part of London—"

She listened feverishly, her eyes fixed on his. Presently she could smile, could talk a little.

"You'll think I'm a hopeless idiot. But I—I rather let myself in for this visit and I'm—I'm tired maybe. And suddenly it all seemed so dull."

"Glad to take you home. But it's early. It's only a little after ten."

"Is that all it is?" she said in a dismay that made him laugh.

They walked out to the terrace, and found Paul in attendance upon Elisa, who was stretched in a long wicker chair. Paul was balanced on the arm of a neighboring chair; one or two other men were on the flags at Elisa's feet. Paul jumped up, and Joyce introduced Monty Lefanu.

"Paul, if you're playing golf at nine tomorrow—" Joyce said questioningly.

"Oh, yes, sure! I've got to get home! I was just going after you. Elisa feels much better; she came down half an hour ago," Paul said, quite unembarrassed.

Joyce waved Monty Lefanu a farewell as he turned and left them. She hoped she had not arrived to lay a stone on an animated conversation. They had not seemed to be talking at all when she came up, but there was a pause now that suggested interruption. After a few minutes Paul got up again and they said good night to Elisa who thought she would sit on for a while.

They left her with her young English squire in attendance, and Paul took Joyce and Pidgie back to the lodge. There was no opportunity for a word alone with him; he did not attempt to make one. He bade the girls an affectionate, laughing, leisurely good night.

"He couldn't wait to get back to her, could he?" Pidgie said scornfully. Joyce stood perfectly still for a moment, not breathing; it was in a carefully leveled voice that she said, "Back to Elisa, you mean?"

"Sure. They'll sit on there for two hours. It'll lose 'em the match tomorrow too — you'll see! They're flying to New York Tuesday morning."

"They?"

"Paul and Elisa. She telephoned her mother in New York, and asked if she could stay until Tuesday, and then fly. She was going home tonight; she'd have been on her way if she hadn't made the finals.

Joyce made no comment. She slowly brushed her hair. It didn't matter whether she brushed her hair or not; nothing mattered. Nothing mattered except Paul.

"Well," her thoughts ran, as she lay awake in the darkness of the big luxurious room, "suppose he and Elisa lost in the morning, lost because of a stupid shot of hers, not his. And suppose he drove me to Merriwell. And suppose on the way he said—"

But no, it wouldn't happen that way. He would be playing golf with Elisa; some one else would put Joyce on her train; every one else would be about when Paul said good-bye. Tuesday Paul would fly back to New York and she would be alone again.

"I'll live through all this because I won't die," oyce said, half aloud. "Girls do. Bootsy. Bootsy and I. We won't die. I wish I were dead!"

Toward morning she fell asleep. Her last hours at Pebble Beach held a sort of serenity that is won from despair. Nothing could come right now. She and Pidgie slept late. The golf match was well under way when they wandered out to the course. Elisa and Paul were quite suddenly out they need not play the last six holes. It was all over. Elisa smiled at photographers, tears in her beautiful eyes. It was all her fault; she was off her game completely this morning. Paul was magnificent and good-natured.

They all had late lunch together at the golf club, quite jolly and informal, with plenty of nice young men there, and at a quarter to three Paul asked Joyce if she had to go back to the lodge for her bag.

"No; I put it in Mr. Masters' car this morning. Paul."

"Oh, that's grand; then we don't have to rush. Bill, Joyce's bag is in your car, isn't it? Do you want to run her over to the train?"

"Sure," Bill said slowly.

"I'm going to say good-bye to everyone at once!" Joyce said gallantly, when the moment for departure came. "Good-bye everybody! Good-bye, Paul; this has been lots of fun!"

The ridiculous little wooden station was only a red painted shed under the Del Monte oaks and pines. The train had not yet arrived; she and Bill stood chatting. Joyce was in a daze; Paul had simply waved at her, had whispered laughingly to Elisa again; it was all completely bewildering.

Presently a Victorian couple was seen approaching from the direction of the hotel; the woman with a plumed hat, a flounced "pull-back" dress, a little thin silk parasol with a jointed handle; the man with flowing Picadilly weepers, striped trousers, a full-skirted coat and a tall beaver hat.

Joyce understood. It was a carefully planned joke. It was Paul and Elisa, bubbling with laughter under their decorous and dignified surprise at the uproar they created, playing their party beautifully.

"Why, it's Miss Ballard!" Elisa said, mincingly extending a raised hand. Joyce must laugh, must enter into the nonsense as well as she could, must gasp admiringly. "You idiots! How did you ever—where did you find—why didn't you tell me—I"

The train came in, and Joyce found a window seat, and still all the crowd and now the travellers in the train too had eyes for nothing but the beauty of Elisa, with her chignon and her bangs, her puffs and her pleats, and the absurdity of Paul. As she had her last look at the green shadowy afternoon peace of Del Monte, Joyce saw Elisa and Paul in the centre of the picture.

For a long time she sat at her window, an elbow resting on the sill, her cheek in her hand. In her face there was a look of pain, of puzzlement, of shame.

At San Jose she got out, waited in late afternoon weariness and griminess for a bus; established her bag and herself in it. She thought of the ecstasy of anticipation and triumph and delight with which she had gone through San Jose a few days earlier on her way to meet Paul.

All over. Joyce looked from the bus window; the country was getting familiar now.

In a few moments she would be at home in the kitchen; Dodo's little face would be flushed with stove heat, Felicity slicing bread; her mother, her father would be all interest in her happy visit; they would singly and collectively question her minutely, nothing would escape them. Only Michael, meeting her at the station, would understand, would spare her. Or perhaps Dodo or her father would come down with him.

No, it was only Michael who was waiting in the mud-spattered car, his white teeth flashed, his pleasant English voice was restful and friendly.

"Welcome back! We've been having an awful time without you," he said, taking her bag. "Your sister Dodo has given us the most extraordinary surprise! She was married a week ago to young Charley Sallock, in the town here, and your mother's forbidden her the house. Meanwhile Miss Lizzy has gone quietly off to visit her young man's family in San Francisco, and we think she may come back with a plain gold ring on her hand! So you see what happens the minute you desert us."

Joyce looked at him blankly.

"Then where's Dodo?"

"Gone off to San Joachin ranch with Charlemagne."

"It isn't Charlemagne!"

"It seems it is."

The road began to rise up to the hills; the peaceful country spread about them. Something of the majestic sincerity of the everlasting hills reached Joyce's troubled spirit; she had a moment of surprising, of weary and exhausted peace.

"Then there's nobody home except mother and dad?"

"Nobody. And we're glad you're back where you belong!"

Acute Shortage Of Farm Labor Subject Discussed

(By The Canadian Press)

The Ontario Cabinet met today to consider means of relieving an acute shortage of farm labor that is general throughout the province. One of the schemes to be discussed is to enroll 'teen-aged students in a youthful agrarian army and release them for about a month from their regular school work.

This plan, if adopted, would follow a system introduced in the last years of the first great war. In 1917, 8,000 high school youths were recruited for wartime farm work and the following year there was a demand for 15,000. Girls were also in demand, especially as fruit pickers, and the original "farmerettes" thus came into being.

Premier Hepburn said that this scheme, which would be on a voluntary basis, would be thoroughly discussed in Cabinet Council. It had been suggested to delay opening of the Fall School term until Oct. 1 rather than about Sept. 1.

A Canadian Press survey of the situation indicated a general shortage of farm labor except in the Windsor district. Similar conditions were found in reports prepared by The Ontario Departments of Labor and Agriculture.

DROVES OF R.A.F. FIGHTERS CHASE GERMAN RAIDERS

London, August 1 (CP)—Britons braced themselves Wed., for the threatened Nazi invasion attempt after hearing Swiss reports of elaborate preparations for a blow in which Italians would have a "token" share.

German aircraft again raided the southeast coast and were met by droves of Royal air force fighters who chased some immediately back to the French coast. Explosions, like those of bombs, however, were heard inland, indicating some damage may have been caused.

Last night thousands watched a 15-minute battle between a British escort and German aircraft seeking to attack a convoy. The escort maintained a terrific fire overhead and the convoy appeared undamaged when the last planes were chased away.

Yesterday air activity over Britain was light in comparison with the intense attacks of the previous two days which resulted in heavy enemy loss. Monday alone 21 enemy aircraft were downed and only two British lost.

Meanwhile Britain, looking to the time when food may not be as plentiful as it is today, read reports of a week-old experiment in serving a collective dietrically balanced three-course meal for as little as 20 cents.

Home Minister Sir John Anderson in a broadcast cited the possibility that liquid gas might be sprayed from the air in enemy raids.

The government announced that enemy bombers "dropped a few bombs" in southeast and southwest England and in south Wales during the night, with "little damage" done and no casualties.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was sitting on Puds Simkin's front steps talking and arguing with him about different subjects such as whether it would actually be a lot of fun being a fireman or whether firemen are really too close and too busy to see much, and whether it was possible for vacation to ever get monotoniss if it lasted enough years, and whether education is really such an important thing, me saying. O well, after all, I guess we really need it, because just think what would happen to a baby if you let it just sit around all its life and never even taught it the alfabet.

Nothing would proberly happen to it, Puds said. For all you know it would grow up to be a famous movie actor. G wizzickers does it help you to enjoy rice pudding just because you happen to know that rice is a export of China? Good night just the opposite, because if you didn't happen to like rice pudding the thought would only make you mad at China and the next thing you knew you'd be helping to start a Chinese war and getting a lot of innocent people shot at just because you know too much about rice. So that shows the less you know the less you have to get sore about, he said.

O is that so? I said. Well how about going an errand and coming back with the wrong change just because you didn't have the education to count right? I said, and Puds said, G. roosalem you wouldn't even need to bother about errands because people would have sense enough not to send you any, so that would be another blessing.

Sounding like a bum argument but I couldn't think of anything good to say back to it, and we went around to the firehouse to talk to Mr. Riley the hooken ladder driver.

The baffling thing about low blood count is that you can weigh about as much as you ever did—even look healthy and strong, yet—you can feel as if you had lead in your legs, dopey, tired and pepless.

Low blood count means you haven't got enough red blood corpuscles. It is their vital job to carry life-giving oxygen from your lungs throughout your body. And just as it takes oxygen to explode gasoline in your car and make the power to turn the wheels, so you must have plenty of oxygen to explode the energy in your body and give you going power.

Corbys Even Series With Shell Winning Fourth Game by 8-6; Smart Plays Feature Contest

Winners Take Three-Run Lead in First Two Frames Never to be Headed

SPARKLING FIELDING

CORBBS SQUARE ONE

It's all even in the intermediate "A" play-offs in the O.A.S.A. city series between the Shell "Oilers" and Corbys A.C. Last evening at Coleman Flats the Corbys A. C. handed Coach Harold Bawden's Oilers their second consecutive reverse, beating the Shell 8 to 6 to knot the series at two games each in a best four-in-seven series, which continues at Coleman Flats on Saturday night.

Corbys took a decided lead by scoring four in the first and adding a brace more in the second, as the Oilers counted three in the second, and then added two more counters in the fifth frame and one in the seventh to knot the count, but Corbys rallied to score two in the bottom half of the eighth and hold the Shell boys scoreless in the ninth, as they were never headed. 'Lum' Carson and Eddie Schrieder hooked up in a tidy pitchers' duel with each being touched for ten safeties. Carson was relieved by Connie Harris in the ninth, after the first two Shell batters had hit safely. Harris showed some fine relief hurling to make two pop out to the infield and relieve the pressure, while Chuck Barriage made a sensational running catch behind second for the final put-out that resulted in a Corby win and the knotting of the series at two games each.

Two walks, four hits and an error in centre field— gave Corbys their four-run advantage in the initial frame, from where they were never headed. Reid, Kiser and Simpson came through with timely hits for the winners, as Henn led the batters of the night with three hits, including a double. Ronsky with a home run and single, Whalen and Sero counted two hits each off Carson. Carson whiffed seven to Schrieder's five and walked five to Eddie's four as the winners gave their pitcher better support in the clutches. Corbys completed two double plays to help their cause, as the series continues Saturday evening in a fifth game in a best-in-seven series.

New York, Aug. 1(AP) Autumnal madness: Tim Mara of the New York pro football Giants, says his Cub'll be terrific again—if Mel Hein holds up. . . . .Washington Redskins will travel 7,229 miles before the Grid season opens (they train in Spokane and have a cross country exhibition swing).

Personalities: Bill Allum, New York Ranger hockey player, is a proud pappy . . . Don't be surprised if Barney Walls, snappy second sacker of Milwaukee Brewers, climbs into a White Sox uniform. . . The Montreal Daily Herald says Deroit Tigers paid 25,000 buck for George Stainback, the hard-hitting Montreal outfielder.

From the mailbag:

"The Denver Post's 25th annual baseball tournament, copied by many but equalled by none, starts Thursday with 18 entries from nine states. Since 1922 the teams have split $138,684 in prize money in what he modestly call the 'daddy of all baseball tournaments.' Anyone of 10 clubs can win this year's meet —and probably will. As a former Post wage slave doesn't that make you homesick? The line for reserved seats forms on the right".—C. L. (Poss) Parsons, Post Sports Editor.

3 EXTRA SETS NEEDED TO WIN

Three extra sets were necessary before the Quinte Tennis Club of Belleville triumphed five games to one over the Trenton Tennis Club in a scheduled Trent Valley Tennis League tournament played at the local courts on Dufferin Avenue, yesterday. In winning five of their six matches yesterday, the Quinte Club continued to dominate the league as leaders, not having lost a series of matches thus far this season.

The Quinte Club have beaten West Sides of Belleville twice, tied and won over Trenton and played a three-set draw with Tweed on Monday. In their 36 matches played this season the Quinte Club have won 27 and lost but nine, as they haven't lost a single series during the season's play to date.

The results of yesterday's matches were as follows:

Men's Singles: D. McLean (Quinte) won over Lesperance (Trenton) 3-6, 6-3 and 6-4.

1st. Men's Doubles: G. Bucher and T. Barnett (Quinte) defeated Sager and Campbell (Trenton) 6-4 and 6-4.

2nd Men's Doubles: H. Kerr and G. Ayteo (Quinte) defeated McKibbon and Fillon (Trenton) 8-6 and 6-4.

1st Mixed Doubles: A. Wilkes and Jo Cruji (Quinte) lost to G. Ackerman and Helen Frandick (Trenton) 6-0 and 6-1.

2nd Mixed Doubles: Gord Barclay and Muriel Wardner (Quinte) won over Paul Jones and A. Westfall (Trenton) 6-4, 3-6 and 6-4.

Ladies Doubles: M. McLean and Madge Howard (Quinte) won over G. Blaschke and F. Blaschke (Trenton) 2-6, 6-3 and 7-5.

CHALLEDON WINS HO LLYWOOD GOLD CUP

Here comes Challedon—and there he goes! That's all there was to it. The Hollywood Gold Cup was a race that left 36,391 paid fans stunned as Challedon won going away. ABOVE at the finish line it's Challedon the winner with Specify second in the $50,000 Hollywood Gold Cup race. Challedon paid his backers $7.40 for $2.

Indians and Detroit Tigers Deadlocked for Lead After Winning from Boston, Yanks

Tribe Trailing 7-0 but Keltner Puts Them Back in Game With Homer

DETROIT RALLIES

Tigers Come From Behind Four Times to Nose Out the Yanks

By Judson Bailey)
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Cleveland Indians and Detroit Tigers still are deadlocked for the American League lead today, proving that miracles do happen.

They won two of the strangest struggles yesterday that ever went into the records in their desperate efforts to elbow each other off the top rung.

The Indians squeezed past Boston Red Sox 12-11 in one of the nightmares. The tribe was trailing 7-0 when it came to bat in the fourth and even after Ken Keltner hit a home run with the bases loaded Cleveland continued to lag behind until the eight inning.

Finally Rookie Russ Peters delivered a pinch single with the sacks filled to score the Indians tying and winning runs.

Detroit had to come from behind four times to beat New York Yankees 7-6 in 11 innings. The situation didn't get critical until the eighth inning when the Tigers came to bat trailing 4-2. Pinky Higgins tripled with the bases loaded to put the Tigers in front, but George Selkirk clouted a pinch home run with one out in New York's half of the ninth.

Detroit, undaunted, tied up the score with three singles and finally, in the 11th with Lefty Gomez doing a relief chore for the champs, scored the winning run on two walks and Hank Greenberg's single.

Whacky Doubleheader

Nothing could have been whackier than the doubleheader St. Louis Cardinals swept from Boston Bees, 3-1 and 17-8. The first game went 11 innings with Clyde Shoun and Dick Errickson wrapped in a pitching duel. Then Boston blew up and let in two runs. The Cards collected 22 hits in the batting practice that passed for the second game.

Boston's losing streak was extended to nine games. And, mentioning streaks Joe DiMaggio of the Yankees went hitless for the first time in 24 encounters in that sideshow at Detroit.

New York Giants put on one of the season's most dramatic finishes to beat Cincinnati Reds. Bucky Walters was on the threshhold of his 16th victory, when Burgess Whitehead and Hank Danning each hit homers with a man on base in the ninth inning to beat him 5-4. Walters had two out and two strikes on every one of the next four batters, but he walked two and gave homers to the two others.

Chicago Cubs were whipped 7-3 by the Phillies and lost the services of Augie Galan probably for the remainder of the race because of a broken knee suffered when he crashed into a wall while chasing a foul. Manager Gabby Hartnett was hit on the head by a bat, but not seriously hurt.

Philadelphia Athletics edged out Chicago White Sox 4-3 in a night game with Bill Beckman pitching four-hit ball and Wally Moses helping out with a two-run homer. This victory kept the Sox away from the first division and boosted the A's out of the cellar as St. Louis dropped a 13-5 decision to the Washington Senators.

GALAN FRACTURES LEFT KNEE CAP

Chicago Outfielder Crashes Into Concrete Barrier Chasing a Fly

Chicago, Aug. 1 (AP)—The injury ridden Chicago Cubs, taking an idea from congress, may enlist their own conscription plan soon. It may require a draft of one of their farm clubs en masse if the present jinx continues.

Two more Cubs were relegated to the sidelines yesterday, running the current casualty list to five and the season's total to 13.

Little Augie Galan, however, had to be carried from the field. The outfielder suffered a fractured left knee cap and a severe injury to his right kneecap when he crashed into a concrete barrier along the left field foul line at Philadelphia while chasing a foul fly off Herman Schulte's bat. Team officials said both knees would be in a cast for five weeks.

Also on the sidelines now are first baseman Glen Russell, recovering from an appendectomy; first baseman Phil Caverretta who suffered a broken ankle for the second time in two seasons, and shortstop Bobby Mattick, who last week wrenched his ankle.

Many Notables To Tee-off in Canadian Open

Toronto, Aug. 1—(CP)—The man who threw away a chance to become United States open golf champion, Ed Oliver of Hornell, N.Y., will be a starter when golf stars from at least three countries start shooting two weeks from now for the Canadian open crown, tournament officials announced today.

Officials reported that they have received an official entry form from Oliver, who was disqualified from this year's U.S. open for starting his last round ahead of schedule. Because of this Oliver was barred from a playoff with Lawson Little and Gene Sarazen, a playoff won by Little.

Oliver has demonstrated that he is still in the fine form which gave him a tie over the regulation 72 holes in the American open with Little and Sarazen by winning the St. Paul open crown last Sunday. The 23-year-old Oliver was a stroke ahead of Dick Metz and Willie Goggin.

The international aspect of the field that will tee off in the 72-hole competition for the Canadian crown and the Seagram gold cup at Toronto Scarboro was broadened by receipt of the entry of Henry R. Simpson of Maracaibo, Venezuela.

Additional recruits from the Canadian ranks have also sent in their entries. Among them is Stanley Horne of Montreal Islesmere, Canadian Professional Golfers Association champion for the 1936-37-38 seasons and runner-up for the P. G. A. crown last year.

HANK GORNICKI STOPS THE BEARS WITH 4 HITTER

Rochester Wings Win From Newark and Increase Lead to Three Games

LITTLE GIANTS CLIMB

Jersey City in Fourth Place Only One Game Behind Baltimore Orioles

(By the Associated Press)

If a popularity poll were taken among Rochester baseball fans today, the only candidate with an outside chance of beating Hank Gornicki probably would be Jack Frost—if he could be found.

For. Gornicki stopped Newark Bears with a four-hit pitching performance last night and at the same time he stopped Red Wings' slide from the International League heights. His 2-0 shutout triumph increased Rochester's lead to three games.

Wings put together a walk, two singles and an error by pitcher Tommy Reis of Newark to score their runs in the first inning. They got only four singles the rest of the way, but Gornicki struck out seven and walked only one in winning his 14th game and earning Wings an even break in the series.

Meanwhile the third-place Baltimore Orioles split a double-header with Buffalo and dropped within a game of the Jersey City Giants, who nosed out Montreal, 5-4.

Baltimore lost the first game 5-0 in a pitching battle between Lynn Nelson and Orlin Collier but came back with all its hitting power to win the nightcap 10-2. The opening defeat broke the Orioles' six-game streak. In the afterpiece the Birds pounded out 18 hits, including Bill Nagel's 31st home run and Murray Howell's 23rd.

The Little Giants shoved across four runs in the ninth inning, Del Young's homer accounting for three of them. Clyde Castelman started for Jersey and received credit for the victory, although removed for a pinch hitter in the ninth.

Toronto Maple Leafs ended a nine-game losing streak by beating and tying Syracuse Chiefs in a lengthy doubleheader. Leafs won the opener 6-5 in 14 innings and came from behind to gain a 6-6 tie in the second game, which was called at the end of seven innings to permit Syracuse to make train connections.

Yesterday's Stars

(By The Associated Press)

Clyde Shoun and Johnny Mize, Cardinals: Former scattered seven hits over 11 innings to win first game against Bees and latter hit home run in each encounter to raise season's total to 30.

Pinky Higgins Tigers: His triple with bases loaded in eighth was big blow in 11-inning triumph over Yankees.

Ken Koltner and Russ Peters, Indians: Former hit home run with bases loaded in fourth inning against Red Sox and latter delivered pinch single with bases loaded in eighth for tying and winning runs.

CALLING 'EM Between the Lines

with Ken J. Colling

The Shell "Oilers" and Corby's A. C. are right back from whence they started in the city O.A.S.A. playdowns and the right to advance into the provincial softball playoffs. Last night Corby's handed the "Oilers" their second straight defeat, downing Harold Bawden's nine 8 to 6. Now the series is knotted at two games each and the teams return to battle on Saturday night at the Flats in the fifth of a best-in-seven series. The "Oilers" won the first two games as Bawden beat Harris 6-4, then Eddie Schrieder beat "Lum" Carson 5-4 to put Shell two up. Last Saturday Connie Harris beat Johnnie Bawden 5-4 and last night we find Carson getting revenge as he bested Schrieder 8 to 6 and now we find each team having won two games and each team having scored 22 runs apiece in the four games played, which would indicate they are quite evenly matched throughout. Naturally the team winning Saturday night will enjoy a decided edge.

There were two sides to last night's game. For instance the lion's share of the Corby glory could be handed to Chuckie Barriage, who handed seven chances without a bobble and made two sensational running catches, the final out, which gave Corby's victory being made by Chuck in a thrilling running catch, as he took Amo's Texas leaguer over his left shoulder for a nice try. As for Schrieder, the centre field positions proved costly to him as two bad errors in the middle field resulted in Corby runs, although Schrieder's free tickets via the four ball route added to his difficulty in the initial frame. Carson hurled steady ball and was given good support, until the ninth, when Connie Harris was rushed in to give a sterling relief effort, as he made Sero hit into a force-out, Harold Bawden injecting himself in as a pinch hitter, and fouled to Simpson and then Chuck Barriage sewed the game up. Incidentally Lum Carson, Harold Reid and Freddie McGuire were all on the Corby bench with their new 3/47th Battery summer soldier togs, they having motored to Belleville from Kingston along with Umpire Don Thomas who is also in the Battery.

The question of whether or not sports should be continued or suspended for the duration of the war is taking no end of sports' columnists' space throughout Ontario. The dean of Eastern Ontario sportswriters, the veteran Fred Craig, who is pinch-hitting for Peterboro columnist Cec Perdue, says there is no reason why sporting activities should be abandoned, especially at the present time. "We believe that athletic contests have a distinct mission in building up the home morale," writes Fred, to which we add a lengthy "amen." Frankly this corner feels that sporting interests should continue where at all possible and as normal as possible, without interference with any line of military activities, however. The abandonment of sports would serve no good purpose or end, nor would such a move tend to help the nation's war effort. There is nothing we know of to be any better tonic for nerves or unrest, than good sporting contests, which can be productive of interest to soothe the anxious heart.

Sports Columnist Ted Reeve of the Toronto Telegram, recently had the following to say pertaining to the subject of sports activities during wartime. He writes —"Sports writers are in a rather difficult position when it comes to spouting an opinion on this subject. Actually we have no licence to preach. We can hardly censure a sponsor of a sports team for withdrawing his support in these times when his dollar bill has to carry quite a load of taxes and when his business may be on its heels. Nevertheless, we can cheer, with warm sincerity, the sportsmen who keep on going in these trying times. After all, this war may last several years. The older folks need something to occasionally take their minds off the troubles. And the young gents can play games, do their work, have time for military drill and still have enough jineker left to enjoy a few turns at the shag or the rhumba."

Do you remember when Percy Williams was eliminated from the 100-metre dash in a semi-final at the Los Angeles Olympics eight years ago today? Eddie Tolan, United States negro, won the heat, equalling the Vancouver star's world record time of 10.3 seconds set in 1930.

Secretary Verne McIlwraith, of the O.A.S.A., announced that the Provincial Softball Association would purchase war certificates with all the profits made during the war. In so doing the Softball Association not only provides recreation and amusement, but adds to the country's war effort also. To date the O.A.S.A. has provided over $500.00 worth of sports equipment to members of the C.A.S.F. in Canada. It is thought that the playdown dates in the O.A.S.A. will be announced in the near future, although Convener Harry Rollins informed us that Belleville would meet Trenton, Oshawa play-off with Peterborough, while the Kingston winners draw a bye in the intermediate "A" group in Eastern Ontario.

SPORT SPICE — The National League is getting its coffers enriched as the result of continued fines, levied by Prexy Ford Frick, "Lippy Leo" Durocher and Pitcher Walter Brown of the Giants, being the latest to feel Frick's sting . . . The Yankee pitchers are ailing, failing or sailing, but regardless they can't win consistantly and that's why Detroit beat them yesterday and also why the Yankees are close to the second division . . . In the meantime the Tigers and Indians are staging a torrid race for the American League leadership, which will no doubt see one or the other crack-up under the strain soon . . . Incidentally the Vikings and K-Nines resume their girls' league semi-finals Friday night after battling ten innings in the first game last week, when Sub Barrett's nine won the initial game . . . Although Tommy Pointer hurled seven hit ball yesterday, the Port Hope Ontarios bowed to the Bowmanville Royals 7-4 . . . All of the Toronto Maple Leaf Hockey team squad hope to have completed their military training with the N.P.A.M. before the puck season opens, which is just about three months off.

PERSONS CALLED NOT IN THEATRE

Mrs. D. L. Bennett, whose address was listed as Front Street, missed the opportunity of a lifetime at the Capitol Theatre last night, when her name was selected by a member of the audience as being eligible to sell her photograph to the management for the sum of $200. Mrs. Bennett failed to answer her name when it was announced.

By the same token, Miss Theresa Whiteman, 157 Charles Street, also failed to put in an appearance when her name was selected for the second offer of $35.

gasoline coach) and the crews of the freight train had orders to meet at Silver Lake, one mile north of the scene, and wait for the freight to pass. Murtough should have taken his train onto the siding there. For some reason he did not go onto the siding."

J. F. Allenspaugh, Akron yardmaster, said his investigation also showed the "doodlebug's" crew was at fault.

Freight Telescopes Passenger Train

The freight train, northbound from Columbus, O., telescoped the fore end of the 12,000—pound coach and shoved it back in its wake for 200 yards. Flames spurted from the windows as its 250-gallon gasoline tanks exploded.

Coroner R. E. Amos, seeking to clear up the identifications, said the passengers "didn't have a chance in the world" to escape.

Eyewitnesses related that flames enveloped the coach so fast that none of the passengers could escape. One man standing nearby said he heard no screams.

Officials estimated eight of the dead were railroad employees "deadheading" home after concluding their runs. Most of the passenger victims were residents of the Akron district, although the coach, which shuttled the 12 miles from Hudson, O., to Akron, had picked up passengers at Hudson from the Pennsylvania's Cleveland-Pittsburgh line.

Two enginemen on the freight train, which had two locomotives were burned lightly as they fled the flames after braking to a stop.

The Stars Say

For Friday, August 2

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

VERY LIVELY and progressive conditions prevail on this day according to the lunar and mutual aspects. New matters are uppermost and may take sudden and surprising turns for unforeseen advantage. Such opportunities should be grasped with vim and decisiveness, urged on to satisfactory conclusions.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a year in which all important affairs dart ahead on swift wings, urged on by certain peculiar, unfathomable and surprising as well a thrilling elements. New interests, plans and contacts keep things "on the jump" physically as well as intellectually.

A child born on this day should be magnificently endowed with qualities for notable achievements and important position in life, probably in the arts, sciences or professions. Keen intellect, adaptability, energy, are backed up or inspired by subtle genius.

COBOURG RINK WINS

Cobourg, Ont., Aug. 1—(CP) — With rinks competing from Cobourg, Port Hope, Oshawa, Peterborough, Kingston and Toronto, the annual McCook Cup lawn bowling tournament was held last night at Cobourg Lawn Bowling Club. Cobourg rinks captured all the prizes. The McCook Cup was won by James Watson's rink.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Mutiny Or. The Bounty"

One hundred tons of motion picture equipment and supplies accompanied a company of sixty technicians into the South Seas for the filming of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture, "Mutiny on the Bounty," coming soon to the Capitol. Belleville and vicinity will have the last opportunity of seeing this great historic British epic.

The huge shipment, valued at several hundred thousand dollars, included thousands of separate articles ranging in size from an ordinary pin to a powerful electrical generating plant.

But what were some of the unusual articles that a big motion picture company would carry on a 10,000-mile trip?

Nothing Left Out

A study of the mass of freight invoices of the "Bounty" supplies reveals that nothing had been forgotten to transplant a modern motion picture studio across 5,000 miles of ocean.

In the mountains of great shipping, each designed to conserve space aboard ship, were found such items as safety pins, thimbles, fly swatters, spray guns, ice cream containers, bibles, hundreds of old coins, corn pads, three old crutches, one wooden leg, a hot water bottle, one bottle of blood, a toy sewing machine, a harpoon gun.

For trading with the natives in distant, semi-savage islands, numerous large crates filled with novelties were shipped. In these were found bird cages "snakes-in-a-box," harmonicas, mirrors, pocket knives, wrist watches, celluloid dolls, straw hats, bracelets, neck-laces, earrings, Spanish combs, rings and a hundred or more other varieties of articles.

Too, enough medical supplies to equip an average hospital went to the South Seas, in a dozen large crates and including every remedy known to medical science.

Nine Camera Outfits

Besides the dozens of hampers of wardrobe and make-up equipment, the largest consignment stored aboard the S.S. Maunganui included the actual filming equipment—nine camera outfits four big generators tons of film and film cases and a thousand or more other details necessary for the actual filming of the "Bounty" scenes.

"Mutiny on the Bounty", produced by Irving G. Thalberg, has a notable cast of fifty players headed by Charles Laughton, Clark Gable and Franchot Tone.

On the Same Programme

"An Angel From Texas" a comedy riot featuring the brother rats Eddie Albert, Rosemary Lane, Wayne Morris, Jane Wyman, Ronald Reagan, Ruth Terry.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Private Affairs"

Here they come—one of the greatest comedy and romance combinations ever cast together in one picture, Nancy Kelly, Robert Cummings, Hugh Herbert and Roland (Topper) Young, four stars you're going to cheer in the four star comedy hit of the new season "Private Affairs" which opens Sunday after midnight at the McCarthy theatre. Other important players appearing in this gala holiday attraction "Private Affairs" include Montague Love, G. P. Huntley, Jr., Dick Purcell, Jonathan Hale and Mary Forbes. Readers of this column are well advised that this feature plus the program of short subjects which is the holiday show at the McCarthy theatre is equal to any screen entertainment for laughs and genuine merriment that has come from Hollywood this year. A show to see.

"Grandpa Goes To Town"

The Higgins family in the hilarious comedy "Grandpa Goes To Town" and Ann Dvorak, Lola Lane and Helen Mack in the dramatic story "Girls of the Road" are two excellent feature hits now showing at the McCarthy theatre, make it a date now to enjoy this program.

AT THE BELLE

"My Love Came Back"

There's a sure cure for your blues waiting for you at the Belle Theatre, where Olivia deHavilland, Jeffrey Lynn, and a host of other delightful people are cavorting through the most refreshing comedy of many seasons. "My Love Came Back" is the title, and it's a laugh-getter.

To the syncopated tempo of music of the masters played in the jitterbug time, the madcap antics of a music student and her racey cohorts—Eddie Albert, Jane Wyman, Charles Winninger and Spring Byington keep a terrific pace.

Miss deHavilland is the violin student, Amelia Cornell, who is as talented as she is broke. Winninger is the industrial magnate, Julius Mallette, who turns his factory over to Tony Baldwin, played by Jeffrey Lynn, that he might have more time to devote to Amelia's career.

Amelia doesn't know her patron's identity when she gets a scholarship, but learns soon enough when the town learns he is none other than Mr. Malette, and the girl becomes the butt of scandal. She thinks this can be straightened out by returning the check in question, and this she thinks she does. But swingsters Joy and Dusty, played by Jane Wyman and Eddie Albert, cash the check to help put over their classical swing band.

Amelia is starred in the band's first performance, an important event for the organization. She faints when she appears and discovers it to be taking place in the Mallette home. A big session between Mrs. Mallette, played by Spring Byington, the Mallette children, and all parties concerned, ends with understanding. The band is a success. And Amelia is the biggest success of all—with Tony.

"Gambling on the High Seas"

The companion feature attraction is Warner Bros.' "Gambling on the High Seas," starring Wayne Morris and Jane Wyman, the exciting gangster thriller also features Gilbert Roland, John Litel and Roger Pryor.

"Gambling on the High Seas" tells in an engaging manner how innocent thrill-seekers were tricked out of their earnings by sinister gangsters operating luxurious gambling ships.

Handsome Wayne Morris plays Jim Carver, a young newspaperman. In a series of swiftly paced scenes he and the gambling czar's secretary, engagingly played by Jane Wyman, amass evidence enough to convict the ruthless criminal.

Queen Elizabeth Visits Wounded French Soldiers

Somewhere in England, Aug. 1—(CP-Cable)—Cries reminiscent of the royal visit to Quebec echoed through a military encampment today as the Queen strolled through uneven rows of French soldiers and sailors, many of whom are recovering from wounds.

Nearly 2,000 men, many of them dressed in convalescent blue, cried "Vive La Reine" as the Queen wandered among the group, stopped here and there to chat with the Poilus in French. She also strolled through a canteen where men were drinking and lunching.

PLANS FOR EMERGENCIES

London, Aug. 1 (CP) — Ronald Cross, Minister of Shipping, said in a broadcast today that Britain is prepared to meet emergencies arising from attack on her ports by German planes.

"Enemy action might at any time make sudden changes in our port arrangements," he said, "and we have made plans to meet such emergencies."

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Aug. 1 (CP). — Mining shares lost some ground in the early session on Toronto Exchange today and the industrials registered a minor gain, the index advancing .37. Western oils were only slightly lower. Volume slackened to 51,000 shares in the first hour.

Foods and steels were unchanged to narrowly higher and in the senior oil group, gains of minimum fractions come out fr British American and International Pete. Papers leaned lightly to the down side.

Dome firmed to 20, up a fraction while lower prices were posted for Aunor, Pickle Crow, Pioneer and Wright-Hargreaves. Nickel and Steep Rock were soft spots in the base metal list.

Home Oil declined 5 cents to 1.57 and Calgary and Edmonton was off 2 cents to 1.40. Other western oils were steady.

WALL STREET

New York, Aug. 1 (AP).—It was another case of spotty price trends in today's stock market.

Quiet strength crept in here and there but many leaders were unable to attract a following. Dealings were slow throughout and, near the fourth hour, gains of fractions to a point were a shade in the majority.

Among favored stocks were International Paper, Bethlehem Steel, Chrysler, Sears Roebuck; United Aircraft, Glenn Martin, Kennecott, and Westinghouse.

Texas Corp. was backward, along with American Smelting, International Harvester, Douglas Aircraft and American Telephone.

In the bond market Canada 4s were unchanged.

LIVESTOCK

Toronto, Aug. 1 (CP)—Cattle sales on the livestock market up to mid-season today were confined mostly to canners, stocks and common butcher cows which sold at steady prices. Veal calves and lambs were steady. No sales of sheep were reported. No price was established for hogs. The cattle holdover from Wednesday was 900 head.

The market will be closed Monday next, Toronto Civic Holiday.

Receipts reported by the Dominion marketing service were: Cattle 63, calves 5, hogs 100, sheep and lambs 15.

Canners sold at $3.50. Butcher cows ranged from $4-$4.50. About two loads of stockers sold at from $5-$6.50.

The light offering of lambs sold at $9.50 for good ewes and wethers and $8.50 for bucks.

Hogs closed previously at $8.25 off-trucks for bacons and $11 dressedweight.

Demand for Eggs and Butter Shows Increase

Toronto, Aug. 1—Price gains were registered by butter and top-grade eggs yesterday on the Toronto open produce, market while cheese held quietly steady.

Improved demand and limited offerings caused first-grade Ontario creamery butter to advance from 22 1-2c, Tuesday's price to a range of 22 3-4c to 23c. Receipts were fairly well cleaned up at 22 3-4 early in the day and the price later moved to 23c with sellers even at this level experiencing no difficulty in moving their stocks. Sales of Western butter were made at both 23 1-2c and 23 3-4c, and holders at the close were generally asking 24c.

Demand for eggs increased somewhat. A-large eggs advanced fractionally to 22c and A-medium to 21c, with other grades staying unchanged. Receipts were sufficient to meet the improved demand. Government-inspected shipments commanded a premium of 1-2c per dozen.

Montreal Produce

Butter: First grade creamery prints, jobbing price, 24c-24 1-4c; first grade solids, jobbing price, 23 1-2c-23 3-4c; Quebec No. 1 pasteurized, current receipt price, 23 1-8c; Quebec No. 2, 22 1-8c; Quebec No. 1 pasteurized wholesale jobbing price, 23 1-2c-23 5-8c; Quebec No. 2, 22 3-4c. Receipts, 1,214 boxes.

Eggs: Graded shipments in used free cases, selling price, A-large 23c-23 1-2c; A-medium, 22c; B, 19c-19 1-2c; C, 14 1-2c-15c Receipts, 520 cases.

MANY FRENCHMEN LOSE CITIZENSHIP SAYS NAZI RADIO

Two Rothschilds and Other Prominent Citizens Are Named

Berlin, Aug. 1—(AP via radio)—A long list of prominent Frenchmen have been ordered deprived of their citizenship and their properties confiscated, the German wireless said today.

The list, the first since the Petain regime decreed action against those who left France "without valid reasons" between May and June 30, included two members of the internationally-known Rothschild banking family. It was broadcast by the government station at Vichy and picked up here.

The two Rothschilds were Baron Edouard, head of the French branch of the family's banking operations, and Baron Maurice, a member of the French Senate.

Leading Industrialists

Others on the list included some of France's leading industrialists, political leaders and journalists.

Among them were deputies Harri Mayer, of the international banking firm of Lazare Freres; Louis Rosengart, automobile manufacturer; M. Solenski, one of France's largest hat makers; M. Huysman and M. Coen, directors of the beaux arts and national library; M. Levitan, furniture and radio magnate and Louis Louis-Dreyfus, banker and importer.

Journalists included were Elie J. Bois, publisher of Le Petit Parisien; madame Genevieve Tabouis, foreign editor of L'Oeuvre; Pierre Lazareff and Joseph Kessel, of Paris-Soir; Henri de Kerillis and Andre Geraud.

(Geraud, who writes under the name "Pertinax," and Madame Tabouis are in the United States.)

"The composition of the provisional list appears to confirm rumors prevalent here for some time that drastic measures are to be taken above all against persons of the Jewish race who engaged in activities detrimental to French National interests, the Vichy radio said.

"It was found that a majority of French financial undertakings were owned by Jews, and therefore not serving France alone, but international interests."

King and Queen Talk To People Whose Homes Were Bombed

London, Aug. 1—(CP) — The King and Queen, on a tour of northeast Britain, talked today with men and women whose homes at Hull were bombed.

The people lined the sidewalk when the royal car came up the narrow street.

"How many people were hurt?" asked the King.

"No one, Your Majesty," replied a woman. "We were all in our air raid shelters."

"I think you all had wonderful escapes and you must have been very brave," said the Queen.

Duchess Uses Legpower

CALDWELL RENEWS

Mr. Coldwell, asked pointed questions on the extent to which Canada was working with the United States government on plans for a joint defence of North America, and on the Canadian government's attitude toward Japan.

Realizes Questions Delicate

"I realize that these are questions which might be considered delicate in an open session of parliament," Mr. Coldwell said. "That is one of the reasons why we have suggested on several occasions that a closed session be held in order that matters such as these might be discussed without the fear of giving adverse publicity or doing any harm to our common cause."

"If it were impossible to answer that question in an open session of parliament it would be equally impossible to answer it in a secret session," Mr. King interjected. "The same reason would govern in both cases."

When Mr. Coldwell charged the government was helping Japan to "arm against Great Britain" the Prime Minister declared every effort was being made to prevent Canadian war materials going to Japan.

Allowed to Renew Contract

"Less than a month ago the government allowed the Granby Mine to renew a three-year contract for its entire output to interests who are arming Japan," Mr. Coldwell declared.

Rodney Adamson, Conservative York West, urged the government to set up a commons committee which would sit throughout the recess and hear representations on war problems. It would give the services the feeling that a parliamentary body was ready to hear their complaints and would be an aid to the government, he said. The committee could report back at the next session of parliament.

Mr. Adamson said members of parliament knew less of what was going on than many officers and men of the service. Those sent to parliament to formulate and direct Canada's war policies should be in the confidence of the government, he believed.

Condition Improve

When J. A. Ross, (Cons. Souris) suggested that the Prime Minister's reason for not holding a secret session of Parliament was not complimentary to the members, Mr. King said he had meant no reflection on the members. He said he had meant that rumors would be started through the country because a secret session was being held, not because members would disclose what had been said or done.

Conservatives generally charged the government with half-heartedness in direction of the war effort in the first eight months but, it was agreed, things had improved during the last two months.

Mr. Hanson, following his desk mate, Hon. Grote Stirling (Con. Yale), placed before the government a score of specific questions he said the public wanted answered. Being told about contracts was no answer. People wanted to know when deliveries would be made and of how many pieces of equipment. They wanted to know when Canada would be ready to defend itself and equip additional troops to be sent overseas.

New Ideas Must Dominate

Germany would not wait until Canada was all ready. If equipment considered essential could not be made in time by old methods, other means or equipment must be devised, he declared. New ideas would be a dominant factor as they were last time, when the British introduced the Tank.

Lack of labor representation on War Boards was protested by Angus MacInnis (C.C.F. Vancouver East), who voiced suspicion of the men who had been called to organize Canada's war industries.

"We know their past records", he said. "They have opposed social improvement in the condition of the working class on every possible occasion".

Advocates Debt-Free Money

There was a "very close resemblance" between these men and the things Canada was fighting against, he claimed. The first thing Hitler had done in Germany was destroy the trade union movement and the social democratic party.

"The universal franchise and a parliament is not all there is to democracy. We must also have an economic democracy where the people are free from the exploitation of irresponsible monopolies" he said.

J. H. Blackmore new democracy leader quoted extensively from evidence of Graham Towers, Governor of the Bank of Canada, before last year's banking committee to support his contention that debt-free money should be created by the government to finance much of the war. At present the Merchant Banks issued 88 per cent of the money in circulation a "high prerogative of government."

He asked what the government was doing to increase production generally to prevent running short as war demands increased. A shortage in Canada was unnecessary and would result in inflation.

Karl Homuth (Cons. Waterloo South) said the government had told only half the truth about the war effort during the March election campaign It had promised no construction but now it was introducing conscription, regardless of what it tried to call it.

Jean Pouliot Speaks Out

Jean Francois Pouliot, (Lib. Temiscouata), said the government should not only refuse to accept any suggestions from the Conservative party but should dismiss "all the stupid asses who have been put in high positions by the administration of which the present opposition leader was a member."

Some arrangement for a salvage branch in the defence department was urged by Joseph Harris, Conservative Toronto-Danforth who declared there was tremendous waste in all branches of the service. Scrap metal tin cans and used crank-case oil should be salvaged and put to useful purposes he said.

George Black (Cons. Yukon), said he believed the government was now "awake to the situation" and was doing the best it could to lead a successful Canadian war effort.

Discussing United States relations Capt. Black said that country had been a good neighbor in the past but it had not been neighborly in placing a high discount on Canadian money since the war started or in demanding that Canadians must have passports when entering the United States.

NORTH IRELAND

There were scattered raids mostly by small groups or lone planes, over most sections of England throughout the night and this morning.

Although comparatively large numbers of high explosives and incendiary bombs were reported dropped, apparently most of them fell in open fields, for there were few reports of damage and none of casualties.

One incendiary bomb struck the roof of a ward in a hospital near a southern town. The resulting blaze was extinguished so quickly that it was not necessary to move patients.

Residents Hear Gunfire

Residents of Northern Ireland heard gunfire and the roar of motors for half an hour yesterday, but saw no planes.

Three Nazi aircraft were believed downed last night, one near the sea and two inland. Official figures said July attacks on Britain had cost Germany 240 planes — almost eight a day—and 600 men.

The fact that both the Hamburg and Bremen radio stations went off the air this morning was taken as indication of renewed Royal Air Force raids on Nazi targets.

In the war at sea, the Admiralty acknowledged the 1,375-ton destroyer Delight had gone down with "small" loss of life. Her normal crew was 145 men. Sunk by enemy air attack, the Delight was the 29th British destroyer lost since the start of the war.

New Operations Indicated

Possible new British naval operations in the Mediterranean were indicated by a Madrid broadcast heard here last night which said five submarines, four destroyers, an aircraft carrier and three capital ships had sailed from the Gibraltar base yesterday morning.

Part of the force also might have been intended for duty in the Africa-to-Arctic blockade of the European continent which Britain put into effect at midnight last night.

The Admiralty announced that in the western hemisphere the armed merchant cruiser Alcantara engaged a German raider— believed to be one that has preyed in recent weeks on British shipping—and damaged her as she fled.

In the Aegean the Greek tanker Hermione, carrying 300 tons of petrol and 200 tons of lubricating oil for Italy, was sunk by British gunfire Sunday evening during a attack by Italian airplanes on British units.

British Plane Returns

Divebombing Querqueville airport at Cherbourg through a heavy anti-aircraft barrage British planes yesterday dropped one heavy bomb on the central hangar and a dozen others struck the seaplane slipway at Flushing. A British plane on this operation was engaged by a number of Messerschmitts and sent one diving toward the sea with smoke streaming from its wings.

Although hit in one engine the British plane returned to its base safely.

Barges off Waalcheren Island, oil storage plants at St. Colomb and south St Valery and Gilsy airport near Amiens were among other targets. One raider dropped bombs when he saw 400 railway cars packed closely together on parallel sidings at Ostend.

Barges in the locks at the entrance to the canal at Ostend were bombed from a low level. A convoy of ships was attacked but without evident results the Ministry said.

Although low clouds hampered night operations over Germany a number of craft reached their objectives. Two large explosions were seen when oil storage installations at Homburg and Monheim were bombed. At Duisburg airdrome bombs were seen to strike the landing ground. Incendiary obmbs were ing ground. Incendiary bombs were at Cologne. Five fires were started by bombs falling near buildings on the airdrome east of Antwerp.

Nazi gun emplacements were attacked in Norway.

Change Defence Plans

A change in plans to defend Britain was disclosed today, by an order of the new commander-in-chief, Gen. Sir Alan Brooke, to remove many of the barriers which have been erected across roads throughout the island.

The order, reflecting a return to the traditional theory that attack is the best defence, calls for the removal of the steel and concrete barriers to permit rapid movement of troops to any threatened sector.

The removal already is under way in North England, where all double road blocks have been ordered eliminated and single ones cut back.

These blocks were built to leave only a narrow zig-zag passage which could be closed at a moments notice.

The barriers were erected hurriedly two months ago at every point where it was thought German troop transport planes might be able to land in an attempt to seize strategic communication networks. At that time, when comparatively few trained British soldiers remained in Britain, barricade to barricade defence by available troops was considered advisable.

Now, observers explained, a trained and equipped army of several million men has converted the island into an armed camp. Therefore, barricades were considered not only unnecessary but a possible handicap which might act to an invader's advantage by preventing rapid shifting of British troops and supplies.

bombing of Chinese civilians. During the first six months of 1940 Germany and Italy likewise bought no American aviation gasoline, practically all of the export going to Britain and France.)

The Admiralty spokesman declined to discuss the roundup of "espionage suspects" on the ground it was still under way.

"It is entirely an internal affair," he said, "and it must be clear to everybody that national secrets during an emergency period must be strictly observed.

"The measures being taken are normal and in accordance with the law of the realm. It would be entirely irrelevant for Britain to take retaliatory measures. Also, it would cause trouble if correspondents should abuse their privileges by going beyond the legitimate bounds."

The chief of The Associated Press Bureau in Tokyo, Relman Morin, was questioned by Japanese gendarmes for several hours last night concerning his dispatches on the death of Melville James Cox, British newspaperman who died while under arrest in the alleged espionage round-up.

Morin was taken from his office to the gendarmerie headquarters for the questioning, during which time no communication with him was permitted. Japanese said that Cox jumped to his death from a window while being questioned.

(A Domei, Japanese News Agency, dispatch received in Shanghai said Morin was accused of sending dispatches intimating that Cox's death was not a suicide. The Associated Press dispatches reported what British Embassy officials had said on the case, and made no comment.)

TUNISIAN PRINCE

There was practically no poetry being written in this war. "It is different to the last war," Noyes said, "people are not in the mood: it is too grim a business."

Back to Principles of Religion

With the exception of the black-out nights Noyes said London is much like it was 36 years ago when he wrote "Come Down to Kew in Lilac Time; It Isn't Far From London."

Lord Marley British Labor Peer and authority on refugees has come to Canada to look into the case of certain internees. He has been sent to this assignment by the British Parliamentary Refugee Committee of which he is vice-chairman.

Studies Some Internees

He said one of these enemy Aliens who were transported to camps in Canada from Britain might be useful in Britain's far effort. Some of them are actually anti-Nazi.

There was a possibility that some might be returned to Britain where their skills can be employed in the prosecution of the war. Lord Marley will check up on them and also look into conditions in the camps.

German Bombers Nervous

He described German pilots as "nervous unwilling and don't like their work." They flew high to avoid anti-aircraft fire and often their aim is bad.

Changes in the British government which had put trade union leaders into some key posts had "put teeth into the government." Therefore he said "the mouth is much better than it was."

Turning to the refugee question, Lord Marley said he had raised the point in the House of Lords that "as long as the children of the rich come out, there is no earthly reason why part of the ships should not be devoted to the poor, provided their parents sign papers saying that they will not hold the government responsible for them."

Another point which had been raised in the House of Lords was that the government "may have plans to bring out the poor, but it let criticism arise before the plan got working".

He exupressed disbelief of a report from London that communal eating in government-controlled dining halls may soon replace home-cooking in Britain as a food conservation measue. He said it had arisen from the suggestion of communal feeding for school children.

One of the most interesting figures aboard ship was a monocled French artillery officer. He wore ten medal ribbons on his uniformed breast, including those of the Croix de Guerre and the the Legions of Honor. He still wore the badge of the Maginot Line troops on his black beret.

He declined to discuss his purpose in Canada, although it was believed he was a supporter of general de Gaulle. Nor would he give his name for fear of German reprisals against his family.

Long Journey for Some Children

Some of the children aboard the ship still have far to go before reaching their destinations. Miss A. Buchanan, nine and Sheila Jefferson, 10, are going to the Oriental state of Sarawak ruled by Charles Viner-Brooke, "the White Rajah". Twelve-year old Alison Clarke is on his way to British North Borneo.

The youthful titled couple are Lady A. P. Herbert, listed as 15 year old, and Lord Brooke, six. They will stay with Arthur Wendell of Wendellshore Summit, N.J.

Noyes Evacuates Family Since Nazis Fire on Children

An Eastern Canadian Port, Aug. 1.—(CP)—Alfred Noyes, the English poet, who debarked here today with his wife and family from an ocean liner bringing refugees from England said it was German tactics in firing on children that brought him to this country.

The Noyes' home is at the extreme south of the Isle of Wight where air raid alarms occur two or three times a day.

"The thing that made us decide to move the children", he said, "was the statement of the chief constable who said that the enemy had been machine-gunning children on the beaches".

COMMONS TO SIT SATURDAY, SAYS MR. KING

Ottawa, Aug. 1—(CP) — Prime Minister Mackenzie King today gave notice in the House votes and proceedings that the Commons will sit each Saturday morning and afternoon until prorogation of parliament.

At present the House is sitting morning, afternoon and evening on the other week-days.

It is expected an effort will be made to prorogue this week, possibly on Saturday, but the situation still is indefinite.

WINS HIGH RANK

Anna Reaveley Glover, one of Britain's most famous women doctors, is shown in the uniform of the British Royal Army Medical Corps. It was announced in London that Dr. Glover has been promoted to deputy assistant director of medical services for the eastern command of the auxiliary training service. She is the first woman doctor to be given a senior army position.

BRITISH CHILDREN NUMBERING 1,200 TO COME TO U.S.

Lord Lothian Says Total Could Reach 50,000 if U.S. Ships Provided to Transport Them

Washington, Aug. 1—(AP)— The Marquis of Lothian, British Ambassador, said today about 1,200 British children will be brought to the United States within the next six weeks. He added that the total may reach 50,000 if American ships are provided to transport them.

Lord Lothian's views were expressed in a letter to Representative Thomas G. Hennings, Missouri Democrat, whose bill to authorize removal of British children in United States ships is now before Congress.

Text of Lord Lothian's letter, made public by Hennings, follows:

"My Dear Congressman,

"Mr. Eric Bibble, the secretary of the United States Committee for the care of European children, has suggested that I should write to you as it has been stated that the attitude of His Majesty's government towards the proposal to send American ships to the United Kingdom to fetch children needs clarification.

"In the circumstances I am glad to inform you that if American ships are sent to the United Kingdom to fetch children there is a large number of children available for these ships to take back. His Majesty's government has decided that it cannot assume the responsibility for sending children to the North American continent in British ships unless they are convoyed. As there is a lack of convoyed British ships at present the Board is unable itself to take the responsibility for sending children to the United States. It is, however, estimated that about 1,200 children are coming to this continent at their own risk, or rather that of their parents in the next six weeks.

"Applications to the Children's Overseas Reception Board for evacuation to the United States already exceed 32,000, of which 10,000 are for nominated homes; it is estimated that the applications would reach a figure of 50,000. The great majority of these children are from homes other than those of rich parents; 98 per cent of the applications are in respect of children from grant-aided schools.

"I would like to thank you for your generous interest in the matter.

"Believe me, my dear Mr. Congressman, very sincerely yours,"
"Lothian."

VATICAN CONFERS ITS CITIZENSHIP ON DIPLOMATS ABROAD

Vatican City, Aug. 1.—(CP)—The Vatican announced today that Vatican citizenship had been conferred on all its diplomatic representatives aboard, including the staffs of nunciatures and apostolic delegations.

The anouncement said this action had been taken with the consent of the Italian government, practically all Vatican diplomats being Italians.

It was believed intended to clarify the situation of the Holy See's representatives aboard in view of Italy's status as belligerent.

English Girl of 7 Recognizes Bomber as it Zooms Overhead

Jane Rutter of Wincanton, Somerset, Who is Now in Belleville, Proves Unconsciously She 'Knows' Her Planes

'WE ARE GOING TO WIN'

Mrs. Leslie Rutter, Who Has Arrived Here With Her Children, is Calmly Confident of British Victory if Enemy Should Attempt Invasion of Britain

"Thomas," said seven-year-old Jane Rutter, formerly of Wincanton, Somersetshire, England, who arrived here yesterday with eleven-year-old brother Thomas, twelve-year-old sister Rachael and mother Mrs. Leslie Rutter, to spend the duration of the war with Mrs. Rutter's sister, Mrs. Ivan Scott, 184 Victoria Avenue, "isn't that a bomber overhead?"

Beneath fleecy August clouds, a Royal Canadian Air Force plane zoomed and barrel-rolled. "Quite right, Jane," answered Thomas in his crisp clear-cut English accent, "it is." The youngster who had been playing cowboy with a piece of rope never looked up.

Mrs. Rutter ventured an explanation. "The children know the various machines by the sound of their motors," she said. "For instance, it is the easiest thing in the world to discern between R.A.F. and German. The Hun motors drone intermittently, with an occasional chug-chug, but the R.A.F. machines roar in a steady monotone."

The Rutters, third family of war guests to come to this city arrived via New York and Montreal. Seven-year-old Jane's first impression of America was a blob of fog through which loomed the statue of Liberty. Rachael, a pretty typical English child, when asked how she liked Canada, quickly replied "O.K."

Is Going to Like Canada

But Jane hastened to tell the newspaperman that "this is the first time, you know that I have been abroad." And imagine this from a seven-year-old: "I am going to like Canada all right, but it shan't be long before we shall be going back, for we are going to win, you know."

"The children know their planes all right," laughed Mrs. Rutter, who is the wife of a prominent Somerset solicitor, "for we lived in a place that was in a direct line between a prominent south of England seaport and a Nazi base in France. Day and night the Huns flew over on bombing raids. On one occasion a Heinkel III. bomber was brought down a short distance from our home, and the children took a keen delight in seeing at close hand, one of the enemy raiders."

"It was quite easy to distinguish between our planes and those of the enemy," Mrs. Rutter added, "for the Germans flew so high that they were practically invisible. Our planes flew low, so it all summed up that if one could see the planes one was certain they were British."

The Rutters landed in New York from a ship that brought three hundred war guests to Canada and the United States. "We certainly got a warm reception from the U. S. A.," Mrs. Rutter laughed, "it was 92 in the shade when we landed."

"There Will Always be an England"

"Do you think there will always be an England?" a newspaperman ventured. And here that admirable coolness, confidence in the tight little isle and her gallant defenders, that has characterized the English people since the days of the Armada, showed itself.

"Of course, there will always be an England," Mrs. Rutter said. "It is going to be a bit unpleasant, but the more non-combatants out of the way, the better."

The general feeling in her part of England at least, was that Hitler will attempt an invasion. "We all thing he will try, and he may land a few thousand troops, but they will get a decent reception. We must keep our tails up. But he will never defeat England."

Calm Confidence in Defences

Here that superb confidence in the Royal Navy, Army and Air Force that is a characteristic of the British peoples came to the surface.

"The Royal Navy is still there," Mrs. Rutter said, "so is the R.A.F. and the army. As long as we have them, then no one need be afraid."

The Rutters saw the Canadians as they marched along a road to a south coast seaport to embark for France. "They were a mad crowd," she said, "champing like horses on their bits to get into action. They shouted and cheered as they marched along, singing like schoolboys, happy in the knowledge that at last they were going into action. We all turned out to bid them Godspeed."

She saw them too, a little later, on the return from France. They were tired, she said, and bitterly disappointed in the turn of events that prevented actual combat with the enemy. But they smiled through their disappointment, and promised they would save it "all up for Jerry."

ITALIAN TROOP

adding that the sinkings had been unreported until now for strategical reasons.

The Air Ministry's communique said:—

"In the last two days enemy concentrations in the vicinity of Kassala (Anglo-Egyptian Sudan) were subjected to intensive bombing raids by R.A.F. aircraft. On July 30 the raids continued from early morning until dusk and yesterday two further attacks were made on military objectives within the target area.

"Severe damage was done to troop concentrations and machine gun and anti-aircraft posts. In all, ten separate raids were made. All our aircraft returned safely.

Direct Hits on Hangars

"During a raid on Macaaca direct hits were registered on two hangars, which were followed by large clouds of smoke.

"A single enemy bomber, escorted by a large formation of fighters, flew over Malta yesterday. Our fighters immediately engaged the enemy. The bomber turned back but one of the enemy aircraft was shot down into the sea."

The communique announcing the sinking of two Italian submarines said:

"On the first occasion an aircraft on patrol duty sighted a submarine on the surface. The pilot immediately attacked, the first salvo of bombs exploding so close to the stern of the submarine that in all probability its screw and hydroplane were damaged

Manoeuvred Clumsily

"The submarine attempted to submerge first but the damage evidently was severe for it manoeuvred clumsily. Meanwhile the squadron leader in charge of the plane dropped a second salvo when the submarine was at conning tower depth scoring direct hits abaft the conning tower.

"The submarine now was completely submerged but the attack continued, the final salvo crashing into the water at the U-boat's estimated position. The craft cruised over the spot a considerable length of time while air bubbles rose and a large patch of oil formed.

"The other action occurred three days ago when R.A.F. planes rushed to the attack upon sighting a submarine, dropping two salvos. The first fell 15 yards astern but the second hit the target, the conning tower. Nothing more was seen of the submarine but a patch of oil a half a mile square rapidly formed on the surface while air bubbles rose for a long time."

HAMBURG PORT "NOW PRACTICALLY IN RUINS"

Bremen, Cologne Heavily Bombed In Past Months

All Attacks Planned With Studious Care and Great Amount of Damage Inflicted, Says British Source

STRIKE NIGHT, DAY

Hamburg With Oil Refineries Has Been "Pulverized Again and Again"—Kiel and Wilhelmshaven Naval Bases Particular Objectives of R.A.F.

London, Aug. 2—(CP)—The German port of Hamburg is "now practically in ruins," an authoritative source said today, announcing that the Royal Air Force has bombed more than 100 German cities and towns containing military objectives.

The port of Bremen, with its shipbuilding yards, docks and the Focke-Wulf aircraft factory, "has had thousands of bomb rained upon it," this source declared, while Cologne, axis for international traffic in Europe, has been heavily pounded.

British airmen have made attacks on more than 1,000 objectives in the past three months—attacks of "genuine weight and importance."

All the attacks, this source said, were "planned with studious care with the object of avoiding damage, if possible, to towns and cities which are non-military objectives."

The air offensive has covered objectives in enemy country from Borkum, in the Frisian Islands off the extreme northwest German coast, in the North Sea, to Rugen Island in the Baltic Sea.

R.A.F. Strike Night and Day

The R.A.F. has struck night and day in the industrial Ruhr.

"Within a gigantic circle," this source said, "we have inflicted irreparable damage on such places as Duisberg, Dusseldorf, Essen and Wesel" in this area as well as at Dortmund, which occupies a position of importance in feeding the German canal system.

Hamburg, with its oil refineries, munitions factories and docks, which are in the centre of the city, this source said, has been "pulverized again and again."

At Leipzig, where a renowned fair is held, there is a huge power station as well as industrial objectives which "have been bombed constantly," he added.

At the mediaeval town of Wernigerode the airport has been hammered by British bombers.

Other favorite R.A.F. objectives have been the Kiel and Wilhelmshaven naval bases.

Red Cross, Medical Supplies May be Sent Over Burma Road

London, Aug. 2 (CP)—R. A. Butler, Undersecretary for Foreign Affairs, disclosed today that Red Cross and medical supplies could still be sent to China over the Burma road despite the recent British agreement with Japan to ban movement of war materials over the highway for three months.

In a written answer to a member of parliament Butler said Red Cross and medical supplies were not included in the deal.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Air fields and winds! It is safer to select air fields so that the winds may blow freely over them. The disturbances caused by the Rock of Gibraltar were violent and dangerous in the air field built nearby. The influences of the Rock were studied by making a miniature duplicate of that with the field, attaching silk fibres all over the surfaces. This model was placed in a wind tunnel and the turbulences noted. Splendid agreements were found by releasing from the field itself 138 balloons and following their aerial paths with an instrument. It was found that some vertical currents had speed of 17 miles an hour, and that the down currents were more violent and frequent than the up-currents.

NATIONAL CENSUS TAKEN IN 1941

This Will be Eighth Decennial Tabulation of Dominion Says Minister

Ottawa, Aug. 2—(CP)—A national census will be taken June 2, 1941, Trade Minister MacKinnon announced in a press statement today. It will be the eighth decennial tabulation of Canadians.

Special attention will be paid to obtaining statistics on basic industries of the country.

Draft forms designed to obtain the fullest and most accurate information on agriculture, went out today to leading authorities for their approval.

Information will be sought covering the whole field of the industry. Abandoned or idle farms will be canvassed as well as agricultural production on plots which do not come within the definition of "farm."

A separate schedule will be used for each farm listing products, whether fruit and vegetables are produced for sale, and general details concerning operations.

London, Aug. 2—(CP) — Comes war and with it the inevitable development of all sorts of devices to make life more comfortable for citizens on the home front. Advertising sections of newspapers contain answers to almost any problem that may confront you.

For instance, "there's no need to risk chills and damp of early hours" in your air raid shelter. Buy a newly discovered miniature oil heater. And there's no need to be in the dark in your shelter. A score or more of specially made chemical or battery lights are available.

Then, if you don't like the noise of exploding bombs, get yourself "ear protectors" which resemble beet-shaped rubber blocks that fit into the ears and are held in position by a rubber strap. Some of them are obtainable in white kid.

By all means "avoid shock" with jaw protectors which you carry around your neck on a string and jam into your mouth if the bombs start plopping around your neighborhood. They are much like the rubber mouthpieces boxers use and will prevent "chipping, of teeth, aching jaws and general discomfort." A "family set" of four costs four shillings, (92 cents).

No need either to get splattered by broken glass. All kinds of safety measures are offered, everything from plain wire netting to a liquid or sheets of transparent formula. Some of the liquid, when applied, of Turkish bath. Others, like those makes your windows look like those of panes that can't be reached by the window cleaner.

But "sandbags are your cheapest protection against blast," and you can get 100 for 37 shillings and six pence, "immediate delivery, cash with order." (You provide the sand).

"Drains broken by bombardment?" then "send this circular" and learn all about equipment that provides "perfect sanitation." Suitable for shelter use, too.

Special paints are available to camouflage everything from the baby's pram to the family car.

INSURANCE BILL NOW READY FOR ROYAL ASSENT

Commons Concurs in Amendments Made by Senate

UNEMPLOYMENT RATE

Ottawa, Aug. 2—(CP)— The House of Commons without division concurred today in amendments made by the Senate to the unemployment insurance bill. The measure is now ready to received royal assent and thus become law.

Royal assent will be given just before prorogation of parliament.

Organization of the machinery to be set up under the act may then be proceeded with but the act provides that no contributions to be paid by employers and workers shall be made until due notice has been published in the Canada Gazette.

Labor Minister McLarty, in moving concurrence, said the only amendment of importance was that which removed from the operations of the scheme certain hospital employes and those in other charitable institutions which, in the opinion of the advisory committee to be set up under the act, are not operated for gain.

The amendment was greeted with applause by Conservative members, who had pressed for the same revision in the Commons. The Minister said that the number of workers affected by the amendment was small and he thought it would be better to accept the change than to risk delay in the passage of the measure.

The Upper House yesterday finished its consideration of the measure, which would provide unemployment insurance for more than 2,000,000 workers in Canada.

Without a division the Senate approved the bill after voting down 43 to 26 an amendment proposed by Conservative Leader Meighen which would have postponed operation of the proposed act until after the war.

Called Strictly Insurance Scheme

The bill has been boosted by its proponents as being strictly an insurance scheme, on the establishment of a fund to which workers, employers and the government would contribute in the proportions of four, four and two, respectively.

It presupposes a rate of unemployment of 12 1-2 per cent.

Contributions under the proposed act would be compulsory. They are graded so that workers in low income brackets would pay less than employers while in the higher brackets the employers would pay less than workers.

For example a worker earning $5.40 but less than $7.50 a week would pay 12 cents into the fund and his employer 21 cents. On the other hand a man earning the maximum of $38.50 a week or $2,000 a year, would pay 36 cents and his employer 27 cents. Those earning more than $2,000 a year do not come under the provisions of the bill nor does it apply to those under 16 years of age.

A plan for book-keeping on contributions provides for the issuance of special insurance stamps. These to be affixed to cards or books, and kept as a record of employee's contributions. Other methods of payment into the fund may be used, such as the despositing of a certified cheque with a bank.

If British Blitzkrieg Attempted Best Time NextWeekAlmanacsSay

London, Aug. 2—(AP)— The almanacs say that if Adolf Hitler is going to start his blitzkrieg on England this month the best times for it will be next Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday mornings

If Hitler passes up those days, the next best come in September, from the second to the seventh. Third choice would be Oct. 1-6, then Oct. 30-Nov. 4.

The British are inclined to believe that if the Germans don't make the stab by mid-September, no invasion will be attempted until next spring. Ordinary prudence on the part of the Nazi General Staff these observers say, will demand that at least six weeks be allowed for the campaign.

They point out Hitler can't count on good weather for operations of his air force once the equinoctial storms begin in mid-September. From then on, Britain is cloaked in fogs and mists so thick even the natives can't find their way around —and the Germans would be bound to get lost.

Neutral military men, picturing the Nazi attack as they might run it, say it should have these conditions:

1. A calm sea—to keep the German soldiers from getting seasick on the way across the North Sea and English Channel.

High Tides Essential

2. High tide—essential in order that the flat-bottomed barges of the first landing force can be driven high enough on the beaches for tanks to be run off onto the sand in water not too deep to put them out of commission.

3. Fog in the English Channel—to screen the expedition on its way over. Sometimes the centre of the channel is foggy when it is clear on both sides.

These experts say preliminary air bombardment and landings on the beaches all would be preparatory to the first major objective in any campaign to invade this country—seizure of a port Once a port had been obtained, they explain, the Germans could try to supply the landing force by deep-water freighters convoyed by airplane and submarine and possibly run in through lanes of mines as a further safeguard.

However, the British would not be just sitting around while all this was going on.

They point out Hitler's expedition would be vulnerable as soon as it got into its ships and would remain that way on the trip across and during the attempted landing.

They said they were confident any Nazi landing force would be "eliminated" in short order.

SENATE PASSES UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE BILL

LONG SESSION

By CARL REINKE

Ottawa, Aug. 2—(CP)—Canada's present record wheat supply may provide a serious domestic emergency at the moment from the standpoint of storage and financing but the Dominion Government is definitely not worried over its ultimate disposal.

Agriculture Minister Gardiner made that clear early today as he defended the government's wheat policy in a debate that started yesterday morning. Adjournment came at 12:30 o'clock this morning.

The record shows, he said during consideration on second reading of the bill to amend the Wheat Board Act, that surpluses from periods of big crops have been balanced by shortages in periods of small crops, as far as human requirements were concerned.

Added to that now is the inevitable need of millions of war-stricken people in Europe who will be short of food within a year. Conservatives, including party leader Hanson, joined the government in this specific belief.

GIRL IS DROWNED TRYING TO SAVE YOUNG BROTHER

Kitchener Boy Rescued by Youth Who Tries in Vain to Save Girl

Kitchener, Ont., Aug. 2—(CP)— Eva Kiss, 19, Kitchener, drowned yesterday in the Grand River, near Bridgeport in a heroic effort to save her 10-year-old brother, Matthew. The boy was rescued by Wilfred Rochejocquelein, Bridgeport, who pulled him 25 yards to shore after swimming 50 yards to reach him.

Rochejocquelein's attempts to save the girl were unavailing and half an hour later Edward Rochejocquelein, younger brother of Wilfred, located her body on the river bottom.

The Kiss children were swimming when Matthew called to Eva that he was out too deep. She started after him and went down herself when she attempted to grab him.

THREE CANADIANS DEFEAT NAZIS ATTACKING SHIPS

DAMAGE SECOND

London, Aug. 2.—(CP Cable) — Members of the All-Canadian squadron of the Royal Air Force, whose daring exploits have cost them a heavy toll, shot down one Junkers dive bomber and seriously damaged another when a fleet of German aircraft attacked a convoy yesterday.

A Canadian sergeant pilot sent the first Junkers spinning into the sea while a blast of machine-gun fire from one of the other two planes sent the second German limping away into the clouds.

All three Canadians piloting swift hurricanes, returned safely to their base, it was revealed today by an Air Ministry News Service bulletin which explained how the Sergeant Pilot, whose name was not disclosed, found himself alone with a Junkers dive bomber over the convoy.

Junkers Cannot Escape Hurricane

As the sergeant attacked, the Junkers dropped its load of bombs into the sea but even then was unable to evade the Canadian who let go his blasts that sent the German hurtling down after the bombs.

Meanwhile a running fight had developed in which the other two planes of the flight had become engaged with the other German craft. It was a matter of minutes before the second German fled to escape further damage.

All three pilots are members of the squadron originally composed entirely of Canadians but which, through months of heavy action, has listed at least eight original members as missing and at least two killed in action. At least one has been awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross.

Force of Italians Gradually Nearing Egyptian Frontier

London, Aug. 2 (CP).—Authoritative British quarters said today that a "considerable force of Italians is concentrated in North Africa" and is "gradually advancing" toward the Egyptian frontier.

The advance was said to be cautious with the Italians taking "careful protective steps as they go with anti-tank and field artillery."

One-time editor of the Courier of his native Perth, Ont., he came to Toronto to join the staff of the McLean Publishing Co., later setting up his own trade publishing company, The Commercial Press.

CANADIAN TROOPS ARRIVE SAFELY IN GREAT BRITAIN

HOUSE APPLAUDS

Ottawa, Aug. 2—(CP)—Defence Minister Ralston announced in the House of Commons today the safe arrival in the United Kingdom of "another large contingent of the Canadian Active Service Force." He said this included part of the 2nd Division under Major-General Victor Odlum and certain ancillary units.

The minister interrupted debate on a government measure in committee to make the brief announcement which he said he was sure would be gratifying to all members. The House received the announcement with applause.

An East Coast Canadian Port, Aug. 2.—(CP)—The fifth major contingent of Canadian troops to leave this port—their safe arrival in the United Kingdom was announced today—sailed on great, gray transports just before the twilight of a dull July day.

Like those who had gone before, their departure was witnessed by only a handful of officials, soldiers and longshoremen but their cheers told an expectant city they were on their way. They were drawn from every Canadian province.

The night before they sailed they were joined by Maj.-Gen. Victor Odlum, Commander of the 2nd Division, Canadian Active Service force, and his staff. With him was Defence Minister Ralston, who flew from Ottawa for the embarkation and visited each ship. Gen. Odlum sailed with the troops.

"The men are in splendid spirits". Col. Ralston said after coming ashore. "I'm very much impressed by them and by the accommodation for all ranks and the way the commanding officers have their men's welfare at heart".

Some units that embarked were from the 2nd Division, but the majority were reinforcements and details for the 1st Division. On one ship were several companies of Imperials returning to England after escorting German prisoners and internees to Canada.

Amazing British Preparations Against Attack Seen Everywhere

But Much is Hidden from Public Eye, Hidden or Camouflaged Battlements

TOPOGRAPHY CHANGED

(Transferred from Toronto to the London office of The Canadian Press in March, D. E. Burritt has witnessed Britain's metamorphosis since the fall of France. He contributes today the third of a series of stories by the London staff. Others will follow.)

By D. E. BURRITT
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Aug. 2—(CP)—Deafening cheers reverberated through the House of Commons as Prime Minister Churchill, his chin jutting pugnaciously, pledged that Britain would fight "on to the end."

That was before the capitulation of France when it was not generally expected Hitler would attempt immediate invasion of Britain. Even then methodical fortification of the islands was proceeding.

After Collapse of France

Came the collapse of France..the return of the B.E.F...threat of invasion appeared imminent.

New plans for defence were born. The construction of fortifications was given terrific momentum. The redoubled activity reflected the vow of Mr. Churchill:

"We shall defend our islands whatever the cost may be. We shall fight on the beaches....on the landing grounds....in the fields... in the streets.... on the hills...."

And the amazing preparations that sprang as mushrooms overnight indicate the Prime Minister was not speaking just picturesquely.

Everywhere are concrete pill-boxes, rambling trenches, barricades, machine-gun nests, great iron and concrete pillars, barbed wire entanglements, other impediments to attack

It is impossible to describe all the lines along which Britain has been made into an island fortress.

Pictures released to newspapers give a rough view of preparations made across the countryside. You can go anywhere and see anti-aircraft gun emplacements. Those may be seen in public parks which also have been scarred by ditches to prevent landing of airplanes. All open fields, golf courses and flat countryside had been treated similarly.

Highways have been barricaded and fortified at important junctions. They have their own traps to prevent use of level roads as landing grounds. But all this is on the outside. You don't see the hidden or camouflaged battlements. Many of these are in "forbidden areas."

Blockhouses

Along the cliffs and beaches you see the ragged barbed-wire barricades, machine-gun nests, guns and all other means of warfare that lie on the surface. What you don't see are the big guns and heavy equipment that lie in hidden nests. But you do see the steadily increasing number of artillerymen who stroll the beaches and boardwalks along the seashore.

So rapidly did defence work proceed that it was only after numerous blockhouses had appeared in certain districts that military authorities found some had been constructed by volunteers on their own. These had to be dismantled, War Minister Eden ruled, because they were not of the type required.

Britons Wonder If Hitler Has Changed Tactics

May Have Decided on War of Attrition With an Air Blockade Instead of Blitzkrieg Land Invasion —British Ready for Any Eventuality

PAMPHLETS COLLECTED

British Press Notes Switch in German Radio Propaganda — At Present German Stations Advocate 'Blockade' Principle

London, Aug. 2—(CP)— Britain, puzzled by a "tabloid" leaflet raid by German bombers during the night, wondered today whether Adolf Hitler now had decided upon a delayed war of attrition with an air blockade or still was planning the blitzkrieg land invasion so often threatened.

German airplanes, staging the first leaflet raid on Britain since the outbreak of war, showered a south coast port and a village in the southwest area with four-page tabloid newspaper style pamphlets containing extracts of Hitler's Reichstag speech July 19.

Hitler then offered Britain a "last chance" to seek peace on German terms or have her empire destroyed.

CHERBOURG RAID IS SUCCESSFUL

German - Occupied Airdrome Subjected to Heavy Bombing by R.A.F. Machine

London, Aug. 2—(CP)—The Air Ministry reported a strong force of the coastal command made a "successful" daylight raid yesterday on on the German-occupied airdrome at Cherbourg.

The official statement: "A strong force of aircraft of the coastal command made a successful daylight attack on the German-occupied airdrome at Cherbourg yesterday (Thursday). The attack was pressed home in the face of very heavy anti-aircraft fire. Three of our bombers are missing."

9 O'CLOCK CURFEW BEGINS IN WINDSOR

Windsor, Ont., Aug. 2—(CP) —A nine-o'clock curfew for children on the streets of Windsor was put into effect last night and got off to a successful start. Sgt. Bert Hawksworth reported he had to tell some children to go home because of the curfew and the youngsters went after a little argument, saying "the bell hasn't rung yet."

No charges will be laid against parents until the curfew has become familiar to the children. Later on if children violate the act they will be warned, and if the warning is not heeded the offenders will be removed to their homes or to the children's shelter.

DUKE, DUCHESS OF WINDSOR SAIL FOR THE BAHAMAS

UNDER PROTECTION

Lisbon, Portugal, Aug. 2.—(AP) —The Duke and Duchess of Windsor were en route to the Bahamas by way of New York today, possibly under long-range protection of British warships guarding against any attempted German or Italian naval coup.

This is what "Mr. and Mrs. Wood", as they appeared on the passenger list, took with them when the American export liner Excalibur sailed yesterday:

Three dogs; 52 piece of luggage; an old portable sewing machine; a set of golf clubs; four basket-boxes of Old Madeira and Port Wine; one 1940 model limousine and trailer.

The ship's sailing was delayed 40 minutes by the Duke, who was driven to the pier by his host of the past month, the Portuguese Banker Ricardo Espirito Santo. They did not arrive until 6.20 p.m., 20 minutes after scheduled sailing time.

The Windsors' have a verandah suite with a private desk designed for use as a gun turret in case American entry into war should convert the Excalibur into an armed auxiliary cruiser. Occupying cabins off the verandah, which will serve as a private dining room, were the five other members of the party — Capt. George Wood, the Duke's aide de camp, and Mrs. Wood, Detective Fletcher of Scotland Yard and the Duchess' two maids.

Among the other passengers were William Phillips, United States Ambassador to Rome, and his daughter; and Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, Jr., United States Ambassador to Poland.

HAMBURG PORT "NOW PRACTICALLY IN RUINS"

Bremen, Cologne Heavily Bombed In Past Months

All Attacks Planned With Studious Care and Great Amount of Damage Inflicted, Says British Source

STRIKE NIGHT, DAY

Hamburg With Oil Refineries Has Been "Pulverized Again and Again"—Kiel and Wilhelmshaven Naval Bases Particular Objectives of R.A.F.

London, Aug. 2—(CP)—The German port of Hamburg is "now practically in ruins," an authoritative source said today, announcing that the Royal Air Force has bombed more than 100 German cities and towns containing military objectives.

The port of Bremen, with its shipbuilding yards, docks and the Focke-Wulf aircraft factory, "has had thousands of bomb rained upon it," this source declared, while Cologne, axis for international traffic in Europe, has been heavily pounded.

British airmen have made attacks on more than 1,000 objectives in the past three months—attacks of "genuine weight and importance."

All the attacks, this source said, were "planned with studious care with the object of avoiding damage, if possible, to towns and cities which are non-military objectives."

The air offensive has covered objectives in enemy country from Borkum, in the Frisian Islands off the extreme northwest German coast, in the North Sea, to Rugen Island in the Baltic Sea.

R.A.F. Strike Night and Day

The R.A.F. has struck night and day in the industrial Ruhr.

"Within a gigantic circle," this source said, "we have inflicted irreparable damage on such places as Duisberg, Dusseldorf, Essen and Wesel" in this area as well as at Dortmund, which occupies a position of importance in feeding the German canal system.

Hamburg, with its oil refineries, munitions factories and docks, which are in the centre of the city, this source said, has been "pulverized again and again."

At Leipzig, where a renowned fair is held, there is a huge power station as well as industrial objectives which "have been bombed constantly," he added.

At the mediaeval town of Wernigerode the airport has been hammered by British bombers.

Other favorite R.A.F. objectives have been the Kiel and Wilhelmshaven naval bases.

Red Cross, Medical Supplies May be Sent Over Burma Road

London, Aug. 2 (CP)—R. A. Butler, Undersecretary for Foreign Affairs, disclosed today that Red Cross and medical supplies could still be sent to China over the Burma road despite the recent British agreement with Japan to ban movement of war materials over the highway for three months.

In a written answer to a member of parliament Butler said Red Cross and medical supplies were not included in the deal.

NATIONAL CENSUS TAKEN IN 1941

This Will be Eighth Decennial Tabulation of Dominion Says Minister

Ottawa, Aug. 2—(CP)—A national census will be taken June 2, 1941, Trade Minister MacKinnon announced in a press statement today. It will be the eighth decennial tabulation of Canadians.

Special attention will be paid to obtaining statistics on basic industries of the country.

Draft forms designed to obtain the fullest and most accurate information on agriculture, went out today to leading authorities for their approval.

Information will be sought covering the whole field of the industry. Abandoned or idle farms will be canvassed as well as agricultural production on plots which do not come within the definition of "farm."

A separate schedule will be used for each farm listing products, whether fruit and vegetables are produced for sale, and general details concerning operations.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Aug. 2 — The weather has been fair and moderately warm in Ontario, while thundershowers have occurred in many sections of the western provinces.

Air fields and winds! It is safer to select air fields so that the winds may blow freely over them. The disturbances caused by the Rock of Gibraltar were violent and dangerous in the air field built nearby. The influences of the Rock were studied by making a miniature duplicate of that with the field, attaching silk fibres all over the surfaces. This model was placed in a wind tunnel and the turbulences noted. Splendid agreements were found by releasing from the field itself 138 balloons and following their aerial paths with an instrument. It was found that some vertical currents had speed of 17 miles an hour, and that the down currents were more violent and frequent than the up-currents.

Kitchener, Ont., Aug. 2—(CP)—Eva Kiss, 19, Kitchener, drowned yesterday in the Grand River, near Bridgeport in a heroic effort to save her 10-year-old brother, Matthew. The boy was rescued by Wilfred Rochejocquelein, Bridgeport, who pulled him 25 yards to shore after swimming 50 yards to reach him.

Rochejocquelein's attempts to save the girl were unavailing and half an hour later Edward Rochejocquelein, younger brother of Wilfred, located her body on the river bottom.

The Kiss children were swimming when Matthew called to Eva that he was out too deep. She started after him and went down herself when she attempted to grab him.

THREE CANADIANS DEFEAT NAZIS ATTACKING SHIPS

DAMAGE SECOND

London, Aug. 2.—(CP Cable) — Members of the All-Canadian squadron of the Royal Air Force, whose daring exploits have cost them a heavy toll, shot down one Junkers dive bomber and seriously damaged another when a fleet of German aircraft attacked a convoy yesterday.

A Canadian sergeant pilot sent the first Junkers spinning into the sea while a blast of machine-gun fire from one of the other two planes sent the second German limping away into the clouds.

All three Canadians piloting swift hurricanes, returned safely to their base, it was revealed today by an Air Ministry News Service bulletin which explained how the Sergeant Pilot, whose name was not disclosed, found himself alone with a Junkers dive bomber over the convoy.

Junkers Cannot Escape Hurricane

As the sergeant attacked, the Junkers dropped its load of bombs into the sea but even then was unable to evade the Canadian who let go his blasts that sent the German hurtling down after the bombs.

Meanwhile a running fight had developed in which the other two planes of the flight had become engaged with the other German craft. It was a matter of minutes before the second German fled to escape further damage.

All three pilots are members of the squadron originally composed entirely of Canadians but which, through months of heavy action, has listed at least eight original members as missing and at least two killed in action. At least one has been awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross.

Force of Italians Gradually Nearing Egyptian Frontier

London, Aug. 2 (CP).—Authoritative British quarters said today that a "considerable force of Italians is concentrated in North Africa" and is "gradually advancing" toward the Egyptian frontier.

The advance was said to be cautious with the Italians taking "careful protective steps as they go with anti-tank and field artillery."

NATIVE OF PERTH DIES

Toronto, Aug. 2.—(CP)— Donald Osborn McKinnon, former newspaperman and publisher, died at his home here Thursday following a three-month illness. One-time editor of the Courier of his native Perth, Ont., he came to Toronto to join the staff of the McLean Publishing Co., later setting up his own trade publishing company, The Commercial Press.

CANADIAN TROOPS ARRIVE SAFELY IN GREAT BRITAIN

HOUSE APPLAUDS

Ottawa, Aug. 2—(CP)—Defence Minister Ralston announced in the House of Commons today the safe arrival in the United Kingdom of "another large contingent of the Canadian Active Service Force." He said this included part of the 2nd Division under Major-General Victor Odlum and certain ancillary units.

The minister interrupted debate on a government measure in committee to make the brief announcement which he said he was sure would be gratifying to all members. The House received the announcement with applause.

An East Coast Canadian Port, Aug. 2.—(CP)—The fifth major contingent of Canadian troops to leave this port—their safe arrival in the United Kingdom was announced today—sailed on great, gray transports just before the twilight of a dull July day.

Like those who had gone before, their departure was witnessed by only a handful of officials, soldiers and longshoremen but their cheers told an expectant city they were on their way. They were drawn from every Canadian province.

The night before they sailed they were joined by Maj.-Gen. Victor Odlum, Commander of the 2nd Division, Canadian Active Service force, and his staff. With him was Defence Minister Ralston, who flew from Ottawa for the embarkation and visited each ship. Gen. Odlum sailed with the troops.

"The men are in splendid spirits", Col. Ralston said after coming ashore. "I'm very much impressed by them and by the accommodation for all ranks and the way the commanding officers have their men's welfare at heart".

Some units that embarked were from the 2nd Division, but the majority were reinforcements and details for the 1st Division. On one ship were several companies of Imperials returning to England after escorting German prisoners and internees to Canada.

Amazing British Preparations Against Attack Seen Everywhere

But Much is Hidden from Public Eye, Hidden or Camouflaged Battlements

TOPOGRAPHY CHANGED

(Transferred from Toronto to the London office of The Canadian Press in March, D. E. Burritt has witnessed Britain's metamorphosis since the fall of France. He contributes today the third of a series of stories by the London staff. Others will follow.)

By D. E. BURRITT
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Aug. 2—(CP)—Deafening cheers reverberated through the House of Commons as Prime Minister Churchill, his chin jutting pugnaciously, pledged that Britain would fight "on to the end."

That was before the capitulation of France when it was not generally expected Hitler would attempt immediate invasion of Britain. Even then methodical fortification of the islands was proceeding.

After Collapse of France

Came the collapse of France..the return of the B.E.F...threat of invasion appeared imminent.

New plans for defence were born. The construction of fortifications was given terrific momentum. The redoubled activity reflected the vow of Mr. Churchill:

"We shall defend our islands whatever the cost may be. We shall fight on the beaches....on the landing grounds....in the fields... in the streets.... on the hills...."

And the amazing preparations that sprang as mushrooms overnight indicate the Prime Minister was not speaking just picturesquely.

Everywhere are concrete pillboxes, rambling trenches, barricades, machine-gun nests, great iron and concrete pillars, barbed wire entanglements, other impediments to attack

It is impossible to describe all the lines along which Britain has been made into an island fortress.

Pictures released to newspapers give a rough view of preparations made across the countryside. You can go anywhere and see anti-aircraft gun emplacements. Those may be seen in public parks which also have been scarred by ditches to prevent landing of airplanes. All open fields, golf courses and flat countryside had been treated similarly.

Highways have been barricaded and fortified at important junctions. They have their own traps to prevent use of level roads as landing grounds. But all this is on the outside. You don't see the hidden or camouflaged battlements. Many of these are in "forbidden areas."

Blockhouses

Along the cliffs and beaches you see the ragged barbed-wire barricades, machine-gun nests, guns and all other means of warfare that lie on the surface. What you don't see are the big guns and heavy equipment that lie in hidden nests. But you do see the steadily increasing number of artillerymen who stroll the beaches and boardwalks along the seashore.

So rapidly did defence work proceed that it was only after numerous blockhouses had appeared in certain districts that military authorities found some had been constructed by volunteers on their own. These had to be dismantled, War Minister Eden ruled, because they were not of the type required.

Britons Wonder If Hitler Has Changed Tactics

May Have Decided on War of Attrition With an Air Blockade Instead of Blitzkrieg Land Invasion —British Ready for Any Eventuality

PAMPHLETS COLLECTED

British Press Notes Switch in German Radio Propaganda — At Present German Stations Advocate 'Blockade' Principle

London, Aug. 2—(CP)— Britain, puzzled by a "tabloid" leaflet raid by German bombers during the night, wondered today whether Adolf Hitler now had decided upon a delayed war of attrition with an air blockade or still was planning the blitzkrieg land invasion so often threatened.

German airplanes, staging the first leaflet raid on Britain since the outbreak of war, showered a south coast port and a village in the southwest area with four-page tabloid newspaper style pamphlets containing extracts of Hitler's Reichstag speech July 19.

Hitler then offered Britain a "last chance" to seek peace on German terms or have her empire destroyed.

CHERBOURG RAID IS SUCCESSFUL

German - Occupied Airdrome Subjected to Heavy Bombing by R.A.F. Machine

London, Aug. 2—(CP)—The Air Ministry reported a strong force of the coastal command made a "successful" daylight raid yesterday on on the German-occupied airdrome at Cherbourg.

The official statement: "A strong force of aircraft of the coastal command made a successful daylight attack on the German-occupied airdrome at Cherbourg yesterday (Thursday). The attack was pressed home in the face of very heavy anti-aircraft fire. Three of our bombers are missing."

9 O'CLOCK CURFEW BEGINS IN WINDSOR

Windsor, Ont., Aug. 2—(CP) —A nine-o'clock curfew for children on the streets of Windsor was put into effect last night and got off to a successful start. Sgt. Bert Hawksworth reported he had to tell some children to go home because of the curfew and the youngsters went after a little argument, saying "the bell hasn't rung yet."

No charges will be laid against parents until the curfew has become familiar to the children. Later on if children violate the act they will be warned, and if the warning is not heeded the offenders will be removed to their homes or to the children's shelter.

UNDER PROTECTION

Lisbon, Portugal, Aug. 2.—(AP) —The Duke and Duchess of Windsor were en route to the Bahamas by way of New York today, possibly under long-range protection of British warships guarding against any attempted German or Italian naval coup.

This is what "Mr. and Mrs. Wood", as they appeared on the passenger list, took with them when the American export liner Excalibur sailed yesterday:

Three dogs; 52 piece of luggage; an old portable sewing machine; a set of golf clubs; four basket-boxes of Old Madeira and Port Wine; one 1940 model limousine and trailer.

The ship's sailing was delayed 40 minutes by the Duke, who was driven to the pier by his host of the past month, the Portuguese Banker Ricardo Espirto Santo. They did not arrive until 6.20 p.m., 20 minutes after scheduled sailing time.

The Windsors' have a verandah suite with a private desk designed for use as a gun turret in case American entry into war should convert the Excalibur into an armed auxiliary cruiser. Occupying cabins off the verandah, which will serve as a private dining room, were the five other members of the party — Capt. George Wood, the Duke's aide de camp, and Mrs. Wood, Detective Fletcher of Scotland Yard and the Duchess' two maids.

Among the other passengers were William Phillips, United States Ambassador to Rome, and his daughter; and Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, Jr., United States Ambassador to Poland.

CHAIN LETTER FAD AGAIN IN EVIDENCE

With the old chain letter fad again very much in evidence, this time sponsoring a patriotic effort to encourage the sale of War Savings Stamps, postoffice authorities are warning, that the use of mails for the distribution of these letters even when furthering the sale of the Savings Stamps, cannot be sanctioned.

Numerous letters have been observed passing through the mails in the distributions of these stamps, stated postal authorities this morning, but the use of mails has always been refused for chain letters involving the sending of money and articles of value. It was explained that this refusal was to prevent the opportunity of fraud, which such schemes offer and because invariably the chain is broken and complaints are subsequently received from interested persons, who have obtained no returns in connection with their investment.

Although the letters are apparently being sent out in a patriotic cause, in view of the above-mentioned policy, the use of mails for the distribution of chain letters of this nature cannot be sanctioned, it was stated.

CUSTOMS RETURNS SHOW BIG INCREASE

Custom returns for the month of July, 1940, at the Belleville Customs Office were $159,646.84 as compared with $91,010.24 for the same period in 1939, showing an increase of $68,636.59 over that of last year.

WORK AT TOP SPEED ON TRAINING FIELD

Fully 700 mechanics and laborers will receive employment, it is expected, when the building of the new Service Flying Training School in the Collins' Bay district, seven miles west of Kingston, gets fully under way. Due to the urgency of getting pilots and groundmen trained for overseas service, the authorities at Ottawa have insisted that contractors work at top speed to get the job completed.

The buildings, which will be all frame construction, with concrete foundations, will consist of five double hangars, 224 by 160 feet and twenty-seven other buildings to be used as officers' quarters, messes, canteens, etc., also including one hospital of 34 beds. A storage tank for about twenty thousand gallons of gasoline will also be built.

Levelling of the field has been practically completed and the runways, approximately 2,500 feet long by 100 feet wide are now nearly ready to be surfaced.

DRUM OF OIL SPILLS ON STREET

The combined action of the age-old laws of gravitational pull and centrifugal force were demonstrated in no uncertain terms to a truck driver while making the turn at the corner of Front and Bridge Streets yesterday afternoon. Traveling north, he turned onto West Bridge Street at too great a rate of speed and a drum of gasoline which he was transporting, slid off the truck and crashed to the pavement with sufficient force to cause the oil to spill over the street.

Fortunately no pedestrians were injured in the mishap, but for an hour or so afterwards, the oil which did not immediately run away in the sewer, made the intersection crossing slippery as well as proving a fire hazarzd as it lay unevaporated in the street.

WORKMAN SUSTAINS SEVERE BACK INJURY

Falling from a gravel carrier at the Consolidated Gravel Company pits near Fuller, 48-year-old James McLean, pit foreman, sustained a serious back injury late last night. McLean was employed repairing the elevator carrier when he apparently lost his balance and fell some 18 feet to the rock-bed. He was rushed to the Belleville General Hospital in Martin's Ambulance, where it was discovered that a serious spinal injury had resulted.

Dr. A. E. Carleton, Stirling, was in attendance at the scene of the fall and also at the hospital. Today it was announced that the injured man would be placed in a cast for some time as the result of his fall.

MONTREAL RETAILERS INCREASE BEER PRICES

Montreal, Aug. 2 (CP)—Retailers increased prices of beer in Montreal yesterday, in a move which apparently came as a surprise to wholesalers who said there had been no increase in wholesale prices. Grocery stores affiliated with the Retail Merchant Association announced price increases of one cent a quart for bottled beer, with an increase of 15 cents for 1-2 dozen quarts, and an increase of 35 cents for a dozen quarts. The new prices bring the totals to 20 cents a quart, $1.20 per half-dozen and $2.25 per dozen.

Nazi Foreign Office In Berlin Hears Anti-Aircraft Guns

Berlin, Aug. 2—(AP)—The daily German press conference for foreign journalists was interrupted dramatically today by the booming of anti-aircraft guns directly overhead, apparently from the roof of the foreign office.

Janitors and minor officials said that the Wilhelmstrasse was cleared immediately, with everyone running for cover, and that the guns had been trained on unidentified planes.

OBITUARY

CHARLES HENRY SCOTT.
(Stirling)

Stirling, (Special)—Charles Henry Scott passed away in Stirling on Wednesday, July 31st, 1940. Mr. Scott was stricken suddenly, while working with Mr. Claude Tucker cutting grain. Dr. McMullen of Frankford was summoned, but death occurred before the doctor arrived.

The late Mr. Scott was born in Napanee, being the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Scott and was in his sixty-third year. He had lived in Stirling district for the past thirty-eight years, moving to the village twelve years ago from his farm just west of Stirling. In religion he was a member of St. Paul's United Church and fraternally a member of Stirling L.O.L. No. 110. He was highly esteemed by friends and neighbors who were shocked to hear of his sudden passing.

Surviving to mourn his loss, besides his widow, formerly Miss Blanche Carr, are one son, Mr. John Scott, Prince Edward County, and two daughters, Geraldine, Mrs. Harry Keller of Stirling and Marjorie, Mrs. Sidney Gibson of Smithfield.

The funeral service will be held at his late residence, West Front St., on Friday and will be conducted by Rev. James E. Beckel of Rawdon circuit. Interment in Stirling Cemetery.

Police Blotter

Following complaints by residents in Foster Ward regarding the shooting off of a gun in the vicinity of the Government Dock yesterday afternoon, Traffic Officer Doug Ellis later apprehended three teen-aged lads in a row boat east of the dock. They were found to be in possession of a .22 calibre rifle, which they had been discharging towards the dock. The gun was immediately confiscated by the constable and the names of the youths taken for future reference.

Failing to observe the 'stop street' sign at the intersection of Pinnacle and Bridge Streets last evening, a motor car being driven north by John Vamplew, Toronto, collided with an east bound motor car driven by Mary Kerr of this city. Considerable property damage resulted to both vehicles. P. C. Wright reported after investigation. The officer also revealed that Mr. Vamplew's car skidded a distance of 20 feet at the intersection. Fortunately no injuries were sustained.

During an intermission recess of today's local police court, His Worship, Magistrate E. J. Butler, pointed out to the court reporters the recent regulations pertaining to firearms now in the possession of aliens. "Under Regulation No. 37A of the Defence of Canada Regulations, it prohibits the having of any firearms, ammunition or explosives by aliens whatsoever," quoted His Worship, reading a recent circulate from the Attorney General's department.

Reports of a disturbance at the lower end of Front Street late last night resulted in the arrest of a local youth on charges of intoxication. Constables Arnott and Taylor responded to the complaint.

Mrs. William Allison, 101, Celebrates Birthday

STILL QUITE ACTIVE

Mrs. William Allison, Albury's grand old lady sat in the comfort of the home of her son, Herbert Allison, Trenton, today and received the felicitations of members of her family and a large circle of friends on the attainment of her 101st birthday.

Bright eyes sparkled beneath the silvery sheen of her hair. Tiny wrinkles wreathed into larger ones on a face that Time has treated nobly as she smiled her pleasure at friends who called on her. Her alert mind that has kept its clarity commensurate with the physical well being of her body, was evident as she conversed on topics of decades ago and expressed surprising opinions on world events of today.

Her eyes twinkled as she smiled at a newspaperman from the depths of an easy chair. "Ill?' she laughed, "not a bit of it. I am in the pink of health". Mrs. Allison is able to move around the house "under her own power" as one sou. puts it.

Five stalwart sons, all of them drawing near the sunset of life will pay their respects to the "little old lady" today. Her daughter, Mrs. Hannah Russell, Rednersville, and a large number of grandchildren and great grandchildren will pay tribute to over a century of life well and truly lived.

Maintains Constant Touch

She has maintained a constant touch with the world events of today and is deeply interested in the war. She stoutly maintained that Hitler can never conquer the British Isles, "because the English are such stubborn people and wonderful fighters. Their influence has dominated the world for centuries", she said, "it will continue to do so long after this war is over."

She had absolute confidence in England, and decried the success of an invading Hun army.

Airplanes have a strange fascination for Mrs. Allison. Day after day she sits by the window in the home of her son and follows with keen eyes the manoeuvres of Royal Canadian Air Force planes from Trenton as they soar overhead. But that is as far as it goes.

Has No Desire to Ride in Plane

She has no desire to ride in one. "No" she smiled, "I don't think I would want to go up. I like to watch them, but such machines are not for old ladies like me. They are better adapted to the swift life of today".

And the modern world does move swiftly, Mrs. Allison thinks, in comparison to the slow plodding life that pioneer forebears lived. Moderns are fortunate in having modern inventions such as automobiles, radios, planes and such things, but the reaction is that modern generation are "soft". Work, hard work and plenty of it is a splendid recipe for a ripe old age, she thinks and according to modern living standards with their rounds of pleasure and little work, very few centenarians will develop from present-day generations. "Living is too easy nowadays" was her summing-up.

Worked in Fields

"Why", she added, "when I was a young girl the women-folk thought nothing of going out in the fields to pitch hay and cut grain, or go into the woods and cut trees. They worked, too, from dawn to dusk and thought nothing of it. Ask the modern girl or woman to do that and she would probably faint at the prospect".

Mrs. Allison was born at Cold Springs near Cobourg, Ontario, on August 2nd, 1839, the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Dale. She recalls with remarakble clarity the events of several decades ago, especially visits of royalty and other notable occurrences. Her father came to America from England and settled along the coast of Maine, moving to Canada following the American Revolution.

Reliefees and those at present not on relief who will make application later who have not cultivated the garden plots supplied them by the city in the Spring will be struck off city relief rolls and all future applications refused Mayor Glen E. Thompson announced today.

"These fortunately represent a very small minority of the number given the plots" His Worship said. The greater number have taken to the idea and have cultivated and maintained their gardens in a fine manner. However, there have been a few who have been too lazy, or have had some other alibi, who have neglected their work. "These people will definitely not receive city aid, and, next or any other winter," he said.

Community garden plots were established in the Spring, under instructions from the Provincial government, for reliefees of the Ontario districts. Municipal authorities furnished plots, seeds and garden utensils free of charge and placed all plots under the supervision of a competent inspector. Produce derived from the gardens will be the property of the people cultivating. Upwards of ninety such plots were secured by the city for this purpose

Belleville Bakers Will Increase Price Of Bread August 15th

Increase in price of bread one cent per loaf will not go into effect in Belleville until approximately August 15th, bakers of the city decided at a special meeting held last night. The rise is due, it was stated, to the new processing tax, included in the new budget, and which amounts to 75 cents per bag of flour.

Decision to postpone the increase for two weeks was reached when bakers present stated they needed time to readjust business, routes, etc. commensurate with the new taxes.

Increase in price went into effect in the majority of nearby cities and towns some time ago, but Belleville bakers decided to postpone action along these lines until a full representation was available. Last night's decision was practically unanimous.

SCOTTISH RETORT TO POPULAR SONG

"There'll Always Be An England" the war-song that is sweeping the Empire and the civilized world, has taken the place of the old "It's a Long Way to Tipperary." Peoples of the Empire are singing it with fervor, with the brau laddies and lassies of Scotland well to the fore.

But deep in their hearts the people of Auld Scotia know too there will always be a Scotland. They modestly claim that Scotland is the backbone of England and without her sons and daughters at the head of great English industries business and the professions, the Highlander in the army and in Parliament, England would not have achieved her greatness. This, they agree dated from the Act of Union.

Therefore it is not difficult to understand that there is a Scottish retort to the popular English war-song, "There'll Always Be An England." H. Fraser, a member of the technical training school at St. Thomas, is responsible for the following which appeared recently in the Perth edition of the People's Journal:

There will always be an England,
As long as Scotland stands;
For it's due to dear old Scotland
That England's wealth expands.
Our friendly neighbor England
We always will defend,
We'll help her fight her battles,
Her broken ships we'll mend.
And when the war is over,
And Victory has been won,
We'll sing of England's Glory
And the wonders she has done.

WILL RESUME RECRUITING WHEN NEED ARISES

Course of Active Operations in War Theatre Will Determine Need

5,932 VACANCIES

45 Per Cent of Positions to be Filled Are Those of Signallers, Truck Drivers, Tradesmen and Others

Ottawa, Aug. 2.—(CP)—The National Defence Department announced today that vacancies in the Canadian Active Service Force at present number 5,932 of which 45 per cent are for specialists.

The course of active operations in the theatre of war will continue to determine the need for men and active recruiting will be resumed the moment more men are needed, the announcement said. Specialists needed now are signallers, motor truck drivers, tradesmen and others.

Only military districts still in need of substantial numbers of volunteers are M.D. 2 with headquarters at Toronto, M.D. 4 at Montreal and M.D. 12 at Regina.

Forming 60 per cent of all the vacancies in the C.A.S.F., Toronto still needs 1,800 men and Montreal 1,681. In Saskatchewan there is room for 859 men.

In the six weeks which saw the retreat on the channel ports of the British Expeditionary Force, the Dunkerque evacuation and the collapse of France more than 50,000 men enlisted in the C.A.S.F.

Vacancies in the Toronto district are in three battalions authorized recently and commanding officers report an ample supply of recruits and it is expected they will be up to strength as soon as the medical boards can be completed. The same situation prevails at Montreal.

Enlistments in the C.A.S.F., the Veterans' Home Guard and the non-permanent active militia from Sept. 1, 1939, to June 30, 1940, totalled 116,909, according to information given J. G. Diefenbaker (Con Lake-Centre) in the House of Commons this week.

IMPORTS RISE VERY SHARPLY

Ottawa, Aug. 2—(CP)—Canadian imports showed a sharp increase in June, amounting to $90,705,000, compared with $63,709,000 in June last year, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported today.

Imports from the United States totalled $64,073,000 compared with $39,389,000 in June, 1939, and from the United Kingdom $11,851,000 compared with $10,125,000.

Eight of the nine main commodity groups moved higher with marked gains in iron and its products, fibres and textiles and non-metallic minerals.

SCHOOL UNIFORMS

(Windsor Star)

And Summer which does not produce one good controversy about school girls' attire is a dull one indeed. Slacks are the pressing problem just now, and they have the Guelph School Board quite worked up.

Whether such a costume is fitable or in good taste is something on which a mere man should not venture an opinion. The argument, however, has aroused in certain quarters an old proposal that keeps bobbing up from time to time, that of placing the girls in a uniform.

On behalf of the students, we protest against any such suggestion. These high school girls are the almost-grown-ups, and the consciousness of clothes is well developed. No one who has not experienced it can appreciate the anguish that comes to them when they are forced into unbecoming and usually unattractive uniforms. That is robbing them of something of their women's birthright.

DOWN ON THE FARM

(Rodney Mercury-Sun)

Did you ever stop to consider how conditions on the farm have changed during the past quarter century, especially as far as women are concerned.

Then, every minute of the day was filled with work and often far in the night. Telephones were not numerous and the only occasions for social intercourse were church and the Saturday trip into town. Water had to be carried from distant wells, clothes washing was a back-breaking operation, there was the daily cleaning of kerosene lamps.

This has all been changed. Hydro lights the home, barn and farm yard; radio and the party-line telephone have brought the housewife into intimate contact with neighbors and the outside world, the washing is done by machine and the automobile has moved the town to the farmer's front door. Nobody begrudges the farmer's wife the many hours of extra leisure science has given her. Long may she live to enjoy her new-found freedom.

TWENTY PER CENT OF POPULATION NOW IN MILITIA

Bancroft Village Rallies Behind Efforts of Gov't. to Provide Adequate Home Defence

USING BROOMSTICKS

Despite Fact Rifles Not Available, Recruits Receive Adequate Training

Undaunted through the lack of military training equipment, the men of "A" Company of the 2nd Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment stationed at Bancroft are employing the use of broomsticks, shovel and pickaxe handles as substitutes for rifles while training at Bancroft under Major H. L. Babcock E.D., it was learned here today.

Over 20 per cent of the entire population of Bancroft has enlisted in the 2nd Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment (N.P.A.M.) it was further learned. This would indicate that practically every man in the village, who can pass the military medical board as category "A" has flocked to the colors in the village of Bancroft. "This village should set up an example for the entire Dominion in their response to military training", pointed out Major Babcock today.

Merchants, professional men, bankers, lumbermen, labourers and men from all walks of life rub shoulder to shoulder in training for the defence of their country in Bancroft. Three nights a week these men train diligently, while on Sunday they flock to the Bancroft Community Hall, which is being employed as a temporary armouries for training, seeking additional knowledge of military training, so eager and enthusiastic are the men of North Hastings to help in the defence of Canada and the Empire.

While on route marches throughout the village "A" company of the 2nd Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, is headed by a fife and drum band, composed of four fife players and two drummers playing martial music for the tramp of soldiers' feet in the march all of which adds color and distinction to Bancroft's military effort.

Besides the recruits from Bancroft, the company is augmented by recruits from Lake St. Peter, twenty-two miles north of here; Maynooth, fifteen miles north; Coe Hill, twenty-one miles south; Gilmore and Hybla, ten miles west. These recruits come to Bancroft for drill in motor cars, loaded down with seven or eight passengers.

MAJ.-GEN. ODLUM MAKES PROMISE

Says War Must be Carried Into Germany Before Canadians Will Feel Job Well Done

(By Sam Robertson, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

A Northern British Port, Aug. 2—(CP-Cable)—As he led ashore the strongest formation of the Canadian Active Service Force to cross the Atlantic to date, Maj.-Gen. Victor Odlum, General Officer Commanding the Canadian 2nd Division, said that until the war is carried into Germany "we cannot feel that we have done our duty."

The words underscored those spoken a few days ago by Maj.-Gen. G. R Pearkes when he told the men of the 1st Division that "once we have driven the enemy from England we shall chase him and defeat him on his own soil."

Gen. Odlum's promise for the future was made in the following statement to the Press:

"We have come over to take our place beside the 1st Division from which we expect to learn a great deal. In due course we shall join it in forming the Canadian corps and we hope with the 1st Division to build up a corps spirit which will be equal to that of the old Canadian Corps of the last war.

"We are delighted to be here to share with the people of Britain the dangers that face them. We know that the road is rough but we are ready to take it.

"We are looking forward eagerly to the time when the British people will be ready to resume the offensive on the continent and carry the war into Germany. Until that time comes we cannot feel that we have done our duty. Germany has asked for it and she will have to take it.

"It is impossible to speak too highly of the naval arrangements made for the trip. Because of them there was never a minute of concern or anxiety."

FIREMEN ESCAPE INJURY

Toronto, Aug. 2.—(CP)— One man was burned and eight firemen narrowly escaped being crushed by a falling wall as fire swept through a furniture company garage here today. Loss was estimated at $5,000.

Harold R. Miles of Toronto, an employee of the company, was treated for facial burns and allowed to go home. An automobile and three trucks were lost in the blaze.

Same Traditional Ceremony To be Used for Duke of Windsor As Any of His Predecessors

Nassau The Bahamas Aug. 2 (CP)—The Duke of Windsor will be sworn in as Governor of the Bahamas with the same traditional ceremony that has been used for his predecessors in this 200-year-old colony.

The simple dignified ceremony in which the new Governor takes his oath of office and greets his legislators will not be varied in any detail just because Edward is the first Royal Duke ever appointed Governor of a British colony.

Other questions of title and of government house etiquette raised by the unprecedented rank of the new Governor remain to be settled by the government in London. But plans are made for the official welcome just as though the Duke were any career man of the colonial service.

The Duke and Duchess will be greeted by the four Englishmen in the colonial government who are appointed directly from London—W. L. Heape Colonial Secretary and Acting Governor until Edward's arrival; O. B. Daly Chief Justice; R. W. Taylor, Receiver General and Treasurer, and Eric Hallinan, Attorney General.

With them as escorts the new Governor and his Duchess will walk several hundred yards across Bay Street and the public square to the little nest of official buildings. They will march to the second-floor chambers of the Legislative Council on whose dark walls hang huge oil paintings of former English kings.

The Duke will mount a dais and stand before an ornate chair symbolical of the crown he represents. Above him will be an oak canopy, topped by a gilt crown. At his left, on the floor level, will be the Duchess, the four colonial officials, the island's clergy and other leaders.

Before him will stand the white and negro members of the council around a table not unlike that of a corporation's board of directors. Beside a rail at his right will be the frock-coated members of the colonial assembly who have marched from their meetings place in an adjoining building.

The oath of allegiance to the Throne will be administered by Chief Justice Daly. The new Governor according to ancient custom, legislators.

History's Largest Order Of 100 Million Bushels Given by Britain to Canada

Ministry of Food Enters Agreement With Canadian Wheat Board

JULY '40 TO JULY '41

London Aug. 2 (CP Cable)—History's largest wheat purchase was announced today by the Ministry of Food which said it had agreed to purchase 100,000,000 bushels of Canadian wheat.

"An official announcement said "The Ministry of Food had entered into an agreement with the Canadian Wheat Board to purchase during this cereal year, July 1940 to 1941, a further 100,000,000 bushels of Canadian wheat.

POST OFFICE HOURS FOR THE HOLIDAY

Monday August 5th., being Civic holiday will see the following hours observed at the Post Office. Wickets will be open in the morning from 8.00 o'clock until 10.00. There will be one morning and one evening street letter box collection, while in the lobby, mails will be received and despatched as usual. There will be no letter carrier delivery on this date.

Conservative Leader Complains Officer Failed to Show Up

Ottawa, Aug. 2—(CP)— Complaint from Quesnel B.C., of failure of a recruiting officer to show up on an appointed date, resulting in hardship and inconvenience to volunteers, was presented today in the House of Commons by Conservative Leader Hanson.

He read a telegram from John A. Fraser of that town. It was claimed notice was posted that a recruiting officer would be in Quesnel on a certain date. He failed to arrive but many volunteers flocked to the town after disposing of their effects in many cases in anticipation of going into the army.

Gray Turgeon (Lib. Cariboo), who represents the Cariboo riding where Quesnel is located, said the matter had been under consideration and investigation by the National Defence Department. Attempts of Mr. Turgeon to explain the situation drew cries of order from opposition ranks and he was not permitted to complete his remarks.

Molotoff Says Soviet Union Will Have Powerful Voice of 193,000,000 Persons

'SUCCESSFUL' POLICY

Moscow, Aug. 2—(AP)—The supreme Soviet turned today to formal union with Soviet Russia of the Baltic States and of territory ceded by Rumania—which Premier Molotoff said would give the Soviet Union the "powerful voice" of more than 193,000,000 people.

Work of incorporating the new areas was the first item on the agenda after reconvening of "parliament" for its second day at 6 p.m. (11 a.m. EDT) today.

The borders of expanded Russia will reach to the Baltic coast, giving her important ice-free ports, and to the Danube River, one of the most important European commercial routes.

Successful foreign policy, Molotoff declared yesterday, thus has "brought about considerable expansion of our territory and multiplied the forces of the Soviet Union."

In less than a year, the U.S.S.R. has added more than 23,000,000 persons, he said. The 1939 census listed 170,400,000 inhabitants, as compared with figures placing Tsarist Russia's population at 140,000,000 to 182,000,000 before the first Great War.

Since last fall, the Soviet has acquired part of Poland through joint partition with Germany; the Baltic States of Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania, whose new Communist governments "asked" union with Russia; and the provinces of Bessarabia and Northern Bucovina, ceded by Rumania last June 27.

Nazis Unload Cargo of Bombs Quickly as Possible and Scuttle for Home Says Letter

German bombers roared high over a small English village. British fighters darted from the ground to meet them. High in the blue the swift R.A.F. machines engaged the enemy. But the black-crossed raiders in their efforts to get away suddenly loosed their "loads" of death-dealing bombs. But their marksmanship like their courage, was of a poor nature.

Down on the quiet English countryside hurtled the messengers of death. A detonation, another and yet another. Then all was quiet. Villagers rushed out to see the extent of the damage.

A small shed housing a group of calves was blown sky-high. Its owner approached to investigate the damage. In their stall in a corner of the erstwhile shed lay the calves uninjured. In another part of the village a chicken pen was blown from its foundations. Among the debris, strutted the hens and their families. The owner counted. No casualties. In a nearby house, a baby lay sleeping in its crib. A few inches over its head, embedded in the wall was a large piece of shrapnel. It had hurtled through the wall and missed the child by a few scant inches.

"The walls of the cottage were stripped of paper, pictures were torn down and all glass and china smashed, but no one was hurt," writes a relative in a letter received yesterday by Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gillett, 47 Grier Street.

The letter contained the above dramatic description of an air-raid, and exemplifies in other parts the courage and fearlessness of the English people under present conditions.

"We have had one blow after another, since the French gave up," the letter said, "but we don't mind and are ready for anything. Everyone here is quite bright about the whole business and of course we have a wonderful air force. The Germans come over in large numbers at times, but our chaps soon have them on the run. So on the whole, I don't think we have anything to worry about. It's just a case of doing everything we can to help.

"The raiders come over every day and night," the letter stated, "but the majority of their bombs are dropped on waste places. It seems they come over, drop their bombs whenever they can and leave for home as fast as possible."

GERMAN GESTAPO ACTIVE IN JAPAN

Two More British Subjects Arrested in Korea in Continuation of Campaign

London, Aug. 2—(CP)—An authoritative source today charged that the German gestapo, through a representative in the Japanese Home Office, which supervises police activities, is wielding influence over Japanese internal affairs.

At the same time it was disclosed that two more British subjects have been arrested in Korea, Japan's colony on the Asiatic mainland, in a continuation of an anti-British campaign against alleged espionage.

The representative, was identified as Franz Huber of the German storm troop security department, who was appointed "information officer" in the Japanese home office in 1937 after Japan and Germany joined in an anti-comintern pact.

When the war began he also was attached to the German Embassy, the informant said, and thus became a channel of contact between the German Embassy and the Japanese Home Office.

Tokyo dispatches Wednesday said "several foreigners" had been arrested in Korea but the nationality was not disclosed at that time.

Those reported today as arrested were a missionary named Chadwell, who is a member of an English Church mission at Haijo, and a man named Sandford at Teijo.

Sir Robert Craigie, British Ambassador to Japan, has protested against both arrests, it was said.

R.A.F. BLASTS ITALIAN DUMP

Cairo, Egypt, Aug. 2—(AP)—The Royal Air Force announced today a "highly successful raid" on an Italian ammunition dump near Bardia, Libya. Plane crews reported seeing flames and smoke caused by their bombardment from a distance of 40 miles.

The communique said the noise and shock of the explosion were felt 9,000 feet up. Flames rose 500 feet and smoke 7,000. Flames and columns of smoke still were visible when our aircraft were 40 miles away on the homeward journey. The British suffered no casualties.

The communique added that a small formation attacked the Accicol oil refinery near Massawa. Direct hits were registered. As a result of a petrol fire was started and smoke was seen 50 miles away. Enemy fighters were active but did not engage our bombers.

Pte. David Croll, Mayor of Windsor, Now in England

An East Coast Canadian Port, Aug. 2 (CP)—Practically every ship in the convoy of Canadian troops whose safe arrival in the United Kingdom was announced today had its quota of notables in the ranks.

In one unit was Pte. David Croll, Mayor of Windsor, Ont., and one-time member of the Ontario cabinet. In another was Sgt.-Major Rex Carey of Vancouver, a number of the Canadian boxing team in the British Empire games in Australia and runner up for the Empire light-heavyweight title.

Then there was Pte. Marcel Rene De Romanette of Winnipeg who has 2 1-2 rows of decorations including a Rumanian one. He had had three rows but when Italy entered the war he took two Italian ribbons off.

Pro. Hockey Player Joins Active Force

Montreal, Aug. 2.—(CP)—Gordon Poirier, who played with Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League last season, has joined the 3rd Canadian Motorcycle Battalion of the Canadian Active Service force.

Poirier, slim forward who joined the Canadiens late last season after playing with Ste. Hyachinthe in the Provincial Senior League, was believed to be the first National League player to enter the C.A.S.F. The previous season he played with Brighton Tigers in the English National League.

Eire Protests Bombing by Nazis Of British Ship In Waters of Eire

London, Aug. 2—(CP)—The Eire government information bureau announced tonight that the Eire Charge D'Affaires in Berlin had been instructed to protest and claim compensation for the aerial bombing of a British ship in Eire waters last week.

PRIME MINISTER SENDS MESSAGE OF GOOD WISHES

Col. The Hon. J. L. Ralston Also Cables to Troops of Canadian Force Who Have Arrived in England

An East Coast Canadian Port, Aug. 2—(CP)—Major-General Victor Odlum, General Officer Commanding the 2nd Division, Canadian Active Service Force, received and acknowledged messages from Prime Minister Mackenzie King and Defence Minister Ralston before the Division sailed for the United Kingdom.

"As you leave these shores, I send to you and through you to the officers and men of the 2nd Division of the Canadian Active Service Force, good wishes from the hearts of the people of Canada.

"You carry with you the pride, the hope and the affection of your country. Behind you stands a united people pledged to support you with all its strength and power.

Crusaders

"As crusaders, you journey across the seas to defend the innermost shrine of freedom in the ancient land of Britain which, by its example, has taught the world what freedom means. We know that you will be worthy of the cause in this hour of its greatest peril, and do honor to the land whose name you bear.

84th BIRTHDAY IS CELEBRATED

Jack Roblin, Well Known Resident of City, Receives Congratulations of Many Friends

Veteran figure of the waterfront and colorful habitue of city administration offices for years, Jack Roblin, well-known resident of Belleville, celebrated his 84th birthday today in the seclusion of his home at 80 South Front St.

It was the first "birthday" in a half-century of uninterrupted activity that Jack was not seen in his familiar haunts. For, some time ago, he met with a serious accident that has kept him confined to his home, away from his work but in close proximity to his beloved waterfront.

Up to the time of his accident he had been the "custodian of the city clock," keeping its many faces clean and its "innards" ticking more or less accurately.

One of his best reminiscenes is the recalling of the advent of the gasoline engine in Belleville. He held the honor of being the first dealer here to dispense gasoline, a fluid regarded in those days by the skeptics as being "liquid dynamite." The first order of "gas" came to Belleville in a tightly enclosed drum, and was dispensed sparingly by Jack to the few owners of powerboats here.

He was born in Belleville and at an early age developed a tendency for things technical. This trait increased and he soon earned the enviable reputation of being able to "fix anything." Possessed of an inventive turn of mind he perfected many "gadgets" which he applied to his own boats and those of others. So valuable were some of these inventions that many were "stolen" by others who sought the credit. Had he had his efforts patented, Jack often bemoans, "I would likely have been a rich man."

He has what is commonly known as a "photographic" mind, and still recalls with startling clarity the events and doings of decades ago. He has a wealth of colorful anecdotes and stories in a memory that is as brilliant as it is retentive. His many friends will wish Jack a speedy recovery and return to the familiar places.

10th CASUALTY LIST

Ottawa, Aug. 2.—(CP)—The National Defence Department today issued its 10th casualty list for the Canadian Active Service force overseas announcing seven deaths.

The list also included names of four soldiers previously reported missing and now safe. Two more were listed as dangerously ill and three as seriously ill.

These casualties bring the total since the C.A.S.F. went overseas to 38 dead and four missing.

None of the dead listed are from Ontario.

Following is the latest list with regimental number and next-of-kin (no dates were reported):—

Previously missing, now safe:—

Pte. William McBurnie, B-84156, Mrs. Catherine McBurnie (wife) 402 Westmoreland Ave, Toronto.

Pte. Edmund Abner Youngs, A-340, Mrs. Mary Youngs (mother), 281 Birmingham Street, Stratford, Ont.

Previously missing, now reported in the hospital in France.

Royal Canadian Artillery:—

Gnr. George Richard Cooper, C-19, Mrs. G. Cooper, (wife) 24 Clergy Street W., Kingston, Ontario.

Polish Steamer Kroman Arrives In British Port

London, Aug. 2. (CP) The 1,864-ton Polish steamship Kroman has arrived in a British port after escaping from Dakar, French port in Senegal, under the very noses of Germans who had arrived to seize her, the Admiralty announced today.

The Kroman had been immobilized by the removal of a vital part of her machinery, the Admiralty said, but the captain made a makeshift replacement and steamed out of the harbor after learning of the arrival of the Germans.

"By improvisation and engineering skill the engines of the Kroman were made to work," an Admiralty statement said. "She then escaped through the harbor defences and on reaching the open sea set her course for a British port.

"All of this was accomplished although there were no charts on board".

Wool-Combing Unit Opened at Acton

Acton, Ont., Aug. 2—(CP)—Municipal officials said today they were informed this week that Wool Combing Corporation of Canada, Limited, a new company formed by British and Canadian interests will establish a factory here.

Lord Barnby, who has been actively associated with large Yorkshire wool combing plants and one-time wool controller of England, is president of the company, officials said. The company is capitalized at $250,000 and will give employment to more than 100 men and women.

Company representatives were reported as saying the new industry will provide the only individual wool combing unit in Canada.

Lord Barnby asked the British government in the House of Commons Wednesday to have large sections of British industry moved to Canada with sufficient skilled labor to make Canada a vast centre of empire production.

POLICE COURT

Leonard S. Orten, Brockville transient, was remanded for sentence by Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., in local police court circles today after being convicted of stealing a number of carpenters' tools. Orten was charged with the theft of tools from both Picton and at Belleville.

Chief Kidd informed the court that the tools stolen at Pciton had been recovered in a local second-hand store, as the tools stolen in Belleville last Saturday had been found abandoned by the accused near Leavens' airport, following a police posse chase headed by Sergeant Arthur Booth.

Crown Attorney S. Gordon Robertson read Orten's list of previous convictions, which proved rather lengthy and included several serious convictions in the U.S.A. Mr. Robertson urged a penitentiary sentence, but His Worship reserved sentence until next week.

George Riley, Foxboro, was convicted of driving a motor car while not in possession of a driver's licence. "But I had a beginner's permit," pleaded Riley, but the court pointed out that he was driving without an experienced driver in the car, contrary to the H.T.A. No fine was assessed, but Riley was called upon to pay $3.25 costs.

Gerald Connors and Mrs. Dorothy Findlay of this city, were both convicted of aiding to the moral delinquency of children in the home. Connors was sentenced to serve three months in the common jail, while Mrs. Findlay was given one month. The Findlay children were made wards of the Children's Aid Society this afternoon at the request of Inspector T. D. Ruston. "I believe Connors is to blame for the whole trouble here and therefore he'll go to jail for a longer period," remarked His Worship.

Earl Lenn, Sidney farmhand, was fined $10 and costs after being convicted of operating a motor vehicle which was not equipped with a muffler, contrary to the H.T.A.

Six inebriates, including a member of the C.A.S.F., appeared on charges of intoxication and in each case pleas of guilty were accepted and fines levied. The soldier boy was held for his unit.

IF IT'S ABOUT YOUR EYES . . . SEE McFEE

Picton and District

Picton, Aug. 2—A drive to purchase an ambulance by Prince Edward County people has been started and it is expected that many organizations and individuals will join in the plan. An objective of $2,600 has been set.

The movement has been started by Melville community and the congregation of the United Church there already has $100 for the fund. Other villages and townships are expected to take an objective and to secure the co-operation of organizations in raising it.

Trenton and District

Trenton, Aug. 2 — Hundreds of amusement seekers enjoyed the Rotary Carnival and street dance held here last night. The carnival is held in aid of the Benevolent Purposes Fund and the Crippled Children's Fund.

All types of games and refreshment stands were operated by various members of the Rotary Club. The ball and wire game was operated by George Cobley; penny game by Vic Orchard; bingo by George Cobley and Handford; shuttle cock by Art Black; small wheel by Norman Bower; large wheel by Fred Collins; novelty booth by Bob Weymess, crown and anchor by Dick Whitley; dance by Bob Derbyshire and R. McInnes; refreshment booth by Alex Nathan; silverware booth by Ken Couch and Thomas Bata and cashier by Claire Northey.

A BREATH OF FREEDOM

Like a breath of freedom from the Alps, the Swiss Alps, came the news yesterday of the pledging of the Swiss armies to the defence of "the passage of the Alps to the end." It was the 649th anniversary of the first oath taken by the Swiss cantons when they found their liberty. Today many stronger nations have fallen before the nazis but the Swiss remain free. Nature has protected them, the course of the war, the location of the belligerents and their own heroic nature have had much to do with the preservation of this little mountainous country around which have centred genuine attempts to rid forever the world of the curse of war.

The Swiss stood the severest test—they have remained one though their origin racially is divided, the Gallic or Celtic branch in three strains, French, Italian and Romanish and the Teutonic or German branch. They have a passion for liberty which comes from association with nature and with conquest over obstacles. They are frugal and stable.

The country was originally inhabited by the Helvetians and Rhaetians, whom Rome subdued. Then Alemanni and Burgundians settled the country. In the fifth century it came into possession of the Franks. Under the successors of Charlemagne, it was divided between France and Germany and in the eleventh century it passed to Germany, becoming part of the Holy Roman Empire. The Austrian counts became tyrannical and in 1291 the men of Uri, Schwyz and Unterwalden entered into a defensive league. Hostilities began in the fourteenth century. By the battle of Morgarten in 1315 the Swiss won peace for seventy years. Five other cantons joined by the middle of the century and in 1386 the Swiss were victorious and defeated the Austrians in 1388 and took Aargau and Thurgau from Austria. The last war with Austria was fought in 1499 and the Swiss became finally free of the Austrian yoke. Thirteen cantons had joined the federation by 1513.

MME. TABOUIS NOW IN AMERICA

Everyone who read much of the international news before the war read the comments of Mme. Genevieve Tabouis. Today that woman, one of the outstanding opponents of aggression and of nazism and fascism in the world, is not in her native France, for France is not free, it has an armistice with the Huns and an armistice does not mean freedom when the nazis give it. She is in the New World and will continue the fight against the aggressors and against the elements in the French national life which helped to make for the tragedy which befell France in June when the government secured an armistice with the Germans.

USE YOUR HEAD WHEN SWIMMING

Ten "don'ts" for swimmers have been issued by the Toronto Lifesaving Society which believes that "two are company" and three makes swimming much safer.

The "don'ts" are:

1. Don't use an inner tube to learn to swim. It may slip away from you—and leave you in deep water.

2. Don't use rafts. They may carry you beyond your depth.

3. Don't try to swim after a ball or other floating object. The wind can blow it faster than you can swim.

4. Don't climb out on rock piers or docks. You may slip on the moss covered rocks and break your arm or leg.

5. Don't dive into water before investigating. Some day you may strike your head on sunken logs or rocks and break your neck.

6. Don't go swimming alone. Even a good swimmer may get a cramp.

7. Don't get into a canoe unless with an experienced boatman and swimmer. Never stand up, change your seat or try to dress in a canoe.

8. Don't cry out for help unless you mean it. Some day you may need help and people will think you are clowning.

9. Don't go swimming immediately after a meal. At least an hour is necessary to allow for your digestive organs to complete their task.

10. Don't tamper with lifesaving equipment on beaches.

MOTOR VEHICLE SALES IN CANADA

New motor vehicle sales in Canada during June, 1940 excluding deliveries to the Government for war purposes continued above the 1939 level. Sales numbered 15,780, with a retail value of $17,502,885, as compared with 10,958 units valued at $11,857,777 in June, 1939. For the first six months of this year, 86,800 new motor vehicles sold with a value of $96,371,658, as compared with 67,983 vehicles retailed for $74,002,336 in the same period of 1939, according to the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

New passenger car sales in June increased substantially over June, 1939, making the total for Canada 12,618 new cars retailing at a value of $13,939,567, a gain of 53 per cent in value over last year, when 8,620 cars sold with a value of $9,117,587. The Prairie Provinces led in the increase with Saskatchewan showing a gain of 85 per cent above last year's sales, while Ontario reported sales 46 per cent higher than in June, last year.

Sales of new trucks and buses in Canada during June numbered 3,112 new commercial vehicles retailing at $3,563,318, a gain of 30 per cent in value over last year's sales, which recorded 2,338 units sold, valued at $2,740,190.

Carry French Baby 100 Miles After Escaping Nazi Guard

Mention the war to Pte. Sidney Bully and you may be told the story of how he and 14 other members of the B. E. F. who were fleeing from the Germans carried an abandoned French baby 100 miles to safety.

Bully, who escaped with the 14 after being captured following fierce fighting near Abbeville, told his family the story after he arrived safely at his home in Southeast London. If he had not wanted to bring his brother back a souvenir he might never have been there to tell it.

Just before being captured he found a revolver. The Germans imprisoned them in a barn and posted a sentry who kept careful watch. Bully told his corporal about the revolver and it changed hands. There was a sudden disturbance. The sentry swung around and was dropped by a heavy bullet.

For two days the men hid; travelling only at night. They fed on scraps of food from abandoned houses. Searching one cart they saw something move beneath a pile of straw and harness and found a baby girl.

The corporal ordered each of the men to carry her for 20 minutes and then hand her on to the next one. They found no suitable food for her so, as they trudged wearily along the dusty roads, they milked cows standing in the fields. One man improvised a feeding device with his billy-can and the tubing of his respirator. Milk was poured in the can and the child was fed through the respirator mouthpiece.

At Havre they turned the baby over to the French authorities, well and in good condition.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Don't Keep Infected Teeth Because They are Your Own

If a distinguished physician or dentist were to say, "The one great objective of the life of a dentist should be to save teeth", most of us would be inclined to agree with him. There are no teeth like your own teeth which are just as much a part of you as your heart or hands. They are fitted to your mouth and even if infection be present, the infection can be removed and your teeth saved.

Dr. Earl H. Thomas Chicago, a physician and dentist, in the Journal of the American Dental Association disagrees with the above quoted statement. He says, "If there is one great objective in the life of a dentist, it should be to place the mouth of his patient in a condition of health. All else is secondary. General health and life, when they depend upon such a condition are more important than all the teeth in the mouth".

I have spoken before of the great number of individuals with abscessed teeth who apparently suffer no ill effects yet others have rheumatism followed by heart disease due to just one infected tooth.

The man with many diseased teeth has had the great advantage of being able to use these teeth for years instead of having them removed and artificial teeth inserted. Dr. Thomas points out that for every one person absorbing infection for many years with no apparent ill-effects, many are in their graves prematurely because they allowed this condition to exist. Most physicians and many dentists know of cases where abscessed teeth were the cause of rheumatism, heart disease, high blood pressure, inflammation of the kidneys, peptic ulcer and other ailments. The general lowering of the body's resistance to this steady pouring out of poisons is the cause of many "break-ups" of individuals in their fifties and sixties.

The lesson is plain. While your own teeth are better than artificial teeth, they look better and chew better they are not worth saving if in the opinion of your physician and dentist they are a menace not only to health but to life itself.

The large number of cases of disease and death following absorption of poisons from infected teeth should make us all willing to get rid of our own teeth if this is advised by physician and dentist.

Ageless England

(Hamilton Spectator)

It is not to be forgotten that when invaders landed in England in old times it was not with the aim of conquest so much as it was their desire to make their home in that green and pleasant land. The Norsemen especially, who gave it its name, were enchanted with the green meadows and called it Eng Land, Eng being Scandinavian for a meadow, and Meadow Land it has remained to this day. Later wiseacres have tried to persuade the world that it is Angleland, and puns were made to give it an atmosphere as Angel-land; but there is the record—Eng, a meadow, in any Norse dictionary, and England it is.

So, if any modern invader should so far forget the proprieties of history and the dictates of reason and common sense as to think he could do otherwise, even should he land on its shores, than to make civil overtures about taking up residence there, he would find that all these original homesteaders would resent this intrusion and make him feel he had transgressed or forgotten the amenities that govern decent living. He would find, too, that after a thousand years of established routine little has changed; the seasons have come and gone with unfailing regularity, and with all the incidental dramatic feature of storm and tempest, heat and cold, like the great storms one can read about in Lorna Doone or the floods described by the same author in another of his books.

And after a thousand years the woods are covered with the same kind of trees, the fields with the same green grass, and all the roads and paths have the same flowers, gillyflowers, primroses, daffodils, the little speedwell's darling blue, meadowsweet, violets, and hedgerow blooms innumerable. And the orchards are fruitful as ever, and the singing birds that sang to Alfred, and William the Norman, and Edward Longshanks, and all the other Edwards and Henrys for centuries, are singing yet, and will continue to sing when the monsters of these warring days are forgotten.

It is no blind and groping faith which feels assured that man will yet build the celestial city in England's green and pleasant land. And the same wild birds will fill the chorus of those days as they have in the past. Thrush and merlin, lark and linnet, chaffinch and robin will lead the morning hymns of the new days as they have done in the old. The people who dwell in England, as these natives of the fields and forests have immemorially done, away from town and city life; the rustics, the peasants, the farmers and yeomen, are not to be rooted out any more than the birds of the air or the flowers of the fields. It is their sons and daughters that have built the cities, and it is they who will defend them, as they have done for centuries, with bow and arrow, with pike and lance, with sword and bayonet, and now with the strange new arms that have been fashioned of fire and chemicals.

Invincibilty of the Hun Most Colossal Fake

(St. Catharines Standard)

It is the greatest piece of four-flushing ever attempted in world history. Thus writes Runnymede in the current Legionary on the weapon of fear and frightfulness which the Nazis are using in every possible form, and which Hitler used in an attempt to intimidate the people of the British Isles when he held out German peace or death in his recent speech. Just as John L. Garvin in The London Observer termed it "imagined omnipotence" so this writer Runnymede sizes it up:

"The 'invincibility of the German might' is the most colossal fake, the most gigantic piece of Teutonic four-flushing that ever dazzled a world which has allowed itself to be frightened into the role of the hysterical spinster, paralysed with horrible imaginings of a wicked man under the bed. And that statement is made with a full realization of all that has befallen Europe, and of all Hitler's tanks, planes, ships and soldiers."

There is no doubt that the long score of triumphs by the Nazis, which have fairly "blitzed" six countries into enslavement have had a very appreciable influence in their favor in the field of diplomacy. They have made the remnant of France into a strepy and have secured domination in Rumania. Their propaganda about the certainty of subjugating Britain has had its affect in other countries. The only country where the doctrine of fear has worked in reverse has been within the Island Kingdom itself. It has only worked to arouse resistance to greater fury and doggedness and thereby has reduced if not eliminated the chances of success in any attempted invasion. Nations in Europe lacking the moral fibre of the British and not understanding British psychology, having witnessed the crushing of small nations and the frightful pictures of agonized peoples issued from Berlin, have been susceptible from the first to this form of propaganda. Iniquitous as it appears, it has been diabolically clever, and the rottenness of the victims, France and Belgium notably has helped to put it over.

The greatest flop, the most serious reverse which the Nazis could suffer is to attack the British Isles and fail. And fail they will. There will be no propaganda which can counter such a reverse. If they do not attack, Nazi prestige will suffer. For weeks past, there have been both the promise and the threat, a veritable fanfare by radio and in the press, about extinction of England. There is no real evidence at hand that the threatened Blitz is any nearer consummation now than it was two weeks ago. But in this respect, one bet may be as good as another.

Please Turn off the Heat

(New York Times)

In behalf of the meek and now sorely disheveled "flock that lives on the plain pasture's heat and cold" we respectfully submit that the grass is burnt and the grass roots boiled to death. Day after day, night after night, we steam, suffer and swear. Evidently the Moor of Venice has taken charge of the works: "Roast me in sulphur! Wash me in steep-down gulfs of liquid fire!" And the weather warlocks, fingering their bulbs up in the clouds, rain prophesies only fit to copper. These lads promised weather for the masses; saw moving eastward from the Great Lakes masses of cold air that arrived as the real fiery-furnace stuff.

We have tried every remedy, if remedy there is; every supposed alleviation. We have followed Sydney Smith's reipe. We took off our flesh. It was red hot. We sat in our bones. They were grilled black. And so the heat wave rushes in like a surf of fire; and as our cheerful old seventeenth century fried Michael Wigglesworth put it, "And by and by the flaming Sky shall drop like molten Lead." Let us talk of something else; of caverns measureless to man, where, soothed by the everlasting drip, we may turn at last to stalactite and stalagmite; of vast regions of unsunned snows. Make us as tall as the pole, so that we may hang like icicles from it. Give us walruses for playmates, rough fellows but no friends of heated rooms or air.

Rub your old lamp, Aladdin. Let the ice palace domed and spired arise. Fill each elevator compartment with claret cup and let us go up and down immortally, still keeping head above drink. Build for us a Matterhorn of spumoni. Make us citizens of an air-conditioned Cockaigne. From these baked and shriveled suburbs of Hades transport us to where "northern storms the forest shake, and billows on the long beach break." There shall we live happily till our nineties or till those of the thermometer have mightily been cut down.

'Between us And Hitler'

(Ottawa Journal)

"Between Us and Hitler Stands the British Fleet." Thus in large type and in almost a full page advertisement in the New York Times do friends of Britain in the United States tell Americans the truth. Pictured is a great British dreadnought under full draught between illustrations of a typical American family amidst peaceful surroundings and the same family home in flames with the Swastika above.

It's a powerful advertisement that must have brought home to many serious minded Americans their dependence on Britain's sea power. In the centre is an outline of North and South America showing the bulk of the United States fleet in the Pacific between the coast and the fleet of Japan. On the Atlantic side are three lone units of Uncle Sam's fleet and, further out, the black outlines of the combined fleets of Germany and Italy. Between is a solid line of Britain's overwhelming naval might. It is great and accurate propaganda.

Below this picture of America's dependence on the British navy is the legend, "Think where we'd be if the British fleet fell to the Dictators and was used AGAINST us. If Hitler captures England the Dictators and Japan would have eight times the shipbuilding capacity of the United States". And then the challenge "Help Britain to Stop Hitler Now".

Specifically this appeal asks persons who believe the United States should give more material aid to Britain to petition for the transfer of 60 destroyers to Britain, for the use of ships in bringing children to America and for aid through the Red Cross. Even this latter humane activity is being sabotaged by Fifth Columnists, states the advertisement. This aid should be given at once, before it is forever too late, because "Hitler's dream of a world under Nazi rule can not be realized as long as Britain holds out".

It is a great work these friends of Britain are doing among their own people. Under the name of the Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies, with William Allen White as chairman, they are slowly but surely bringing influence to bear on the better class of U. S. citizens—making them realize their reliance on Britain and the role of the British navy.

War Industry Forges Ahead

(Montreal Gazette)

Canada's industrial contribution to the Empire war effort was outlined in impressive terms by the Minister of Munitions and Supply. Mr. Howe told of $120,000,000 which is being spent on factories already under construction, a prospective increase of $500,000,000 annually in productive capacity. Canadian plants are now turning out 800 mechanized army units daily for various parts of the Empire and Canada is probably leading the world in this respect. Motor transport units produced in the Dominion rank as the best that have been built for use in this war. Canada will be manufacturing or is manufacturing rifles, Bren guns, aircraft and machine guns and quick-firing guns and carriages besides other types of weapons. The shell and munitions programme represents an expense of $100,000,000 and the great sum of $250,000,000 stands against uniforms, blankets and other personal equipment for the troops. A sum of $30,000,000 invested in explosive and chemical plants which will manufacture for the Canadian and British governments is to be doubled under instructions just received from Great Britain. Canada's airplane output next year is expected to reach 380 a month as against the 1,300 per year which is the present rate. Provision is being made for the construction of tanks at the rate of 30 a month and the Dominion is to have an artillery plant costing $10,000,000, which will be the Empire's largest and most modern. Satisfactory progress is being made under a $50,000,000 shipbuilding programme, and so on.

Early in this war it was predicted that Canada would become the arsenal of the Empire. Mr. Howe's statement to Parliament indicates the coming fulfilment of that prediction. There may have been initial mistakes, and doubtless there were. There may have been official hesitation, and it is fairly certain that there was. Canada, however, is getting now into its full stride and although months must elapse before a level of maximum production can be reached it is apparent that every official effort is now being made to mobilize and enlarge the country's industrial resources for war purposes, and that leaders of industry are co-operating to the limit of a power that is undoubtedly very great.

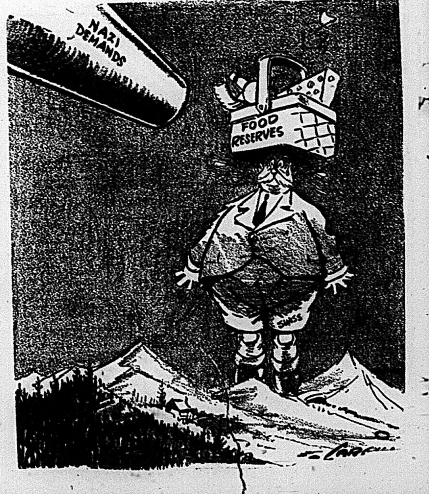
Ottawa, Aug. 2—(CP)—For the first time since his arrival in Canada, the Governor-General, the Earl of Athlone, will inspect a military camp when he visits Petawawa Aug. 6, it was announced Thursday.

Princess Alice will accompany the Governor General and they will stop at Pembroke, Ont., where Her Royal Highness will open a Y.W.C.A. Hostess House.

WILLIAM TELL



SAYS HE ESCAPED FROM PORTHOLE

Boston, Aug. 2—(AP)— Walter Kurt Reich, 23-year-old survivor of a sunken submarine and first German war prisoner know to have escaped to the United States, credits his expert swimming ability and knowledge of geography for carrying him to a haven.

The machinist's mate related in an interview last night how he wriggled through the porthole of a British ship taking him to internment in Canada, dropped into the St. Lawrence River and evaded detection for four days and five nights. He escaped July 15. He was in the cold water for two hours.

Under international law, a prisoner escaping to a neutral nation becomes free, but Reich has yet to deal with the United States immigration authorities who regard him as an alien without a passport or proper visa. He was placed under supervision of the German Consulate in Boston, which posted a bond for him.

Reich told how he spent four months in a prison camp at Manchester, England, before he was loaded with other German prisoners on a ship bound for Canada.

Used Sun as Guide

He could tell by the sun, he said, that the ship's course was westward and he bided his time until "we could see land in the distance."

"Then, that night, when it was dark, I wriggled through a porthole," he continued. "I did it alone, with no help or connivance. It was a tight fit going through, but I wore only a shirt, thin pants and on my feet, sneakers.

"I went through head first; that was the worst, for when my head was through. I could not know if some guard was seeing my feet and coming to stop me.

"It was not far to the water, for we were kept always below decks as prisoners. Yah, that water was cold in the St. Lawrence river.

Swam Two Hours

"I think it was about two hours' swimming before I reached land. It was woodland and I quickly hid myself and waited through the day to take my bearings as best I could by the sun."

For four days and five nights, the young German said, he walked with blistered feet with "nothing to eat but wild strawberries and blackberries."

Once, while hiding in a farmhouse, the occupants saw him and "I was afraid I would be retaken by the British, because I know only two or three English words."

The family was French, however, and Kurt Reich said that he answered their questions in the few words he knew and successfully escaped detection.

He said he had walked 25 miles inside Maine when two United States immigration inspectors in an automobile, noticing his ragged clothing, took him into custody.

Rawdon Junior Farmers Re-organize for Season

Club to Assist in Purchase of Four-Bed Ambulance for Red Cross

OFFICERS ELECTED

Stirling, Aug. 2 — (Special)—On Saturday evening, July 27th, the Rawdon Junior Farmers' Club met in the office of the Dept. of Agriculture, Stirling, for a re-organization meeting. Mr. George Sutherland, President of the Club, presided at the meeting. A good number of members were in attendance, During the business period it was decided to give each of the boys from Rawdon township in the Belleville Calf Club, one dollar in prize money, this dollar to be in addition to the regular prize money.

Mr. H. L. Fair, B.S.A. agricultural representative for the County of Hastings, explained to the boys that the junior farmers and junior farm women in Ontario were planning to purchase a four-bed ambulance for the Canadian Red Cross. This ambulance would cost $1,750. Already $575. of this money has been subscribed. A $25 grant from the Rawdon Club was made to this fund.

Election of Officers

The election of officers for the coming year was conducted with the following gentlemen selected to direct the activity of the organization for 1940-41: President, Clayton Thompson; Vice-President, Roy Bateman; Secretary-Treasurer, Arthur McDonnell; Livestock Committee, George Sutherland, Burton Sharpe, Wesley Brooks; Social Committee, Carl Heath, George Sutherland, Lorne Watson, Don Tucker.

Mt. Pleasant Takes First of Finals 16-4 in Popular Rawdon League

Before a record crowd on Tuesday night at the Stirling Agricultural Society ball park, Mount Pleasant took the first game in the final play-offs for the Faulkner Trophy and Rawdon Township senior championship as they downed the hustling Springbrook contingent to the tune of 16-4. Johnnie Burton and Gerry Broadworth opposing each other in mound duty displayed the ability that had carried them successfully through hard fought semi-final series. Burton doing the twirling for Mt Pleasant fooled the northerners with his tricky change of pace, allowing only nine hits to total only four scoring runs against him. Gerry Broadworth, speedball expert, had eighteen hits scored against him with sixteen batters crossing the plate to complete scoring circuits. Thompson and McKeown each slugged out a home run with no one on bases and the fielding on the Mt. Pleasant crew seamed the product of more complete practice, the infield working particularly well. A brilliant play by Fitzgerald, second baseman of the Mount Pleasant crew, won a well deserved hand. He made a twelve-foot dive to pluck a line drive for the put out in the fourth, that was really a sizzler. On Friday night the series will be continued.

The teams:

Mount Pleasant: M. McKeown, P. Fitzgerald, Bert Jeffs, J. Burton, Bill Jeffs, Johnson, Rennie, Potts and Brown.

Springbrook: Thompson, R. Bailey, G. Broadworth, D. Broadworth, C. Burkitt, C. Lough, D. McKeown, M. Heath, M. Mason.

Officials, H. Rollins and Smith, Belleville.

'TRUE BALANCE' IN EVACUATIONS

Balance Between Rich and Poor Classes in Emigration Overseas to be Struck

London, Aug. 2 — (CP-Cable) — Sir John Anderson, Home Secretary, told the House of Commons yesterday in reply to a question by Geoffrey Mander, Liberal, that a "true balance" will be struck between the number of wealthy and poor children to be evacuated to the Dominions.

"It is proposed," Sir John said, "in pursuance of the assurance given by the Prime Minister, to make arrangements to ensure that in further emigrations of children overseas the balance between classes shall be restored."

British Food Superior To That of Germany Says Warren Irvine

London, Aug. 2 (CP)—Three days in England after months in Germany convinced Warren Irvine, former National Broadcasting Corporation representative in Berlin that the British people are better off and in better spirits than the German people.

"I can say there is no comparison between the food here and in Germany," he said in a speech broadcast last night.

The menu presented to him for his first breakfast at a modest hotel in London amazed him with the variety and quantity of food available. In Berlin he lived at a much better hotel but the food was scarce. German radio spokesmen portrayed the British people as starving.

"If what I have had in London is starvation give me more of it," he said.

The German people were also led to believe the British lived in constant fear of attack. On the contrary he found every one he met in London full of confidence and eager for the fight to come. Apart from the Nazi party members the Germans were not so full of confidence.

Fate of Two Vessels Shrouded in Obscurity Of Sea Warfare

New York, Aug. 2—(AP)— The fate of two vessels was shrouded today in the obscurity of sea warfare off the British Isles.

An unidentified steamship was reported torpedoed last night about 450 miles west of the northern tip of Ireland in a message relayed to Mackay Radio by the American vessel Algic.

The SOS message received by the Algic was signed "ODXA", apparently the call letters of the ship, but Mackay said no such letters were recorded and that the message probably had been garbled.

Lloyd's registry listed no ship so-named.

The scene of the reported torpedoing, lattitude 55.09 north, longitude 17.13 west, was about 300 miles northeast of the spot from where the British steamship Theseus sent a distress signal saying she was attacked by a German submarine earlier yesterday.

Deportation Awaits Eighty-one Persons In Panama Canal Zone

Washington, Aug. 2—(AP) — Eighty-one persons described by War Secretary Henry Stimson as "foreign agents" awaited deportation from the Panama Canal zone today after a cleanup of aliens in the vital United States defence areas.

The Secretary announced the detention of the 81 yesterday when he disclosed that all aliens, other than Panamanians, had been discharged from United States government or military positions in the canal zone.

Only American soldiers or American engineers, he added, are employed on fire control equipment in the canal zone.

Leopold Arosemena, Panama's Minister of Interior and Acting Foreign Minister, said at Panama that the 81 persons held for deportation were mostly European "refugees."

They were picked up and turned over to canal zone officials, he said, when it was found that their papers were not in order. Their point of entry, he explained, had been through the canal zone.

United States army intelligence officers at Panama disclaimed knowledge of 81 foreign agents being held. Refugees at the immigration quarantine station in Balboa, they said, formed the only group of foreigners approaching that figure.

Roy D. Kerby Given High Post With General Motors

Oshawa, Aug. 2.—Roy D. Kerby, who has recently been General Sales-Manager of the Pontiac McLaughlin-Buick G.M.C. Trucks Division of the General Motors Products of Canada Limited, was July 30th, named Assistant to the President and Director of all Public Relations for the Company.

Mr. Kerby's appointment is a culmination of a brilliant career in the Automotive Industry. It is just 27 years since Mr. Kerby started in the business as a retail salesman for the McLaughlin Motor Car Company, Church and Richmond Streets, Toronto. A couple of decades afterwards by a turn of fate, he became Manager of the Toronto Zone for General Motors on the very same site where he started his career. In the interval his motor car experiences have taken him far afield, he has served as Sales Manager for Oldsmobile, Oakland and Cadillac Divisions, and for a time was with Durant Motors as Sales Manager, General Manager, and President.

During Mr. Kerby's recent years of service with General Motors, he held the position of Assistant General Sales Manager for a time and then was appointed Public Relations Manager on special assignments.

In the position announced today, he will be in complete charge of Public Relations work for the Company, a task for which he is eminently qualified by his experiences and popularity throughout Canada.

Canadian Fighter Squadron Bags 100 Planes Since Outbreak

Ottawa, Aug. 2 (CP)—The Canadian fighter squadron in the Royal Air Force has shot down more than 100 German planes and the young Canadian pilots are "absolutely super." Squadron Leader Fowler Gobeil of Ottawa, Commander of the squadron, said yesterday in an interview.

The squadron — called No. 242 Canadian Fighter Squadron—was formed in England about the first of the year from Canadian pilots serving with the R.A.F.

Squadron Leader Gobeil returned to Canada to be connected with the British Commonwealth Air Training plan.

The Canadian squadron fought Nazi aircraft over Flanders and Dunkirk during the withdrawal of the British army, he said.

"I found these young lads absolutely super. They fitted into the picture like a million. Canadians seem to take to the air naturally. Their reactions are remarkable and I have never seen anything like their quick thinking. Most of the boys in my squadron were around 20 and came from the west.

"The Canadians were in the thick of it all during the withdrawal of the British army from Dunkirk. They were in the skies over the beaches as the evacuation was carried out."

Kingston Mother Sends Three Boys To War Again

Ottawa, Aug. 2 (CP) —In August, 1914, Mrs. Ida Willis of Kingston, Ont., saw three of her boys off to war. They all came back and today she finds them serving in their second war.

"Go to it boys and do what you did in the last war," the now aged Mrs. Willis told her sons, Fred, 47, George 45, and Leonard, 44, when they enlisted again in Kingston last Tuesday.

"Ma sure was great," related Leonard, who, with his brothers was transferred this week to the veteran home guard in Ottawa.

"She broke down a little at first, but then she told us to go to it. She's been through the mill before, she had to see us off when we joined to fight in the first Great War."

In the last war George Willis was wounded in the leg, thigh and abdomen; Leonard was gassed while Fred received head wounds from shrapnel fragments.

TIME TO SET SAIL SAYS TIMES

New York, Aug. 2 (CP)—The New York Times, endorsing editorially today the appeal of the United States committee for the care of European children, urged again today that American ships be provided to bring refugee children from Great Britain.

"All that stands in the way of rescue is, first, enough money, and, second, an amendment to the neutrality act," said the Times. "The sooner that amendment is passed and the money raised, the more lives we can save. It is time to up anchor and set sail."

WEDDINGS

EDWARDS—TANNER

St. Thomas' Anglican church, Harold, was the scene of a pretty summer wedding on Tuesday, July 30th., when Edith Elizabeth, younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Tanner, Harold, was united in marriage to Mr. Algernon J. Edwards of Sudbury, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Edwards of New Carlow.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. A. B. Caldwell, Marmora, in the presence of a large number of friends and relatives.

The bride entered the church on the arm of her father, to the strains of the Wedding March played by her sister, Miss Edna Tanner, and was lovely in her wedding gown of white sheer over taffeta with hat and accessories to match. She carried an arm bouquet of pink Sweetheart roses and baby's breath.

Immediately after the ceremony the happy couple left on a short honeymoon trip to Ottawa and points east. On their return they will reside at Sudbury.

The best wishes of the community go with them to their new home.

Miss Mildred Bonter, Bride-Elect, Honored By Marmora Friends

Miss Mildred Bonter, whose wedding to Mr. George Gay of Belleville is to take place shortly, was a guest of honour last Saturday at an afternoon tea given by her friends at the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bonter, Crowe Lake.

A novel and interesting feature of the afternoon's entertainment was the making of a scrap book depicting chapters in the life of the bride-to-be, and which was presented to her upon its completion.

At four o'clock the guests assembled in the dining-room where a delicious tea was served. The table was centred with a large bouquet of roses tastefully arranged.

The guest of honour received a variety of beautiful and useful gifts.

Those assisting the hostesses were—Mrs. G. S. Bonter, Mrs. Chas. Bailey, Mrs. D. Sanderson.

SWIFT-MOVING events, with issues of prime importance to be decided, are presaged from the sidereal operations of major planets. There is likely to be decisive or drastic action in putting over matters that seem to concern group efforts for furthering audacious programs. In this the support and solid cooperation of superiors, those in prestige and financial standing, are imperative.

Those whose birthday it is may look for an important year in which events may come with suddenness and power, requiring drastic action for their satisfactory adjustment. This may be in connection with groups, either social, humane, or with idealistic objectives. The support of those in high places is needful in pushing to desired ends.

A child born on this day may be aggressive and energetic, ambitious, public-spirited, possibly having advanced ideas for the general welfare.

Permanents for Touched-Up Hair

By HELEN FOLLETT

Permanent wave machines are going full blast. Hair dryers are puffing and snorting. Operators eat their luncheons on the gallop, because the world of women must be curly.

If you are due for a hard-boiled frizz and have been using any kind of a coloring agent on your celestial locks, up and confess. If you don't you may come out of the ordeal with hair that is any color of the rainbow. An experienced operator won't be fooled; she'll know you've been ducking in the dye pot. But beginners are not so wise.

The true Egyptian henna does not interfere with a wave, but henna compounds are something else again. They contain chemicals, henna is just the coloring agent. If peroxide rinses have been used, and the shafts are not impaired, a permanent can be given. Over-bleached hair that has become like jute must not be subjected to the boiling liquids. They can't stand the strain.

The permanent is a blessing to the girl with excessive oily hair and to the little dearheart whose locks are thin because it gives them bounce and an appearance of abundance.

The croquignole wind is to be preferred; it makes tighter ringlets.

"An experienced operator will know you've been ducking in the dye

Not much need of a wave line close to the scalp these days. The finger wave seems to have evaporated, given way to smooth crowns.

SHINING WINDOWS

by Kathleen Norris

INSTALMENT 23.

She would be asked no embarrassing questions tonight; there was an atmosphere of death at the farmhouse. William Ballard was struggling with the kitchen fire when Joyce came home. He seemed almost pathetically pleased to see his daughter. Joyce kissed him with only a distracted question or two, ran upstairs to see her mother.

In Sally Ballard's room dusk and disorder reigned. Sally was lying face up on the bed, staring into the gloom; her eyes were reddened with crying.

"Mother!" Joyce exclaimed. Her mother accepted her kiss apathetically, reached out her hand with a hopeless gesture and began to cry again.

"Did you hear about Dodo?" the older woman demanded in a whisper. "Did you know anything of it beforehand?" she asked.

The last word saved Joyce. She could honestly shake her head. She lighted the lamp and began to set things to rights.

It was funny to go downstairs and find the kitchen unchanged; the lard and matches and the tea towels just where they had been before she went to Burlingame, so many ages ago.

"How'd Dodo happen to tell you?" Joyce asked her father.

Her phrasing made him glance at her shrewdly.

"You knew?" he asked.

"She gave me a pretty strong hint," Joyce said honestly. "But it was done then and there was nothing I could do."

"No; there's nothing any of us can do. He came up here Friday afternoon and he and she stood talking out by the oak. Pretty soon your mother called my attention to them; Dodo was crying. I went out there then and asked 'em if anything was wrong, and she flung herself at me and blurted it out. They'd been married a week. Your mother heard just that much and she went into—well," the man said gravely, shaking his head, "she was very bad. She wouldn't speak to the boy and when Dodo came near her she screamed. Michael thought they'd better get out, and Dodo put some things in a bag and they went away."

"What do you think about it, dad?"

"Why, I—I suppose, if your mother feels as she does, it's a pretty bad business," he said doubtfully. "Dodo should have told us; no question of that. It looks bad to have a man and a girl steal a march on the family that way."

"But she likes him terribly and she hates fusses," Joyce argued; "it may have been silly but it seems to me mother's making too much of it!"

"Is he a nice fellow, Joyce?"

"Why, he's an awfully nice fellow, high school graduate and all that. I never thought Dodo'd marry him, but it seems to me she could have done much worse. He has a big dairy ranch over in the San Joaquin; she may love it there! Mother will come round to it; there's no real harm done."

"Well, you comfort me. I confess I thought that your mother was taking it a little hard. Poor girl, she blames me more than she does Dodo. She says it's a result of bringing you al lto this sort of place.

"I'm going to take her up some toast and tea," Joyce said moving about busily. "I'm going to miss Dodo dreadfully," she added, "but it's her life and she's certainly in love with Charley."

"Think she is?" her father asked eagerly.

"Oh, cracked about him, dad. Don't worry! We'll drive over and see Dodo some day and by degrees mother'll come to see it differently."

"You're a wonderful child, Joycie!" William Ballard said.

"Yes, things seem to get normal the minute Joyce gets home," Michael contributed. He was working with some sort of hinge or hasp at the table.

"There are only three of us tonight and I'm dead anyway," she said on a stifled yawn. "We'll eat out here. You started potatoes baking, dad?"

Joyce carried a tray upstairs, talked with her mother. Lissy had gone to stay with the Rosses, had she? Wasn't that rather a good thing, don't that lilk like business at last?"

"I don't know. I'm completely unable to understand Archie Ross," Sally said pessimistically. But Joyce's father had told her that her mother had hardly spoken at all since Friday, except for bursts of despair, and Joyce was correspondingly pleased to have her turn her thoughts to Lissy.

"Oh, they'll be married now!" Joyce said.

Downstairs again the familiar scene was set. Supper started with hot bowls of pea soup; even the men could give but an indifferent interest to what followed. Presently they were all yawning and heavy over the stewed cherries and the coffee cups; Joyce had to tear herself from her chair to begin the familiar job of clearing and washing.

Afterward there was a brief attempt to play cribbage. It was no use, they were all too sleepy. Joyce and Michael, settling the kitchen for the night, had a few minutes together after her father had gone upstairs.

"Anybody asked you if you had a nice time with the von Schwerins?" the man asked.

"Well, was it a nice time?"

"Perfect." Joyce shut her heart on the memory of it. It was all over. No use thinking about it.

"And the sweetheart, was he as nice as ever?"

"Paul. Wonderful."

"You're not going to surprise us as Dodo did?"

"No. Good ni-i-i-ght!" she murmured on a sleepy moan. She carried her lamp upstairs; went into her mother's room.

Sally was heroic and calm now. "I haven't slept," she said; "perhaps I will tonight. We'll hope so."

"You mustn't feel too badly about this, mother."

"I don't think you can understand, and I know your father does not understand, how I feel, Joyce," Sally Ballard said readily in an expressionless voice. "A mother bears her children, gives her life to them in babyhood, watches them develop—"

Joyce and her father were destined to listen to a good deal of this as time went on. Spring rushed into summer with western violence. In the late afternoon of one burning July day Joyce said to her mother: "I saw Dodo today."

"Then you did something you promised me not to do!" she said, instantly out of breath.

"I know," Joyce said mildly without apology. "It was when I went down with Michael for the new rake. Dodo was sitting in Charley's car outside the post office and I went over to talk to her."

There was a pause. Sally's back was turned toward her daughter; she was thinning phlox. Presently she said:

"I suppose you'll be packing your bag for a week-end at that delightful country house of theirs soon—a dairy ranch over in San Joaquin!"

To this Joyce made no direct reply. After a while she submitted simply: "Dodo's my sister." Nothing more was said.

The sight of Dodo in the Sallock car had deprived her of all feeling except one of love for her sister and longing to speak to her. She had fairly run across the baking main street of Merriwell, and the two had been in each other's arms, laughing and crying, before there had been room for thought. In the empty sunny silence of the town they had sat, clinging to each other on the car seat, pouring out the stored eager confidences of hard weeks.

Dodo had looked pale and sick with heat; there had been a weariness and limpness about her that had alarmed Joyce, but she had reported herself as well and happy.

"It sounds awful over there," she had said, "but it's really lovely, Joyce. There are big trees around the house and there's always a breeze through the kitchen. I have a puppy—Charley brought it to me—and there's a nice woman on the place, the foreman's wife. Only—" Dodo had faltered in the gallant story, her lips trembling, "of course I miss you all. If we could come up to dinner! I miss dad so."

"I don't think mother can keep this up," Joyce had said. "Give her time. You know how wonderful mother really is, at heart."

"I know—let's talk of something else—" Dodo had said quickly and thickly. They had talked hastily, with shaky laughter, of Lissy. Lissy was a great favorite with all the Rosses now and stayed there frequently. They were planning to be married early in October.

"Mother's got it all written out," Joyce had said. "'Mr. and Mrs. William Ballard announce the marriage of their daughter, Felicity Fellows, which was postponed because of illness in the family of the groom'."

"Poor mother! I suppose I broke her heart," Dodo had said. "But she never would have consented to my marrying Charley anyway." And she had gone on to tell Joyce how good her husband was to her; it was Charley who strained the milk and cooked the baby turkeys' food.

"We have about a thousand baby turkeys, but they say there won't be much market for them this year," Dodo had said. "We have some Plymouths too but of course Duke and Lard help Charley with them."

"And are you cooking for all the boys?"

"Well, they help a lot. And Mrs. Sallock came over and helped me put up my fruit and berries. We put up more than four hundred jars last week."

Charley had come out of the bank and joined them. All very well, Joyce had thought, for Dodo to boast of his goodness and thoughtfulness. But she had been nervous about him just the same when Joyce's eyes were upon him; she had helped out his sentences with a little shy pause.

Yet he was a nice fellow, Charley Sallock, serious and clever about his business, devoted to it, and perfect in his manner toward his young wife. Joyce had promised her sister a visit, "just as soon as Lissy's back to stay and mother simmers down a little," and Dodo had kissed her good-bye in a very passion of homesickness.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

When Heart is Broken, Pick up the Pieces and Keep Going

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"My mother and sisters look at me reproachfully and as it seems to me, with a slight degree of contempt. Yes, I suppose they're sorry for me, but the whole house breathes an air of 'you brought it on yourself'.

"Maybe I'm wrong. I've been wrong enough about some things and I cannot help that cheapest of emotions, feeling sorry for myself. I was engaged to Bob for nearly a year. I adored him, never refused him anything never could see any faults in him, but my family saw plenty. Got myself talked about and now he's left me and is going with another girl. I hear rumors of an engagement.

"When he told me he didn't care enough about me to marry me, he was released. I made no charges and feel I have nothing left in my life but my pride. An office job helps me to get through the day, but oh, the hideous lonesome evenings, and the nights when there is no sleep! Have you any suggestions? How can a girl in my position pick up the pieces and go on?

"Forgotten Girl"

The fact that you have written this letter shows you're in the right mood to pick up the pieces and go on. Perhaps you couldn't have a month or three weeks ago. But your letter shows that the healing process has set in.

There are hundreds of proverbs in the language to the effect that there is as good fish in the sea as ever were caught. If you've let one fish slip off the hook because you used the wrong sort of bait, discard that bait in future. Whatever it was you did that caused you to lose your fiance don't repeat the mistake. Perhaps you were too conciliatory, too afraid of giving offense, too docile; the girl who can't say no is often deserted for one who can say it positively.

Perhaps you had certain characteristics that grated—a harsh, rasping voice. Perhaps you laughed too loud and attracted attention to yourself in public. Maybe you wore too much makeup or clothes that were too conspicuous. Perhaps you showed a mean streak in talking about other girls. Maybe you were a "gimme" girl, although your letter doesn't sound as if you were.

Well, my dear, whatever it was that made the young man cease to care for you, cut that out for the future. You did attract him once; that shows you are not attraction-proof. If you looked desirable to him, you'll appear desirable to someone else, perhaps a better man.

Get yourself a complete new outfit of clothes. There's nothing in the world like that for blotting out old sorrows. Summer sales are here, and you can get ravishing things for half the price they were earlier in the season. Get someone who knows about clothes to go along and help you choose things that will bring out your best points.

Go to the beauty parlor and give yourself the works. Try a new hair-do, new hats. Whether Mrs. Willkie is to be the next First Lady or not she knows how to choose her hats becomingly. The other day, when I happened to be one of the group of newspaper women who interviewed her, she wore a fetching hat of white pique with a black ribbon band. It seemed to be poked up at various angles, but every angle showed a good point.

Don't stay home and weep.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Your First Trip in a Sleeping Car, Madame?

During these vacation weeks, thousands of women will be taking their first trips in sleeping cars. Many of them will be asking questions about the Where and How of undressing and dressing in the strange new world of a limited berth space.

It is natural and understandable that women travelers are a bit timid and apprehensive about taking their first trip in a sleeping car. But really they needn't be, for it's all very simple and easy and convenient.

If your accommodation is a completely enclosed room of any kind—a compartment, a bedroom, a "roomette", a drawing-room—all dressing and toilet facilities are in the room, and therefore you will not have to go to the public dressing-room. If your sleeping accommodation is in the open car, however you must use the car dressing room.

The usual sleeping car in this country is divided into sections, each section having a lower berth and an upper berth. At one end of the car is the dressing-room for women; at the other end, the dressing-room for men. Usually above one entrance to the body of the car, there is a sign (illuminated at night) marked "Women" Or there is a sign "Women" on the curtains at the entrance to the dressing-room.

When you are ready to go to bed, ring for the porter (you will find the porter call-bell between the windows in your berth) and ask him to make up your berth. While he is doing this, you may sit in a nearby seat or take your toilet-case to the dressing-room to begin your preparations for the night.

There are two schools of thought about whether it is more convenient for a woman to undress and to dress in her berth or in the dressing-room. Do which ever you wish—either way is correct.

Let's say that now your berth has been made up. The porter has put your suitcase under the bed; your overnight bag or dressing-case is on the shelf at the bottom of the berth. Your hat is in the paper hat-bag brought to you by the porter.

In front of your berth hang a pair of heavy curtans made of an opaque material. You step behind these and button them together in the centre. These curtains, once closed can be opened only from the inside. Behind the curtains you will find two hangers, on which you hang your dress and coat. Other items of clothing may be folded and laid either on the shelf at the foot of the berth or in the small hammock suspended across the windows. If you leave your shoes on the floor under your berth, so that the porter can see them, he will polish them and return them to their place. Now, with your travel slippers on, with your long, dark tailored robe over your night clothes, and with your toilet case or overnight bag in hand, you are ready to go to the dressing-room to complete your preparations for the night.

Many women find it more convenient and agreeable to partially disrobe in the berth. They hang coat and dress on the hangers, put on a robe, go to the dressing-room, and when they return to the berth, complete their undressing.

You needn't be embarrassed at the thought of going to and from the dressing-room in your robe. This will be taken for granted by the other passengers, who will be similarly attired, and who will be similarly occupied in their preparations for retiring or dressing. But one warning: don't make the mistake of taking a short or short-ish fussy negligee flimsy light in color—this is definitely unsuitable.

If you have an upper berth, your suitcase will be placed under the lower berth, and when you have finished your toilet, you gather together your belongings and ask the porter to bring the sturdy stepladder by which you ascend to your upper berth. When you wish to come down, either during the night or in the morning you ring the call-bell for the porter to bring the stepladder.

FASHION FLASHES

A GOOD CHOICE for a late summer hat is an off-face model in navy felt. The brim has a wide cut-out design inlaid with net in the same blue.

VERY MUCH of the mode elegant is an evening frock of white crepe cut on sheath lines. The high round neck and the hem are banded with blue sequins and brilliants. Pocket flaps, two at the bustline and two on the skirt, have similar embroidery.

HOT WEATHER recently brought out some pretty black frocks. We admired a charming model of black silk net made with stitched black velvet bretelles over the short sleeves. Velvet ribbons hold the full skirt at the waist and tie in a bow in front with long ends. Flaring hem is stitched.

THERE'S A GAP between bodice and skirt of many frocks these days, for the bare midriff seems to be becoming more popular. A black silk jersey evening frock has the front midsection cut away in crescent moon effect. The bodice closes in front and is edged with gold sequins. Sequins edge the skirt belt and continue down the front and round the hem.

COME ALONG for a preview of autumn hats. An important model, typical of the trend, is a black felt beret by Agnes. It has a cushion disc and is trimmed with a flat bow of cherry red velvet against the hair. A draped snood is of the velvet.

YOU WILL SEE that the extra jacket will continue to register both for day and evening wear. One shop reports orders for a tailored jacket of turquoise blue bengaline with jet embroidery. Also shown in black with midnight blue sequins.

Children in the War

This war has created millions of refugees and filled our newspapers with stories of their sufferings. Daily, appeals are made for funds to take care of these innocent victims of the war many of whom are children. I think every one should endeavor to help them and make sacrifices, if necessary to give them succor.

But there is one aspect of these appeals that causes me some concern. What of our own charities here at home? I remember that during the last war, when persons gave so generously to war charities, they neglected charities at home which they ordinarily supported. The peace-time charities for crippled children, for orphans, for the blind; the milk funds and the fresh air funds—all these have just as great a need in wartime as in peace. Yet, last war, their work was hampered by construction of their finances.

The children in the slums at home still need milk to make them healthy and summer vacations at camp. Special care for cripples and defectives and homes for orphans must go on. War needs are extra, requiring extra funds.

Besides the financial assistance that is lost to home charities in wartime, welfare workers are lost as well. I remember that in the first world war, many welfare workers got so busy with war activities that they ceased their regular welfare work altogether. In fact, some private welfare agencies had to give up their activities entirely because of the losses in finances and workers. The children and mothers who in ordinary times depended on them were left friendless.

In every country which took part in the last great war, these effects were certainly felt. The results were the same in every one of them—more children added to the unfit.

The same results seem likely to come from this war. Governments are straining every nerve and spending every penny they can get to build armaments. There will be the tendency consequently to reduce grants to other departments of government. The inevitable result of this will be that more and more welfare work will be left to private agencies. But these agencies will in the meantime be losing their financial support and their workers. Those who do continue to support them will have less to give because of taxes, increased to pay for armaments. A vicious circle is created.

Now, don't think I'm trying to get you to give less to war charities. I'm not. But, don't let those charities blind you to the need of the underprivileged at home. Our children are our first line of defence for tomorrow.

HITLER'S ENVOY CLOSELY WATCHED SINCE ARRIVAL

Dr. Gerhardt A. Westrick Under Surveillance by New York Herald Tribune

RIBBENTROP'S TOOL

New York, Aug. 2—(CP) — The New York Herald Tribune which apparently has spent considerable time and effort delving into the activities of Dr. Gerhardt Alois Westrick since his arrival here four months ago, published Thursday a "partial" record of his movements.

The newspaper says that although Dr. Westrick, here officially as Hitler's special emissary to consult with American business men, has been registered at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel since June 17, it has established he and his family have been staying "with every effort at secrecy" on the Scarsdale estate of Harold A. Callan.

The Herald Tribune apparently stationed reporters to watch the house continuously for the numbers of automobiles stopping at the estate, their licenses and owners were listed in the article. It said Westrick's visitors "appear to have been of unusually diverse character, running from factory workers and mechanics to nationally known industrialists and oil firm executives."

A Personal Agent

The paper said further that Westrick really is in the United States as the personal agent of Ribbentrop, German Foreign Minister, to spread sentiment in favor of Germany. To his visitors Westrick "has painted glowing pictures of the great business that a friendly United States will get from Germany as soon as Great Britain is cleaned up."

The paper added: "Just what is the nature of his business with his more modestly placed visitors can only be conjectured."

One of the visitors, described as Capt. Torkild Rieber, chairman of the board of the Texas Company, a large oil firm. Of Rierber the paper said:

"It has been widely published that Capt. Rieber persuaded the Nazi Government to turn over to him three oil tankers in payment for some oil which he had sold them before the outbreak of the war and that with the assistance of the German authorities he was able to get the tankers out through the British blockade."

Russia 'is Not Taking Part In War,' Declares Molotoff

Says Germany Has Failed as Yet to Achieve Objective of Termination of the War on What She Considers Desirable Terms

FOREIGN RELATIONS

Moscow Aug. 2 (AP) — Foreign Commissar Vyacheslaff Molotoff told the Supreme Soviet today that Russia "is not taking part in the war" and predicted its early intensification with "England assisted by the United States," on the one hand fighting and Italy on the other.

He said Germany has failed as yet to achieve her principal objective—"termination of the war on terms she considers desirable."

He accused Britain of attempting to "scare us" with the prospect of a clash with Germany, but added, that the appointment of the Leftist leader, Sir Stafford Cripps, as British Ambassador to Moscow "reflects England's desire to improve understanding."

Calls 'U.S. Misers'

Of relations with the United States, Molotoff said: "It can be said that the United States do not like our successes, especially in the Baltics, but we are not interested. We can get along without the help of these misers.

"We support the protest of the governments of the Baltics at freezing their gold in the United States. We warn the United States and England they will be held responsible."

He declared relations with Germany "wholly remain as laid down in the Soviet-German agreement"—the non-aggression pact which was signed last August.

"This agreement" he said, "strictly observed by our government, removed the possibility of friction in Soviet-German relations when Soviet measures were carried out along our western frontier and at the same time it has assured Germany a calm feeling of security in the east."

Relations With China

Molotoff said relations with the free Chinese republic "are the best," and "there are certain that Japan now wants to improve relations. Such improvement is possible, but much is not clear in the new (Japanese) cabinet's foreign policy."

Asserting that future relations with Finland "depend on Finland," Molotoff disclosed that the Finns had agreed to demilitarization of the Aaland Islands, which control the entrance to the Gulf of Bothnia and the approach to Sweden's eastern coast.

"If certain circles there (in Finland) will not stop their anti-Soviet tendencies our relations will suffer," Molotoff warned.

Other Relations

Molotoff said that trade agreements were expected to be signed with Sweden, but that no real change in the relations with Turkey had taken place. Relations with Italy, he added, "are full of possibilities."

He attributed the collapse of France to the fact that "leading circles treated too lightly the role and weight of the Soviet Union in European affairs' and expressed the opinion that the task of rehabilitation in France could not be accomplished by "old methods."

The meeting was called to hear Molotoff's report on foreign affairs of the last four months.

...and then see if you can truthfully say:

"There's no difference between gasolines"

To all honest doubters, we say only this:— Fill your tank with SKY CHIEF gasoline and make these two tests:

First, while the engine is idling, throttle it way down. You'll notice immediately — engine throb has quieted . . . vibration is hard to detect . . . there's a new smoothness in your engine.

Next, take your car out on the open road. Tackle the steepest hill you can find. There you'll discover SKY CHIEF'S amazing anti-knock qualities. For the first time in your life, you seem to be coasting uphill! The action of SKY CHIEF in your motor is hard to describe . . . it is like the smooth, even flow of flying.

After you have made these two tests, with this great luxury gasoline, ask yourself if it isn't true that there is a difference between gasolines — and plenty!

SKY CHIEF is made expressly by the McColl-Frontenac Oil Company, Limited, for motorists who want the best . . . yet costs no more than other premium gasolines. It is sold with other McColl-Frontenac products at the familiar Red Indian sign.

FACTS (FOR THE TECHNICALLY MINDED)

ANTI-KNOCK: Its extremely high anti-knock quality permits a higher peak of efficiency and power without knock or ping.

Schoolboy Rowe Assists Own Cause in 11-2 Win With Triple and Double

CLEVELAND NIPPED

Jimmie Foxx's Homer Put Red Sox in Front to Beat Indians 5-2

(By Judson Bailey Associated Press Sports Writer).

Schoolboy Rowe, who kept Detroit Tigers on top of the American League during two glorious pennant years when he had one of the best arms in baseball, is still holding them up there.

His record of nine victories and two defeats is ample testimony that the Schoolboy is doing all right. The only pitcher in the American League with a better mark is teammate Bucky Newsom, who has won 13 and lost two.

Rowe pitched seven-hit ball against New York Yankees yesterday and personally batted in three runs with a triple and a double as the Tigers clawed the world champions 11-2.

This was enough to give the Tigers exclusive possession, again, of first place in the junior circuit and also dropped the Yankees out of the first division by a fraction of a percentage point.

Boston Red Sox took care of clipping Cleveland out of the leadership claim with a 5-2 victory and Chicago White Sox nosed out Philadelphia Athletics 5-4 in 11 innings to get its first taste of the rarified upper division this year.

Foxx Hits 22nd. Homer

Chiefly because Sam Chapman hit a two-run homer in the fifth the A's kept in front of Chicago right up until the ninth inning but the White Sox pestered Nelson Potter for one run here and another run there until he became so annoyed in the 11th inning that he walked three men forcing in the winning counter without the benefit of either a hit or an error.

The National League action was limited to one doubleheader in which Brooklyn Dodgers cleaned up on Pittsburgh Pirates 8-3 and 8-7. The first game was all Whitlow Wyatt's as he coasted along on seven-hit flinging.

The second was notable for its seven errors that kept the score see-sawing until Harry Lavagetto banged the deciding run around with a double in the seventh inning.

SIXTEEN GOLFERS IN MATCH PLAY

Interest Centres in Match Between Stan Horne and Gordie Brydson

Toronto, Aug. 2 (CP)—Sixteen outstanding golf pros tee off today in first-round match play for the Millar trophy over the Islington course. Second-round matches are carded for this afternoon.

Interest centred in the match between Stan Horne blond Montrealer who led the qualifying round with a par-smashing 139 and Gordie Brydson of Toronto Mississauga, who carded a 146. Horne was Canadian professional champion in 1936-37-38.

Surprise of yesterday's round was Lex Robson's poor showing. The defending champion and six-time winner of the tournament started badly with a 77 in the morning, and his three-under-par 70 in the afternoon round wasn't good enough to qualify.

Trailing Horne yesterday with scores of 141 were Bob Burns of Weston and Bob Gray of Scarboro. Gray meets Arthur Hulbert Thornhill, who came in with 147 yesterday, while Burns will hook up with Lou Cumming of Toronto. Cumming scored a 144, to tie for sixth place behind Willie Lamb and Bill Kerr.

UPTOWN JUNIORS LOSE THIRD TIME TO POINT ANNE

Eliminated from City Softball Race in Three Straight Contests

ONE BIG INNING

Rogers Mallory Does Nice Relief Hurling Job but Effort Too Late

The Point Anne "cementmen" made it three straight over the Uptown Juniors in the City Softball League semi-finals for the Bank of Montreal Trophy when the "cementmen" downed the local kids 11 to 8 at Ox Point last evening, eliminating the Uptowns in defeat. Playing-manager Bubby Gaulin's Ox Pointers now await the winner of the Shell-Corby series for the City League finals.

Except for the fifth inning, when the Cementmen chased eight runs across the plate, as the homesters shelled Steve Hook from the hilltop, the Juniors more than held their own with the Point Anne squad, but the one big frame spelled defeat and elimination for the kids and advancement for the winners. Hook was replaced by Rogers Mallory in the fifth, the Cementmen getting but three hits and two runs from that point in.

The Juniors touched "Ding" Luffman for ten safeties and finished strongly to score the majority of their runs in the latter stages in a strong rally, but the Cementmen's lead proved too great an obstacle to overcome. Ethier hit a home run, while Mallory had a three base hit with Goyer getting two singles for the Uptowns.

Wildness proved Hook's downfall as he walked nine. Bennett and Whalen being the only Point Anne batters to get more than one hit from the homesters, as the juniors outhit the "cementmen" ten to nine.

The line-ups:

Uptown Juniors: Whiting ss; Mallory lf, p; Goyer cf; Mansfield 2b; Ethier 3b; Callaghan 1b; Cook rf; Bradden c; Hook, p and Powers lf.

Score by innings:		R.	H.	E.

Yesterday's Stars

(By The Associated Press)

Whitlow Wyatt and Hugh Casey, Dodgers: Former beat Pirates with seven-hit hurling in first game and latter came through with four hitless innings of relief pitching to win second game.

Schoolboy Rowe Tigers: Held Yankees to seven hits and himself batted in three runs with triple and double.

Jimmie Foxx, Red Sox: His two-run homer in sixth inning paced Boston to victory over Indians.

Joe Kuhel White Sox: Got two hits and batted in two runs to lead Chicago to 11-inning triumph over Athletics.

SYRACUSE CHIEFS CLOSING IN ON MONTREAL TEAM

Boost Selves from Cellar to Within 3½ Games of Fifth-Place Royals

TORONTO SPLITS

Orioles Come from Behind to Win First One but Beaten in Second by Leafs

(By The Associated Press)

The experts who predicted great things for Syracuse Chiefs last spring before the International League campaign got under way are able to look the rest of the boys in the face again.

For the Chiefs have boosted themselves from the league cellar to within 3 1-2 games of fifth-place Montreal. They are in position to cause plenty of trouble for Montreal, Jersey City and third-place Baltimore.

Last night the Chiefs crept closer to fifth place with a 4-2 victory over Royals and at the same time gained ground on Baltimore and Jersey City, when Orioles split a doubleheader with Toronto and the Little Giants lost to Rochester 10-5.

Oedis Swigart, a former Royal, kept 10 hits well scattered in chalking up his sixth win. Goody Rosen and Lindsay Deal, two more ex-Montrealers, paced the nine-hit attack with three blows each.

Baltimore came from behind with four runs in the seventh inning of the first game at Toronto to beat Leafs, 6-4, but were powerless against the four-hit pitching of Vallie Eaves in the nightcap and Toronto won 4-0.

A pinch homer by Art Graham with one aboard in the last inning of the abbreviated opener tied the count at 4-4 and two Toronto errors, a sacrifice, Gene Corbett's single and an infield out gave the Birds their winning margin.

Earl Cook turned in a one-hit job in the seven inning first game to down Newark 2-1 but the Bruins came back with a 6-1 victory behind the expert hurling of George Barley to take the after-piece. Cook was deprived of a shutout in the opener, when Ollie Carnegie lost two fly balls in the sun.

YEARLING SALES ON AT SARATOGA

Purchase of Thoroughbred Racehorses Biggest Gamble in Sports

Saratoga Springs, N.Y., Aug. 2—(AP)—America's leading yearling thoroughbred horse market opens tonight and five dollars still will get you five more if you can pick any horse that will win one race next year.

Mostly, though, you lose. The Colonel knows the purchase of thoroughbred racehorses is the biggest gamble in sports.

In the past, cheap Saratoga yearlings like Cavalcade at $1,200 and Man O'War at $5,000 have earned fame and fortune on the turf. Others, like Broadway Limited at $65,000, couldn't win a race.

Sports Roundup

(By Bill White, Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Aug. 2—(AP)—Tennis tidbits: Alice Marble stayed out of the East Hampton tennis tournament this week to work on her lecture "The Will to Win" with which she'll thrill the hinterlands this winter. . . . For two sets old Sidney Wood can still chase most of the current crop off the courts. . . Minneapolis' 17-year-old cutie, Muriel Magnuson, is being ballyhooed in the east as la Marble's successor—if Alice ever quits winning. . . .

One minute interview:

Ty Cobb: "Bobby Feller's first rate, but he's no Walter Johnson. Why, Johnson won all those games in spite of the fact that we all knew just what he was going to throw us before he threw it."

Here 'n there: Bill Harnick, former Canisius College great, passed up the Pony League all-star game to take the Buffalo (N.Y.) police examination. . . . The Topeka Owls drew 16,711 in their last home stand, which is slightly short of terrific, since the sport was dead there from 1934-39. . . . Only two pitchers, Walter Johnson and Lefty Grove have ever won the American League's most valuable player award. . . . Wanta bet the third won't be Bobby Feller this fall? . . . Why do the umps in the so-hot Texas League have to wear coats?

Centenary Wins Township Title For Fifth Time

Centenary, for many years considered the dean of softball teams in Sidney Township, were again hailed as champions for that district on Tuesday evening when they defeated the Marsh Hill nine for the second straight time in a best two out of three series as they eked out a close 5-2 victory to win the Sidney Council trophy, emblematic of softball supremacy in the Sidney Junior Farmers' Softball League. This marks the fifth consecutive season in which the trophy has been held by the Centenary nine.

Shortt hurled for the winners in the final game of the season, keeping the Marsh Hill batters well in check to chalk up a well-deserved win, with Thrasher behind the bat turning in his usual fine game. Wright started on the mound for the losers but was relieved by Campbell during the later innings. Campbell was greeted by an avalanche of base hits from the winners' bats and after three runs had crossed the plate, Wright came back in to finish the pastime.

185 Golfers Compete In Milwaukee Open

Milwaukee, Aug. 2—(AP)—A field of 185 golfers, including most of the nation's crack amateur and professional shotmakers, teed off in the $5,000 Milwaukee open tournament for a first round assault today on par, already tottering under the impact of a score of beatings administered in the preliminary best-ball event.

Ralph (Bud) Williamson, pro of Fort Wayne, Ind., indicated the drubbing par may take in the medal play when he carded a 64, seven under regulation figures for the North Hills course, as a member of yesterday's winning pro-amateur best ball team.

Partnered with Williamson on the winning dark-horse team, Harvey Reidemann, 21, of Watertown, Wis., provided one of the day's surprises by turning in an individual count of 67 to pace a strong amateur contingent.

CALLING 'EM Between the Lines

with Ken J. Colling

Although there's a girls' softball play-off at the East Belleville playgrounds this evening, between the Vikings and K-Nines, and the Shell "Oilers" and Corbys A.C. clash Saturday night in a fifth O.A.S.A. play-off at Coleman Flats, there isn't the semblance of sporting activities in Belleville on Monday, Civic Holiday. There have been several proposals of benefit softball games for war charity purposes but with the exception of the Shell-Flyers' game the majority of these suggestions have fallen through. With nothing on the local sports calendar for Civic Holiday, we see no reason why the local softball fraternity should not avail itself of the opportunity to stage a game, with all receipts to go towards the purchase of sports equipment for the 3-47th Battery, in which there are at least seven local softball players already enlisted. It would be one way in which the local softball leagues could show their appreciation to the boys who have provided the game for the public in Belleville for so many years.

Over in Trenton the other week the R.C.A.F. mens' softball team engaged the Simpson girls in a war charity benefit and upwards to 1,000 fans took in the game. It is too late to engage a Toronto girls' softball team to come to Belleville for such a game on Civic Holiday, but an all-star team could be selected from the local Girls' Mercantile Softball League to play a team selected from the Belleville Men's loop. In order to make the game more interesting the batteries could be reversed, that is to say a girls' battery would work with the boys' team and face the feminine batters, while a battery from the mens' league would team with the girls. This was the practice employed during the Simpson-Flyer game and a good exhibition was enjoyed. For instance John Bawden, Eddie Schrieder, Connie Harris, Steve Hook and Mike Powers could share the pitching for the girls team, while Alf Rowbotham and Alex Simpson might share the catching duties so as to not militate the senior men's play-off chances

Just who would select the girls' all-star team would of course remain in the league's hands, but for the practical fun of making such a selection, we will submit our team now. It would include Betsy Adams, pitcher, Jean McKenna, catcher, Sylvia Reddick 1st base, Norma Maker 2nd base; Helen Belnap, 3rd base; Helen Garrow, short stop, Marg Orr, Mollie Hunter and Doreen Woodcock in the outfield, with alternates of M. Zebedee, catcher, Edith Cook, 1st base, Betty Marsh 2nd base, Miss Bennett 3rd base, Helen Richardson short stop, with Chambers, Moore and Greatrix as spare outfielders and Rita Rable as second pitcher and Mary Lickfold as a reserve hurler. There are other good girls who could be named such as Helen Thompson, Glad Emerson, "Pee Wee" Colden, Mary Wright, Wilma Clark and Miss Hall. The game could be played at Coleman Flats in the cool of the evening and no doubt a goodly sum realized for the boys of the 3-47th Battery sports equipment fund.

Secretary Harry Knott just informed us that the Shell "Oilers" are playing a benefit game for the Red Cross in Kingston on Monday, but no doubt a team of men could be selected from Corbys, the Uptowns and Point Anne, which would give them Connie Harris, 'Ding' Luffman, Steve Hook and Mike Powers to do the hurling, with Alex Simpson, Murney Green and Bradden catching. Bubby Gaulin of the Cementmen, says to count his gang in one hundred per cent on such a suggestion. Again we stress the ideal set-up for such a game, as well as the novelty of girls versus boys playing softball. Monday is a holiday and no sports scheduled for the local calendar, which should prove a perfect set-up for the picture. In passing we might say the Flyers only beat the Simpson girls 12 to 9 under the reversed battery idea.

Do you remember when— Larry O'Connor of Toronto's West End Y.M.C.A. track club flashed over the 110-yard hurdles to a new Canadian record at the Ontario track and field championship meet a year ago tonight. He broke the tape at 14.8, cutting two-fifths of a second from the mark held by Earl Thompson.

Bubby Gaulin's "Cementmen" made it three straight over Red Townsend's Uptown Juniors in the City Softball semi-finals and advanced into the league championship by beating the local kids 11 to 8 last night. However, the Ox Pointers can thank their lucky stars, that Roger Mallory did not start for the teen-aged nine, as Mallory abruptly halted the Cementmen after Hook was shelled from the hilltop in the fifth, when the Gaulin-led nine salted the game away with an eight-run splurge. The Cementmen will meet the winner of the Shell-Corby series in the league finals for the Bank of Commerce Trophy, which reminds us that the "Oilers" and Corbys meet in their fifth game of the local O.A.S.A. series at the Flats on Saturday evening after Corbys have won their last two starts to knot the series at two games each.

SPORTSPICE — Harold Switzer, Napanee softball pitcher, was granted a transfer to Kingston over the week-end, as was pitcher Frank Holmes, from Toronto to Peterboro'. . . . The Tigers thumped the Yankees right down into the second division with an 11 to 2 shellacking yesterday. . . . Schoolboy Rowe pitched a seven-hitter for the Tigers to prove his sojourn in the minors wasn't altogether in vain. . . . All of which reminds us that Dizzy Dean is reported to be making splendid progress in his Texas League experiment. . . . The Ottawa Roughriders decided to operate as usual in the Senior Interprovincial Football Union this fall, which is a move in the proper direction. . . . . Just heard the proposed benefit game for the 3/47th Battery sports equipment fund between an all-star girls' team and a boys' team at the Flats Civic Holiday is all but a certainty for Monday evening. . . . and from here it's to the Viking K-Nine game we go.

"Beau Geste"

An incomparably fine cast, headed by a starring trio consisting of Gary Cooper, Ray Milland and Robert Preston, combined with an heoric, rousing, action-filled story of three gallant brothers who find adventure in the French Foreign Legion, mark Paramount's brilliant new version of "Beau Geste" as one of the most thrilling adventure dramas to hit the screen in years. The picture opens next at the Belle theatre.

The gallant brothers "Geste" are played with gusto by Cooper, Milland and Preston. Cooper brings the "strong-silent-man" technique for which he is famous to bear on the role of "Beau," oldest of the trio. Milland and Preston are superbly cast as his younger brothers, "John" and "Dugby." The supporting cast—chosen with rare judgment by Producer-Director William A. Wellman—is headed by Brian Donlevy, who scores with a consummate portrait of the savage, half-mad sergeant, "Markoff;" Susan Hayward, hitting just the proper note of romance in her scenes with Milland, J. Carrol Naish, as "Rasinoff" Donald O'Connor as young "Beau" are all superb.

"Beau Geste"—which is based on the novel by P.C. Wren—tells how the Geste brothers join the French Foreign Legion in order that no single one of them shall be accused of the theft of a valuable sapphire, the "Blue Water"—from their guardian. Two of the brothers, Beau and John, are chosen for duty at Fort Zinderneuf."

When Markoff attains command at Zinderneuf, drives the men to mutiny with his savage treatment Beau and John remain loyal to their soldier's oath. Markoff orders them to shoot the leaders of the mutiny. They refuse. Markoff is about to shoot them down when a wild desert tribe, the "Touaregs," attack the fort. Markoff a madman in action, props slain legionnaires in the fort's embrasures so that the Touaregs will think the fort well-manned. When Beau overcomes him, John ramming a bayonet through his chest. Before he dies, Beau gives John two letters—one to place in Markoff's hand, one to convey to their guardian.

A funny comicolor cartoon and the popular Belle newsreel will be exhibited on the same program. On the week-end matinee a new and interesting chapter of "The Oregon Trail" will be exhibited.

Sunday Midnight Show

Joan Crawford the star who was the surprise hit of "The Women" joins forces again with the director, producer and scenarist of that production George Cukor, Hunt Somberg and Anita Loos, in "Susan and God," picturization of the celebrated Rachel Crothers' fast, funny and romantic comedy which co-stars Fredric March comes to the Belle theatre Sunday midnight for one performance only.

As Susan Trexel, rattlebrained social butterfly who adopts a new social movement as a fad, Miss Crawford has her most versatile role to date, with March, following his stage success in "The American Way," making an auspicious return to films as Barrie, her inebriate husband. Cast in support is an impressive group of players headed by Ruth Hussey as Charlotte, the family friend in love with Barrie. Rita Hayworth is seen as the young actress, Leonora, married to the older Hutchins Stubbs, portrayed by Nigel Bruce, but in love with the young actor Clyde Rochester, played by John Carroll.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Mutiny on the Bounty"

Pointing her sturdy prow into the Pacific Ocean, H.M.S. Bounty —an exact replica of the famous mutiny ship of 150 years ago—faced her first camera barrage in a severe storm for scenes in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer sea drama, "Mutiny on the Bounty", opening with a Sunday midnite preview. This will be Belleville's last opportunity to see this great British epic.

Dashed to Harbor

Then, after a long vigil, storm signals came flashing down the Pacific Coast from Vancouver. Already a week's provisions had been stored aboard, and with the first flash of the oncoming storm, Director Frank Lloyd and his camera and sound crews were hustled out of their beds at midnight for a dash to Los Angeles harbor.

With the overcast skies growing more sullen, director and crew clambered aboard H.M.S. Bounty. Salty old sailors unfurled the canvas and the new "mutiny' ship headed for the storm.

Director Lloyd and his company remained at sea for two weeks. Shortly after interiors were taken and then the Bounty and entire company sailed into the South Seas.

"An Angel from Texas"

FUNDS URGED FOR EVACUATION

U.S. Committee for Care of European Children Calls for American Subscriptions

New York, Aug. 2—(CP)— "The time is short. The bombers will not wait."

The United States committee for the care of European children thus called to Americans today to give every possible assistance to speed the evacuation of children from beleaguered Britain. As a beginning, the committee asked the public to subscribe $5,000,000 for its work.

Plans of the committee were outlined to a luncheon gathering here yesterday of some 60 industrialists, bankers, business executives and civic leaders. They pledged a substantial portion of the $1,500,000 alloted to New York City as its share of the country-wide appeal for $5,000,000.

Revision of Neutrality Seen

Meanwhile, indications were apparent strong support is being given a bill now before Congress for revision of the neutrality act to permit use of United States ships in evacuation of the children. Pointing out that the American Seamen's Union has volunteered to man the rescue ships without pay, the New York Times in an editorial captioned "they must be saved" urged anew that American ships be used.

Congress was asked yesterday by President Roosevelt to allocate $125,000 to finance the work of cataloguing the children and setting up facilities for their care. Mr. Roosevelt also discussed the problem involved in evacuating children with Noel Coward when the actor and playwright called at the White House in Washington. Coward said he is concerned principally with 58 children in an orphanage of which he is President.

Need For Funds Explained

Explaining the need for funds, Eric H. Biddle, executive director of the committee, told the luncheon 32,000 children are expected to arrive in the United States from Britain in the next few months. The costs of maintaining children after their arrival at Canadian ports and pending departure for United States points will be borne by the committee, he said.

In a pamphlet outlining its work and a subsequent statement, the committee said the $5,000,000 asked "must be regarded as a minimum figure for the present." It emphasized all classes and creeds will be represented among the evacuees and declared:

"The bombers are over England. The time is short. The bombers will not wait."

BOY'S SUICIDE

San Antonio, Tex., Aug. 2.—(AP)—Joe Doran, 13, wanted a ball. He took 25 cents from his father to buy one. The father, bus driver, Nicholas Doran, scolded Joe for taking the money. "I don't want to live anymore", the boy sobbed to his mother. A few minutes later the mother found Joe dying of a pistol wound. Justice of the Peace O. L. Wiley said it was a case of suicide.

Nevada City, Calif., Aug. 2.—(AP)— Jack Sheedy, Downieville Miner, said today he had found a 30-ounce solid gold nugget in an old River Channel. Sheedy valued the nugget at $1,000.

WAR BRIEFS

Ottawa, Aug. 2—(CP)—Air Commodore L. S. Breadner, Chief of Air Staff, has been promoted to the rank of Air Vice-Marshal, Air Minister Power announced today. Air Commodore E. W. Stedman, member of the Air Council for Engineering and Supply, has been promoted to temporary Air Vice-Marshal. Both appointments are effective from May 29.

SWEDISH PARLIAMENT OPENS

Stockholm, Aug. 2—(AP)—King Gustaf V, in a speech from the Throne convoking special parliament session today, declared Sweden's foreign policy unchanged and said he was continuing his efforts to "hold my country aloof from war while conserving its liberty and independence." The ruler declared the nation must use its productive resources to take "care of our state of preparation, exterior as well as interior ".

TOBACCO RATES INCREASED

Amsterdam, (via Berlin), Aug. 2 (AP)—A new German order announced today increases tobacco taxes in The Netherlands, effective Sept. 5. The tax on cigars is increased by 7 1-2 per cent, on cigarettes by from five to 55 per cent, and on pipe tobacco and snuff by from 7 1-2 to 30 per cent.

INDUSTRIAL ACCIDENTS IN JULY

Toronto, Aug. 2—(CP)—Ontario Workmen's Compensation Board today reported 7,902 accidents reported to the Board in July, compared with 6,206 in June and 5,242 in July 1939. Benefits awarded totalled $571,731—$463,741 for compensation and $107,990 for medical aid.

Most Scrap Metal Purchased by Japs Untouched by New Law

Washington, Aug. 2—(AP)—Government experts disclosed today that 75 to 80 per cent of Japan's scrap metal purchases in the United States were untouched by the new export licensing system.

They pointed out, however, that all Japanese purchases of this important war material could be brought under control or embargoed at any time merely by changing regulations.

Such changes would be made, officials said, only if it was found that United States defence needs required the metal to be kept at home.

The reason that such a large share of Japanese scrap metal purchases is outside the licensing system is that the existing regulations apply only to No. 1 heavy melting steel and iron scrap. Experts estimate that this classification accounts for only 20 to 25 per cent of Japan's scrap metal purchases over a long period.

Whether this 20 or 25 per cent of Japanese orders is being banned under the new system, or merely brought under control, has not yet been disclosed. American officials did report today that some exports of No. 1 heavy melting steel and iron were being licensed, but whether these were going to Japan, they would not say.

Little Benny's Note Book

Tonight at supper our cook Nora brought in the dizzert, being tappeoca pudding me saying, Aw heck, tappeoca.

Now enough of that, ma said. You ought to thank your lucky stars you're living in a land of plenty in this world of scarcity, she said, and pop said, Well I should 2nd the motion, and aside from all other considerations it's a very selfish attitude to turn up your nose at food that other people may be looking fallward to with keen appriciation.

Well G, I didn't actually say anything against it, only jimminy, with the world full of things like lemmon merrang pie and chocklit layer cake or even bread pudding, why do people have to go and have tappeoca? I said, and pop said, Because the world is also full of things like tappeoca, and if there were no shodows to bring out the high lights life would be devoid of art and therefore not worth living to people of taste and sensibility.

But G roozlem the very name, tappeoca, I said. What's it rime with? It rimes with choke-a, and I bet that's just what it makes a lot of people think of, I said, and ma said, Now look here, young man, it also rimes with yolk-a, in other words it has the yolk of a good egg in it the way Nora makes it, as well as good nourishing milk.

And it also rimes with joke-a, wich is what this subject in rapidly ceasing to be, pop said. And moreover it rimes with croak-a, and if one more croak about it issues from your ruby lips I will appoint myself judge, jury and labor board in the matter, so you know what chance you'll have to excape with a light sentence.

Meening none, and I ate 3 helpings and almost enjoyed it.

WALL STREET

New York, Aug. 2 (AP)—Quiet buying of steels and motors today gave the stock market a slightly upward tilt.

While many leaders galled to exhibit rising tendencies, favorites showed gains of fractions to a point or more near the fourth hour. Dealings, however, were slower than in the previous sluggish session.

Stocks in front the greater part of the time included U.S. Steel, General Motors, United Aircraft, Westinghouse, Du Pont, Montgomery Ward and Chesapeake & Ohio.

Texas Corp. and American Smelting again were backward movers.

In the Canadian section issues were generally inactive. The only quoted stock, International Nickel, showed a gain of one point. In the Bond market Canada 4s were unchanged.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Aug. 2.—(CP)— Gold shares were slightly higher on Toronto exchange at noon today and other groups were unchanged to slightly lower. Kerr-Addison was helped by the announcement that the mill would be enlarged to handle 1,800 tons daily and the price formed 8 cents to 2.15. MacLeod-Cockshutt gained about 5 cents to 1.45. Sigma and San Antonio were other strong spots.

Base Metal and Western Oil stocks were dull and steady and in the Industrial section Utilities and Foods were up slightly and other groups were a bit soft. Canada Packers firmed 2 points to 82.

Finnish Police Clubbed Workers Charge of Soviet

FINNISH POLICE cm? ONE

Moscow, Aug. 2—(AP)—A dispatch by Tass, Soviet news agency, claimed today that Finnish police in Helsinki clubbed workers who were attempting to attend a meeting of the "Society of Friendship and Peace with the U.S.S.R." similar clashes occurred in other Finnish cities, the dispatch alleged.

The dispatch followed by a day the warning of Premier Vyacheslaff Molotoff that Finland must drop "anti-Soviet tendencies" if she expects to maintain good relations with Russia.

The Tass dispatch said more than 2,000 workers assembled in a Helsinki working class quarter carrying such slogans as "despotism cannot prevent us from expressing ourselves on the future" and "long live Soviet-Finnish friendship."

Police arrived on the scene, used their batons, and when the workers resisted by hurling stones several men and women were beaten, Tass related.

FARMER INJURES BACK IN FALL

Falling from the top of a loaded wagon, while engaged in drawing in hay on his farm near the Carrying Place Thursday afternoon, Mr. Wm. A. Corrigan, aged 59, sustained a severe shaking up and also back injuries as he fell a distance of some eight or nine feet. Mr. Corrigan was admitted to the Belleville General Hospital last evening where it was determined that his injuries were not serious and that he would be able to proceed to his home within a few days. Dr. G. H. Stobie attended the injured man.

Weekly Livestock Report

Toronto, Aug. 2—(CP)—Prices on killing cattle, lambs and hogs fell lower during the week on the Toronto Livestock Market. Calves sold at steady prices. About 700 head of cattle, mostly plain killers and stockers were unsold at the close. Good stockers sold steady but the plainer grades were weaker. Calves lost $1 cwt.

The hog market opened the week easier and lost ground each day, to close at $11 dressed and $8.25 alive. Most of the week's offering was sold on a dressedweight basis.

The cattle supply included 2,300 Westerns, mostly stockers. Weighty steers sold from $7 to $8.25, with one load at $8.35. Butcher steers sold mostly from $7.25 to $7.75 with only a few being good enough to sell from $8 to $8.25. Some boner steers and heifers sold down to $6. Fed calves held nearly steady, especially on the better kinds, which brought $9 to $9.50 with an occasional sale at $10. Medium fed calves sold down to $7.50. Butcher cows sold mostly from $4 to $5 with a few making $5.50 on Monday. Canners and cutters sold lower at $2.75 to $3. Good weighty bulls sold generally at $5 with odd sales of light butchers up to $5.50. Common bologna bulls sold downward to $4. The pick of the stockers brought $7 to $7.25 with one load of 800 lb. steers making $7.50. Some common light stockers sold as low as $4.50. The milker and springer trade was dull at around $70 for best tested cows.

The veal calf market held steady at $9 to $9.50 for good to choice vealers. Common vealers sold downward to $6 with grassers $5 to $5.50, mostly $5. Some native stock calves sold from $6 to $7.

The hog market opened lower at $8.75 off truck for bacons and $11.50 dressed. It lost further ground each day, closing on Wednesday at $11 dressed for the B1 grade and at $8.25 for bacons, live weight. Most of the sales were made on the dressed weight basis. Thursday's light receipts sold steady.

The lamb market opened 50c lower and lost a further 50c on Tuesday, closing steady at the week's $1 decline. Closing prices on good ewes and wethers, off-car, was $10 and $9.50 off trucks. Bucks sold at the usual $1 per cwt. discount. Culls sold mostly at $9. Sheep sold fairly steady at $5 for good light ewes, down to $2.50 for culls.

The market will be closed Monday, Toronto Civic holiday.

Kemptville, Ont., Aug. 2 (CP)—Boarded 4,272 boxes white; 4,156 sold at 13 1-4 cents. Remainder held.

Hog Quotations

Toronto, Aug. 2 (CP)—Dressedweight were down 60 cents and liveweight 50 cents at Chatham in bacon-hog markets reporting today. Other markets were unchanged.

Dressedweight; Chatham $10.25; Brantford $10.50; London $10.50 plus transportation; Stratford $10.50 plus transportation.

SENATE PASSES

"When the war comes to an end Europe will be starving, its agricultural life destroyed and requiring years to rebuild," said Resources Minister Crerar. "I am not worried about the sale of wheat which may be available in Canada at any time. Canada may then be able to render a great humanitarian service to Europe."

In the hope that the bill would receive third reading at last night's session, the House by unanimous consent sat after the adjournment hour. Debate included quotations ranging from Dorothy Parker to Shakespeare with no apparent progress being made.

Insurance Bill Passed

Meantime in the Senate the government's unemployment insurance bill was passed with minor amendments in which concurrence of the Commons now will be sought. Indications were that prorogation by Saturday night might still be possible unless the wheat debate goes too long.

The wheat legislation, consideration of unemployment bill amendments and a number of departmental estimates are all the business remaining before parliament.

But from mid-afternoon yesterday until early today the Commons' chief concern was what to do right now with the record mass of wheat on hand—now much to pay the farmer for it, when to pay for it, where to store it. Significantly there was virtually no discussion about where to sell it, Britain being the only remaining market.

The three opposition groups concentrated on the government policy in unusual unanimity of attitude. They argued, pleaded and threatened in an attempt to make the government loosen up on its basic guaranteed price of 70 cents a bushel and to make the government state definitely what advances and storage allowances it would pay for grain held on the farm.

The wheat processing tax of 15 cents a bushel was generally denounced from opposition ranks. There should be no such tax at all or it should be heavy enough to increase the price to the producer, it was argued.

Debate Runs Gamut

The debate ran the gamut from early development of the west to modern marketing methods, spiced by a lengthy restaging of the 1935 election battle over wheat board policies.

Trade Minister MacKinnon started the day off with the statement the government was trying to work out means for paying the farmers advances on crops stored on the farms. Practically every speaker who followed, from Conservative Leader Hanson on, insisted some definite plan should be announced at once.

Mr. Hanson, pleading he was no authority on the subject, covered all the angles in a two-hour address which drew as hearty applause from the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation and New Democracy groups as from his own followers.

He blamed the failure to maintain exports in 1938 and 1939, not the war, for the present "wheat debacle." He criticised the 70-cent guarantee price as "not overly generous" and the processing tax as a "discarded idea from the new deal." That levy would not benefit the farmer but only tax the consumer.

Crerar Makes Admission

Mr. Crerar, challenged on the quantity of sales to Britain last autumn after his trip overseas, said Britain had difficulty finding exchange and shipping. He advised western farmers that by applying common sense and sound co-operative methods, they could do any business they wished far better than the government could do it for them.

Mr. Crerar admitted that the 70 cent basic price meant a profit only for the large, mechanized farms. Others claimed continuation of the present price policy, which they insisted was below cost, would result in wholesale bankruptcies, the passing of the small farm and some de-population of the prairies.

On the question of closing the Winnipeg Grain Exchange, T. C. Douglas (C.C.F. Weyburn), contended the government had to "choose between looking after the interests of 200 or 300 brokers and looking after the interests of 300,000 western Canada farmers." He didn't see how members could go home without full knowledge of the government's intentions.

Instead of a 15-cent processing tax, he urged a 50-cent tax. Bread would rise one cent a loaf with the present level and need not rise more than that if the tax went to 50 cents.

Defend Own Interests

Mrs. Dorise Nielsen (Unity North Battleford) submitted that all the talk was useless, since the government had not altered its policy once because of suggestions made in the debate this session. The only thing left to do was for the people of Western Canada to organize to defend their own interests and place their demands before the government.

That was no more than industry did. Industry had demanded that the five-cent limit on war profits be removed. The farmers were only demanding a livelihood. Their pioneer spirit, she was certain, would "lead them to carve a little justice out of the government."

Mr. Gardiner retorted that "those of us who were born and raised in this country do not appreciate it when those who have come here and taken up their homes here and have had the advantages which this country provides today, come and tell us that the blame is all ours."

Deal With Situation at Present

Conditions in Canada were what they were at present not because of anything which had happened here but because of the very conditions in Europe which drove people to this continent, he said.

He made clear that the bill before the House was merely an attempt to deal with the situation at the present moment. There could be no finality to the act because no one could foretell the circumstances which a month would bring.

George T. Fulford (Cons. Leeds) suggested some of the surplus wheat be processed into alcohol for motor fuel. It was his first speech in the House.

Two gallons of gasoline could be made from a bushel of wheat and Mr. Fulford foresaw the possibility of using 100,000,000 bushels of Canadian wheat this way. It would mean increasing the cost of gas about 2 1-2 cents a gallon on the basis of 70 cent wheat but he believed that would be more economical than subsidizing wheat marketing.

J. G. Diefenbaker, (Cons. Lake Centre), said as a new member he was pleased to find agricultural problems generally regarded by members from a national and not a sectional viewpoint.

Agriculture Minister Gardiner had promised after 1935 to find new markets for Canada's wheat. Actually exports for the five years of 1930-35 averaged 218,000,000 bushels a year while the average for the next four years was 175,000,000 bushels a year.

Then in 1939-40 exports amounted to 190,000,000 bushels.

Protests Storage

Mr. Diefenbaker protested against the storage and handling charges levied by the storage corporations. When the farmer was getting a good price for his wheat there might have been reason for such charges but they were unjustifiable today. In 1935 charges other than storage were 2 3-4 cents, to which was added one cent by the elevator company for finding a buyer.

Today there was only one buyer, the British government but a "service charge" of 4 1-2 cents was levied.

He asked why this was permitted. The government should take over the elevator and storage concerns for as long as the government was handling the crop.

B. McNevin, (Lib. Victoria, Ont.) said the one bright spot in the wheat situation was that "Canada stands at the back door of Great Britain with an unlimited supply of this precious cereal." It was quite possible it would all be needed.

While he had every sympathy for the wheat growers Mr. McNevin said it should be remembered that Ontario, in an average year, produces as much farm wealth as the three prairie provinces combined. He believed that after a farmer has delivered 5,000 bushels of wheat to the Board at an initial payment of 70 cents a bushel any deliveries he makes over that quantity should be at a graded rate of initial payment. Any farmer who could deliver more than 5,000 bushels of wheat should be prepared to take some of the marketing risk.

BRITONS WONDER

British spokesmen promptly and firmly rejected the appeal. Two weeks of daily air raids—but nothing more—have passed.

At the time Hitler's speech was made the British press and radio both carried it fully. Several newspapers carried the text. The radio carried the official English translation from Berlin.

Despite this, the Nazi radio propagandist "Lord Haw-Haw" stated in his broadcast to the British on the day of the speech that it had been "denied publication" in Britain.

The British Broadcasting Corporation in announcing the leaflet raids today commented "it is hard to understand" the German claim the speech was not published in this country.

The leaflest measured 12 by 8 inches and bore the caption "A Last Appeal to Reason by Adolf Hitler." They suggested pointedly that the British public might not have had an opportunity to read Hitler's words.

Leaflets Soon Collected

British air raid wardens and policemen hustled out and collected the pamphlets even as they fluttered to the grounds, using flashlights and torches.

Morning newspapers made over their late editions to tell about the leaflet raids.

The press had noted a switch in the German radio propaganda speakers, instead of threatening invasion, jeering at the British home guards and referring to the fate of shattered Warsaw and Rotterdam, have been emphasizing the German "blockade" and claiming the German air force can inflict great damage on Britain's sea-borne commerce.

Bombing raids continued during the night. German fliers dropped high explosives and incendiary bombs in northeast England and northeast Scotland and later in Wales, eastern Scotland and eastern England.

Damage Slight

"Damage was slight and casualties few," the government announced.

No matter how Hitler wants to fight the war, the British said, they felt ready.

Industry is geared for export production as well as for making armaments, the country has set out to capture Germany's pre-war toy market by the mass production of toy tanks, airplanes and barrage balloons to help get dollars to pay for the real article. Children throughout the neutral part of the world will get next Christmas blonde, blue-eyed English dolls dressed in the uniforms of the auxiliary services.

The Board of Trade established "British Overseas Cottons, Limited," to help promote export trade in cotton products.

May Ask Women to Wear Tweeds

The export council hoped to help pay the bill for American planes by persuading American women to wear tweeds made in Britain.

The Ministry of Supply took steps to reduce the risk of air raid damage from interfering with industrial output. Reserve factories are being prepared to which a plant can be quickly transferred from a damaged works.

In preparing for any attempted German blitzkrieg and invasion and in speculating where the Nazis might attempt to land the British have not overlooked the book by the German Professor Edwald Banse entitled "Germany prepares for war."

Banse set out a strategy in detail. He advocated an attempt at landing in East Anglia—Norfolk, Suffolk and Essex, jutting eastward toward the continent—from the continental channel ports which the Germans now control.

Banse Plan Outlined

The Banse plan calls for mounting artillery on the French coast to support the invasion, to be carried out by submarines and motorboats. At the same time bombers would attack airdromes, armaments factories and industrial centres.

"Six weeks ago this Banse plan might have succeeded quite easily. We were totally unprepared for the collapse of France. Hitler may flatter himself that it will succeed yet, but even if he tries it we have deprived him of one vital factor — surprise."

Reports that the Germans were massing a large number of big guns at the channel ports were described by the press as Nazi propaganda intended to impress the United States. It is contended here that artillery action across the channel to cover an invasion attempt would be impractical.

CANADIAN TROOPS

Chalked Comments on Cars

The chalked comments on the railway cars themselves indicated the men's spirits. They ran all the way from "On to Berlin" and "Heil Hitler—Hell", to "There'll Always be an England" and even verses from "O! Canada".

A Southern Ontario Battalion had its pipe band, a band which has played in about every state of the Union and most Canadian Provinces, attended one World's Fair and was to have gone to the New York fair this summer.

More than a week elapsed after the arrival of the first train until tugs pulled the first liner away from its berth. During that time the men were taken on route marches around the city and turned out for squad drill in the sheds during the day. At night, their sing songs rolled out over the southern end of the city.

When their hour of departure came they made it probably more tumultuous than any of the other sailings. They cheered the big battleship that pulled away from the dock to lead the convoy.

The men were singing when the ships were far down the harbor. Some had climbed up into the rigging and the crow's nest. One group even ringed the top of a funnel although no one knew how they got there.

Prices Continue Advance On Produce Markets

Toronto, Aug. 2—Butter and top-grade eggs extended their Wednesday price increases on the Toronto open produce market yesterday. Cheese remained firm in quiet trading.

Receipts of butter were light and moved steadily at 23c for first-grade Ontario creamery solids. There was no pressure on brokers to sell, but buyers appeared to be taking only what they needed for the present and not stocking up for future requirements. Western butter was sold at 23c, with holders asking 24c.

The egg market developed a firmer tone during the morning as demand for top-grades increased. Lower grades, however, were not moving as freely. Receipts were moderately light. In the afternoon top grades all gained 1c, and it was possible to obtain a 1-2c premium on Government-inspected shipments of A-large and A-medium eggs.

Montreal Produce

Butter: First grade creamery prints, jobbing price, 24 1-2c, first grade solids, jobbing price, 24c, Quebec No. 1 pasteurized, current receipt price, 25 5-16c, Quebec. No. 2, 22 5-16c, Quebec No. 1, pasteurized, wholesale jobbing price, 23 5-8 to 3-4, Quebec No. 2, 22 3-3. Receipts—nil.

Eggs: Graded shipments in used free cases, selling price, A-large, 24c; A-medium 22 1-2c; B. 19 1-2c; C. 14 1-2c to 15c. Receipts: 420 cases.

Nazi Wireless Station Bombed, Enemy Supply Ship Attacked

Admiralty Announces German Ship Listing Badly and Being Abandoned by Crew Off Norwegian Coast

London, Aug. 2—(CP)—The admiralty reported today a wireless station had been successfully bombed and an enemy supply ship of about 4,000 tons attacked yesterday in operations over the Norwegian coast.

The ship was listing badly and was being abandoned by its crew as fleet air arm fliers left the scene.

The admiralty's statement:

"During operations over the Norwegian coast yesterday Skua aircraft (dive bombers) of the fleet air arm successfully bombed a wireless station and attacked an enemy supply ship of about 4,000 tons.

"When last seen this ship was listing heavily and was being abandoned by her crew.

"Our aircraft returned safely."

French Military Court Condemns De Gaulle to Death in Absentia

General de Gaulle is Now in England Organizing French Continuance of War Against Germany

TREASON CHARGED

Vichy, France, Aug. 2 (AP) — French Minister of Justice Raphael Alibert announced today the New Snupreme Court Justice will meet at Riom in Puy-De-Dome Prefecture Aug. 8 to begin the trials of men charged with crimes against the French nation.

It was announced that the new court, headed by President Chaours, will consist of the following:

Vice-President Lagarde, who now is counsellor of the court of cassation (Supreme Court); Admiral Herr, Louis-Jacques Tanon, also counsellor of court of cassation at present; General Watteau, Georges Ripert and Jean Benoist.

Clermont-Ferrand, France, Aug. 2 (AP)—Gen. Charles De Gaulle, the French officer who heads a provisional French committee in London to carry on the fight against Germany, was condemned to death today by a military court which tried him in absentia.

Charges of treason, attacks on the security of the state and desertion to a foreign country in time of war were laid before the military court of the 13th region, presided over by Gen. Frere.

Gen. De Gaulle is in London. He sprang into prominence when Premier Paul Reynaud dismissed Gen. Gamelin and reorganized the high command.

BUDAPEST WARNS FOREIGN WRITERS

News Must Not be Reported Which is Against Germany or Italy or in Opposition to Axis Policies

Budapest, Aug. 2—(AP) — The Foreign Office Press Bureau warned foreign newspaper correspondents today against reporting news "which is either against Germany or Italy or which is in opposition with known political principles and policies of the axis."

Diplomatic sources interpreted the prohibition as a frank move to fit Hungarian censorship into accord with the censorships of the Rome-Berlin partners.

The Foreign Office statement, read by telephone to the correspondents, warned them "to avoid every such report which tries to blast differences between the axis and Russia or which seeks to show that the axis is endeavoring to subjugate smaller nations."

The statement, explaining the regulations, specifically mentioned that "it is essential" to avoid reporting "that Germany is planning the territorial division of Slovakia."

"Reports such as these are not true," the voice continued, "and are the product of enemy propaganda."

Deplores Passing Of Fairy Tales

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

Speaking on the "Value of the Library in the Field of Kindergarten-Primary Education," before the Department of Kindergarten-Primary Education at the summer meeting July 2 of the National Education Association at Milwaukee, I made a plea for the return of the fanciful in the stories read or told the young child. This was in keeping with the pleas for fairy tales Mr. Clarence Summer and I made in our recent volume, "Books and Babies." To quote from my speech:

"In the writer's judgment, library values at the kindergarten-primary level would increase tremendously if folk lore and fairy tales were brought back. It is amazing how these precious treasures have been snatched away from little children during recent years. In their place have come the factual and the here and now. Mere babies now are supposed to be sophisticated little scientists and to think and talk about realities which only the university student was exposed to years ago.

Chains of Realism

"This little child must face reality as early as possible and thenceforth forever. Dwarfs, brownies, fairies must be kept away from him and if he should chance upon some of these imaginary creatures clandestinely they are to be torn away from him and chained beyond his reach, with him secure in the field of facts. If the modern little child uses his imagination at all, it is supposed to fit into the conventional patterns of what can be seen, heard, felt, weighed, measured. The average reading text-book for the young child is a penitentiary of facts.

"How long will the chains of realism bind the feet of little children, enslaving their imagination? Fortunately a great many babies and young children escape these chains until they get to school, at least. Some, indeed, find a fairyland at school. These children have parents and teachers who believe in fairies and go with the young creator into his enchanted land among the fairies.

Flights of Fancy

"Normally the child from two to six lives among the fairies. He creates with them and enjoys his creations. Instead of hampering his flights of fancy we should further them. Fill the baby and young child, therefore, full of fairy tales that lack the fearful. Balance this menu of the fanciful with adequate activities with things and play with many other children — for the child's likeableness, happiness and efficiency.

"Of a certain family of three children, all heard fairy tales read to them profusely from the middle of their second year through the primary grades. All excelled later in the factual fields. All participated well in school activities, making the National Honor Society. One has a Master's degree in chemistry and a doctor of Philosophy in Plant Physiology, one is a home economist, and the third will enter Massachusetts Institute of Technology in September. Yet, according to the prevailing theory about fairy tales, all these children should have become escapists, day dreamers and social misfits. If the little child could be heard he would sing: 'Bring back, bring back, Oh, bring back the fairies to me!'"

MANY MENTAL CASES

Minneapolis, Aug. 2—(AP)—The mode of government in Germany with its accompanying play upon the fear of its people has caused a considerable number of mental disorders, Dr. George Perrett, formerly attached to a Berlin hospital, said in an interview here. Dr. Perret is a Swiss seeking citizenship in the United States. He left Germany after the invasion of Holland.

EXTRICATE VICTIMS WITH TORCHES

Rescue workers are shown in this graphic Central Press photo as they used an acetylene torch to cut away the tangled debris in which is buried the body of one of the more than 42 victims of the head-on collision of a freight and a passenger train in Cuyahoga Falls, O. The extended arm of the victim can be seen through the window of the shattered car.

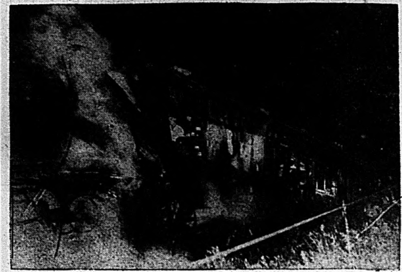
APPROVE LONDON'S FIRST AID FACILITIES

Their Majesties chat with a nurse during a recent visit to a completely equipped London first aid station. A number of these first aid stations have been scattered about London in readiness if, and when the Nazi air raiders bomb the heart of the empire.

SABOTAGE RIDICULED IN FATAL FIRE

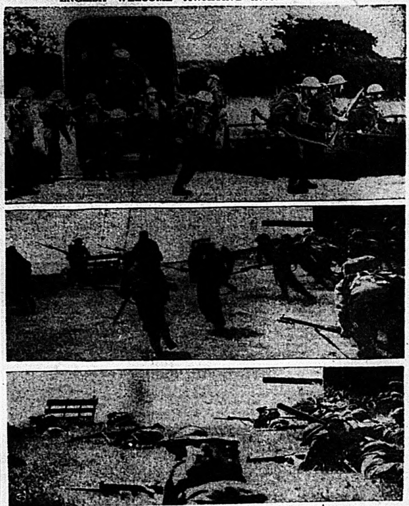
This picture was snapped just at the disastrous fire that swept the the disastrous fire tha t swept the giant plant of the R. M. Hollingshead paint company in Camden, N.J. It was admitted that the plant had recently received large army and navy orders but work on the contract had not begun and sabotage was ridiculed by company officials.

42 KILLED WHEN PASSENGER, FREIGHT TRAINS CRASH



At least 42—possibly 50—persons were killed and four injured when a single-car gasoline-electric shuttle train on the Pennsylvania railroad collided head-on with a freight train in Cuyahoga Falls, O. The Central Press picture above shows the freight engine telescoped far into the passenger car whose passengers and crew met a flaming death when the car caught fire. Firemen can be seen through the car windows as they worked to extinguish the flames.

ENGLISH "WELCOME" AWAITING INVADING NAZIS



These three pictures clearly illustrate one of the methods to be put into operation when the threatened Nazi invasion materializes. The photos were made on the east coast of England where soldiers are trained until letter-perfect in the defence of their land. At the TOP, after the "alarm" has been sounded, soldiers, brought to the scene in large trucks, spill from the conveyance, to repel the enemy. In the CENTRE picture they dash across the terrain and down to the beach to await the enemy's landing party. At the RIGHT, a coast defence gun is ready to cover the infantry. At BOTTOM, the men have fallen prone and have their rifles ready for the invading party as their own gun belches forth shot and shell.

ON HEELS OF NAZI RAIDERS

Britain's efficient A.R.P. is mainly responsible for the comparative small loss of life during the Nazi air raids upon towns and cities throughout the nation. Each area is under close supervision of a central control station and rescue workers follow closely the progress of the planes, reaching a stricken spot almost immediately. Here is a squad on scene of a recent raid, systematically combing the ruins for dead or injured. This was made in south-eastern England, scene of constant raids the past few days.

Channel and North Sea Become Field for Battle of Britain

Military Secrecy Hides Full Effect Of Rival Blows

Great Britain Reports "Damage of Considerable Proportions" Inflicted on Widespread Area of Naziland, Particularly Channel Ports — Air Ministry States 318 German Planes Downed Since June 18 and 400 Nazi Fliers Captured

Ministry of Shipping Says Maze of Quays from Tilsbury to London Bridge Have Escaped Serious Damage from Nazi Raids — Coastal Correspondent Recounts Damage Which is Not Heavy Considering Intensity of Raids

Take 1 Military secrecy

London, Aug.3. (CP)—The battle for Britain has resolved itself into a conflict centring largely on the English Channel and the North Sea and upon the ports and harbors bordering these waters, through which passes most of Britain's and Germany's peacetime shipping.

Military secrecy hides the full effect of rival British and German blows, by air and sea, but the British announcement that the great German port of Hamburg "now practically is in ruins" emphasized the major attention being paid to coastal bases.

Besides on Hamburg, where transatlantic liners dock in peacetime, the British have rained thousands of air bombs on Bremen, with its shipbuilding yards, docks and airplane factories; the big Wilhelmshaven naval base, and Cherbourg, the German held French port.

All of these ports, possible jumping-off places for an attempt to invade Britain, have been blasted repeatedly along with major inland objectives by British airmen ranging from the Arctic coast of Norway to the south of France.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Air fields and winds! It is safer to select air fields so that the winds may blow freely over them. The disturbances caused by the Rock of Gibraltar were violent and dangerous in the air field built nearby. The influences of the Rock were studied by making a miniature duplicate of that with the field, attaching silk fibres all over the surfaces. This model was placed in a wind tunnel and the turbulences noted. Splendid agreements were found by releasing from the field itself 138 balloons and following their aerial paths with an instrument. It was found that some vertical currents had speed of 17 miles an hour, and that the down currents were more violent and frequent than the up-currents.

CANADIAN TROOPS SETTLING DOWN IN NEW BILLETS

Large Contingent Had Uneventful Voyage and Saw No Nazi Bombers

VICHY RESTRICTS SALE OF FOOD

Ration Cards to be Required to Purchase Certain Articles in August

Vichy, Aug. 3—(AP)—The French government issued new decrees today restricting the sale of foodstuffs in another move to guard against shortage of supplies this winter because of transportation difficulties and absence of imports.

Restaurants were prohibited from serving fish or cheese in the same meal with meats, and from serving any meat, fowl or rabbit after 3 p.m.

During August, ration card coupons will be required to purchase specified articles which are particularly short and which may be bought only in limited amounts, such as:

500 grams (slightly over one pound) of sugar; 250 grams (a fraction over eight ounces) of spaghetti, macaroni, etc.; 100 grams (about 3 1-2 ounces) of rice; 125 grams (less than 4 1-2 ounces) of soap and 200 grams (about seven ounces) of margarine or vegetable oils.

70-CENT BASIC WHEAT PRICE WINS APPROVAL

House Agrees for Continuation for Another Year Although Members Think it Should be More

PROROGATION DELAYED

Ontario Wheat Growers to Receive Small Supplementary Payment on 1939 Wheat

(By Carl Reinke Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa Aug. 3 (CP)—Continuation of the 70-cent basic wheat price for another year had the approval today of the House of Commons, though western members of all parties agreed it was not all it should be under normal conditions.

The price question was the only major point in the bill amending the Wheat Board Act settled in the Commons yesterday. However, it became generally apparent as the words piled up that parliament could not prorogue today as the government had intended. Estimates totalling more than $300,000,000 remain to be considered.

Debate yesterday produced a few unfamiliar arguments. Agriculture Minister Gardiner agreed the producer required a 90-cent price at the farm to maintain himself but marketing conditions, much worse than last year, precluded such a guarantee.

On the other hand opposition critics argued that loss of markets was a result of the war and should be assumed without argument by the government, along with other war costs.

M. J. Coldwell (CCF Rosetown-Biggar) and H. A. Mackenzie (Lib. Lambton-Kent) urged a search for some long-range answer to Canada's wheat problem, because of the unlikelihood that export markets would ever again by what they were a few years back.

WHEAT BILL MAY DELAY SESSION'S CLOSE

Ottawa, Aug. 3—(CP)—Consideration of the government's bill to amend the Wheat Board Act and the clearing up of remaining estimates is expected to prolong the session until Tuesday, it was rumored on Parliament Hill today.

While the section of the wheat bill which guarantees the price of 70 cents a bushel for No. 1 northern wheat, basis Fort William, finally received approval of the Commons late last night, it is expected that several other sections of the bill will postpone prorogation. Previously it had been expected the session might terminate today.

Many Germans Piloting Planes After No More Than 20 Hours

Dr. Bruce Hardy of Toronto Says British Aviators Knocking Plenty of Nazi Planes Down

GERMANY CAN'T WIN

An East Coast Canadian Port, Aug. 3.—(CP)—Two Canadians who got passage on an Atlantic crossing by playing nursemaid to 82 English schoolchildren looked forward today to visit their homes in Ontario.

Dr. Bruce Hardy of Toronto, and Rev. Peter Jones of Kingston, Ont., came ashore yesterday from a steamship that made port with the first children removed from Britain under the government evacuation plan.

Dr. Hardy has been on the staff of a London hospital for two years. A flying enthusiast he said British airmen are far superior to the Germans.

Germany, he said, is piloting many of her planes with men who have no more than 20 flying hours to their credit. That would be equivalent to about five or six hours in the type of planes they flew in the last war.

"Germany will not win this war", he said, "the Royal Air Force is really knocking those planes down."

He studied on the continent of Europe and was in Spain at the time the civil war broke out. That was before he entered the priesthood and a career that took him into the Chinese section of London's Limehouse district.

He and Dr. Hardy were attached to the children's overseas reception board on the voyage, looking after the spiritual and medical needs of the evacuees. They will return to England after their vacations, they said.

FRENCH COLONY SUPPORTS BRITAIN

New Caledonia Refuses to Recognize French - German Armistice

Sydney, Aug. 3 (CP-Reuters).—A dispatch to the Sydney Telegraph said today the French island colony of New Caledonia had refused to recognize the French-German armistice and had pledged support to Britain in continuing the war against Germany.

The decision, the dispatch said, was announced by Governor Pelicier at a meeting of the legislative council in Noumea, capital of the colony.

(New Caledonia lies about 875 miles east of Australia. The island has an area of 8,548 square miles and a population of 57,630.)

Plot To Extort $100,000, Escape in Homemade Sub Frustrated in Milwaukee

Police Trace Ornamental Iron Wire in Quarter Ton of Scrap Iron and Filings

FICTION OUTRIVALLED

Milwaukee, Aug. 3 (AP)—A bizarre $100,000 extortion and bombing plot—whose fantastic features included a scheme for a getaway in a tiny, homemade submarine—was broken up by police with the arrest of three young Milwaukee men.

The three, held pending issuance of warrants today, were a 23-year-old ornamental iron worker, his brother 27 and a 28-year-old companion, detective Lieut. Eugene O'Gorman said.

The youngest man, O'Gorman said, said after his arrest yesterday that he made and planted a bomb which exploded harmlessly in a northside Sears Roebuck & Company store last July 24, and also the sending of a series of letters to store manager Rowland H. Davie demanding $100,000 under threat that "a bomb 200 times larger will go off at your south side store. Besides your own life will be in danger. . ."

O'Gorman said the other two men probably would be charged as accessories.

The extortion plot, with angles outrivalling even most far-fetched detective-thriller fiction, was salved after police found a scrap of ornamental iron wire, similar to that used in the trigger of the bomb, after sifting through a quarter-ton of scrap iron and filings in a shop formerly operated by the youngest man.

Sheet Metal Submarine 7 feet Long

The submarine, a flimsy seven-foot long contrivance made of sheet metal, was discovered in the youth's basement. Light enough for two persons to lift onto a trailer, it was powered by two storage batteries and an automobile starter motor, and equipped with a crude conning tower, diving fins, and oxygen tank.

The youth said he intended to pick up the extortion money as it was dropped from an airplane out over Lake Michigan under a plan outlined in a letter to Davie and then submerge and make his getaway.

"Tin Fish" Fails to Work

The "tin fish" failed to submerge during a test last Saturday night, however, the youth told police, and the submarine plan was abandoned in favor of another scheme whereby a motorcycle courier with $100,000 was to go to a designated spot and receive directions to a further designation before handing over the money.

LOCAL TRUCKER QUITE WORRIED

His Truck Struck Twice With Owner Not Knowing Identity of Motorists

William Bunnett, local trucker, has reasons to believe that ill fortune comes in bunches, like grapes. While Mr. Bunnett's truck was parked on East Dundas Street, shortly after midnight last night, it was struck twice and by different automobiles on each occasion.

Norman Hickson, 10 Charlotte Street, claims he was forced over into Mr. Bunnett's truck by another motor car in front of him. Mr. Hickson gave chase to ascertain the identity of the car in front of him, while Mr. Bunnett waited patiently for Hickson to return. While he was waiting a second motor car, driven by Curtis Barlow of Sherbrooke, Que, collided with the rear of Mr. Bunnett's parked truck for the second collision to befall the truck within five minutes.

This was too much for Mr. Bunnett, who immediately reported the incidents to the police. P. C. Taylor investigated, Mr. Hickson returned without having apprehended the car to force him into the truck and subsequently at the police station Mr. Bunnett was still wondering how he was going to get his truck mended.

GERMANS BAN DUTCH ROYAL CELEBRATIONS

London, Aug. 3—(CP)—The Germans have placed a ban on the celebration in Holland over the birthday Monday of Princess Irene, youngest daughter of Princess Juliana, now in Ottawa, the British Broadcasting Corporation reported last night. There also is a ban on the celebration of Queen Wilhelmina's birthday, Aug. 31.

Rifles, Shotguns To be Registered By Sept 15th

Ottawa, Aug. 3—(CP)—Every owner of a rifle or shotgun in Canada who has not registered them by Sept. 15 will be liable to a fine not exceeding $50 or to imprisonment for a period not exceeding 30 days' or to both, according to an amendment to the Defence of Canada Regulations published in the Canada Gazette Friday. The registration will be carried out by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and certificates of registration will be issued to owners, whose possession of such firearms is approved.

HEAR EXPLOSIONS 30 MILES AWAY

R.A.F. Reports Results of British Bombings in Eritrea

Cairo, Egypt, Aug. 3 (AP)—The Royal Air Force announced today that explosions heard 30 miles away were set off yesterday in a series of mass raids on Italian oil depots and grounded planes in Eritrea.

An R.A.F. communique said great billws of black smoke followed direct hits on oil tanks at Zula, Accico and the Asmara airdrome. All the attacking bombers returned safely.

One Italian bomber was shot down and its crew captured in attacks on Kham El Girba and Gedaref, on the border between the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan and Eritrea.

GERMAN RAIDS NOT DANGEROUS

Only Stabbing Attacks Which Were Easily Repulsed by R.A.F. Fighters

London, Aug. 3—(CP)— German bombing planes stabbed repeatedly at Britain in broad daylight today, continuing a series of scattered raids which had ranged from the southeast coast of England to Scotland under cover of darkness.

Several persons were injured by bombs dropped in one Welsh town, but damage was said to be small. Nazi planes also appeared over southwestern England during the morning.

Four high explosive bombs fell near a village in East Scotland, destroying a chicken house and killing 18 pullets, but no other damage was reported.

In pre-dawn raids over Scotland more than 50 incendiary bombs were dropped.

Other areas visited by the raiders during the night included the midlands, southeast England and the Bristol Channel sector.

"There was some enemy activity during last night, and bombs were dropped in nortneast Scotland, the midlands, southeast England and the Bristol Channel area.

"No substantial damage is reported except from a town in the Bristol Channel area, where some bombs fell in a residential district, damaged a church, a school and other buildings and caused a few minor casualties"

HANSON ASKS QUESTIONS OVER PRESS CENSORS

Calls Attention to Statement Reportedly Made by Mayor Houde on Registration

CENSORS CRITICIZED

Asks What Government Proposes to do Over Statement Said to Have Been Made by Montreal Mayor

Ottawa, Aug. 3 (CP)—Conservative Leader Hanson called attention in the Commons today to a statement reportedly made by Mayor Camillien Houde of Montreal, advising people to diregard the law requiring all citizens to register in the national registration.

"The mayor of Montreal openly defied the law of Canada," said Mr. Hanson.

The Conservative leader criticised the action of the press censors in ordering the suppression of an edition of the Montreal Gazette reporting the mayor's statement and containing an editorial criticising the maor's position.

He then addressed four questions to the government:

1. Is there any longer a free press in Canada?
2. What action does the government propose to take to vindicate the majesty of the law?
3. Is the government prepared to meet defiance of the law by the mayor of Montreal?
4. Will the government have the action of the press censors reviewed?

U. S. Takes Steps To Improve Alaskan Defences Near Russia

Washington, Aug. 3. —(AP) — The United States navy took steps today to improve the Alaskan defences opposite Russian territory by awarding 4,305,000 in contracts for work at Naval Air Stations on Kodiak and Unalaska Islands.

The action came less than two weeks after a coast guard cutter confirmed reports that a Russian air base was being developed on Soviet-owned Big Diomede Island in Bering Strait a mile from American-owned Little Diomede Island.

Awards amounting to $4,600,500 also were made yesterday by the navy for air outposts at San Juan in Puerto Rico, Charlotte Amalie in the Virgin Islands, and Midway Island in the Pacific. It was not announced when any of the work would be completed.

Hailstones Fall Large As Baseballs Near Estevan

Estevan, Sask, Aug. 3.—(CP)—A hail and rain storm wrecked the hopes of farmers south of Estevan Thursday night just as they were beginning operations to harvest their first crop in 12 years. Hail stones as large as baseballs were reported in a strip stretching a few miles from the American boundary eastwards and west through Torquay and Bromhead.

Crops were flattened, livestock killed and property damage was considerable. Telephone communication was disrupted.

Lightship Illegally Bombed by Nazis, Some Men Wounded

London, Aug. 3.—(CP)—German airmen have again made illegal attacks on men who look after the lightships, the British Broadcasting Corporation said it has been reported in London. The Trinity House tender Alert was bombed and machine gunned last week and some of the crew of 39 and relief lighthousemen were wounded. The Trinity House is an organization which was recognized many years ago as outside the scope of belligerent operations.

Japanese Embassy Protests Action In Vigorous Terms

Unconfirmed Rumors State Existence of Widespread Japanese Spy Ring in Canada, Australia and Burma With Headquarters in London Uncovered—Members Were Allowed to Operate Until Hopelessly Involved

NOT RETALIATORY

Arrests Not in Retaliation for Wholesale Apprehensions in Japan Says Authoritative Source but Result of Investigations Over a Considerable Period of Time

London, Aug. 3—(CP)—The Japanese Embassy announced today that a "strong protest" had been made to the British government against the arrest of two of the most prominent Japanese businessmen in London.

Disclosure of the arrests and authoritative reports of arrests of Japanese subjects in other parts of the British Empire were coupled with unconfirmed rumors of the existence of a widespread spy ring having roots in London and offshoots throughout the empire, notably in Canada, Australia and Burma.

These reports, published in London without specific reference to the arrests, said the members of the ring had been allowed to operate in peace until they were involved hopelessly.

German Raider Camouflaged As Swedish Steamer

Kingston, Jamaica, Aug. 3—(CP-Cable)—The 6,400-ton British freighter Davisian was attacked 500 miles off Barbados, July 10 by a German raider camouflaged as a Swedish merchant ship, survivors of the British vessel said here today. The 32 members of the Davisian's crew were brought here from Santo Domingo yesterday.

The seamen declared that their vessel was found for Trinidad when the enemy craft was sighted. The Nazi raider was flying the Swedish flag and had the name Narvik painted on its side.

As the Germans opened fire on the Davisian, she ran up the German flag, the survivors declared. Forty members of the Davisian's crew were taken aboard the enemy vessel. The Davisian then was plundered and sunk.

For three days, the Nazi raider remained in the same area, attacking the 5,200-ton British freighter King John and sinking her also. Members of the Davisian's crew were placed in boats of the King John, with some members of that ship's crew.

The men from the two ships which were sunk by the raider were set adrift without a compass and only a few biscuits and some water.

SEEK SUPPLIES FOR INDIA'S WAR EFFORT

New York, Aug. 3 — (AP) — A British purchasing mission is in the United States seeking war supplies to enable India better to help Great Britain in the war. Brig.-Gen. C. S. Tute, a British officer, said he and Capt. Frederick Tymms director of Indian aviation and Col. C. Warren Boulton, already had talked with several manufacturers and were negotiating with a large aircraft concern with a view to setting up a warplane plant in India.

POLICE SEARCHING BANDITS

Montreal, Aug. 3 (CP)—City police were searching today for two young bandits who held up two taxi drivers and robbed them of their cabs and a total of $25 early this morning.

Rosario Paquet said a man of about 25 years took $13 and his car from him. The second victim was Cyprien Richard, who lost his car and $12. Police expressed the belief the two hold-up men were working separately.

British Prison Warders Protest Over Rich Internees

London, Aug. 3.—(CP)—Wealthy 'champagne-drinking" Nazi and Fascist internees are overworking them as "waiters and waitresses", British prison wardens protested today in asking increased staffs. They said wealthy aliens were able to place standing orders with London caterers for special food and wines, requiring prison officers to spend a lot of time attending to their requirements.

MOTORIST KNOCKED DOWN BY OTHER CAR

While repairing a tire from off his automobile on Highway No. 14 near Crofton late last night, Walter Carr, Norwood, was struck by a passing motor car, driven by J. Muldowney, of Toronto, and knocked down. Carr was rushed to the Picton Hospital by Dr. McQueen of Picton who was passing at the time of the accident. Head, arm and leg abrasions were the most serious injuries sustained.

Muldowney told Motorcycle Patrolman J. Hatch, who investigated, that he was blinded by the headlights of an oncoming motor car, that did not stop at the scene. Muldowney assured the officer that he had swerved his vehicle sharply to avoid crashing into Mr. Carr's automobile. The Muldowney car struck the fender of Mr. Carr's car, knocking Mr. Carr to the pavement.

CHILDREN CONDUCT THRIVING BUSINESS

Little Misses Mary Black, 9, Catherine, 10, and Mary Grant, 9, of Gordon street are not going to be outdone by the grownups in their war efforts.

The attractive little misses, possessed no doubt of business tendencies, enlisted the help of seven-year-old Billy Black, who is an embryo carpenter of no mean ability. The quartette soon erected a small booth, and the young ladies of the group lost no time in manufacturing delicious lemonade and offering it for sale.

Business was opened at the corner of Gordon and Harriet street and the young hopefuls sat back to await customers. The charge was small, 5 cents the glass for grownups and one cent for the kiddies.

The little booth soon became popular and at closing time the handsome sum of $2.75 was jingling in the till. The young ladies will turn over the proceeds of their venture to the Red Cross.

PEDESTRIAN KNOCKED DOWN BY MOTOR CAR

Lindsley St. John, 84 Yeomans St., narrowly escaped serious injuries when knocked down by a passing motor car on Water St., early this morning. William Adams, Wellington, was passing in his motor car and was forced over to the side of the street by another oncoming vehicle. The fender of Mr. Adams' car struck St. John knocking him down. Mr. Adams immediately stopped and rendered what assistance possible. St. John only sustained minor bruises and both men reported the incident to Sergeant Arthur Harman, stating that no serious injuries had resulted.

6,000 MILE CRUISE COMES TO END

Mr. and Mrs. George Publow Return to Picton After Delightful Trip

Following a ten months, 6,000 mile cruise, Mr. and Mrs. George Publow, of Picton, returned home aboard the cutter "Moon River" on Wednesday after a holiday journey in southern waters.

Leaving Picton October 1st, Mr. and Mrs. Publow travelled to Florida via the inland waterway and proceeded to vacation in Cuba and Havana. The return trip was started from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., on June 12, and after seven weeks' sailing arrived back in Picton.

Upon their arrival in Miami on their southward journey, the travellers spent several days in Florida before continuing on to Key West. From there the "Moon River" crossed to Havana, Cuba, for a three weeks' stay. Returning to Havana, the little craft set her cruise for the Bahama Islands and more particularly for Nassau where the beautiful scenery and the climate was enjoyed by the Picton couple for a couple of weeks.

Returning homeward, they proceeded up the Atlantic seaboard to Charleston and crossed to the inland waterway to Norfolk, Va., due to unfavorable weather conditions. Returning to the coastal waters, stops were made periodically en route at Cape May, New Jersey and New York. The course was then taken up the Hudson River to Albany, through the Erie barge canal system to Oswego, across Lake Ontario and home.

The boat, along with her crew of Mr. and Mrs. Publow, enjoys the distinction of being the smallest powered craft to make the trip from Florida to Cuba and return. Considerable publicity was received by the Picton Yacht Club, as the "Moon River" flew the club's burgee on the entire trip.

MILITARY BANDS FOR TWO REGTS.

Argyll Light Infantry (Tank) and H. & P. E. Regiments Will Have Bands in Camp

When the "boys" of the Argyll Light Infantry (Tank) and the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, Second Battalion, swing along the route of march in camp in the near future, their marching feet will echo to the martial rhythms of their own regimental bands.

With the sanction of governmental officialdom, non-permanent active militia units will be allowed to have their own military band. Bandsmen in Belleville and Picton lost no time in availing themselves of the opportunity to do something about it and the result is that both units will have outstanding musical organizations.

The Argyll Light Infantry band will be under the direction of Lieut. Fred Jobson and that of the sister unit under Mr. Sidney Lockyer, prominent bandsman and musician of Picton.

The A.L.I. organization will be composed of young men of military age and is the contribution of the Belleville Municipal Band to the local regiment. Twenty-two young members of the band augmented by members of the Tophatters and Commodores orchestra of this city will make up the personnel. Military duties will not interfere with the usual functions of the Municipal Band. The military band will be a decided innovation for the "Argylls" as it is some time since that unit boasted a military brass band of its own.

Members of the band, it was stated today, will be soldiers first and bandsmen afterwards and will have to conform to training regulations. Both bands will proceed to camp and training centres with their respective units. It is expected that personnel of the bands will be twenty-seven musicians.

Due to the fact that the personnel of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regimental Band will be drawn from several centres in both counties rehearsals, which are being held every Friday, are to be conducted in Belleville. This unit had its first rehearsal in the City Hall auditorium last night and according to Mr. Reg. Hinchey, who is taking a prominent part in the organization of the units, they made a splendid showing. "Both bands were outstanding in their rehearsals," he said, "and should take their place with the best within a few weeks."

250 To Be Trained Every Thirty Days

Twenty-two hundred and fifty men from Military District No. 3, which includes Belleville and district will be trained every thirty days under the new National Registration scheme, according to an announcement made by the Department of National Defence today.

During the total of ten 30-day periods approximately 22,500 men from the district will undergo training.

A table released by the department shows that each of the two training centres in this district will be amply staffed by both training and administrative personnel to ensure that the maximum benefit will be received by the men in training and that their welfare will be properly administered.

Personnel in M.D. 3 will include 388 administrative and instructional staffs. Nine companies will train in the two centres.

Thirty training centres will be established across the Dominion to provide the compulsory training. Trainees will be enrolled in 119 companies and training will take place in all the eleven military districts. Total man trained over ten of the thirty-day periods is estimated at 297,000.

Couple Remanded For Another Week

Mr. and Mrs. Robert McFarlane, Frankford, were remanded in custody until August 9th by Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C., yesterday afternoon. The couple are charged with the murder of Gordon Archer, eighteen-months-old son of Mrs. McFarlane, on or about July 25th.

The charges were laid a few hours after the wire-bound body of the child was found floating in the Trent River at the north edge of Trenton last Friday. Wire had been wound around the body of the child, while an attached wire loop is believed to have held a stone or weight used to keep the body under water.

Mr. and Mrs. McFarlane were married on July 12th this year and since that time have been living with the mother of McFarlane at Frankford.

The child had been boarded at the home of Mrs. Mountenay, Baptist Street, Trenton, until the night of July 25th, when police say, the pair took the boy away.

Police Blotter

Belleville police are in possession of four bicycles, which have been found abandoned in the city during the past week. The bikes are awaiting their rightful owners. Also at Aselstine's service station, N. Front Street, a girl's bicycle was found abandoned early today. This bicycle carried city bicycle license number 1166. John Sword, 308 Coleman Street, reported the theft of his bicycle to the authorities late last night.

The proprietor of the Quinte Book Shop, Front Street, complained to the police that sneak thieves were stealing early morning editions of Toronto newspapers left at the Quinte Book Shop premises for subsequent sale. As two of the papers were located in a nearby gangway, police believe they are in possession of clues which may lead to the apprehension of the guilty culprits.

Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C. made it known today he had reduced the sentence imposed upon Mrs. Dorothy Findlay in yesterday's local police court, when this woman was given a month in the common jail after being convicted of a charge of aiding to the moral delinquency in the home. At the suggestion of Inspector T. D. Ruston of the C.A.S., the sentence was reduced to one week, dating from the time of Mrs. Findlay's arrest on July 26th. The woman was also given back the custody of some of her children, as the magistrate intimated that she was not paramountly to blame for the trouble in which she was charged.

China Fears Japan May Move to Extend Influence

Hong Kong, Aug. 3. (AP)—Domei, Japanese News Agency, reported today that the acting chief of Japanese contraband control in French Indo-China "made an important representations" of an undisclosed nature to Vice-Admiral Deoux, Petain-appointed Governor - General of the French colony. The report aroused Chinese apprehensions that Japan was moving to extend her influence in Indo-China.

Removal of British women from Hong Kong was completed today with departure of the final group of fifty-seven bound for Australia.

PRICES STEADY

The Belleville market was crowded to almost every available inch of space on Saturday morning as farmers from the district displayed the season's most complete offering of vegetables and fruits.

On the vegetable market corn on the cob headed a long list, selling at 25c the dozen. Celery and cabbages sold up to 10c each, while cucumbers sold at 5c each and 3 for 10c. Cauliflowers ranged up to 20c in price. String beans were plentiful at 5c the berry box while peas held at from 25c to 30c per quart. Other vegetables were 5c the bunch.

Tomatoes were displayed in increased quantities selling at 20c the berry box while baskets sold from 60c up. Potatoes again suffered a slight decline selling for the first time at 25c the peck with hamper lots going for 90c.

Long black berries were displayed for the first time this season, selling at 30c per quart. Raspberries sold at 15c and 2 boxes for 25c for the red variety with blue ones selling at 10c. Huckleberries were plentiful at 15c per quart, with eleven-quart baskets selling at $1.25. Gooseberries brought 25c for three boxes.

Montmorency cherries sold 75c the six-quart basket. Black currants were held at 25c per quart with the red variety at 10c and 3 boxes for 25c. Apples sold at 25c the six-quart basket or at 20c the gallon.

Grade "A" large eggs sold at 25c the dozen with mediums down to 23c, while pullet eggs were held at 20c the dozen. Butter was held at 30c the pound.

Broilers ranged from 50c per pair up to $1.10 the pair, while chickens ranged downward from $1.25 for large well-fleshed birds. Ducks were to be had at prices ranging from 75c to 90c each.

Fish vendors offered only whitefish for sale, selling at 18c the pound. Young porkers brought four to five dollars each with vendors reporting few sales at this price.

OBITUARY

MRS. ETHEL CAMPBELL (Peterboro)

Mrs. Ethel Campbell, widow of Lachlan A. Campbell, passed away in the Nichols Memorial Hospital, Peterboro, on Thursday evening, August 1st., after an illness of eleven months' duration. For the past twelve years she made her home in Peterboro and resided on Simcoe Street.

The late Mrs. Campbell was born in England being a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. David Fisher. In religion she was a member of St. John's Anglican Church, Peterboro, and highly esteemed.

Surviving her are one sister, Miss K. N. Fisher, Peterboro; two brothers, Mr. David Fisher, Toronto, formerly of Belleville, and Mr. John Fisher, Mulliken, Mich. Her husband passed away about two and a half years ago.

The funeral took place this Saturday afternoon, Aug. 3rd., from the Martin Funeral Home, Church Street, Belleville. The service in the chapel and at the graveside in Belleville cemetery was conducted by the Rev. Rural Dean A. Beauchamp Payne, Rector of the Church of St. Thomas.

Trenton and District

Trenton, Aug. 3—Lt. Col. B. C. Donnan, Officer Commanding the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, expressed surprise and pleasure with the recruits of Headquarters Company, in the first official inspection of the company last night. The Commanding Officer was high in his praise of Major Angus Mowat and Quartermaster Sergeant G. Trounce, who are training the recruits.

The Headquarters Company is stationed at Trenton and is under the command of Major Mowat. Shortly after nine o'clock last night Lt. Col. Donnan walked on the parade grounds for the inspection and the company was drawn up for the march past.

Commenting on the inspection, Lt. Col. Donnan stated that the company is well-advanced in the marching and military movements. "I am very pleased with the showing of the recruits in such a short time," he said. "These men are being drilled by competent instructors and are putting everything they have into the training. Major Mowat is to be congratulated on the fine showing of the men."

The bugle band made its initial appearance with the company last night and aided greatly with the marching.

Flyers Make it Two Straight

The R.C.A.F. Flyers made it two straight last night by defeating the Woolerites by a score of 8 to 2, in the second game of a three-out-of-series for the Cobley Trophy and also the right to continue on in the O.A.S.A. playdowns.

The Flyers started off with a bang by collecting three runs in the first frame, added two in the third, two in the fifth and one in the sixth. The Woolerites seemed to be unable to hit the twists of Farrar as he limited them to only five hits and two runs. Three of the hits came in the last inning, when Wooler tried to make a last-minute comeback.

Farrar on the mound for the Air Force turned in his best effort of the year. In seven out of the nine frames he held Wooler hitless, striking out six and allowing but two walks. Stacey, hurling for the losers, was unable to keep the Flyers down and gave up 9 hits, struck out six and handed out eleven free trips to the initial sack.

Jack Miner Best Known Citizen in Canada, Ranks Fifth In the United States

Chicago, Ill., Aug. 3—It has been announced today by the International Information Bureau that Jack Miner, the Canadian Naturalist, ranks first as the best known private Canadian citizen and ranks fifth in the United States. Other private individuals in the United States ranking above Jack Miner were Henry Ford, John D. Rockefeller, Chas. Lindbergh, and J. P. Morgan. Last year when a survey was made Jack Miner ranked first in Canada, but was thirteenth in the United States. In other words, during the last year he has climbed from thirteenth place to fifth place among one hundred and thirty million people. It is interesting to note that with the exception of Lindbergh, the other names preceding Jack Miner were men whose wealth had made them famous, but Jack Miner has become known by his activities in connection with the study of bird life. He is the "father of the sanctuary idea of conservation of bird life" which has been copied the world over, especially by every state in the United States and every province in Canada. The beauty of Jack Miner's research work and of his establishment of the Jack Miner Bird Sanctuary is that future generations will benefit by same and that his life and activities have been the means of creating love in the hearts of this generation for birds and animals. As Jack Miner says: "If I can get a child to have love for a bird or an animal how much greater his love will be for his fellowman."

The bureau in making this survey bases such information on the amount of space given the various individuals in the press of the land. Jack Miner's accomplishments have been featured both in the feature and editorial sections of all leading publications on the continent because such editors fully realize the importance of Jack Miner's life work to humanity.

While Jack Miner is a poor man in comparison with the names with which he ranks, yet the public have made a beaten path to his door just as humanity wishes to see where Ford, Rockefeller, Lindbergh and other famous citizens live and have labored.

SHANGHAI ORDERS ERADICATION OF ALL TERRORISM

Consular Officials Call for Complete Cooperation Between Police and Foreign Defence Forces

Shanghai, Aug. 3—(AP) — The Shanghai Consular body urged the Shanghai Municipal Council Friday to "eradicate and suppress all forms of terrorism" in the city where an assassination, an attempted slaying and a kidnapping occurred earlier in the day.

In a lengthy meeting the Consular officials called for complete co-operation between the police of the International Settlement and the foreign defence forces.

The consular body, composed of representatives of powers participating in the administration of the International Settlement, supervises in a measure the policies of the council, the settlement's administrative body. The council controls the police directly.

Thus the consular representatives appeared to have passed the terrorist problem back to the Municipal Council, whose chairman admitted July 20 that the council was unable to stamp out a wave of lawlessness in the city.

Slaying By German

The meeting of the consular body followed the slaying by a gunman of Charles Metzler, head of the White Russian community. The slaying occurred within the United States defence section.

Recently Metzler had resisted attempts to reorganize the Russian emigre committee, which he headed, into a pro-Japanese body. At a press conference a Japanese embassy spokesman said Metzler always had been friendly toward the Japanese who had no ill feeling against him.

Later a Chinese gunman tried to kill Sung Zung-Doh manager of the China State Bank but his gun jammed and the banker escaped. A Chinese constable who tried to arrest the assailant was wounded seriously.

Capital Closeups

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Aug. 3—(CP)— This month will see some spectacular developments in the nation's war program. The British Commonwealth Air Training plan is about ready to blossom out in full bloom. Navy Minister Macdonald has new schemes afoot for the senior service and Defence Minister Ralston plans to strengthen his department with new men to handle the problems of the growing army.

The capital will be just as busy in the post-session period as it is when parliament sits. The whole scene sometimes changes with the hours. Take the quip of Air Minister Power: "Why I don't know what's doing; I haven't been to cabinet since noon."

Summer Highlights: Lunch and sometimes dinner has been a quick sandwich-and-coffee proposition for most cabinet ministers..with parliament sitting morning, afternoon and evening this past week, the only time for cabinet meetings was at the noon and supper adjournments....War Services Minister Gardiner staged an iron-man performance one day by going through a tough afternoon and evening debate without getting a chance to eat....

On the week's most perspiring day, Clare Moyer held forth at the head of his long clerk's table in the Senate....The Chamber got hotter and hotter and his high stiff collar wilted progressively....Very formally he picked up an important batch of papers, walked to his office and returned to his job, attired in a new collar....

Capital Cuffnotes: When agriculturists come to town they are a mysterious lot....Parleys with government officials are deep-guarded secrets....They say the apple men, wheat growers and dairy farmers really open up about their problems behind closed doors....

The Department of National War Services has received great voluntary assistance for national registration all across Canada.... It comes from service clubs, church and civic organizations and the like....Mr. Justice T. C. Davis, the Department's Deputy Minister, moves around Ottawa as if he'd been here for years....Actually it has only been a few weeks.... Red tape and formality are slashed in his organization....

There was a question for a while on Friday whether Senators were members of the Canadian parliament....The unemployment insurance bill stated that "Senators or Members of Parliament" could not be members of the commission to administer the act....Upholding the dignity and position of the Senate, Sir Allen Aylesworth (Lib. Ontario) objected to the inference.... So it was amended to read "Senators and Members of the House of Commons...."

Mrs. A. G. L. McNaughton, wife of the corps commander is the new house mother to a group of Canadian nurses just outside London...

Along Royalty Row: Princess Juliana is moving into a spacious home in residential Rockcliffe .... But it wasn't the ordinary comforts which made her choose the house....People who know say it was the electric dish washer in the kitchen....A novelty even for a Netherlands Princess....

The Earl of Athlone brought his favorite dog "Bronx" from England with him....For hours the bulldog stands with the Mountie guarding the grounds....

Gore

Gore—Sunday School and Church were held at Centre Church Sunday morning. It was decided not to have any Sunday School for three Sundays while Rev. Boomhour is on his holidays.

Mr. Morris Pulver is entertaining his cousin for a few days.

Berry picking is the order of the day with an abundant crop.

Mr. Bill Soble of Roblin's Mills spent Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Fox.

Mr. Lorne Brickman is once more for another year, resuming duties at his home canning factory.

Frankford

OTTAWA CHILD BURNED TO DEATH

Two-Year-Old Gail Birtch Sleeping in Room Where Fire Started

Ottawa, Aug. 3—(CP)—Gail Birtch, two-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Birtch, was burned to death Friday when fire destroyed their home near suburban Billing's Bridge.

The child was sleeping alone in an upper bedroom, where the family said the fire started. They could give no reason for the cause of the blaze.

Mildred Birtch, sister of Oliver, who heard the crackling of flames while sitting on the verandah, rushed into the house and was met at the top of the stairs by another child, Mabel, aged six.

"Oh there's a fire in Gail's room" Mabel said as Mildred rushed her outside. Mildred ran back into the house to save Gail but the flames forced her back.

The father, who was working in a nearby field, also tried to save the baby without success.

Couple is Tendered Miscellaneous Shower

On Tuesday last at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Rush a very enjoyable evening was spent when friends and neighbors gathered to honor Miss Audrey Wilson and Mr. Fred Christopher who are soon to be married.

The early part of the evening was spent in games and Jack Welbourne with guitar and mouth organ furnished enjoyable music.

The gathering was then called to order and George Rush read an address.

The address was signed on behalf of the community by Theda Rush, Gerty Rutter, Lorne Hunt.

The young couple received many useful and lovely gifts for which they suitably replied. All joined in singing "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows" after which a dainty lunch was served.

KRUPP WORKS BOMBED

London, Aug. 3—(CP)—The great Krupp munitions works at Essen, supply depots and airdromes in northwest Germany and four synthetic oil plants were attacked by British bombers Thursday, the Air Ministry announced.

The ministry said considerable damage was inflicted on the oil targets and that airdromes in Holland also had been raided in daylight attacks.

EAST COAST PORT BUSY PLACE WHEN TROOPS DEPART

Troop Convoy Provides Most Warlike Scene Anywhere in Canada

MOVE AS UNIT

Fifth Major Convoy Has Left Without Mishap or Casualties

By FRANK FLAHERTY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

An east coast Canadian port on the eve of the departure of a troop convoy provides the most warlike scene to be found anywhere in Canada.

There is no hurry, no fuss, no cracking of guns, no ostentatious marching of soldiers. All is quiet, orderly, purposeful.

Palatial passenger liners, painted in the dull, inconspicuous colors of war, stand moored to piers. Aboard hundreds of khaki-clad figures lined the rails and peer through the portholes, watching the ships ply the harbor.

They are Canadian soldiers waiting for the big ships to carry them across the sea to Britain. Most of them are far from home but they may not walk the streets of the east coast city they have never seen. They are at it but not in it. They marched from train to ship and, except for the odd route march while awaiting departure, will not step ashore again until they reach their destination.

Nearby at other piers lie speedy destroyers of the Royal Canadian Navy and battleships and cruisers of the Royal Navy. Overhead roars an occasional patrol plane of the Royal Canadian Air Force.

Move Out at Zero Hour

At an hour, known in advance by naval officials only, the troopships, destroyers, battleships and airplanes take up positions together and move as a unit towards the open sea.

So it was with the sailing of the Canadian troops whose safe arrival overseas was made known yesterday. They were the fifth major contingent of soldiers to sail overseas from this east coast Canadian port since the present war began.

The naval, military and air forces combining their power and their ingenuity, have prepared a smooth-working arrangement to protect embarkation points for the troops and supplies which leave Canada for Great Britain.

The air force patrols the coasts and ranges far out to sea, looking for any enemy approaching. Canadian surface vessels also roam coastal waters using listening devices to detect any submarine.

On cliffs overlooking the approaches are observation points and heavy guns ready to fire shells capable of sinking the biggest ships. Closer in are lighter rapid-fire guns with shorter range, capable of picking off smaller and faster ships which might evade heavy batteries.

Submarine Net Used.

Then there is the submarine net, stretched across the harbor entrance. It is in two sections, the first certain to slow up a submarine which might strike it, and the second certain to stop it and bring it to the surface.

The net contains a gate through which ships pass in after they have been properly inspected and certified by an examination vessel, or pass out on the way to sea, providing they have proper releases from the naval authorities.

At night searchlights comb the skies for possible air raiders and the water for possible unfriendly ships.

An officer of the Royal Navy in an east coast Canadian port drew gasps of astonishment from a group of members of parliament recently as he demonstrated operation of a large calibre gun aboard a battleship.

Guns Power-operated.

He showed how a man with a flick of his wrist can elevate or lower the 100-ton weapon which fires shells weighing a ton. That is possible because the gun is completely power-operated and delicately balanced.

Shells for the big fellows come up from the bottom of the ship on a series of lifts, finally reaching the breach of the gun on a sort of tray. Then out from behind the shell shoots a ram driven by what looks like a huge bicycle chain. This ram drives the shell into the breach and immediately crams in two huge bundles of explosive.

Next move is the closing and locking of the breach and then the gun is fired.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was hurry up walking home on account of being late for supper and not knowing whether I was just late or very late only I got a pretty good clue when I turned around the corner and saw ma on our front steps looking both ways up and down the street like somebody looking for me and I thought, G, maybe I better skin around and go in the back way just for luck.

Wich I quick did, and pop was eating all alone in the dining room and I sat down at my place trying to look naturel, saying, Hello, pop.

I see by the papers that the condemned man seemed to be in cheerful spirrits, pop said, and I said, Where's ma?

His last words were for his mother, pop said. She's at the front door waiting to pull you in by your dilatory ear, he said, and I said, Then G, pop, I saved her the trouble, didn't I?

Time will tell, pop said.

Proberly meening it might make her madder instead of gladder to see me sitting there, and I heard the front door close and ma came back, saying, Well for land sakes of all things.

Meening me, and I said, I been here for a long while, ma, haven't I, pop?

Time is a relative quantity, pop said. To a soldier on leave from the front each hour seems a fleeting minute, while to a man in dentist chair watching the dentist sharpening his drill, every second seems an eternity. I should say the 2nd example seems more applicable to your particular case he said.

Wich it was and ma said, Willyum that boy must be punished, and I said, Well jimmity Chrissmas, ma, I have been. Think of all the suspense I've been through, I said.

O eat your supper and hold your tongue, ma said.

Sounding like a impossibility.

FASCIST ITALY AND GAYDA

In Rome there is a fellow who writes as the mouthpiece of the fascist party, Virginio Gayda, who has always hunted with the fascists. He has been threatening an immediate blitzkrieg of Britain and yet time passes. This week he spoke of the attempt to crush Britain. Now he does not mention an immediate attack. He is the man who was the voice for the Hitler peace offensive which fell dead when it was made.

Gayda now says that the war against England could not be lightninglike, spectacular and massive like the conquest of France but must be a slow hammering process. He hopes for destruction with calculated methods of all the national and material resources which sustain Britain. He says Germany "has two essential tasks, to disorganize and progressively to pulverize the entire internal system of the island and to cut its communications with the outer world." He points to the dependence of Britain upon imports of food and materials. Then he makes the vainest boast of all, when he says that Britain has been relying on her mastery of the sea, but "Italian intervention has destroyed that mastery." He sees as a result of Italy's entry, the wearing down of England's warlike potentialities and her imperial resources.

Well, Italy's record so far in the Mediterranean, the Red Sea and the Indian Ocean has been poor from both navy and air arms.

Gayda's article admits the great strength of Britain which has to be worn down as he says. He admits she is well equipped and guarded for national defence and he admits the strength of the farflung empire.

Gayda and his master, the man who rides a horse, have had time to think things over and have found what they have been minimizing, the strength of Britain in defence and offence, and her economic arm. They have changed their tune which does not sound so merry as when Gayda harped on the one string of an immediate attack on Britain.

Gayda may well realize that this war when signed up with Hitler became for Italy a very serious business as Britain is not going to sheathe the sword or order "cease fire" until the Hun and his companion, the fascist, are powerless to disorder the world.

What has happened in the Mediterranean? Italy has been cut off from her empire by a few swift blows by British ships and airmen. Today Britain holds airtight control of the shipping. No help can come to Italy under the contraband regulations from far south along the African coast. Ethiopian tribesmen are making things difficult in Ethiopia for Mussolini's soldier garrisons.

Little does it suit Gayda or his master to boast of Italy's contribution to "wearing down" Britain. Italy's part must be very disconcerting to the German leader.

R.A.F. KEEPS ON POUNDING ENEMY OBJECTIVES

British airmen are accomplishing what might be almost called miracles in their relentless pressing of the war against the enemy. Friday's newspaper told the story of the steady pounding of nazi bases and supply depots and supply columns. There was told the story of the destruction which has been done to the port of Hamburg, said to be now practically in ruins. It is said that the German highways have been of aid to the British in providing directions. These roads have exposed the enemy to attack for the British have not been slow to find the way that German supply traffic passes.

One thousand attacks from air in three months upon military objectives in Germany have told a story.

In all these cases great care has been taken by the British forces to avoid damaging anything but military objectives.

On the military objectives of the enemy the loss must have been irreparable.

RESOURCES IN NAVY AND TRADE

The British blockade which now stretches from the Arctic Ocean to the northern part of Africa and the wide distribution of British ports throughout the world are a manifestation of British sea power. Never before in history has there been so wide a blockade. That the blockade will prove effective will be shown in no uncertain way.

The preliminaries to the widening of the blockade in the restrictions of the shipment of oil into Europe showed how effective the British steps immediately became.

That is the story of the strength of the navy.

There is another indication of the power of the fleet as well as of British economic power. That was the order which has been placed with the Canadian Wheat Board for one hundred million bushels of wheat for the year July 1940 to July 1941. To purchase this greatest wheat order in history proves immense resources; for Canada to have that wheat to sell to Britain is a proof of the strength of the Empire and the fact that wheat will reach Britain is a further proof of the power of Britain on the sea—that such wealth of food can be carried across the ocean.

Germany has no such force for blockade. She has not the means to buy. She has to try to barter and finds the seas closed to her because she has shown that Germany and fascist Italy are aggressor nations and hence have to be shut off by the legitimate means of the blockade.

LOYALTY

To work intelligently, to speak fairly, to feel part and parcel of the industry to which you belong, to prevent injury to yourself and others, these are the marks of a good worker, declares a current safety bulletin issued to Ontario industry by the Industrial Accident Prevention Associations.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

AUGUST 3rd., 1920.

Mr. James Barrett and son of New York City, who came here to attend the Old Boys' Re-Union, are still in the city. Mr. Barrett is an old Belleville boy who has made good in the United States. He has never forgotten his old home town and is enjoying his stay in the city.

Mrs. Everett Lloyd, Strachan Street, entertained yesterday afternoon for her mother, Mrs. James Casey of Thurlow Township; Mrs. Miranda Green of Toronto; Mrs. Fred Post of Dominion City, Manitoba, and Mrs. W. Wells of Belleville. Mrs. Post, Mrs. Green and Mrs. Casey were friends when they were young women and they had not been together until yesterday, for over fifty years.

30 YEARS AGO

AUGUST 2nd., 1910.

Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Allen of Jamestown, N. Y., are visiting their son, Mr. Lucius Allen, Albert Street.

Messrs. James Roy, William Carnew and John A. Mackie are spending a few days in Detroit, Mich.

The Rev. Dr. Bishop, pastor of Bridge Street Methodist Church, left yesterday for Vancouver, B. C., where he will attend the General Conference of the Methodist Church. Mrs. Bishop accompanied him.

Messrs. Henry Pringle and Fred D. Diamond, representing King Baldwin Preceptory of this city, have left for London, Ontario, where they will attend the 27th. annual assembly of the Sovereign Great Priory of Canada of Knights Templars.

Mr. Frank Foster has left for his home in Erie, Pa., after visiting friends here.

Stick to it, August

(The Printed Word)

In a world turned upside down, even the month of August must stir out of the lassitude to which it has become accustomed in these Canadian climes. This August of 1940 must ration its golf, it must hold itself steadily to the appointed job of work through the heat of its days, it must turn its face like flint from the temptation of the cool lake and the shady wood, it must blister its soft hands and grimly continue to press the blistered flesh against the metals it moulds for war.

History is keeping close account of Canada's month of August, 1940. Is it the month that seeks, above all things, rest and the sloughing off of care? Is it the month that must have its little holiday? Is it the month that says, "I have worked hard, and now I must renew my strength in ease, that I may work hard again"?

Wake up, August! There is no time to renew your strength in ease. There is no time to heal your blistered hands, or dash the caked sweat from your brow. This is war. Do you hear, August? War!

History will strike you off if you pause merely to give a hitch to your trousers. The devil is after you, August. The devil has a funny mustache and a funny haircut, but he is not at all funny. He is a devil out of a dream, and if you lie down to dream he will come upon you in reality. You must stand up in the blazing heat of your days, August of Canada 1940, and you must keep your blistered hands to the metal. You must remain awake by your own activity. What matter if you do wear the fat off yourself? Fights are won with muscle and bone, not fat. If you are a soldier or statesman or mill worker, remember that history is looking at you with a speculative eye. History expects you may be just another August. But don't stop to congratulate yourself on how hard you worked for your country all through July.

Stick to it, August of Canada's greatest year. What a fine handclasp history will have for you in the splendid years to come.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

Modern Society and Mental Disease

One of the great helps to health of today is the periodic examination given free to policyholders by insurance companies. Any defect is discovered early and whether it be serious or slight, the knowledge that it is present enables the individual to have it corrected in most cases or enables him to live safely despite the defect.

The day is about at hand when insurance examiners and other physicians will take note of early mental symptoms just as they do of physical symptoms and many early mental patients will never need to enter a mental institution for treatment.

Today it is recognised that mental symptoms may be due to heredity surrounding circumstances, infection and other conditions. Drs. Carney Landis, Columbia University, and James D. Page, University of Rochester, in their book 'Modern Society and Mental Disease' state that in the United States there are 600,000 patients undergoing treatment in mental instituions and their figures show that at least one person out of every twenty will become a mental hospital patient at some time during his life.

While the above are startling figures, it is reassuring to remember that of every 10 patients entering a mental hospital, at least 6 are cured and able to return to their occupation.

It has been found that whether the treatment given these mental patients is of the usual type—rest, some occupation, and some straightening out of the tangled skein in their minds by careful questioning and answering—or whether of the new type of putting the patient under insulin or metrazol shock, the best results are obtained the earlier the treatment is given.

Another point in keeping with the apparent increase in heart disease, apoplexy and cancer, is that the increase in mental disease is due to a considerable extent to the fact that more people are living longer today than in any previous period.

The thought then is that if you find yourself changing in your mood or behaviour or any member of the family begins to do 'odd' things, a mental check-up by your family physician or a physician to whom he refers you, may correct the condition and prevent you or yours from becoming a mental patient.

Open Air Altar For Indian Girl, Dead 250 Years

(Windsor Star)

In the Indian Village of Caughnawaga under the direction of Chief Poking Fire, tribal head, an elaborate open-air altar is rising, featuring a carved statue of Kateri Tekawitha — Mohawk Indian maiden who died more than 250 years ago and who, it is expected, will be canonized this summer.

Built of Stones

The altar is built of stones taken from the bed of the St. Lawrence River and has as its focal point a statue of St. Francis Xavier. The carved figure of Kateri Tekawitha—the Lily of the Mohawks—will be placed in front of the altar.

Carefully preserved in a vault at the mission church are the bones of this Indian girl and to these relics many cures have already been ascribed.

The lengthy processes which precede the granting of sainthood have been started in Rome and the entire Catholic hierarchy of the continent has supported the proposal in letters to the Holy Father.

The site of the last remains of Kateri Tekawitha—also known as the Little Flower of North America—is a veritable shrine of Indian and early Canadian missionary history.

Kept in Mission

The bones are kept in the mission house adjoining the church proper. This building is in excellent condition and was constructed in 1720 by missionary fathers from France. Each year thousands of people from Canada and the United States visit the site. Text-books, crucifixes, sacred paintings and even the records of the missionary fathers are preserved in the vaults.

Among the relics is one of the earliest known examples of the wampum belt. It is over three feet long and seven inches wide, and on it is worked a sermon in Christianity. Offers of many thousands of dollars for this belt have been refused by the fathers.

Determined Girl

"The Lily of the Mohawks" was born in Glen Montgomery County, New York, in 1656 and was orphaned at the age of four by a smallpox epidemic. She was adopted by an uncle, a bitter opponent of the Christian missionaries. Despite her uncle's opposition she was determined to become a Christian and was baptised on Easter Sunday, 1676.

She suffered many hardships for her faith, refusing to marry at her uncle's order at the age of 11 and later bearing the taunts of her fellow-tribesmen when she made a vow to chastity, a step unprecedented among the Indians.

In 1680 she died, her frail constitution and the ravages of smallpox being instrumental in her demise.

Cause Advanced

In 1884 a conference of United States bishops proposed her for beatification and in 1931 the move assumed a concrete form with the appointment of a postular to advance her cause.

The bones of Kateri lay in a grave at the foot of the Lachine Rapids from the time of her death until 1715. Then the grave was opened and some of the bones taken to Caughnawaga church. Others were given to the Indian reservation of St. Regis. These were destroyed in a fire more than 90 years ago so that those at Caughnawaga are the only ones left.

If the postulator is successful these bones will be sent to Rome. After the beatification they will be returned to Caughnawaga where a shrine will be erected to the "Lily of the Mohawks."

Two paintings of the Indian girl are to be seen in the mission house.

Unhappy Swiss

With France prostrate and Germany and Italy allies, it would seem that traditionally neutral Switzerland no longer would have anything to worry about from belligerent neighbors. But reports from Berne reveal that the land of cantons is as tense as it has been at any time during the past year.

Expediency explained the German invasion of the Low Countries, and for that matter the invasion of Scandinavia. But military expediency does not hold the answer to the Axis threat to Switzerland. Nothing but a ruthless desire for conquest menaces the Alpine nation, and the Swiss recognize it by keeping their battlements manned.

It would not be surprising too, if Switzerland's fate were the cause of some disquietude on the Italian side of the Alps. It's all down hill to the Adriatic and Mediterranean from the mountain passes on the Italian frontier.

Willing to Help West

W. P. Rickard, (Lib. Durham), said Ontario farmers were willing to help needy western farmers but they did not believe a producer should have the right to demand the guaranteed initial payment on more than 5,000 bushels in any one crop year. The proposed amendments remove the limitation which now restrict deliveries to 5,000 bushels by a producer in one year.

Huge mechanized farms could deliver up to 60,000 bushels a year and Mr. Rickart did not believe they were entitled to the full protection of the guaranteed price.

Mr. Mackenzie deplored the amount of talk and political bickering in this and other debates. Next session, he said he would move to eliminate mail franking privileges of members. If members could not mail out free copies of their speeches, the sessions would probably be shortened by a month or six weeks.

Make Small Payment

In committee of the whole, discussing the Act section by section, Mr. MacKinnon said Ontario wheat growers would shortly receive a small supplementary payment on their 1939 wheat. The accounts were now being completed.

The statement was an answer to the maiden "speech" by R. McCubbin, Liberal Middlesex West. Actually Mr. McCubbin only asked a question.

The Minister told Mark Senn, Conservative Haldimand, the proceeds of the processing levy collected on Ontario Wheat would be kept in a separate account maintained by the Wheat Board for Ontario Wheat sales.

The new bill provides that the Wheat Advisory Committee will "assist" the board, where the Old Act said "advise". The Minister said under present conditions the committee would really have to assist. It would meet with the Board and report on its activities to the Board.

Various agricultural organizations had been asked to nominate members from whom the government might select committee members.

Wheat Debate Resumed

Wheat debate was resumed after the House accepted the Senate's amendment to the Unemployment Insurance Bill and heard Defence Minister Ralston announce arrival of fifth major contingent of Canadian troops in the United Kingdom.

The Senate, meanwhile, wrangled over the fact that the regulations for mobilization were not yet available for Parliament's examination and decided to meet again today.

Trade Minister MacKinnon, during the wheat debate, announced sale of 100,000,000 bushels of Canadian wheat to Britain, to be delivered during the coming year. The deal, the largest in wheat history, was negotiated directly between the British Food Ministry and the Wheat Board at a price considerably above the market.

The government's grain policy was "nothing but a confusion and bewilderment," Mr. Coldwell said. "I should like to see the position thoroughly cleared up before we leave the House and I say that because Canada is facing a very difficult situation."

If there was dissatisfaction in the west, much of it was due to statements by the Liberal party prior to the 1935 election, when they promised the farmers dollar wheat. Instead, the farmers were paying higher prices and getting 50 cents a bushel at the farm.

Urges Aid to Build Bins

The tremendous problems of the post-war period should be receiving attention now and one of those problems was what would happen to western agriculture after the war. J. A. Ross (Con. Souris), C. E. Johnston (N.D. Bow River) and Mr. Coldwell urged aid for the farmers to construct storage bins on the farms, instead of subsidizing the elevator companies to build more annexes. An advance of 40 cents on grain stored on the farms was recommended by Mr. Coldwell and Mr. Johnston. An amendment stipulating a 40-cent advance was moved by Robert Fair (N.D. Battle River) but was ruled out of order.

Excessive freight rate made it almost impossible for Western Canada to buy the goods it desired, Mr. Johnston contended. "Unless Eastern Canada recognizes the fact that it must treat Western Canada as it should be treated, then of course, Western Canada must look to some means of taking care of itself."

Gordon Ross (Lib. Moose Jaw) protested the suggestion the farmers were being left to carry the whole load. The government was carrying the load at present to the extent of about $140,000,000 and it would be carrying $280,00,000 more before the wheat on hand was sold.

CAPT. HORACE WILD, PIONEER AIRMAN, USED EVERY KIND OF AIR MACHINE

Captain Horace B. Wild, pioneer American airman, who died the other day in New York City, had flown in every type of aerial vehicle, from kites to airplanes. Captain Horace B. Wild was the associate of the dare-devil pioneer pilots who made aviation history in this country and abroad. He helped Octave Chanute with his glider experiments in the Indiana sand dunes which helped lay a foundation for the Wrights' successful inauguration of flight in a powered machine. Later he visited the brothers in their bicycle shop in Dayton before the epoch-making first flight at Kitty Hawk, N. C.

He knew Glenn Curtiss in his earliest days at Hammandsport. Above all he was himself a trail-blazing pilot of the early hydrogen blimps which set the country in a fever of excitement over cities and at fair grounds in the first decade of the century.

It was Captain Wild's fortune to participate intimately in the crude exploits of aeronautics which preceded the era of the coming of age of aviation and to use also the more modern vehicles which have changed the whole tempo of transportation.

Flight in 1889.

Twenty years before Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh was born, Wild made his first trip into the air. His aircraft was a man-carrying kite ten feet by eight in dimension, constructed by his father, who had been a balloonist in England with John Wise. On July 4, 1889, when he was 11 years old, he took a firm hold of the crossbar of this kite at Hinsdale, Ill., and was carried 150 feet into the air. The kite dove into the top of a tree. The passenger suffered little damage, except to his nerves. A few weeks later he eagerly accepted an invitation to go aloft in a hot-air balloon at Quincy, Ill., and made a parachute jump from it.

When at an altitude of 4,000 feet, young Wild thought better of the jumping part of the program. He stuck with the balloon, which came down in the middle of a large field and dragged him through several fences. His bruises healed, he went up again and this time jumped.

Exhibition jumping, which brought returns of $500 to $700 for each leap, promptly lured him. His first jump of this sort was at the Wheaton County Fair, and he returned home the plutocrat of the town.

In 1904 he was out in Oakland helping Captain Baldwin construct the California Arrow, the first successful dirigible built in the United States. Tested and found good, it was taken by train to St. Louis to try for the $10,000 offered by the Exposition. Santos-Dumont, Brazilian airship enthusiast, was there, with his dirigible.

When the time came for the race, Santos Dumont's dirigible would not fly. All Baldwin and Wild had to do to win the $10,000 was to circle the course. But the California Arrow would not rise either. Its gas had lost buoyancy. "Uncle Tom" Baldwin's 227 pounds was entirely too much for it. Wild had a sprained ankle and could not go up. All was despair until Roy Knabenshue of Toledo, then a boy weighing only a little more than 110 pounds, turned up. He flew the Baldwin ship perfectly and won the $10,000.

Spent $47,000 on Airships

Just after the St. Louis Exposition Captain Wild got the job of installing all the electrical equipment at what was to become White City, Chicago's amusement park. He made $47,000 in one year and spent it all on dirigibles. The first of fourteen airships constructed at various times was completed in the Fall of 1905 and christened The Eagle.

This ship was 70 feet long and 18 in diameter. It cost $7,000. The first flight was nearly disastrous. Launched on Dec. 28 at Chicago, the ship had been lightened of too much ballast and shot high in the air. The engine failed and the ship continued to rise and the silk of the bag to stretch. At 4,000 feet Wild tried to untie the rope which held the neck of the appendix but the knot was frozen. The balloon was drifting toward Lake Michigan. At length the knot yielded. The craft drifted over railroad tracks as the headlights of an express appeared around a curve. Grabbing the battery, Wild heaved it overboard and the balloon shot up just in time to clear the top of the locomotive. Near Madison Avenue and Eighty-second Street onlookers finally caught the drap rope and, pulling the bag down, brought to a close the first of nearly 1,000 balloon flights.

Flight in Runaway Balloon

Captain Wild was the first man to fly over the Chicago Loop district, on Jan. 3, 1927. On Aug. 1 of the same year he was the first to fly over Detroit, landing on the roof of the Buhl block in the center of the business district. He personally built several types of airships equipped with gasoline motors.

His most noteworthy flight was one of fourteen miles out over the Pacific Ocean and back to a point near Long Beach, Calif. The flight started from Shutes Park, Los Angeles, on June 10, 1902, when the captive balloon of Uncle Tom Baldwin, of which Wild was the pilot, snapped its cable at an altitude of 1,500 feet.

In the runaway balloon there were three women and a man as passengers. It went up to 12,600 feet, passed out over the ocean and came down until the steel cable dragged on the bottom of the sea. Thus retarded, the surface breeze returned it safely over the shore and it landed without damage against a haystack.

In the balloon United States, Captain Wild took second place in the race from Chicago, July 4, 1908. With A. P. Shirley as co-pilot, he crossed Lake Michigan, Southern Michigan, Lake Huron and the whole length of Lake Ontario, landing in Lake Kiskisiak, N. S., 952 miles away.

Percy Hudson and Wild won the inter-State race over northern Minnesota in August of that year. Again as pilot of the United States, he won first prize, starting once more from Shutes Park, Los Angeles, on Nov. 17, 1908. With a companion he traveled in this flight over Mount Baldy, across the Sierra Nevada range and landed in the Mohave Desert, 458 miles from the start.

In a dirigible airship, Captain Wild, on Aug. 22, 1906, flew over St. Louis and landed on the lawn of the Four Courts in the center of the city. In the Eagle I he was the first man to go to the barber shop by flying machine. On Sept. 12, 1908 he took off from the Kentucky State Fair grounds at Louisville, landed on the roof of a building on the corner of Fourth and Market Streets, tied his ship to a chimney and, after going downstairs to the barber shop for a haircut and shave, took off again and returned to the fair grounds. He was also the first man to fly from one country to another in a motor-driven aircraft when, in the Eagle IV, he went from Detroit over the Sinclair River to Windsor, Ont., and back again.

Designed and Built Motors

Captain Wild designed and built six types of aeronautic motors for his early ships and had flown almost every other type of aircraft engine developed up to the larger transport types.

With gliders, Captain Wild's experiences also were early and various. He was a member of the Chanute camp at Miller, Ind., in 1887-9. In 1902-3 Wild and Carl Bates built a number of Chanute type gliders at Grinnell, Iowa, and made more than 100 flights down along the hillslopes. In 1908-9 they made a number of automobile-towed flights in Bates gliders.

In 1930 Captain Wild and Jack O'Meara reconstructed the Darmstadt and from it built the soaring plane with which O'Meara won the bulk of the national trophies at the Elmira meet of 1932. Wild, who owned the plane and christened it the Chanute, flew gliders himself from the ridges at Elmira in 1933.

He saw Orville Wright's flight with Lieutenant Frank P. Lahm at Fort Meyer, Va., on Sept. 16, 1908, his first view of a powered airplane. In 1910 he made his own first solo. On May 10 of that year he flew Otto Brody's Farman tractor biplane in Illinois. He never had any dual instruction, but after a dozen or so grass-cutting trips up and down the field and some short hops to sense the controls, did a straightaway of about half a mile at a height of 30 feet. After two weeks of practice he learned to circle the field and do figure eights. He flew with Herbert Latham in the Belmont Park meet of 1910 and the next year organized the Grant Park meet in Chicago, where he was one of the prominent pilots.

Captain Wild's total flying time in all kinds of aircraft exceeded 4,000 hours, covering some 1,800 flights of which about seventy-five were made in Europe and the rest in the United States and Canada. He was the author of many magazine and newspaper articles on flying.

ONTARIO FORMS YOUTHFUL ARMY TO HARVEST CROPS

Youths From 12 to 17 Have Been Called Upon to Help in Ontario Harvest

LATE SCHOOL OPENING

Toronto, Aug. 3—(CP)—The formation of a youthful army known as "Soldiers of the Soil" was under way in Ontario today under the auspices of the Provincial Government. Youth from 12 to 17 have been called upon to help in the harvesting of wartime crops, relieving an acute shortage of farm labor that is general throughout Ontario.

To aid hard-pressed farmers, the government announced last night that both rural and urban schools will remain closed 15 days to a month longer than usual this fall so schoolboys may enroll for farm work at varying wages. High schools will not open until Oct. 1 and primary schools, Sept. 15 or later.

At present farm jobs are going begging, although wages ranging $30 to $40 a month for experienced men are offered. The wages paid the schoolboy land army will, however, vary with age, physical qualifications and adaptability and will include board and lodging.

"I have no doubt of the success of the enterprise," said Premier Hepburn. "Already this year approximately 500 high school boys have volunteered for farm work and have been taken on. They have set a splendid example which others will be quick to follow.

Can Make Contribution

"I, as a farmer, know the near-desperate conditions under which some farms are at present operating. By aiding the farmer at this critical moment our schoolboys will be making a very valuable contribution to our war effort. The patriotism of young Canada has never at any time been in question. In no Province does that fact hold more true than in Ontario."

The government is considering the issuing of some special badge to the young soldiers of the soil and they will be enrolled for the present at government headquarters at Queen's Park here. Later other offices for enrollment will be opened throughout the Province.

The scheme will have a dual purpose: Relieving "a serious shortage in farm labor" and to assure Ontario's continued contribution to empire food supplies "without which her armed forces cannot move or her civilian population exist indefinitely."

It follows a similar scheme of the first Great War. In 1917, some 5,000 high school boys were released from studies beyond the usual summer vacation and the next year almost 10,000 were given farm jobs. The Departments of Labor, Education, Agriculture and Welfare are cooperating.

Centenary

Centenary—Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Blake and daughter Evelyn, of Toronto, spent a day, recently with the former's sister, Mrs. D. Holton.

A Red Cross meeting was held at the home of Mrs. R. Hart on Thursday. A quilt was finished and other work planned for.

Mr. and Mrs. P. Redfern, Belleville, colled on Mr. and Mrs. Holton on Thursday evening.

Point Anne

Point Anne—On Thursday, Aug. 1, a large number of the workers of the Point Anne Red Cross unit met at the home of Mrs. Geo. Winters, Bleecker Avenue, Belleville. The time was passed in social chat and knitting. Mrs. Winters served tea and was assisted by Mrs. Geo. MacDonald who poured tea and Mesdames C. MacDonald, J. Huck, D. MacDonald, L. Roluf, E. Kelsey and the Misses May and Jessie Tulk. A fine sum was realized for Red Cross purposes.

Mr. and Mrs. V. Simpson of Rio de Janeiro spent last week with her sister, Mrs. John Fleming.

Mrs. Jack Coleman of Toronto, spent holidays with Mrs. Robert MacDonald and other relatives, Mrs. Coleman was before her marriage, Miss Mary MacDonald, a former resident of the village.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Wagar spent the week-end in Peterboro at the home of their daughter.

Mr. Bob Stewart, who has been an employee of the Canada Cement Co for some years left on Saturday for Ottawa where he will train with the Veterans' Home Guard.

Eugene Derushie, the eight-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Stewart Derushie, while playing at his home on Thursday, fell from a tree when the limb on which he was sitting broke. The boy suffered a severe fracture of the left arm near the wrist. The fracture was reduced by Dr. J. J. Robertson at the Belleville Hospital after which the child was returned to his home where he is resting quietly.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred McHendry and daughters of Detroit, Mr. and Mrs. James Cole of Deseronto and Mrs. George Moore of Napanee called at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley MacDonald on Wednesday evening.

The many friends of the late Mr. Lindsay Neal were shocked to hear of his sudden death in Kingston Hospital on Wednesday. The service was held from his late residence on Friday, July 27. Interment was made in Mount Nebo Cemetery. He leaves to mourn his loss, his widow, five sons and three daughters who will receive the sympathy of this vicinity.

An afternoon tea in aid of the Red Cross was held on the lawn of Mrs. Florence Bateman on Friday afternoon. Guests were present from Marmora, Bethel, Rylestone, Stanwood, Bonarlaw and Springbrook. A very dainty lunch of ice cream, cake, lemonade, etc., was served by the W.A. ladies of Springbrook.

Dr. Marvin Wellman returned to his home in Whitby on Friday.

Mr. W. S. Stiles and Mr. D. Wellman called on Mr. Ernest Brown at Harold who is seriously ill.

The regular W.I. met at the home of Mrs. George Williams on Wednesday afternoon with thirty members and visitors present. The president, Mrs. J. P. Baker, took charge of the meeting and opened in the usual manner with "O Canada" and the W.I. ode followed by the Lord's prayer, also the daily prayer of the Red Cross. Roll call, a traffic bylaw was well responded to and several new members were enrolled. Mrs. W. J. Barlow read the minutes of the last meeting and the new directors were appointed. Letters received from Mrs. Fred McKeown and Mrs. Goloway were read. It was decided to divide the members into three groups for Red Cross work: Twelth Line group with Mrs. Roy Brown as captain and Mrs. Allan McComb as lieutenant; Thirteenth Line and Bonarlaw group with Mrs. A. V. Brown captain and Mrs. M. Barlow lieutenant; Springbrook group with Mrs. Geo. Williams as captain and Mrs. G. Meiklejohn as lieutennant and at the end of the year the losers treat the winners. Mrs. W. Heath gave the motto: "Example is a living law which will sway men more than all the written laws obey" which was a splendid paper. Miss Marjorie Brown and Miss Edna McComb gave splendid reports on theid trip to Kemptville College and both thanked the W.I. members for making it possible for them to attend. Miss Marjorie Brown gave an instrumental solo followed by a vocal solo by Audrey Gay with Mrs. Williams at the piano. Doris Thompson put on a contest. A special collection was taken to purchase yarn for soldiers. The singing of God Save the King brought the meeting to a close after which a dainty lunch was served.

The War This Week

By DON GILBERT
Canadian Press Cable Editor

No general attack came from Germany in the 48th week of the war: Only the daily assaults on British convoys and British towns by the Nazi air force, attacks which were returned in full by British airmen who have reduced to ruins Germany's largest port, Hamburg, and wrecked other vital centres.

As in the previous week, there were evidences of doubt in the enemy's mind over the feasibility of successfully invading the British Isles. But no one can say whether the inspired utterances of officials and newspapers in enemy territory reflect actual trends or are camouflage to confuse the defenders of Britain.

Virginio Gayda, the writer chosen by Mussolini to interpret Fascist policy for the public, wrote that rapid subjugation of Britain was not practicable and that a long wearing down process would be necessary. In Germany, Robert Ley, Labor Minister, threw cold water on the idea that Britain could be knocked down as France was.

The largest German raid of the week was on the English Channel port of Dover, where some 20 of more than 80 raiders were shot down by the Royal Air Force or anti-aircraft guns on the ground. The Nazis failed to damage any part of the harbor or the harbor walls. The next most notable German effort was by a single plane on the southeastern city of Norwich where some damage to industrial establishments was caused.

R. A. F. Continue Mission

The R.A.F. continued its mission of destruction over German cities important to the Nazi war effort. Hanover and Cologne were two of the week's targets. An authoritative source said Hamburg with oil refineries, munitions factories and docks had been "pulverized again and again." Leipzig, Dusseldorf, Essen and Dortmund were other cities of military importance where "irreparable damage" has been inflicted by the R.A.F.

The war in the Mediterannean continued without sensational developments. Each side lost a few aircraft and a ship or two. In the desert Italian forces in Libya were reported advancing cautiously on Egypt.

Glancing back 25 years:

Advance of Austro-German forces in Poland finally engulfed Warsaw, the Polish capital which was evacuated by the Russians Aug. 2. The successes by French troops in the Vosges Mountains were followed by strong enemy counter-attacks, but all of these were repulsed.

Tweed and District

Tweed, Aug. 3. — Not only have bogus cheues made their appearance in Tweed but also bogus coins. Two or three business men have been victimized by counterfeit Canadian quarters and half-dollars. These coins are easily recognized as they are not perfect replicas of the coins which they represent, being dull in appearance and somewhat rough to the touch.

Mr. Chas. Dion has taken over the management of the British American gas station at the corner of N. Victoria and Bridge streets. The station had been operated by Mr. H. A. Grier who has joined the 34th Battery C.A.S.F. He is a veteran of the Great War and will proceed to Petawawa camp in a short time.

Tweed Business and Professional Women's Club held a picnic at the park on Monday evening. "Ginger" Hounslow treated the ladies to a trip around the lake in his speedboat.

Lincoln Elliott was the winner of first prize in the annual Field Crop Competition sponsored by the Tweed Agricultural Society in 1940. The society distributed $75.00 in prize money this year, selecting O.A.C. barley as the crop for competition. The fields were judged by Mr. Gordon Hancock, departmental judge. Other winners in order are W. E. Bateman, Tweed; Wm. Woods Tweed; Fred Healey, Stoco; Laurason Gunning, Tweed; J. E. Bateman, Thomasburg; Thos. Whalen, Stoco; Stafford Whalen, Stoco; C. Rush, Stoco; J. Treacy, Stoco; C. F. Elliott, Tweed.

Tweed Lodge No. 290 I.O.O.F. has purchased the building known as Tweed Auditorium from the Tweed Orange Lodge. The building of solid brick construction was erected some twenty-five years ago. For a number of years' duration the era of silent movies it was the rendezvous of cinema devotees. The introduction of talkies in Belleville soon resulted in a falling-off in attendance with the resultant abandonment of movies in Tweed until three years ago when Victoria Theatre was opened. Tweed Auditorium has an excellent stage where amateur plays by local and outside talent have been given to capacity audiences. In the rooms above the auditorium, a number of lodges hold their meetings, the Masonic Order occupying the eastern side and the Orange Lodge and Eastern Star the western half. With the change of ownership Tweed Oddfellows and Rebekahs will return to their old lodge room in the auditorium.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Roth and two chidren spent the past week camping at Sugar Island in Jordan's cottage.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Mouck and daughter of Sudbury are visiting their parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Mouck and Mr. Henry Sexsmith. Mr. Mouck is employed in the nickel mines at Sudbury.

Mr. Harry Manning of Oshawa caught two muskies on Monday morning in Stoco Lake. One specimen weighed 18 pounds and the other 8 pounds. Mrs. Manning who accompanied her husband, is a daughter of Walter Nick, formerly of Tweed. Ross Fetterly acted as guide for the fishing trip.

Word has been received here of the death in Buffalo, N.Y., after an illness of some duration of John Mikulski, well-known in Tweed. He is survived by his widow, formerly Kathleen Quinn, daughter of the late John Quinn and Mrs. Quinn of Tweed, and three children. Among those in attendance at the funeral in Buffalo were Messrs. Gerald, Leo and Rev. Fr. Francis Quinn, brothers of Mrs. Mikulski.

Don McCrea, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sim McCrea, Tweed, has joined the 8st Field Battery Royal Canadian Artillery, Montreal, with headquarters at Place Viger Barracks. For the past several years Don has been employed in Cornwall and later in Montreal.

Merchant Ships Sunk This Week

Official secrecy left the 300-ton Greek tanker Hermione the only merchant vessel known to have been sunk in the week ending Aug. 2. But there undoubtedly were others.

The British government's summary of sinkings for the week ending July 21—announced this week—showed 37,577 tons of British shipping was lost, together with 10,192 of neutral shipping and 2,088 tons allied.

ENGAGEMENT NOTICE

Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert Hagerman, Stirling, announce the engagement of their daughter, Marjorie, to Kenneth Joseph Stapley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Stapley, Holloway. Marriage to take place, August 20th, in St. Paul's United Church, Stirling.

Lieut. S. Ervine of Camp Borden, is spending the week-end here at his home.

The condition of the Rev. A. L. Geen, who suffered a stroke early this week, is reported today to be only fair.

Mrs. S. Ervine has returned home after spending a few days in Toronto attending the funeral of her nephew, Master Edwin (Teddy) Aubrey Hastings.

Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Atkinson of Rochester, N.Y., called at Mr. and Mrs. James Barlow's, Charles Street, on their way to visit Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Turner of Ottawa.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Iley of Bournemouth, England, have arrived in the city and will be guests of their son, C. W. Iley, 165 Charles Street for the duration.

Mrs. James Large, 350 Bleecker Avenue, is recovering nicely from a minor operation at the Belleville General Hospital.

WEDDINGS

GAY—BONTER

At the summer home of the officiating clergyman, Silver Lake, Ont., on Thursday morning, August 1st, Mildred Eileen daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Bonter of Marmora, was united in marriage to George Henderson Gay of Belleville, son of Mrs. Gay and the late Mr. David Scott Gay of Edinburgh, Scotland. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. C. W. Hollingsworth, a former pastor of the United Church at Marmora.

The bride wore a dusky rose and white ensemble of matching prints with a full length sheer redingote and a white hat with matching ribbon. Her accessories were white and she carried a bouquet of white Colonial roses, baby's breath and Scotch fern. Miss Grace Bonter, sister of the bride was bridesmaid, wearing a street length dress of Arcadia blue and white printed crepe with contrasting accessories. Her corsage was of pink Briarcliffe roses and sweetpeas.

Mr. Herbert Bonter acted as best man.

After the ceremony a dinner was held at the Rideau Hotel, Smith's Falls for the immediate family.

The bride and groom left on a motor trip through the Laurentians to Montreal, the bride travelling in a suit of mauve Alpine cloth with white accessories. On their return they will reside in Belleville.

HOGAN—COURNEYEA

Tweed, (Special)—St. Edmund's Church, Stoco, was the scene of a pretty wedding on July 27th., when Mary Dorothy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Felix J. Courneyea was united in marriage to Vincent Joseph Hogan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Hogan, of Kingston Mills. Rev. Father Meagher performed the ceremony.

The bridesmaid was Miss Velma Courneyea and the groomsman, Mr. Joseph Dunn. Miss Clara Mulrooney played the wedding music. The young couple will reside in Kingston Mills after a short wedding trip.

For Unexpected Guest Whip Up An Omelette

AN OMELETTE is, to the experienced cook, one of those things that can be whipped up if unexpected company comes and there is not enough meat to serve family and guests. We'll use mushrooms for our omelette and serve it as our main dinner dish.

Today's Menu

Omelette with Mushrooms
Creamed Potatoes Tomato Salad
Lemon Cake
Fresh Berries or Sliced Peaches
Iced Coffee or Tea

Omelette with Mushrooms

1-2 pound mushrooms
1 tablespoon flour
1-4 teaspoon salt
4 eggs
9 tablespoons milk or milk and water
Pepper or paprika

Separate yolks and whites of eggs, add flour to yolks, then salt and a little paprika. Mix milk in gradually, then add chopped mushrooms which have been sauteed in butter for 4 or 5 minutes. Lastly, fold in whites of eggs and pour mixture into sizzling hot, buttered omelette pan or heavy frying pan. Cook slowly on top of stove until brown underneath, then put in hot oven to finish setting. Fold over and serve at once.

Lemon Angel Cake

1-2 cup sugar
3-4 teaspoon cream of tartar
4 egg whites
1-2 cup bread flour
Grated rind of 1-2 lemon

Beat egg whites until light and stiff, add sugar gradually to form a meringue. Fold in flour and cream of tartar sifted together, add lemon rind and turn into ungreased angel food tin. Bake at 325 degrees F. When baked, turn form over on frame to cool. When cold, remove from form and ice all over with lemon icing.

The Stars Say

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Sunday, August 4

SUNDAY'S horoscope holds several adverse configurations excepting for spiritual, cultural and intellectual preoccupations. There are signs of a sudden precipitation of disturbing, erratic and possibly devastating situations which it will take the utmost control, poise, deliberation and prudence to compose, without penalty or disaster.

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves in a year of whirlwind adventures of an unpredictable nature. Tactful writings and correspondence may be helpful vehicles, but shun impetuous moves.

A child born on this day may be headstrong, impulsive, erratic and adventurous, while having fine intellect and much spiritual reserve.

For Monday, August 5

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is for splendid if not extraordinary opportunity for reaching high goals and the loftiest of ambitions on almost every phase of aspiration and ambition. Such expansive, generous and gratifying culmination may be the reward of long and arduous industry and application, patience and genuine worth and stability.

Those whose birthday it is should be assured of a year of the most glorious, generous and gracious recognition of patience, merit, stability and fidelity.

A child born on this day should be endowed with much ability, versatility, and advanced ambitions with dependability to secure for itself recognition and high place in life.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Mutiny On The Bounty"

Proclaimed the greatest of all sea dramas, "Mutiny On The Bounty" opens Sunday midnite after 12 a.m. at the Capitol theatre after being more than a year in production.

Aside from entertainment, it presents an authentic visual document of one of the most notable chapters of maritime history—the mutiny on the H.M.S. Bounty one hundred and fifty years ago.

In the annals of the sea there is no more fascinating story than that told of the Bounty which set sail from England in 1787, bound for Tahiti.

Tyranny Brings Rebellion

In charge was Lieutenant Bligh, a hard taskmaker. Storms lengthened the voyage, food ran low and as Bligh's temper increased he raged at his underfed and embittered crew. The golden days that followed the arrival at Tahiti temporarily quieted his men, but shortly after the start of the return voyage Bligh's tyranny brought rebellion to the breaking point and his men rose in mutiny.

Then followed adventures that have never since had their equal in naval history; Bligh and his eighteen loyal seamen sailing 4,000 miles in an open boat; escaped mutineers seeking refuge with their native wives; Bligh's return and the capture of several of the mutineers; another shipwreck and Bligh again in an open boat at the mercy of the sea on a 3,500 mile cruise; and the final naval court-martial back in England with all its tragedy and faded hopes.

"Mutiny On The Bounty" faithfully follows the original British Admiralty records and the sensational story written by Charles Nordhoff and James Norman Hall.

A Thalberg Production

Frank Lloyd, who filmed "Cavalcade" and the memorable "Sea Hawk," was the director.

Three of the greatest actors either on stage or screen heard the cast of more than fifty featured players. They are Charles Laughton, as Captain Bligh; Clark Gable, as Fletcher Christian, leader of the mutineers and, Franchot Tone, as Midshipman Byam.

For the spectacular film, the original H.M.S. Bounty was recreated in exact detail from British Admiralty plans to sail the Pacific Ocean. A fleet of other sailing vessels, typical of the period, also was duplicated for the picture.

On the same an added first run laugh riot "An Angel From Texas" starring the brother rat cast Eddie Albert, Rosebary Lane, Wayne Morris, Jane Wyman, Ronald Reagan and Ruth Terry.

AT THE BELLE

"Beau Geste"

Gary Cooper, ably seconded by Ray Milland and Robert Preston, and supported by a cast of noted players, has the most adventure-filled role of his career in Paramount's lusty, roaring new filmization of "Beau Geste" now on the Belle Theatre screen. Cooper will be seen in the title role, as the eldest of a trio of gallant brothers, who, because each does not wish the others thought guilty of stealing a fabulously valuable sapphire from their guardian, join the French Foreign Legion. Soldiers all, loyal as only brothers can be, they endure the hardships of the legion with a smile, bearing the brutal treatment of a mad sergeant who is determined to wrest the gem from them, protecting the secret of who stole the jewel with their lives, their honor, their fighting hearts. Milland and Preston are seen as the younger "Geste" brothers, "John" and "Digby", respectively. Brian Donlevy, Susan Hayward, J. Carrol Naish, Donald O'Connor and James Stephenson are among the supporting cast. The picture was produced and directed by William A. Wellman, who will be remembered for the thrill-filled "Men With Wings."

"When a Triangle Had its Points" is the title of a funny comicolor cartoon to be presented on the same program with the popular Belle newsreal.

Sunday Midnight Show

Joan Crawford and Fredric March a new co-starring duo for the screen, score one of the sensational surprises of the year in "Susan and God", picturization of the Rachel Crothers' fast, funny, romantic comedy hit which will be presented at the Belle Sunday midnight only. As the social gadabout, Susan, who adopts a new social movement as a fad and attempts to convert all her friends while ignoring the tangle of her own family life, Miss Crawford wins new spurs as a dramatic actress. March, returning to the screen following his stage hit in "The American Way," turns in one of his most convincing performances as Barrie, the inebriate husband who gradually wins control of the situation. Distinguished supporting roles are contributed by Ruth Hussey, John Carroll, Rita Hayworth, Nigel Bruce, Bruce Cabot, Rita Quigley and Rose Hobart, and George Cukor, directing, has achieved an even more satisfying piece of entertainment than his earlier success, "The Women."

A selected program of short varied treats will also be exhibited.

Freemasonry Dissolved by French Gov't Edict

Vichy, France, Aug. 3 (AP).—The Petain government has ordered dissolution of Freemasonry and all other secret societies in France, it was announced today.

The press charged Freemasonry with offences ranging from sapping the morale of France to undermining Marshal Petain's efforts to reestablish the "work, family and fatherland" idea among the people.

The newspaper Le Nouvelliste of Lyon declared "our foreign enemies never would have been able to succeed against us if France had not been literally assassinated by the venom of secret lodges."

The newspaper asserted that Freemasonry systematically deprived the French of their ideals, adding:

"France without ideals has become a defeated France."

Serene Setting Helps Children Who Stutter

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

Few of us really know how much the stuttering child must suffer. Many youths write me of their suffering. There's no person I would desire to help more than the stutterer and it gives me a great deal of satisfaction when a mother who has written me about a stuttering young child writes later to tell me that he has recovered. Not all stutterers are cured, of course. Yet most could be, I do believe, if early enough the home atmosphere and relationships were properly adjusted and the child adequately understood.

A father writes:

"Dear Doctor: I am a great reader of your articles. I am writing you in behalf of my eight-year-old boy. When he was about six years old he began to stutter. At times he is worse than other times. My wife has the habit of telling him to stop stuttering when he is trying to speak a word and apparently this seems to be bad for him.

Came on Suddenly

"He apparently is normal in every other way and very healthy. He was speaking all his words with ease until he was about five years of age. I would greatly appreciate any advice you are able to give me on what course would be the best to try in order to correct this ailment."

"Your wife believes, of course, she is doing best for your boy when she tells him to stop stuttering or speak more slowly. Her doing so gives her some temporary emotional relief. But I am sure her way is wrong. I hope she can be prevailed upon to say nothing to him about his stuttering; never to interrupt him or look at his mouth then; not even to breathe irregularly while he stutters nor reveal by her demeanor or gestures that she is aware of his stuttering; but rather to discipline herself to act as if she were not aware of his stuttering, to act and feel in his presence as if all is well. I hope moreover, that every other person in this boy's presence treats him in like manner. I hope his teacher permits him to speak in class only when he feels the courage to do so; that, moreover, she induces a sympathetic attitude toward him on the part of his classmates.

Read to Him

"You and mother should read aloud to him a great deal every day and sing with him informally as a part of the family fun.

"Encourage this boy to make things with tools. You should, of course, have this lad carefully checked by your doctor. Encourage him to play with other children his age out of doors and to learn the usual play skills. But see that he does not grow over-weary. If necessary, break his play periods, especially in summer, with rest and quiet periods. Encourage him to lie down every afternoon for an hour during the summer and to have a quiet period before dinner when he goes to school.

"Forbid his listening to exciting radio programs. Keep the radio silent while the family are together. Limit movies to one a month or less. Let his parents work on themselves for calm voice and serene manner with lots of relaxation, smiles and laughter. If there are other children in the family write me and let me offer further suggestions."

Solving Parent Problems

Q. Should the older of two children be forced to give up his toys to the younger?

A. No; try to force a child to share and he grows more selfish. It is far better to try to persuade him to share and then praise him for his generosity when he does.

Nice Eyes Have Nice Manners

By HELEN FOLLETT

Like the songs of one's childhood, beautiful eyes are unforgettable. They make a strong appeal. The list of tricks a woman can do with them is as long as your arm.

They speak a language of their own and that's why they should have nice manners. A flame of anger in them can scare a man half to death, while a soft, melting glance will make him a lifelong slave.

When the eyes sparkle with animation the plainest girl takes on radiance and loveliness. Good nature, then, should be cultivated as one of the most valuable of beauty assets. Watch your health steps, ladies. Get plenty of nourishing food, restful sleep, fresh air and exercise.

The eyes have an oiling and washing system of their own, and unless some ailment is present requires no special care other than daily bathing with warm water, then with cold. Reading in a poor light is a bad habit, as is reading on trains.

When the day has been dusty and the eyes smart, use a boric acid solution. A medicine dropper is to be preferred to the eye cup.

* * *

Many a woman who is not much overweight is bothered by a roll of flesh just below the breasts. This disfiguring bump is usually caused by poor posture. By pulling up the backbone and keeping it that way, carrying the chest high and the head balanced, the roll will disappear. Strong torso muscles scat away fat cells in a hurry.

Here is an exercise: stand erect, feet six inches apart. Bend the torso backward, knees forward. Not easy, but it accomplishes what it sets out to do, which is to tighten the fibres over the ribs.

"Eyes speak a language of their own."

Prevent Flatfoot

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

Tots and runabouts who must go barefoot for want of shoes are rarely flatfooted. They are in danger, of course, from nails, glass, even hookworm. I never got hookworm but I did have my feet punctured with nails, glass and the like when I was a boy. I ought to have good arches. I have.

Just as the thermometer is sometimes used in deciding whether it shall be socks or stockings for your young school child, so the snow on the Tuscarora Mountains back of the farm home where I grew up in Little Cove, Pennsylvania, told us in the spring how long to wear shoes. As soon as no snow could be seen shoes and stockings came off. There was no doubt or argument. We children went barefoot from choice. I don't know why, but I even plowed over stony ground barefoot in spite of my parents' insistance that I wear shoes. I complained that the shoes cramped my feet. And late in September I remember driving the cows on frosty mornings through the stubble field to warm my bare feet. I also learned the art of walking comfortably barefoot against stubbles. It could be done.

Footprint Baby

Now back to baby's feet. You should make footprints of your baby as soon as he begins to stand and later as he walks. On beginning to walk he steps in a relatively straight line. His heels touch the ground first and his toes grip the ground as he pushes forward.

Even when this child begins walking the arch of the foot does not show. The entire foot area shows in the footprint as it does in an older child or adult who has flat feet. Some over-anxious mothers suppose the normal child, therefore, is destined to be flat-footed. Yet the child, even at birth has the arches but they are concealed by the thick pad of fat on the bottom of the foot. This fat pad serves as a support until the muscles and tendons of the leg and foot are more fully developed.

Many of the shoes sold for infants are far too shallow to allow free action of the toes and have soles so stiff that proper exercise of the arch is impossible. To my mind the ideal shoe provides protection against injury from sharp objects but allows, and even encourages, free action of all the foot muscles.

Proper Shoes

To have well-formed, strong feet children should go barefooted as much as possible and as long as possible, except on hard pavements, provided there is no danger from hookworm or rusty metal. And stockings shrink, especially wool ones, so remember this when buying.

Shoes for preschool children should have no heels, broad flexible soles, broad, round toes. Laced shoes are better than button ones, because they can be continually adjusted to a growing foot.

Solving Parent Problems

Q. Would you try to match toys for children near in age?

A. No; to do so encourages selfishness and quarreling. But if one child, for example, has a cart and the other a wagon, they naturally will be inclined to exchange toys and cooperate.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Parents Who Retain Old World Concepts Show no Loyalty to New Land

A few days ago my morning paper showed the picture of a radiant young bride in all her loveliness, looking up at a stalwart young man to whom she had just been married, and for whom she rejected a share of her father's wealth.

That her sisters did not agree to the harsh provision of their father's will was shown by the fact that she was married in the home of one of them. When interviewed by the press, the sister said that the father's will would not be broken but the bride would be given substantial gifts from time to time.

A week never passes without some girl writing to this column concerning her family's refusal to let her marry the man of her choice because he is of different national origin. When the man in question is a creditable citizen, amply able to support a wife and his only crime happens to be that he's an American, I see red.

Fathers, or maybe grandfathers, have come to this country and prospered. They've made enough money to enjoy the comforts, even the luxuries this country affords. Yet their hearts remain in the Old World where they had nothing and were regarded as not much more than the worm with which the rich landowner went fishing.

In the old countries these aliens were taxed, threatened, driven, subjected to persecutions and were generally conceded to be social ciphers.

Yet, insofar as is possible, they wish to impose these Old World conditions on children born in this democracy, this land of free thought free speech, free press. Thousands of girls are sacrificed to such loveless marriages every year. They have written to me that their mothers have never learned to speak a word of English because their fathers objected.

It is with a feeling of pride that this column offers its congratulations to the girl who rejected a considerable legacy to marry the man she loved.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Dear Mrs. Beeczman:

My sister is being married at five-thirty in the afternoon. She is to wear a white wedding dress with a train and a bridal veil.

1.—Please tell me what is the proper attire for the groom, his best man and ushers. We have been told that the correct attire is tailcoats.

2.—Also, is this correct for the procession: usher, usher; junior bridesmaid; bridesmaid; bridesmaid; maid of honor; bride and her father.

3.—Mother would like to have you tell her what type of hat would be correct for her to wear with a long peach dress. And what color flowers would you suggest she wear with peach chiffon?

Jessica

1.—When a bride chooses five-thirty as her wedding hour, she creates a problem for herself and her guests. It is a "betwixt and between" hour that is difficult for everyone to plan for. If a ceremony is to be performed at five o'colck, it is an afternoon wedding; generally a half-after-five wedding is also considered an afternoon wedding. Since your sister is to wear formal bridal attire, this would mean that the men would wear formal day clothes: cutaway coats and dark striped trousers. With the latitude permitted for a summer wedding, they might wear white flannel trousers and dark blue coats. White Tuxedo jackets and the conventional black Tuxedo trousers would be informal attire for a summer evening wedding.

2.—First, in the procession, would come the two ushers, walking together; then the two bridesmaids, walking together; then the junior bridesmaid, walking alone; next the maid of honor, walking alone; and last, the bride and her father.

3.—A small hat of a becoming type would be appropriate for your mother. She might wear a flower hat some of the flowers of the general tone of her dress. Or a simple interestingly-draped turban matching her dress, or of a considerably darker tone. Her corsage might be orchids, or, very lovely with peach, Talisman roses.

Lawn Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1.—We are planning an informal lawn wedding. Should we serve refreshments? If so what would you suggest? We are planning to have one hundred guests, and we must keep our expenses down.

2.—Should the ladies wear hats and coats?

W.N.Y.

1.—Yes, you should serve refreshments, but they may be simple. I suggest that you serve small, slim sandwiches, some just bread-and-butter sandwiches made with various kinds of bread and others of assorted fillings. With these serve hot coffee, with hot tea as an alternative, or a fruit punch as a cold-drink alternative. For the "sweets" course, you may serve only the bride's cake, or serve this with ice cream, or serve small sweet cakes, alone or with ice cream.

2.—The ladies would wear hats but coats would not be worn.

Premature Babies

In my columns about premature babies I have never dwelt much upon the causes of prematurity. A baby born at the end of the normal nine month period has five to ten times more chance of living than a premature baby. It is obviously of the greatest importance that mothers be guarded against the causes of prematurity. One of the best ways of doing this is for a mother to place herself in a doctor's care as soon as she knows she is pregnant and follow his instructions about pre-natal care to the letter.

Illness in the mother often leads to the premature birth of a child. Almost any chronic infection can cause it. Of course a mild cold or tonsilitis or some other temporary trouble isn't likely to be dangerous, but even these can be serious at times. So, when a woman places herself in the hands of her physician, the first thing he will do is examine her for any conditions that might lead to illness. He may advise that diseased tonsils or infected teeth be removed.

Another cause of prematurity is abnormality or disease in the region of the genital tract. Here again, medical attention during the early weeks of pregnancy will usually avoid such trouble.

Nature seems to have a law that when something happens during pregnancy which harms the baby, then the child is expelled. Accidental abortions are often found to be abnormal babies. The same rule extends to miscarriages and premature deliveries.

Consequently, if a pregnant mother develops some disease that spreads to the child she is carrying there is danger of prematurity. However, a doctor can often prevent any disease that attacks her from harming the baby and can see that she carries it full term and delivers it safely. For instance, if a mother has syphilis there is a strong chance the child will become infected but with the right treatment, the mother successfully bears a full-time baby without syphilis.

Premature babies seem to occur more frequently in women having their first child. This is especially true in cases of women who are older than the usual age before they have their first birth. Wrong diet will cause prematurity. Having a second baby too soon after the first is another cause, and overwork and worry are also factors as is too violent exercise such as horseback riding.

There are many minor things blamed for the birth of a baby before its time. Some of them I consider actual causes and some I don't. The season of the year is supposed by some to encourage prematurity; the sex of the child is another supposed factor as is heredity. They may have something to do with it but we should have more proof. I believe that if the mother is healthy and follows her doctor's orders, there is little likelihood of a premature delivery.

Art of Home-Making Is Scientific Study

Such useful bits of information as to how to make an ice-box for one dollar; how to dress the cheaper cuts of meat so that they are tempting; how to make children's snow-suits out of used men's overcoats; how to bathe a patient in bed—these and many other practical home hints were learned by girls and women who have completed the four weeks' course in nutrition and food utilization conducted at the Ontario College of Education, Guelph.

This course, as part of Canada's war effort, was given by permission of the Ontario government, under officials of O.A.C., the Red Cross and the Canadian Medical Association. Another group took a course in motor mechanics.

Getting right down to brass tacks in dealing with fundamental aspects of nutrition, the students learned how to budget on a limited income for a family of two adults and five children on $12.25 a week. They learned hof to grade cheese, eggs, butter and poultry. They brought back with them patterns of children's clothing, for use in sewing groups as needed. They visited the slaughter house and got the inside story of cuts of meats. They took a course in psychology and received suggestions about the relationship between evacuated children and Canadian children, and how to deal with the little evacuee who is of school age. They learned about the care of children and were instructed in first aid.

Meal Planning

Meal planning was part of their course every day. For this course they used a booklet entitled Food for Health, issued by the Canadian Medical Association, and available to any one interested, on application. The booklet deals with the value of foods, outlining which are the protective foods needed by everyone. These include milk and milk products, potatoes and other vegetables, whole grain bread and cereals, raw fruits, canned tomatoes, eggs, meats and fish.

How to plan an adequate day's diet was another important study.

"Real economy is to obtain the necessary products in the right quantity for the amount of money you have to spend," they were taught, according to Miss Bull.

Day's Diet

Here is a day's diet for one adult, using little meat: Breakfast—Tomato juice, rolled oats with milk and sugar; one boiled egg, one whole slice brown toast, buttered; glass of milk. It was presumed that this diet would be used in summer time when fresh vegetables and fruits were plentiful, so luncheon would consist of—Vegetable salad, using lettuce, sliced tomatoes, radishes and a slice of cold meat (left over from a previous meal). Dessert would be graham biscuits with butter, fresh pineapple and a glass of milk. Dinner would begin with stock soup. Canned salmon, served hot with cream sauce, would be the protein dish, and there would be boiled potatoes, carrots, and, for dessert, fresh raspberries and coffee.

A visit to the slaughter house revealed all there was to know about wholesale and retail cuts. The demonstrator stressed the value of liver and kidneys. Ways to prepare and cook fish were also taught, and it was emphasized that everybody in Canada, child or adult, should have cod-liver or some other kind of fish oil from October to May.

About milk, the students learned that it was a perfect food, yet lacked iron and copper, and that cheese was a good substitute for meat, as it is high in proteins.

Storing Food

It was in the study of methods of storing food that they learned how to make a good refrigerator for one dollar. One packing box is placed inside another, with about a six-inch space between. To insulate the refrigerator, the space should be filled with straw or the contents of an old mattress. In the bottom of the inside box a tin receptable is placed, and there must be an outlet for water, which, however, does not allow water to seep into the insulation.

Quick-frozen fruits and vegetables were demonstrated as another method of cold storage.

In a demonstration on canning, it was pointed out that people living in this fruit belt should avail themselves of the fruit. Home canning can be inexpensive, and if there is plenty of storage room, is a wise measure.

Child's Care

In the study of a child's care, it was stressed that the time to decide the standard of the health of a child is before he is born. It was pointed out that the expectant mother should keep in good physical and mental condition and follow the doctor's orders. Bulletins issued by the Canadian welfare council deal with every stage of a child's development, and can be secured by writing to Ottawa.

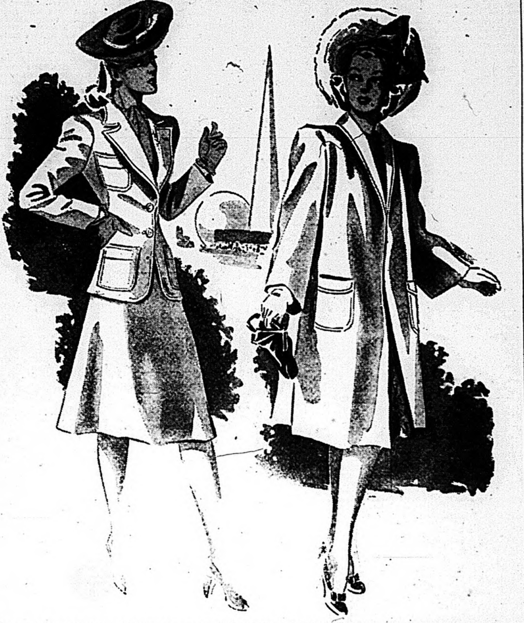
There was particular emphasis on the adjustments of the evacuated child in Canada, and it was suggested that if the child were quite young, and of school age, it was better for him to learn to fight his own battles, rather than receiving too much sympathy, which would make him unduly dependent.

Home nursing and first aid were also taught, and lectures were given by doctors.

During the sewing course several complete outfits were made for the Red Cross. The students were also taught to reclaim clothes, and were requested to give their patterns to their Red Cross group, if desired by them.

Saturday To Monday

You Can Shine in White



Right now, before Fall styles catch up with us, it's vacation and week-end fare that interests us most. One's clothes make one's visit either wretched or a delirium of success. White or pastel suits or coat such as pictured above should find a smart place in the visitor's wardrobe.

Since the locale of a vacation trip more or less dictates the clothes one wants, and as all week-end visits follow fairly similar patterns, let's check some other good Saturday to Monday choices:

You can wear a suit or frock on train which will double for churchgoing. You can carry on your arm a coat equally good for motoring or rain. If you choose an evening gown with its own jacket, you'll be set for a formal or an informal Saturday night. A spectator sports outfit, plus the proper duds for any active sports you go in for completes the packing, except for accessories.

x x x

If you are of a mind active enough to go in for active sports—more active than golf, we mean—be sure that there is some type of bifurcated outfit which will become you. There is no question but that violent play in the name of sports is more comfortable when attacked in pants of some sort, and even the most reactionary men have given up fighting them on their women—if they are modest and becoming.

The culotte skirt cut to the length which gives your ankles the best break is fine for the big girls; striplings can wear slacks and shorts—but if they are very slim striplings, better pass up the shorts unless they are of the clam digger, or calf length.

If there is one fashion department on which the woman has put her individual stamp for the rest of the feminine world to follow, it is in the sports division. The amount of good taste and chic one can find in sports clothes is greater through the whole price range than in any other kind of clothes. Most week-ends call for little but sports clothes.

Block That Sneeze!

Hay Fever Is Due for a Return Visit August and Now Is the Time for Pre-seasonal Treatment

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.

HAY FEVER is the only malady, according to Dr. Lawrence Farmer of New York (WHAT'S YOUR ALLERGY? Random House), that attains epidemic proportions without being either infectious or contagious. Wouldn't you be startled if someone said, "I have to give up my bridge games after August 15th because I am going to have my pneumonia then?" But they say it about hay fever.

Yes, the unhappy and dreaded date is approaching. And this is a warning that if you want to try to stave it off by pre-seasonal immunization, now is the proper time.

Henry Ward Beecher, who suffered greatly all his life from this annual pest, asked Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes for a satisfactory remedy. Gravel is an effectual remedy," replied Dr. Holmes. "It should be about eight feet deep."

We have progressed since 1868 when this conversation is reported to have taken place. Hay fever is a specific immunity type reaction to the pollens of plants which fertilize by wind distribution—the ragweed family—beginning in August. This reaction occurrs in the cells of the mucous membrane of the nose and eyes. There must be some reaction also in the blood. The best that medical science can do is to prevent this by shunting the reactors by the introduction of diluted pollen solutions given in ever increasing strengths.

Temporary Immunity

Such immunity as is established in this way is temporary and lasts in most instances only through one season. So it has to be repeated every year. It is best to try to establish the immunity before the "season" opens. A gradually acquired immunity is more effective than attempting to build one up suddenly although coseasonal prevention is possible. So this warning about a month ahead of time should give the susceptible ones their opportunity.

The pollen extracts for preventive purposes are given hypodermically once or twice a week starting with small doses and getting stronger so that just before the date that the pollen takes to the air the strength of the injection is high enough to prepare the body for the onslaught.

Naturally it is desirable to get away from these eternal hypodermics. Pollen has been given by mouth. Reports differ as to its success. Rockwell reports that in ragweed cases (the August type of hay fever) the results were excellent in about 20 per cent. of the cases. In the rest the results were indifferent.

The Chicago Society of Allergy has come out with a statement that oral administration is very likely to lead to disappointment and economic loss. But then the hypodermic method may suffer from the same disadvantages.

"For those who will not take hypodermic injections or find it inconvenient to report regularly for them, the oral method offers an experimental opportunity.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

E. B.—"What is it that causes sugar to appear in a Benedict test? Does everybody show sugar at times and how often? If sugar appears and then the test is clear after one or two tests right after that, is that anything to be alarmed at? Can something a person eats cause a Benedict test to turn green or yellow and not be sugar?"

Answer—Benedict's reagent is a solution of copper sulphate. Sugar, when present, reduces this to insoluble copper salt. When there is a small amount, the solution may just turn green; a somewhat larger amount causes it to turn yellow, and even more causes it to turn brick red. Normal people seldom show sugar even after very heavy meals of sugar. It is a regular experience with diabetes that a diabetic may show sugar after a meal and then in the course of two or three hours not show sugar. If sugar shows up with any regularity after a meal it is almost certain to be diabetes.

M. S.—"Will you please tell me what causes shingles and the best treatment for it?"

Answer—Shingles is a form of inflammation of the sensory nerves. The part of the skin which is supplied by the sensory nerves breaks out in painful blisters. Like all cases of neuritis Vitamin B has been reported of value in treatment.

Green Salads and Fruit Juices Act Favorably Upon the Skin

It is taken for granted these days that every adult civilized creature has a daily tub. Dress fitters are pretty skeptical about that. They tell tales about ladies who ride around in grand gasoline chariots, who wear expensive clothes, but when they peel off their frocks they disclose undies that could stand a little soap and water. Not only that, their bodies are not clean. Medical examiners for insurance companies say that men are cleaner than women. Now don't throw bricks at us; we're just passing along information that has been handed to us.

The daily bath is not only necessary for self-respect but for the removal of solids deposited by the sweat glands and to clear away dead skin scales that keep the cutaneous surface rough and grey.

In treatment of excessive skin moisture, the bath is the first step. Clean undergarments are essential. In the summer season, wash frocks should be worn as much as possible; silks and wools hang onto the odor of perspiration.

If bathing does not do away with the offensive condition, the trouble may be due to some disease of the thyroid gland, in which event medical attention is necessary.

x x x

When bathing, rinse the arm pits first with clear water before using soap. Rub briskly with the hands, keep on sloshing up the water. Sweat glands in that area are extra active. Use clear water on the under side of the arms from shoulders to elbows. Dead scales will come away in grey rolls on even the cleanest skin.

Any woman who has ever had a Turkish bath knows about that. During the clear water massage she feels as if she were moulting cuticle. Afterwards the flesh has a feel like satin.

A salt glow in the morning helps the skin to function normally. Stand in the tub, rub moistened salt into the flesh. Turn on the tepid spray, then a cold one. Have a rousing old rubdown with a coarse towel.

x x x

There are many proprietory articles for use in the arm pits. If one does not cure, another one will. Be sure to follow directions to the letter. Some of the preparations close the pores, must not be used lavishly, nor must they be rubbed in. There is no harm in stopping the flow of sweat. Thousands of other pores in the body carry on.

Faulty diet may be a factor in promoting activity of the sweat glands. Too much meat, rich gravies, pastries. Onions are to be stricken off the record. Green salads and fruit juices act favorably upon the skin. Have them every day.

Daintiness is an important ingredient in the formula of beauty. No woman makes the grade without it.

FASHION FLASHES

LAST CHOICE for late summer might well be a frock of natural linen fastened all the way down with bright blue plastic hooks and eyes.

TO ONE SIDE goes the trimming of many a new frock. A smart model, of fine black silk crepe, has a finely pleated ruffle down one side which continues down the skirt and around the hem.

WE ARE ANGELS otherwise we wouldn't be wearing halos! A delightful halo hat is of black velvet with shirring on the crown and on the wide brim a fan design in narrow black grosgrain.

WE WON'T MIND when wintry winds blow because the new coats are so comfy. Something different is a coat of dark wine red velvet with a detachable lunberjacket top. Beneath is a slim bodice with a collar of mink, which is worn outside the removable top. The coat skirt is flared.

WE'LL BE SEEING SPOTS as leopard emerges as one of the important winter furs. A smart suit has a loose leopard jacket with front panels of dull black woolen to match the flared skirt.

Best Intentions Don't Excuse Grandparents for Meddling in Discipline of Grandchildren

Dear Miss Chatfield:

Could you help two unhappy girls? Grandfather lives with us and he interferes with our pleasures so our home isn't a sweet place. His chief diversion is going around among the neighbors telling awful lies on sister and me. Our parents say the neighbors understand that he is old and not accustomed to modern ways. But it doesn't make us feel any too good. Besides this influences our parents to keep us at home while all our friends, boys and girls, are going out. It seems to us that one old man oughtn't to have the say so in a whole family. But we can't stop him.

TEEN AGE.

Answer:

It's a hard job, girls, to put the quietus on an old man who has a strong will, a loose tongue and nothing to do but exercise both. While your parents' deference to him is a credit to their filial devotion, it is a discredit to their good judgment. They seem to understand that he's garrulous, old-fashioned in his views; but they don't seem to understand that it's hard enough for parents and children to get together in viewpoint without interference of another generation. And that such interference inevitably brings on bitterness and strife in the family.

I suggest that the two of you call a family counsel of parents and children, you two pointing out to your parents that everybody who knows anything about family relationships says when it is necessary for grandma and grandpa to live with their married children the only way all can be happy is for the old folks to keep hands off discipline of the children, attend strictly to their own business, not even offering suggestions unless invited.

When we graduate out of teens and twenties into thirties and forties, we begin to get a glimmering of truths we can't get through our noggins when we are young. Here's one of them: parents sustain a certain relationship to their children before marriage which is entirely altered by the children's marriage. But some parents don't recognize the altering. They keep right on telling their married children what's right and wrong, what they should and should not do. And worse when their children have children, the old folks continue to meddle.

That is why it is unfortunate when grandma and grandpa have to live with the grandchildren. That is why everybody is always preaching to grandma and grandpa: "Stay where you are if you must. But keep your views to yourself. Keep your hands out of family affairs. Don't interfere with the discipline of the children. They are not your children and you are not responsible for mistakes their parents make in rearing them. If you meddle the children will not love you. If you meddle you won't be welcome in their home.

Do the old folks heed? Sometimes they do. If they don't, the children's own parents should firmly but kindly put the old folks in their places, remind them that they are guests and should behave as good mannered guests.

Streamline To Charm Today

New York—Today's streamlined lady is learning new, streamlined ways to daintiness and charm. That doesn't mean she goes in for slap-dash or short-cuts. It means she knows how to work out routines that can be followed with no time wasted, that she's up on how to get the quickest results that are efficient at the same time.

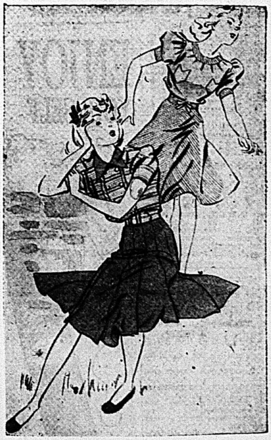
Take a look at the streamlined jars on her shelves. Here's a brand-new one in white and cerise containing something no one ever dreamed of six or seven years ago—a perspiration check in cream form.

In this year of 1940, she couldn't get along without it. Why? Well, fashion has a lot to do with it. Suits are sweeping the country. Daintiness is more of a problem when we're wearing twills and worsteds as the weather warms up. And under the suit there's a delicate, frilled blouse, of crisp organdy or sheer batiste. When the jacket comes off she's going to look a froth of sweetness and delight!

For her beauty routine takes account of that blouse, just as it does of her April-fresh complexion and her shining fingertips. But it's not a long, arduous routine. It's simple, modern and quick, just a moment, every other day, regular as clock-work, she devotes to her perspiration check. And because it's in this new efficient cream form, she can use it just before she slips into that very special blouse.

She knows that no one is a whit daintier or fresher than her dress. So she thinks just as much about protecting her gown as she does about protecting herself. No more tell-tale spots on sleeves when she's checked perspiration at the one troublesome place.

Young Weekenders



By PRUNELLA WOOD

THERE'S always something on the program on a young girl's summer, and as every mother knows, picnics and parties take lots of clothes. Mary Jane has to have plenty of togs when she skips off to spend a week-end or a week with one of her school friends. Besides swim suits and playsuits, she needs simple cotton frocks which will look neat for luncheon, movies and town. These same dresses, even if she doesn't suspect it, will serve for the classroom next mnoth.

The styles sketched are well made in smart chambray combinations. Both will wash with practically no shrinkage, and, in a pinch, could be ironed by the young wearers.

The striped and plain frock, left, is double-breasted but snaps down the bodice rather than buttoning. Skirt pleats are stitched to the hips. Two shades of blue is one choice, tan and brown another, in sizes 11 to 16.

Right, another one-piecer giving the effect of two uses solid-toned fabric with the corded for sizes 7 to 14. The separate belt ties together in front, and the bodice snaps at the neck in back.

The frock on the left has several wide pleats front and back in the skirt. These may be creased in or left unpressed—chambray is one of those fabrics which doesn't wrinkle easily.

K-Nines Defeat Vikings 20-12 Advancing into Final Series

Will Meet Zeller Nine for Championship of Girls Softball Loop

START TUESDAY

"Stub" Barrett's K-Nines made it two straight over the Vikings and advanced to the finals in the Ladies' Mercantile Softball play-offs by virtue of a 20 to 12 win over "Mike" Powers' Vikings at the East Belleville playgrounds last evening. In victory the K-Nines advance to the league final championship series versus the Chuck Barnett's Zeller nine commencing next Tuesday night.

The K-Nines pounded the offerings of two Viking hurlers in a most unmerciful manner, collecting 23 safe hits and driving Rita Rabbie from the losers' hilltop in the third, Peg Ketcheson finishing the game for the eliminated Vikings. The K-Nines scored a quartette of runs in the initial frame to knot the count and then added five in the second and four more in the third from where they were never headed.

Mary Lickfold ascended the hilltop for the victorious K-Nines and although touched for a total of 20 safeties, Mary was given sterling support by her infield team-mates. Not a single base on balls was given by any of the trio of moundsmen in the entire game, while Miss Rabbie struck out two and Miss Lickfold one, as the batters and fielders held sway in a hard-hitting contest. The Viking infield collapsed before the terrific assault of base hits from the bats of the Kresge nine.

Every member of the K-Nines counted at least two hits except their leading batter, Marg Orr, who went hitless for the first time this season, Corneal, E. Orr, Clark and Richardson coming through with timely extra base blows. Miss Greatrix, of the Vikings, with a triple, double and two singles led the hitters of the night, with Norma Maker and M. Zebedee counting three safeties including extra base blows.

THE COUNTRY DUB

At the Country Club on Quinte Shore,
The Belleville playboys spend time galore.
Now Bill's our pro, of whom we're proud
Can make a golfer from any of the crowd.
There's usually a lion hunt in the centre of the course
Which no one goes through, even if Mud's lost.
Johnny McKeown and Charlie set the styles for the boys,
With Johnny's panamas, and Charlie's golfing toys.
The Knot Holers live in a world of their own,
What goes on, no one has been shown.
If Lenore wins any more Coca Cola,
We'll consider giving her the Rockola.
I missed a putt to break a forty,
All because my ball was di(o)rty.
The caddies are the best in the land,
A missed putt, they simply can't stand.
The Red Cross meets Wednesday afternoon,
To sew a lot, and stir with a spoon.
"Petunia Row"—the side verandah you know,
Is the place the best of us come and go.
The bankers fill our hearts with glee,
Nightly with their harmony.
Dennis takes care of all the flock,
Sending us home on the tick of the clock.

TWO YOUNGSTERS MEET IN FINALS

Frank Kovacs and Don McNeil Eliminate Veterans in Tennis Tourney

Southampton, N.Y., Aug. 3—(AP) Under the showers at the Meadow Club yesterday, Frank Kovacs called cheerfully to Don McNeill, "We've certainly come a long way in the last two years, haven't we, Don?"

To this McNeill responded, "Uh-huh."

There's no contesting the truth of the Oakland, Calif., boy's statement, but that watered conversation gives a good indication to the contrasting mental attitudes of the two players. Two years ago they were a pair of promising young tennis players. Today they meet in the final of the Meadow Club invitation tournament, one of the major events of the eastern turf court season.

Kovacs yesterday eliminated national champion Bobby Riggs, three times winner of the tournament, 6-4, 7-9, 6-4, 6-2, interspersing his performance with an equally outstanding display of histrionics. McNeill, on an adjoining court, crushed Elwood Cooke, 6-0, 6-4, 6-1.

Today's final will be a meeting between a bubbling personality kid and a staid, business-like player whose aim is to dispatch his opponent as quickly as possible and who is willing to let the gallery be entertained solely by the quality of the tennis.

Kovacs defeated Riggs for the first time in seven meeting over a three-year period.

4 TORONTO PROS. LEFT IN TOURNEY

Gordie Brydson Meets Gray and Bill Kerr Tackles Lou Cuming in First Round

Toronto, Aug. 3.—(CP)— Four Toronto professionals started out today over the Islington Course near here, to decide the 1940 winner of the Millar Trophy, emblematic of professional golfing supremacy in Eastern Canada. Semi-final matches are carded for this morning. The finals will be played this afternoon.

In the top bracket of the morning matches, Gordie Brydson of Mississauga, 1937 title-holder, hooks up with Bobby Gray of Scarboro. Brydson, conqueror of the favored Stan Horne in yesterday morning's play, whipped Willie Lamb of Toronto Lambton in the second round 5-and-4. Gray eliminated Ben Morris of Toronto Fairmount 6-and-4.

Lower-bracket semi-final brings together Bill Kerr, Hunt Club, and Lou Cuming, Toronto. Kerr won 4-and-3 over Bobby Reith of Windsor in the second round, while Cumming edged Kitcheners loyd Tucker 2-up.

Maple Leaf Hockey Players Advised To Join Colors

Ottawa, Aug. 3.—(CP)—Conny Smythe, manager of Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League said Friday that all members of the Toronto team were being advised to enlist before August 15 in unit of the non-permanent active militia.

It was understood here that this policy would be followed by other teams in the N.H.L. as well as minor League teams.

Together the various professional hockey teams employ some hundreds of Canadian players who come under provisions of the National Resources Mobilization Act.

It was explained at Defence headquarters that hockey players must meet the military requirements of thirty days' compulsory military training the same as all other able-bodied Canadian residents between 21 and 45 ears.

"All our boys are being advised to enlist in the N.P.A.M. before August 15", said Smythe.

This he said, was in order that they could meet their military requirements and also fulfil their hockey contracts in the coming season.

Cincinnati Reds Humiliated By Dropping Pair to Boston; Detroit Tigers Still on Top Rung

Reds Lose Five of Last Six Games as Pitchers Fail to Hold Opposition

DODGERS LOSE

Joe Cronin Hits for Cycle as Boston Defeats the Tigers 12-9

By JUDSON BAILEY
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Hold your hats, boys, Cincinnati Reds are riding that roller coaster.

The National League champions, whom everybody said couldn't slump because they had pitchers who just couldn't be beaten in succession, have managed to lose five of their last six games.

Boston Bees humiliated the Reds with two victories, 10-3 and 4-3, yesterday. It was the first time Cincinnati had lost a double-header this year. The champs had won ten and split five.

The only runs the Reds were able to get off Nick Strincevich's six-hit hurling in the first game came on a three-run homer by Frank McCormick. The second game went twelve innings before the Bees finally loaded the bases and Rookie Chet Ross singled home the deciding run.

The Reds' difficulties would have been more costly except that Brooklyn Dodgers lost and the third place New York Giants divided a double-header.

The short-handed Chicago Cubs edged out the Dodgers 4-3 with busy Claude Passeau striking out the last two batters in a rescue act that gave Larry French his eleventh victory of the year.

Young Hits Two Homers.

Babe Young hit two homers, one in the ninth inning, to give the Giants a 5-4 verdict over St. Louis Cardinals in their first game, but Carl Doyle checked the New Yorkers on seven hits in the nightcap to win 3-1.

The American League situation remained unchanged with Detroit a game in front as both the Tigers and Cleveland Indians were whipped.

Joe Cronin hit for the cycle—a home run, triple, double and single—to guide Boston Red Sox to a 12-9 triumph over the Tigers. Jimmie Foxx also hit his 23rd homer and young Dominic DiMaggio smacked one with two on to rout Buck Newsom, although the league's leading pitcher wasn't charged with the loss.

New York Yankees pummelled the Indians with 13 hits in a 10-2 game that was scarred by nine errors. Lefty Marius Russo pitched six-hit ball and both the runs against him were unearned.

The best hurling in several days, however, was a two-hitter turned in by Thornton Lee of Chicago White Sox in beating Washington Senators 10-2. Lee missed a shutout when Jim Bloodworth homered with one on.

Bob Harris of St. Louis Browns shut out Philadelphia Athletics 5-0. Pittsburgh Pirates also were held to four hits for nine innings in a night game with the Phillies, but they bunched four more in the tenth to win 5-2.

WILL SPONSOR TEAM

Montreal, Aug. 3—(CP) — The Montreal Engineers Club was prepared today to sponsor a team in the Interprovincial Rugby Union this season. Decision to sponsor the team was reached at a meeting which selected Bill Hughes, veteran big four mentor, as coach. Backers of the proposal said most of the players of last year's Royals and Westmounts would be available to form an amalgamated squad.

UNUSUAL BACKGROUND FOR TENNIS

With tenement buildings of Harlem's gold coast section forming the highly unusual background, Donald Budge, former amateur and now professional champion of the world, is pictured in action during his tennis exhibition match with Jimmie McDaniel, Negro amateur champion. Budge winning 6-1, 6-2, left the court with high praise for his opponent.

ROCHESTER WINGS INCREASE LEAD IN INT. LEAGUE

WIN IN 14th

Leafs Make it Two Over Baltimore Orioles With 3-2 Victory

(By The Associated Press)

It's quite a hope from a class "D" league to the International but Charley Brumbeloe Rochester pitcher seems to have made it with plenty to spare.

Last year at this time Charley was laboring down in the Eastern Shore League. Today with 15 victories and seven defeats he is keeping pace with the best pitchers in the double "A" circuit.

Brumbeloe earned his 15th victory last night by outlasting Frank Pearce, Jersey City veteran, in a 14-inning marathon which Rochester won 3-2. A single by George Fallon scored Frank Crespi with the winning run in the last of the 14th after Red Wings had come from behind twice to tie the score.

The victory increased Wings league lead to four games over the second-place Newark Bears who split their second straight double-header with Buffalo. Bears won the nightcap 8-3 with a 12-hit attack featuring three homers after dropping the opener 6-5.

George Washburn limited the Bisons to eight safeties in the first game but a homer by Johnny Kroner with two on in the sixth proved his undoing. Steve Peek held Buffalo to five hits for seven innings in the afterpiece and received credit for the win.

Montreal Royals also took the home-run road to defeat Syracuse 3-2. George Staller provided the winning margin when he drove a ball out of the park in the ninth inning to give Kemp Wicker his 15th victory of the year.

Toronto Maple Leafs made it two in a row over Baltimore, scoring a 3-2 victory behind Carl Fischer's effective hurling. Leafs put together a pair of hits and a sacrifice fly to tally twice in the fourth and used the same formula to put across the winning run in the eighth.

Playoffs Set In S. Hastings Baseball Loop

The playoffs in the South Hastings Baseball League will get under way on Friday evening, August 9th, it was decided at a special meeting of the league executive held on Thursday evening to determine playoff positions and dates.

At the conclusion of the regular schedule, three teams, Shannonville, Latta and Cannifton were closely bunched at the top of the league and instead of playing a round robin series to determine which team would occupy first place and thereby receive a bye into the finals, Cannifton management suggested that Shannonville and Latta teams play a sudden death game at Cannifton on Tuesday evening next to decide which team would occupy the first rung in the final standing.

Following this game the semi-finals will commence between the 2nd and 3rd teams, which will be a two out of three series with all games having to go seven innings. If at the end of seven innings the game be tied and darkness has not set in, the game will be played to a finish.

The winners of the semi-finals will play the first place team in a three-out-of-five series to determine the championship and right to hold the Tummon Trophy, emblematic of South Hastings baseball supremacy.

The semi-final series will get under way next Friday evening, August 9th, and continue on 12th and 14th. The final series will start either Aug. 14th or 16th with the remaining games being played on 19th, 21st, 23rd and 26th if necessary. All games in the playoff will commence at 6.00 o'clock standard time and will be played on neutral grounds. Neutral umpires were appointed to handle all playoff games.

Special mention of the Foxboro team was made at the meeting, who it was considered, showed true sportsmanship throughout the schedule in completing the schedule although they were forced to play all their home games on their opponents' diamond.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

Ken J. Colling

All the holiday week end has to offer locally in the line of sports is softball, two games in fact, along with some lawn bowling. This evening the Corby A.C. meet the Shell "Oilers" in a fifth game of a best-in-seven series, each team having registered two wins each in their previous four O.A.S.A. play-offs and the team winning tonight will enjoy a decided edge in the series, as the loser will face the tremendous task of having to win the next two straight in order to emerge victorious. In all probability Connie Harris and Johnnie Bawden will oppose each other tonight and as both nines are keyed to the point of strain, a hard-fought game can be assured. The other holiday softball fixture is a novelty affair, never having been presented in Belleville before, to our recollection at least. On Monday evening at Coleman Flats an All-Star team from the Girls' Mercantile League will meet a team from the local Men's Softball Loop, with the batteries reversed.

Yes, the two local softball associations moved directly into action yesterday in preparation for a benefit softball game between the girls' and boys' league players to be played at Coleman Flats Monday evening. Of course in order to balance the teams and game the respective batteries will be reversed, thereby having the male pitchers hurling 'em across when the men are batting and vice versa. The entire proceeds will go toward the purchase of sports equipment for the Belleville boys now enlisted in the 3-47th Battery. Not only is it a good opportunity to help a worthy war benefit, but we can assure the fans of some real good sports entertainment. Incidentally the girls will be permitted to use gloves at every position, even in the outfield if they so desire. When the Simpson girls of Toronto played the R.C.A.F. boys at softball in Trenton recently we observed that the girls used gloves and think it is a very good practice, as the men hit the ball slightly harder than the majority of the girls, but regardless, such a game should prove interesting and a novelty.

We might add that Betty Adams, of Zellers, Rita Rabbie of the Vikings and Mary Lickfold of the K-nines have been selected to pitch for the men's team, while Connie Harris, "Ding" Luffman, of Point Anne, and Mike Powers will hurl for the girls' "all-stars." As an added feature Miss Peggy Rowbotham, who has assisted as coach of the K-nines all season, has agreed to assist in umpiring Monday night's game along with a local umpire, yet to be selected.

Do you remember when Vince Dundee, world's middleweight boxing champion in 1933, retired from the game two years ago today. He held the title—won from Lou Brouillard—until Teddy Yarosz toppled him in Sept. 1934.

Cliff Argue informs us the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club is holding a club trebles on Monday for those interested in the pastime that made Drake famous.

Secretary Art Hall of the South Hastings League writes to inform us that the S.H.L. play-off dates have been announced and that there is to be no round robin series this year. Shannonville, Latta, and Cannifton are assured of play-off berths, with the former two playing off Tuesday to decide the winner of first place, while the league playdowns commence Aug. 9th. Secretary Hall wishes to congratulate the Foxboro club for its splendid effort in playing out the league schedule despite the fact they were without a home diamond and forced to play all of their games as a road club. "I would like to make some special mention of this true sportsmanship," writes Secretary Hall, as the S.H.L. prepares to launch upon its play-offs, commencing Aug. 9th, 12th and 14th.

So it's Kresges and Zellers in the Ladies' Softball finals, which opens next Tuesday night. The K-nines didn't have much trouble eliminating the Vikings in two straight, beating "Mike" Powers' crowd 20 to 12 last night. The difference in the two squads last night was quite evident, the K-nines infield played sterling softball headed by Helen Benlap, "Butch" Adams and Helen Richardson, while Ev Orr filled in perfectly at first as Barrett's inner works were responsible for their win. On the other hand the Viking's inner quartette completely collapsed as the righthand side of the infield booted the ball continuously. A total of 43 hits for 32 runs were registered with the Kresges nine out-hitting the Vikings 23 to 20 but the difference was clearly seen in the two infields.

INSTALMENT 24

The long vacation was wearing away when the expected letter from Paul came. He was going to England, because his father and every one thought that it would be a good thing for him to have six months there. Gee, it was kind of tough not to get to California for the summer, but this work would be valuable to him and they all thought he ought to do it. He had not written because he'd been working so hard, but—

"Listen." Paul's scrawling hand, struggling down the big page, went on. "Here's the thing. Maybe you and I'll get married, and maybe we won't, but let's call off the engagement, and then if we do it, we'll jump right into it, see? What do you think?"

She thought as he thought of course. She wrote him with what dignity she could muster, assuring him that the "slate was clean and we can write whatever we like there later," and returning to him his grandmother's ring. Joyce did it steadily. There was a great sense of weakness, of blankness, in her soul after it was done but there was peace too.

But life went on and she moved through it. The Merriwell Little Players gave "Hay Fever" that autumn, and Joyce played the mother, and ran away—her fellow players assured her generously—with the show. She learned to play good enough bridge to make a foursome with the older members of the family. She and her father worked out cross-word puzzles. In the shortening days she cooked, swept, went for eggs, skimmed the great pans of milk, fed the three turkeys that were going to provide feasts for winter. The merciless heat went out of the sun. In the evenings the little stoves snapped and roared; ice formed in the trough by the barns.

Lissy was married in early November. At last she and Archie were actually wed, and off to Victoria, where the groom was to be manager of a branch of the family business.

On Thanksgiving Day the fattest and largest of the turkeys was roasted; Ben was coming home for three days; even Sally was cheerful.

Breakfast was late and disorderly, with Joyce making a turkey stuffing at one end of the kitchen table, Sally sipping her coffee at the other, Michael with armfuls of wood tracking in mud, and William Ballard in complete felicity as he manipulated the fresh warm milk, the fresh eggs, the orange-bright persimmons into their destined places. There was no lunch. At three o'clock Ben rushed in, cold and breathless, and there was great laughter and much embracing in the kitchen.

"Oh, this is the way things ought to be!" Joyce thought. Her mother sat close to the one son of the family, a hand linked in his arm. William Ballard was opposite Ben, listening with a pleased thoughtful face to the boy's account of the first work he had ever done in his life.

"Eighteen a week, eh?" he mused aloud. "And are you living on that, Ben?"

"You bet your life I'm living on it," Ben said. "A feller and I have a room in Chinatown—up above a restaurant—"

"Chinatown!" Sally said faintly, closing her eyes.

"But it's swell, mother. Some Englishwoman runs the place and it's swell! Jussertin is on the Call. It's all right. Oh," he added almost in a shout, "maybe you think it isn't good to get home!"

He did more than say it. Every minute of the happy holiday afternoon proved that he meant it. He and Joyce and Michael walked up to the canyon to see what was choking the water flume; came down again breathless and starving and muddy for hot baths; got into evening attire and regathered again in the kitchen to put the last touches to the feast. Joyce tied an apron over the plain old velvet dress that had made her feel so grown-up at sixteen, and tied other aprons around Ben and Michael. In five hours' slow roasting the turkey had reached complete perfection; the squash was baked, the salad scented faintly with onion and garlic, glittered in a frosty bowl. Sally lighted the yellow candles; Ben brought out the deep enormous Canton platter. Joyce was everywhere, but if every one had not been too busy to note what she did, was oftenest to be seen hovering restlessly near the door as if listening for some sound from the yard.

And at five exactly the yard door opened. Dodo stood there, her blue hat pulled down over a pale and anxious face that yet wore some sort of smile.

"Mother—" she faltered holding out both her hands.

"So you've come back, young lady?" Sally said slowly.

Joyce's heart shriveled like a closing sea anemone. Dodo's arms fell and she turned bewilderedly and put her hand blindly out toward her husband, who was close behind her.

"Why don't you come and kiss me, Dodo?" Sally went on impatiently, in the terrified silence. The tension snapped. Dodo went forward with a sob and a rush; every one was crying and Joyce kissed Michael with fervor and did a sort of dance with him and Ben. "You're all so foolish," said Sally fretfully, kissing Dodo again and again, holding her off to look at her, sending a reproachful glance from wet eyes about the circle. "You dramatise everything so; you're always pretending that I feel this or that, or won't do this or that. It's very tiresome. How do you do, Charles? I suppose you two have had a big Thanksgiving dinner already today, so poor Joyce's turkey will go begging."

"Well, no, we didn't," Charley Sallock answered, almost absently. His concerned eyes were all for Dodo. "The folks went to my sister Imogen's house today and took Duke and Lard with them. No, sir, that turkey is going to taste pretty good to me!"

"Oh, mother," whispered Dodo, "it's so good to get home! And Ben here too! And Lissy married! Does she write you?"

"You oughtn't to be driving 'round in bitter cold weather like this, Dodo; you oughtn't to get so excited, you oughtn't to cry," Sally was murmuring in a sort of monotone. Michael and Ben were setting extra places at the table; Joyce, at the sink, stared at her sister and then at her father.

"Yep," William Ballard said in an aside. "Looks like new titles all round 'long about March or so."

x x x

One night when Joyce and Michael were alone in the kitchen they happened to speak of Dodo's choice of a name for her second child.

"Mary Sallock. I think it's adorable," Joyce said. "Considering the names that our parents, both sides, chose for us, I'm all for Mary! It's plain, but it's distinguished. I like Michael for a name. John is nice, and Jacky," she added on a burst of enthusiasm. "Jacky himself is simply adorable! Think of Dodo with two babies and think of us getting round to four years here. 'Isn't it so strange?' as your British cousin might say."

"Much you know of my British cousin!"

"I know his letters, don't I?"

"I think he'll come out," Michael said thoughtfully.

"Arthur Tallant. Will I like him? Am I apt to fall in love with him?"

"He's somewhere in the fifties."

"In the fif—! As old as dad?"

"Older than your father, I should say. But he's a terrifically athletic old chap, tennis and golf and all that."

The November night was bitterly cold. But the kitchen was always comfortable and the reduced family did much of its living there. Tonight there had been a brief rubber or two of bridge, but Sally had been tired and had gone up to bed at ten o'clock and William Ballard had followed her a few minutes later. Joyce and Michael had been playing cribbage and talking.

"He sounds like a lord."

"Arty? No, he's not. He's Captain Tallant. He's got a cousin of thirty or so who may be Lord Thrall some day. An uncle has about picked him up for his heir. But he doesn't especially want it."

"Doesn't want it? Why not?"

"Oh, we're all rather odd."

"No money to go with the title?"

"Yes, there's money. Two or three places—all that. Totty tried in an amateurish sort of way to get somewhere with his uncle's tenants and his mines and what not but it all turned sour and he gave it up. Arty'll tell you about it."

"With all these cousins in the peerage what on earth were you doing coming down here with that hungry mongrel of yours, and asking me for food I thought you were the most pitiful object I ever had seen!"

I probably was. I'd been living on corn meal and apples—delightful diet when you have a bit of bacon or some cream along with them. But I remember feeling quite dizzy as I walked across your yard."

"You poor simpleton," Joyce mused affectionately. "I wish we could see ourselves as we were that afternoon."

Joyce smiled at him across the table. Lamplight shone softly on her thinner, older face; there were firm positions of the jaw that showed more clearly than they had four years ago; there were definite expressions in her thoughtful glance; cadences in her voice that were new.

Joyce's thoughts went off at a tangent.

"And you never married, Mich-
"Wife died during the war. She was having a baby and they wouldn't get a doctor."
"Is your Cousin Arthur married?"
ael?"

"Never."

He answered naturally enough but she saw the color come up to the tips of his ears and felt for some reason she could not understand a sudden flush in her own cheeks.

"Do you know that you would make some nice girl a marvelous husband, Michael?"

He spoke with a visible effort. "No, I don't know that. I'm afraid in any case the nice girl is down on her luck. I shan't ask her."

"On the general principle that if you can't have what you want, you won't have anything?"

It was said carelessly, lightly, as if half to herself. The man looked up quickly, an odd expression coming suddenly into narrowed eyes.

"Exactly," he said briefly. "I say, it's after twelve. Suppose we turn in."

Joyce was scarlet with consternation.

F. Muirhead, Syd Reynolds and Bert Haigh of the local Balmy Beach Football Club have also joined the unit.

Sports Roundup

(By Bill White)

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Aug. 3.—(AP)—things you really oughta know: Zekus Bananas Bonura, the bartered first baseman, won the Senior A.A.U. Javelin toss when he heaved the spear 213 ft, 10 1-2 inches for dear Old St. Stanislaus College of Louisiana in 1925. . . John Caton is the fourth generation of his family to drive trotters . . . . Merv Henley of La Crosse set some kind of an iron man record t'other night when he pitched and won two games from Fond Du Lac in the Wisconsin State League . . .

Stuff and stuff: Gertrude Barnes, 115 pounder, is the catcher for the Tomah, Wis., baseball team appearing this week (adv't) in the Tri State tournament in La Crosse. She's the same gal who played with the New Lisbon, Wis., High School team until the authorities said "No". Needless to say, she's the only girl appearing in the tournament . . . . Burleigh Grimes, manager of the Grand Rapids Club in the Mich. State loop may be reinstated if the efforts of the League directors mean anything (he was suspended for spitting in an umps' face). . . .

OF HEAVEN'S BENEDICTION

by Margaret Gorman Nichols

CHAPTER 1

Surprise

Brooke arrived at Manhattan's busiest hour. Following a red-cap, who carried the whole of her possessions in two shabby suitcases, she glanced at the moving throngs with dark eyes, excited and challenging. As she hurried, the collar of her brown sport coat buttoned high, a brown boyish felt hat over her dark hair, her black coat (her best coat) over her arm, her eyes took swift excursions to the women about her swathed in luxurious furs with absurd little black hats over perfectly coifed heads. Rod saw women like them every day, amusing women, poised, successful women. Rod..Her thoughts scattered and raced ahead of their reunion a few hours hence, an eternity for her.

A few moments later, from a taxi window, New York at February dusk, its gay night lights beginning to blink and glitter, enchanted her. This time no train would take her back to the quiet New England town, her home, after a too brief week end with Rod in New York. For this time, though Rod didn't know it yet, she had come to stay.

At the entrance of a moderately priced hotel the doorman sprang to attention and a boy hurried out for her baggage. She felt a blast of wintry wind, then the warmth of the lobby. On the register she wrote, "Miss Brooke Carter, Chatham, New Hampshire," and followed the boy to the elevator. As she stepped on she regarded her reflection in the mirror impersonally but with a smile, thinking, "So this is the girl Rod Westover is going to marry! She has a smudge on her face." A young artist who had come to New England to paint one summer told her that her hair was the color of smoke. The expressive dark eyes were warm and alive though they had not been always, one guessed, as happy as they were now.

"Is there anything else?" the boy inquired politely.

"No. Nothing, thank you," wanting him to go so that she could call Rod.

When he went, she did not stop to take off her coat or hat or gloves but went directly to the telephone and called Rod's office and waited anxiously, so afraid that he would be gone for the day.

But when a voice said merely, "Hello," she was afraid and anxious no longer.

"This is Brooke!" The room was warm now. Would the sound of his voice reduce her to a bundle of nerves and emotions?

"Brooke?" incredulously. "Where ....Why...."

"Here in New York." and laughed lightly as she gave him the name of the hotel. Then, "I didn't write you because there really wasn't time. And there were things I wanted to say and not write..tonight." If he said he couldn't see her tonight....

"Tonight?" with some uncertainty. "Oh, yes, of course. In about an hour. I've got to stay around awhile." Then with less uncertainty and more cheer, "Until then, darling."

Since they were children together in Chatham, going to the same school, the same church, the same parties, skating together in winter and swimming together in summer, her life had been colored and shaped by the dark-haired, dark-eyed boy who lived in a house as big and as shabby as her own house just a block away from his. She could smile now at the doubts and uncertainties of a much younger Brooke as to the depths of Rod's feeling for her, her sharp silent hurt when she had seen him with another girl, and his failure to see her as frequently as she wished to see him. And though uncertainties and doubts are never entirely eliminated, the nights had been less tormenting after, when she was sixteen, he told her that he loved her and she had come to be regarded, to the chagrin of several Chatham boys, as Rod Westover's 'girl'.

Twice tragedy had struck. Rod's father died suddenly and to support her son and herself and keep her home, Rod's capable mother Grace had rented rooms to transients, to retired old men and to disagreeable old ladies who could not live amicably with their children. That her tireless efforts to please her odd assortment of paying guests had been profitable was seen when Rod went to a western university from which he had been graduated three years ago. And Rod's going away to college was still remembered most vividly not only because his going was tragedy in itself to Brooke, but because her mother died two days after he had gone. From a bright summer to the bleakest winter of her life she went that year, comforted only by Rod's letters and more perplexed at the problem of her father, a melancholy, pessimistic man to whom she had never been close, than by any of her own. And though she accepted with secret relief a year later his announcement that he was going to marry Helen Bailey, who had taught school in Chatham for twenty years, Brooke knew that the home would never be quite her own home again.

When her thoughts went back, it seemed to Brooke that her life, since Rod went west to college, had been devoted chiefly to waiting. Waiting for Rod to come home on long holidays, waiting for his letters, waiting for his graduation. Long before he told her, she had reconciled herself to the fact that he would not settle permanently in Chatham and make one of the plants or mills or small business houses his career. Nor had Grace been surprised, Brooke knew, when Rod announced that he had a position with a large corporation in New York in which he was making rapid progress.

Nothing she had ever done was important except where it concerned him. Certainly her job as secretary to Chatham's busiest physician had never been important, a job from which she had resigned without regret three days ago to accept another very different kind of job in New York.

She understood Rod and loved him and admired him though there were people in the town, including her father, who thought that he had become a hopeless snob. From her father, too, sarcastic remarks that Rod would never marry her had cut deeply. But far from feeling that Rod had outgrown the town and the people he had known all his life, and that he resented the slow tempo of their conservative, satisfied lives, she admired the ambition and sacrifice that had won him honors in college and the determination to succeed in business. Those who disapproved of him, she thought, lacked his energy and brilliance and foresight. A handsome boy but never gay or abandoned, intense, often moody, Rod had a giant plan for his life and it was enough for her to be part of it. Also quick to defend him was Grace, his mother, touchingly proud of him.

It was the summer after his junior year in college that he had asked Brooke to marry him. They had been sitting beneath a cluster of trees beside a lake with a picnic lunch spread before them on a gay red cloth when, without preface, he asked her. And she had said, "You know I will, Rod." And he had said, "But not until I'm established and making enough to support you properly." They had said a great many tender, ardent things that afternoon. His arms held her in a fierce embrace, their lips had clung often. A passionate and beautiful day to remember. Thereafter, she felt, they would always be bound.

For three years now she had come down to New York on week ends whenever her budget would permit, Grace occasionally coming with her. Rod shared what his mother considered a scandalously untidy apartment with lanky, drawling Jim Bartlett who had also shared his room in college and who had a position as accountant. But there were many week end she did not see Rod, and last summer disappointment had almost made her ill when he wrote that he would not be in Chatham for his vacation this year because Mr. Glass, an important executive whose name Rod breathed with reverence, had invited him on an ocean fishing trip on his yacht, and it was an invitation he could not afford to refuse. Nor had he come home for Christmas this year, business taking him west. It had been three months now since she or his mother had seen him.

Of his life in New York, apart from his work, Jim and the small apartment, she knew nothing and did not, since he did not tell her, question. That he worked hard and for long hours she knew, Jim having said often. "He's a glutton for work, that guy. He'll be president of the whole works someday." But a thorough knowledge of Rod, as neat in his thoughts as in his appearance, moral, health-conscious and ambitious, had given her an unshakable faith despite her father's frequent remark that, "Rod probably has a score of girls in New York." Moreover jealousy of the torturing sickening kind had been conquered the first year he was away to school.

Though she had no tangible symbol of their engagement—only the still fresh memory of words and kisses on a summer day several years ago—she hoped each time she saw him that he would set a definite time for their marriage. For each time she returned to Chatham after a week end in New York, Helen always asked. "Have you and Rod set the date?" Loving him, she was patient and excused him, wondering at times if Rod did not consider that his first obligation was to his mother and that he must, since Grace was periodically in poor health, relieve her of the responsibility of the boarding house and provide adequately for her before he could marry. That obligation Brooke recognized and respected. But how long would they go on like this, she had been asking herself more and more of late, seeing each other only in crowded restaurants and night clubs, dancing a little, talking a little, dashing to the station on Sunday afternoon to her train? It could not go on indefinitely. They were losing what they would not be able to recapture.

Lifting her head, she looked out. It was quite dark now. May she always feel like this, glowing inside, her hands a little weak, in anticipation of his coming. But the time! Glancing at the old-fashioned gold watch on her arm, she saw that she had but half an hour in which to dress. Clothes were important. How often she wished that they were not, that she cared less, that Rod cared less.

Waiting, she thought, still waiting as she looked at herself critically in the dressing-table mirror, disregarding the small straight nose and generous mouth, cherry-colored, forgetting that the same young artist who had called her hair the color of smoke had also said that it was the shape of her skull that made her beautiful and that she she had a face for ecstasy and faith. Her thoughts scattered again..Her father's saying, "I hope you aren't making a mistake, Brooke. You're taking a good deal on yourself to do this." Grace's saying, "I think it's a wonderful idea. Give my love to Rod and tell him, please, to come home soon even if it's only for a day." But invariably her thoughts came back to the moment when she would step from the elevator downstairs to a tangible Rod, close enough to touch.

The phone had rung only once when she picked it up.

"I'm downstairs, Brooke," Rod said.

"I'll be down in a moment."

It's been three months since I've seen him, she thought, and I'm as excited as if he were a new lover I was trying to impress. Odd, having known him so long, she could still feel confused, wordless, her emotions shaking her, his touch shutting out everything except the sensation of his touch.

The elevator stopped abruptly and she stepped off, noting instantly that Rod's dark clothes were new. He looked tired but he was smiling, his dark eyes taking in all of her as he removed a brown hat from his black hair. Always he must look at her like this. And always the sight of him must stir her and take away her breath a little and cause her face to burn

"Darling," Rod said and gave her a brief embrace and a light kiss. "This is a surprise!"

"I've others. Surprises, I mean," and laughed lightly, feeling a tide of great happiness sweep over her.

"Any particular place you want to have dinner?" Rod asked.

"It doesn't matter. You always take me to a different place."

"I want to know what all this mystery is about and why you're in New York on Thursday."

He looked perplexed, curious. She laughed happily.

They got a taxi and sat close, their hands joined. He looked at her again, his eyes searching hers soberly before he kissed her again.

"I've missed you, Rod...."

"I've missed you. And writing letters...."

She did not want an apology. "Sometimes there isn't anything to say."

"I've been so busy at the office all day and sometimes half the night...."

"You take it so seriously, darling."

His smile was a little bitter. "Yes, don't I? How is mother?"

"Fine now. She sent her love and wants you to come home."

He frowned at that. "She just doesn't understand that I can't get away."

"Was your western trip successfull?"

"Yes, quite."

"I'm afraid nothing is ever quite so perfect as you want it, Rod."

"Except you."

Their eyes met again, then their lips. Her hands pressed against his shoulders. He looked so tired. Business took so much out of him. Breathlessly against his face, she said, "I love you."

"And I love you, Brooke. You're so beautiful—and so dear."

"You write 'I love you' but it never means as much as when you say it—close to me."

He smiled. "That's a crazy hat you're wearing."

"All hats are crazy."

"I like it. It's becoming."

"Thank you. How is Jim?"

"Oh, that's something I have to tell you. I've moved."

He took her to a place where a famous orchestra played mellow music. An expensive place, she thought. The best for her! She was too happy to analyze the gesture in any other way.

He ordered cocktails and lighted a cigarette.—"Well? What is this all about?"

She leaned forward. "I've come to stay—at least for several months. It was the summer you stayed at school to do extra work that Mrs. Kingsbury came to your mother's. You must remember our talking about her."

"The rich old lady?"

"Yes! She was born and raised just outside Chatham and married a wealthy man and has spent nearly all her life traveling. That summer she came back to Chatham was her first visit in forty-five years. She knew our grandparents. I saw a good bit of her that summer when she asked me to write some letters and read to her. Her eyesight is very poor. Well, last week she stopped in Chatham again with your mother and sent for me. She plans to live in New York for the rest of the winter and asked me to live with her as a sort of secretary-companion until she goes to California in June...."

"You won't go with her?"

"No. Not that far way." From you? "She has a niece in California whom she visits every year. Rod, I took it because I could be near you...."

"It's wonderful but—but isn't she just a cranky old lady who'll be difficult?"

"I wouldn't exactly call her a sweet old lady but she's quiet, at least, and...."

Rod laughed. "It's fantastic but it's—it's great, of course! She might die and leave you all her money."

"That isn't likely. Her niece in California has children."

"Too bad. Where are you going to live here?"

"She's taken an apartment which is being made ready for us now. She has a maid, Ellen, and a chauffeur, Francis. I'm to write letters, go shopping with her and to pictures, and read to her and make things in general easier for her. For which I'm to be paid a hundred dollars a month." And thought, when a chic young woman passed, that she would buy clothes with the first check. "She's visiting in Boston now and she'll arrive here on Monday. I came down a few days before—to see you. And another thing," she added brightly, "all my nights will be free after nine. Mrs. Kingsbury has to go to bed early."

He nodded, not smiling, his eyes absent. "What did your father think of this, Brooke?"

"He thought I was foolish and impulsive to give up a permanent position to accept a temporary one. But this offer was a passport to you."

When their cocktails came, she said, "You said you'd moved Rod.."

He nodded, lighting a cigarette. "Yes, to a larger apartment, alone. I'll take you there later. I hated the additional expense but— but appearances are important and I have a place where I could have people in. The other place was pretty awful, and Jim had a habit of bringing in the oddest people at all hours. He didn't like it, my moving." Looking at her, he said gently, "You understand, don't you, that if I'm to get anywhere certain things are expected of me. And where you live and the people you know are important. I had a substantial salary increase after the western trip and I've got to put all of it into better living, better clothes."

She told herself that she must understand, that she must not say she would be satisfied with very little if they would marry quite soon and that Grace, overworked, deserved rest and leisure. Rod clearheaded, trained, efficient, was undoubtedly right. If they waited a little longer....

"Of course you must."

With relief he said, "I knew you'd understand. Jim didn't."

"You and Jim didn't ...."

"Yes. We had a row. He couldn't see my point of view at all. I couldn't see his."

"Perhaps I can make him see yours." They had been such good friends for so long....

"Perhaps you can. He's crazy about you." Then, "That music is too good to waste."

When they had circled the floor once, she felt Rod stiffen. Looking up quickly, she heard him murmur to two men who were just coming in, two men who nodded and studied her briefly but critically before they passed on.

"The short chap is Mr. Glass," Rod said. "The other is Julian Carlton.

The short one......She glanced over Rod's shoulder, seeing that Mr. Glass, wearing a dark business suit, was indeed short, stout, bald, spectacled and far advanced in middle age. So it was he, who looked both shrewd and jolly, whose name Rod had spoken with reverence and on whose yacht Rod had spent his vacation last summer. The other, Julian Carlton, who towered above the rotund Mr. Glass, wore gray tweeds and had a deep tan becoming to fair men. He was many years younger than his companion. He was poised and assured, his profile strong, chin proud and firm. In a room filled with pale people he looked both distinguished and healthy. It occurred to her, too, she was later to remember, that she had been mistaken in thinking that only men of Rod's dark good looks were handsome.

"I've heard of Mr. Glass, who is Julian Carlton, Rod?"

Low, he said, "A corporation attorney, a brilliant one. And a bachelor like Barney. He's just back from Nassau."

When they danced by, Rod nodded again and Brooke looked again, seeing Barney Glass's shrewd little eyes narrow and Julian Carlton's alert blue eyes study her thoughtfully. When the music ended and she returned to the table, she felt the two men were talking about Rod and her.

Rod was smiling. "Curious about them? You'll meet them on Saturday at a cocktail thing Barney is having. At home and on the yacht, he's Barney. In the office, Mr. Glass of course."

"Saturday?" And was instantly conscious of her Chatham-purchased clothes. "That will give me time to shop tomorrow."

"If you need any money...."

"Thank you, no. I've been rather frugal, and not coming to New York for three months...."

"I hope that's our dinner coming now. I want to take you up to the apartment. Then I'll have to take you back fairly early because there are some reports I've got to look over before tomorrow. And tomorrow," he frowned, clipped his words short, "well, tomorrow night let Jim tell you what I've turned out to be in his opinion. I'll have to stay at the office and clean up some work before the week end—if I'm going to spend most of it with you."

17,678 Hogs Marketed in Country in 3 Months

The accurate forecasting of the numbers of hogs to be marketed during definite periods has become an important factor in the efficient marketing of bacon and pork products.

The agricultural representative and the farmers of Hastings County have co-operated in giving the information requested on the survey cards sent out by the department. From this information the future marketings are forecast and plans are made accordingly.

During the months of October, November and December 1939 the farmers of Hastings Count marketed 17,678 hogs. If these hogs had been shipped to market in stock cars containing 80 hogs in each car 221 cars would have been required. Let each farmer compare the marketings of October, November and December 1939 with what he expects the marketings for this year will be and assume the responsibility of ordering in advance the cars necessary to transport the hogs to market. In order to add interest to the estimates farmers are requested to mail their estimates to this office not later than September 1st when they will be filed and a list of those estimating closest will be published when the official figures are available.

		GRADE	B			C

JAPANESE

Authoritative circles denied reports the arrests were in retaliation for the mass arrests of British subjects in Japan and Korea, nine of whom still are in custody, and described their timing as "pure coincidence" growing out of investigations which have been under way for some months under Britain's stringent defence of the realm regulations.

The British position was that in a widespread drive against enemy sympathizers and possible spies people of all nationalities have been detained, among them some Japanese.

To link such arrests with the incidents in Japan and assert they are retaliatory merely because they followed the arrests in Japan, these sources said, was drawing an unwarranted conclusion.

Home Office Refuses Comment

Japanese Ambassador Mamoru Shigemitsu personally went to the British Foreign Office with the protests against the arrests of businessmen whom the Embassy said were Satoru Makihara and Sunsukei Tanabe, the London managers of the great Japanese manking firms of Mitsubishi and Mitsui, respectively.

The two were understood to have been arrested under the aliens order of the defence regulations, which gives the Home Secretary power to depart aliens or order their detention.

The Home Office however, refused any comment this morning.

Makihara has been the London representative of Mitsubishi Shoji Kaisha for more than 10 years while Tanabe was transferred to the London office of Mitsui Bussan Kaisha three months ago. Tanabe is married to an Englishwoman and has one daughter.

Police searched Makihara's home in the fashionable Putney district before the arrest but it was understood they took no papers away.

Makihara is understood to have been given only time enough to pack an overnight bag before he was taken to Scotland Yard by officers of the special branch.

While no details were given as to the number of Japanese apprehended nor where they were seized this morning's London News Chronicle, predicting such arrests would be made, said it believed they would occur in England, in India and in other British possessions in the Orient where there are large colonies of Japanese.

No Details Available

"It is expected that no details of the charges will be made available," the newspaper said. "All that is expected is a series of notifications that the man have been detained under the scope of one or more of the emergency acts of parliament giving the police power to take into custody any people whose actions may be prejudicial to the well-being of the country."

Confirmation of the arrests came within 24 hours of news that two more British subjects had been detained by Japan, this time in that country's Asiatic colony of Korea.

This brought the number of Britons in custody to nine, since six of the 13 prominent businessmen arrested in various parts of Japan in what Japanese authorities described as a drive against espionage had been released.

These actions by the Japanese brought a statement from an authoritative British spokesman yesterday charging that the German gestapo had a representative in the Japanese home office who exerted considerable influence in Japanese internal affairs.

Claimed Retaliatory

Tokyo, Aug. 3 — (AP) — Tokyo newspapers said today they regarded the arrests of Japanese citizens by British authorities as being in retaliation for arrests of Britons in Japan on suspicion of espionage.

The newspapers issued extra editions with London dispatches reporting the arrests.

A spokesman at the Japanese Embassy said: "We are flabber gasted at the action which has been taken".

He added that Ambassador Shigemitsu, in addition to lodging a protest, had asked full details of and reasons for the arrests.

The spokesman described the two men as "very pro-British and very sympathetic to Britain".

"We hope everything can be settled satisfactorily", he added.

First news of the arrests of Makihara and Tanabe was relayed to London in News Agency messages from Tokyo, where Makihara's wife and daughter, the latter born in London, are staying. Makihara has been in England continuously since late in 1937, when he returned from a business trip to Tokyo.

MILITARY

The Royal Air Force, returning the German raids on their harbors and inland bases, reported that more than 1,000 objectives in Germany and German-held territory have been bombed in far-flung raids of the past three months.

On the other hand, Ronald Cross, Minister of Shipping, said last Wednesday that some of Britain's busiest pre-war channel ports now virtually are closed for various reasons, and that normal traffic in others is displaced by war commerce.

Prepared For Sudden Changes

This week the Germans made their greatest single day's attack on Dover, channel port closest to France, but did little damage.

Mr. Cross said Britain had prepared for "sudden changes in our port arrangements," as a result of the danger to channel traffic.

He assured Britons, however, the maze of quays, stretching 26 miles from Tilsbury to London Bridge along the Thames, often called the "most vulnerable spot in the British Empire," had escaped damage altogether.

Despite the almost daily German raids aimed at British ports, a poll of them disclosed they also had escaped serious damage from the attacks.

In its last recapitulation, the Air Ministry reported 318 German raiders had been downed, 248 sinc the first mass raid June 18, b home defences and that more tha 400 Nazi fliers had been captured.

Folkestone: "You can take it fro me there hasn't been any damag to this port. There is no shippin going in and out, but the reason i that all our ordinary trade is gone. fary

Plymouth: "There have been 4(s to odd raids around here in the l nt in month and about 20 deaths. So houses have been hit, but mo that the bombings have been in cou rection districts where they are aiming d films military objectives." s into a

No Military Damage prologue.

The men said they had experienced an uneventful voyage and had seen none of the German bombers which are alleged in Nazi circles to lie in wait for shipping seeking British shores.

Maj.-Gen. Victor Odlum, general officer commanding the Canadian 2nd division, said as he stepped ashore that until the war is carried into Germany "we cannot feel that we have done our duty."

So closely was the secret of the expedition guarded that apart from the press there was only a small handful of people on the dock when the vessels anchored.

Press Comment on Arrival

The Daily Telegraph, commenting on the arrival of the Canadians said that they have come "to join in the defence not only of Britain alone but of all those civilised values which Canada shares with other members of the commonwealth and with her great southern neighbor."

"Their arrival brings new evidence not only of the unchallenged supremacy of the British Navy but of that imperial unity which is beginning to impress the enemy himself," the newspaper said.

Morning newspapers gave considerable space to the story showing particular interest to the Americans in the contingent. Some headlines read: "The Americans are here," and "The Yanks are here."

Robert Brown of Kentucky and John McMichael of Detroit shared picture space with Private David Croll of Windsor, Ont.,—Mayor-on-leave of that city—and Pipe Major Jock Copland also of Windsor.

Light Trading On Produce Markets

Toronto, Aug. 3 — Produce lines closed the week on a steady note under light receipts on the local market yesterday. Prices of butter, cheese and eggs were all unchanged from Thursday.

First-grade Ontario creamery butter sold in quiet trading at 23c. While demand fell off somewhat, offerings remained light. Sales of Western butter were made at 23 3-4c, with both supplies and demand light.

The egg market was firm in undertone, with receipts clearing readily at steady prices. Early in the week the market had been quiet and easy but a gradual improvement took place about midweek as demand increased somewhat and receipts became lighter. While top-quality eggs firmed, lower grades, of which there was a slight surplus, did not move as freely. Inspected shipments to the north country were heavier during the week.

A quiet steady tone was in evi- ence on the local poultry market his week. General demand was fo ir, with dealers expecting some osco k-up in week-end trading. Price Age- ding occurred in wholesale to ll trading. however. in an effort keep receipts moving.

Home Guard Volunteers Stand Behind Britain's First-Line Army

1,250,000 Ready to Put Ammunition on Dining Room Table and Fight from There

DRILL AT NIGHT

By DREW MIDDLETON
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

With the British Field Army's Northern Command, Aug. 3 (AP).—Some 1,250,000 home guard volunteers stand today behind Britain's seasoned first-line troops, ready, their officers say, to "put their ammunition on the dining room table and fight from there."

Few of these volunteers had military training before the war and many never touched a rifle until a month ago, but they are now an integral part of Britain's elaborate defence system.

"Give them a position to hold," said one veteran staff officer confidently, "and they'll hold it until the regulars can come up and hit the Boche."

Most of the volunteers do their soldiering in addition to putting in eight hours of work at their regular jobs.

Fishermen, farmers, factory hands, hotel waiters, shop keepers and bank clerks, they rise before dawn or sacrifice their lunch hours to take part in daily drills. Many drill at night.

Armed with rifles and "uniformed" in overalls, the home guards are regarded by the general staff as indispensable for observation purposes and secondary fixed defence.

The home guard units are commanded for the most part by retired army officers, and they maintain close contact with the regular army brigade staffs in their districts. Briefly, their duties are:

1. To patrol roads, fields and the coastline near their homes.
2. To delay the advance of an invading army through their home towns.
3. To act in conjunction with the regular army by guarding communications and depots.

One factor which will work in the home guards' favor in event of an invasion attempt is their knowledge of the local countryside, now denuded of signposts and every indication which might help an enemy force to orientate itself.

One job for which the home guard is regarded as vital is the destruction of small parachute groups bent on demolition.

The army has prepared machine-gun and artillery positions to hold airdromes and other important points against parachutists. But against small bodies of parachutists, landing in desolate country the home guard would be the first line of defence.

Along the coast, home guards maintain a constant patrol in motorboat and dinghys or scan the sea from clifftops.

Lord Beaverbrook May Succeed Neville Chamberlain

London, Aug. 3 (CP)—Possibility that Lord Beaverbrook, newly invited into Prime Minister Churchill's inner war cabinet, might succeed Neville Chamberlain as Lord President of the Council, drew speculation in the press today.

An official announcement last night said the Canadian-born Lord Beaverbrook would continue for the time being in his post as Minister of Aircraft Production.

His elevation brings membership of the inner cabinet to six, the other members being Mr. Churchill, Mr. Chamberlain, Viscount Halifax, Clement Attlee and Arthur Greenwood.

The Daily Herald (Labor) declared: "There is a growing feeling that Mr. Neville Chamberlain, who is at present in a nursing home (after an operation), is not likely to resume any heavy responsibilities. It is being stated that his present indisposition marks the end of his active career. In this event, Lord Beaverbrook may be expected to take over the ex-premier's duties at an early date."

The News Chronicle (Liberal) discussed the possibility that Lord Beaverbrook might take over the Ministry of Information from Alfred Duff Cooper, who has drawn criticism in the House of Commons from recent house-to-house polls of public opinion regarding war matters and in the newspapers are handling of censorship.

"It has been strongly represented to the Prime Minister that British propaganda, especially in foreign countries, badly needs strengthening," the News Chronicle said, remarking that no member of the inner cabinet is directly responsible for propaganda.

DOCTORS OFFER HOMES TO CHILDREN OF BRITISH DOCTORS

Montreal, Aug. 3—(CP)—Canadian physicians have offered homes to the children of more than 1,000 British doctors, through the efforts of the Canadian Medical Association, the association's journal announced today. Dr. T. C. Routley, General Secretary of the Association, announced he was "cabling the British Medical Association to this effect."

25-lb. Lunge Hooked As Lunge Hits Bass Which Strikes Minnow

And the first real "fish" story of the season comes out of Havelock. An angling adventure which is sure to provide material for many a future fishing tale was experienced by Bill Copp, of Havelock, on Wednesday afternoon at Round Lake, six miles north of that village, which for want of a better caption he calls "Three fish on one hook".

Accompanied by his wife and son, the trio had set out in their boat and had been fishing a little more than ten minutes when the big moment arrived. Equipped with a light steel rod, silk line and single hook with gut leader, Mr. Copp was using a small chub for bait.

Soon a small bass with an extra large appetite came along and swallowed the chub and when Mr. Copp started to reel in, 'bingo', there came a second strike which all true anglers would at once detect as a lunge. Although rather dubious about landing the big fellow with a single hook, luck was with him, however, and before many minutes had elapsed, the 25-pound lunge, with a 12-inch bass and chub lay in the bottom of the boat.

KINSMEN CLUB HONORS MEMBERS

Five Joining Colors Presented With Pen and Pencil Sets Suitably Engraved

Members of the Belleville Kinsmen Club paid tangible tribute to five clubmen who have offered their services to King and Empire, at the "Bide-a-Wee" Tourist Camp, Trent Road, last night, when President Geoffrey Marvell, on behalf of the organization presented Captain Ralph Bird, R.C.A., Donald Thomas, William Holway and William Ashline and Lieut. William Hurst with handsome engraved military pen and pencil sets. Lieut. Hurst was absent through pressure of military duties, but the presentation was made by proxy and will be forwarded to him.

Practically the entire membership of the club turned out to pay tribute to gallant colleagues. There was the usual Kinsmen gayety and camaraderie, albeit under the hilarity and good fellowship there was an undercurrent of regret at the severance of years of happy associations. Yet there was a distinct air of pride in the fact that members of the club had shown by the fact of their very enlistment that they were holding high the ideals and traditions of an organization that is built on fellowship borne in the Canadian forces during the last Great War.

Aftermath of Great War

This point was forcibly brought out by President Marvell in a brief address prior to the presentation of the gifts. "Kinsmenship," he said "is an aftermath of the Great War, and was founded by men who discovered the real meaning of fellowship in the crucible of war. Today," he added, "the Empire again faces a crisis, and we are proud that the traditions of Kinsmenship and its ideals will be held high by members who have offered their services to the Empire."

He briefly reviewed the origin of the club and its progress made down through the years. Before formally presenting the gifts, President Marvell outlined the individual services rendered the club by the guests of honor. He paid tribute to their efforts on committees and in the club as a whole, and expressed the wish that the day is not far away when all will be united again.

Appropriate responses were made by the guests of honor and the evening concluded with refreshments served in a typical Kinsmen atmosphere.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, Aug. 3 (CP)—Attempts to pin another small rally on the stock market met with scant success today and many leaders relinquished fractions of recent gains.

Price changes, though, were viewed as relatively unimportant owing to the sluggishness of dealings. Transfers were around 100,000 shares for the two hour proceedings. Trends were well jumbled at the close.

U. S. Steel and Bethlehem skidded as next week's still mill operations, it was predicted, would record a modest drop because of the suspension of a number of plant furnaces for repairs.

Backward most of the time was American Telephone and in arrears occasionally were Kennecott, Great Northern, Woolworth, Goodyear, Du Pont and Union Carbide. Resistant were Standard Oil of N.J., Texas Corp., Anaconda, Pennsylvania and U.S. Rubber.

In the Canadian section, Walkers and International Nickel, up fractions, were the only issues to show a change. In the Bond market Canada 4s were inactive.

Bonds and commodities followed a slightly irregular route.

PARLIAMENT WILL ADJOURN TO NOV. 5 SAYS PREMIER

Prorogation is Out Says Mr. King and Parliament Can be Called if Needed Before Nov. 5 Date

HANSON AGREES

Ottawa, Aug. 3 (CP)—Prime Minister Mackenzie King told the Commons today he proposed that parliament would adjourn and not prorogue at the conclusion of the business of the present session.

The adjournment would be until November 5 but an earlier meeting could be called if necessary. He moved a resolution to that effect.

If it appeared before November 5 that it was necessary to call parliament together, it would be possible by merely adjourning now, to bring members together on the shortest possible notice, the Prime Minister said.

If that course were not necessary, the government would then be in a position to know whether the best interests of the country would be served by holding a long or short session then. That could only be decided in the light of conditions at that time.

Mr. King said he realized great inconvenience was caused to bring members from all parts of the country for a short sitting.

By the first week of November, the government would know whether to call merely a short session on the Tuesday and prorogue on the following Thursday until early in the new year.

The meeting of parliament on Nov. 5 would be mandatory.

Conservative Leader Hanson expressed concurrence with the resolution. The suggestion had been advanced by him on two occasions. "Parliament is the proper place to discuss defence if Canada should be further imperilled. I have always felt that during a war this high court of parliament should function."

M. J. Coldwell (CCF Rosetown-Biggar) said it was impossible to foresee what would happen in the future. He believed the government was adopting the proper course.

HITLER PROPOSES TRANSFER PLAN

Hopes to Dispose of Rumanian-Hungarian Dispute by Sending Persons Back to Countries of Ancestry

Bucharest, Aug. 3. — (AP) — ransfer of 1,500,000 to 2,000,000 persons to the countries of their ancestry is Adolf Hitler's plan for disposing of Rumanian-Hungarian territorial problems regardless of how much land Rumania ultimately cedes, German diplomatic circles said today.

Under this scheme, all Hungarians in Rumania would be returned to Hungary; all Germans in ceded territory of the disputed province of Transylvania would be removed to the Reich and all Rumanians in such areas as well as present Hungary would be transplanted into Rumania.

According to latest estimates, there are 1,400,000 Hungarians in all Rumania; 500,000 Germans in Transylvania, which Rumania gained from Hungary in the First Great War Settlement and 100,000 Rumanians in Hungary.

German circles said the recent Axis-Balkan conferences had limited Rumanian-Hungarian negotiations to a semi-circular frontier area taking in two large Transylvanian cities.

These sources declared the Rumanian Ministers were assured of frontier guarantees as well as economic, cultural and financial support from the Reich as soon as Nazi territorial and economic questions are settled — apparently assuming Germany wins the war.

Woman Wants To Join U. S. Army

Philadelphia, Aug. 3—(CP) — Mrs. Leah Nunzi, 27, and the mother of a 20-month-old son, asked to enlist in the United States army and declared: "I bet a crew of women could beat those Nazis to smithereens." She was told the army isn't taking women just yet.

Decision Not to Sell 20 Torpedo Boats To Britain Scored

New York Herald Tribune Says Boats "Could Have Done Something Real for American Defence Had They Reached England" and That What They Will Do for National Defence "at Home is, by Comparison, Almost Negligible"

New York, Aug. 3—(CP)—The New York Herald Tribune, criticizing editorially the recent decision of the United States government not to sell 20 torpedo boats to Great Britain, said today the boats 'could have done something real for American national defence had they reached England."

"What they will ever actually do for it (national defence) at home is, by comparison, almost negligible," it stated.

The boats were being built for the United States government and permission for them to be "turned in" for newer and better models, releasing them to Britain, had been granted when it was discovered American law did not permit the sale, President Roosevelt rescinded the order and Britain failed to get the craft.

Magazine Criticizes

The Herald Tribune took to task the Saturday Evening Post which in its current issue said of the boat deal: "Here is the story of how a fleet of fast torpedo boats building for the United States Navy was lost by intent, recaptured by design and then restored to the national defence, where it will stay."

To this the Herald Tribune retorts:

"The story might be worth repeating for several reasons—among them, as an illustration of the grotesque subterfuges, confusions and misadventures enforced by the attempt to cling to the forms of a neutrality policy no longer remotely in accordance with the facts.

"But to present it as a dramatic episode in which a fleet about to be "lost" was 'restored to the national defence' seems only another example of that extraordinary blindness to all the concrete realities which characterizes so much of the discussion of the whole military problem....

"The probabilities are that the motorboats were more completely and effectively 'lost' to the defence of the United States at the moment the transaction was blocked than they ever could have been had they reached the English Channel. The preservation of Great Britain and the British navy is of such overwhelming importance to the defence of the United States that if these boats, shipped abroad now, could lend any material aid to that end they would be rendering a service to American defence worth many times the money spent on them."

HANSON ASKS

Prime Minister Mackenzie King said the House could rely on the government to see that the laws of the country were duly upheld. He promised to make a statement later and said he was unprepared to do so at the moment because there was some conflict of views and he wanted to be sure of the facts.

Defence Minister Ralston said he thought Mr. Hanson's information on the action of the press censors was not wholly correct. He understood the censors' ruling was given the Montreal Gazette before the Houde statement was published.

Montreal, Aug. 3 (CP)—Charles Edward Hardie, 74, manufacturer's agent, died today at his home here. He represented several British exporting companies and was eastern Canadian agent for the firm J. G. Field and Son of Tavistock, Ont. Surviving are a daughter Mrs. Geoffrey Hadrill of Montreal, and a son George T. Hardie of Charlottetown.

Sought Reform For 'Average Man'

Oak Bluffs, Mass, Aug. 3 (AP).—Frederick Clemson Howe, 72, chairman of the United States Agriculture Adjustment Administration and a self-described "fighting idealist" who spent a lifetime seeking reforms for the "average man", died today at Martha's Vineyard Hospital.

Scholar, author, lawyer and authority on government, Howe was stricken ill two weeks ago while visiting at the summer home in Chilmark of Roger Baldwin, an official of the American Civil Liberties Union.

WINSTON CHURCHILL WEARS NEW GEAR

London, Aug. 3—(CP Cable) — Cigar-smoking Winston Churchill has abandoned his customary black homburg for a strange gear that looks like part of a cabman's uniform. All recent pictures of the Prime Minister show him with a hard hat that looks like a cross between a topper and a derby and distinctly resembles those worn a quarter-century back.

NEWSPAPER SAYS DIVORCE CONTEMPLATED

Los Angeles, Aug. 3—(AP)—The Examiner says Swans Beaucaire, French screen actress, will leave tomorrow for Reno, Nev., to divorce Clyde Pangborn, round-the-world flier.

"We are still very good friends," Mrs. Uangborn was quated, "but his work as a representative of the Canadian Government keeps Clyde constantly on the move. We have seen but little of each other for some time." He is enlisting aviation instructors for the Canadian government.

AUSTRALIANS ARRIVE

London, Aug. 3 (CP).—Arrival of more Australian troops in Britain to reinforce the thousands who came in mid-June was announced today by the Dominions Office.

The announcement, which did not disclose the number, said the men left Australia the latter part of June and had reached Britain during the past few days.

FAILURE TO FOLLOW ORDERS BLAMED FOR FATAL TRAIN CRASH IN WHICH 43 DIED

The failure of the crew of a gasoline shuttle train to follow orders to take a siding was said by railway officials to be responsible for the fatal train crash near Akron, Ohio, in which 43 persons lost their lives. The shuttle train was plowed into by a fast freight and immediately turned into a blazing inferno as its gasoline tanks caught fire. The interior of the flame-swept car is shown LEFT, as rescue workers examine the debris. The engine of the freight train plowed more than 20 feet into the doomed shuttle car RIGHT.

JIMMY FOXX DONS MASK AGAIN

Red Sox Manager Joe Cronin, RIGHT, pulled a minor sensation in Cleveland when he sent Jimmy Foxx, slugging first baseman, to the catcher's box. Foxx, who entered the big time as a catcher, hasn't worn the big mitt in competition for more than two years. Cronin explained that he was taking advantage of an opportunity to send the teams maximum batting power into action, by putting Foxx behind the plate rather than replace Finney at first, who has Ybeen hitting well. Finney replaced Foxx when Jimmy injured his leg.

GUSTINE'S "OUT" THAT CAUSED THE STORM

CUB INJURED IN PHILADELPHIA.

Augie Galan, fleet outfielder for the Chicago Cubs, is carried from the field after injury in fourth inning of the Phillies-Cubs' game at Philadelphia. Galan crashed into the wall while chasing Schultes' foul fly in the fifth inning. It was a bad day all around for the Cubs. Catcher - Manager Leo (Gabby) Hartnett was hit on the top of the head by Mel Mazzera's swinging bat, knocked unconscious and forced from the game—then to top it all, the Cubs lost, 3 to 7.

Canadians Plant Flowers on Graves Of Dogs in England

With the Canadian Forces Somewhere in England Aug. 3.—(CP)—Flowers bloomed today on what had been a weed-covered "happy hunting ground" for eight dogs buried years ago in a grotto cemetery by a master who knew the true meaning of canine friendship.

The plot was discovered by a group of Canadian soldiers while putting into shape the grounds where they were pitching camp.

On a weather-beaten slab of stone, its lettering almost indecipherable, was the following epitaph: "Goodbye. May he who next shall own my garden spare this tiny stone that marks the spot where trouble free you sleep and dream, perchance of me.

"I hope he will, yet wherefor fret, we could not if we would forget each other. When in turn the dark shall clear my eyes your joyous bark will greet me echoing to the skies. Till then dear loving heart, goodbye".

The boys, not only spared the tiny stone, but cleared away the weeds and planted flowers from a nearby plot.

PAN-AMERICAN UNION DISCUSSION INOPPORTUNE NOW

Prime Minister King Frowns On Any Discussion of Proposals To Make Mutual Defence Treaty With U.S.

TIME NOT RIPE

Might Also Be Construed Deliberately As a Sign of Weakness

Ottawa, Aug. 6.—(CP)— Prime Minister Mackenzie King told the House of Commons today that discussion of proposals that Canada join the Pan-American Union and make a mutual defence treaty with the United States was inopportune at this time.

George Fulford (Lib. Leeds) suggested Canada should be a member of the Union and J. F. Pouliot (Lib. Temiscouata) said President Roosevelt's promise to defend Canada should be implemented by a treaty in which both countries would fight for the other in case of attack.

Mr. King said the Pan-American Union was a union of republics and so far Canada had not been invited to join. With Canada at war and the other American nations at peace, this was not the time for any move in the matter.

"I believe it would be embarrassing to the United States, to the Central and South American Republics and to ourselves, and would create misunderstaning were we to seek at this time to become a member of the Pan-American Union", said Mr. King.

Rodney Adamson (Con. York West) said any attempt to join the Union now would be construed as a sign of weakness and a sign of the disintegration of the British Empire.

"It would be so construed deliberately", said Mr. King.

Regarding the United States, Mr. King said mutual defence was a large subject. With Canada at war, and the United States at peace and engaged in an election campaign a statement might have one meaning in Canada and a dozen different meanings to others who might wish to give it different meaning.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Cooling thunderstorms! There seem to be only two causes for—the cooling associated with thunderstorms: the cold rain chilling air and evaporation—for evaporation is a cooling process. Cold rain chilling the air can have only a slight effect, so it is believed that evaporation is the principal cause. There is usually plenty of evaporation: heavy showers have been known to leave the clouds and never reach the ground. At such times the air is warmer and drier than during ordinary showers. So the cold rain and the evaporation cool the air, make it heavier, and thus cause a downrush which underruns the warmer surface air.

Few Bombs Dropped By Nazi Airmen

London, Aug. 6—(CP)—The Air Ministry and Ministry of Home Security today issued the following communique on air attacks on Britain during the night:

"During last night enemy aircraft dropped a small number of bombs in a few districts of southeast England.

"Yesterday afternoon fighter aircraft of the Royal Air Force shot down an enemy fighter over the English Channel. This makes a total of four enemy fighters destroyed in yesterday's engagements."

Hull Calls on People of U.S. For "Personal Service"

Washington, Aug. 6. (AP)—State Secretary Cordell Hull called on the people of the United States today for individual sacrifice and "hard personal service" to help keep the nation at peace.

Without mentioning specifically the controversial question of conscription, he counselled against complacency "in the face of terrific problems and conditions" and declared:

"The one and only sure way for our nation to avoid being drawn into serious trouble or actual war. . . . is for our people to become thoroughly conscious of the possibilities of danger, to make up their minds that we must continue to arm and to arm to such an extent that the forces of conquest and ruin will not dare make an attack on us or any part of this hemisphere.

"To this end, each citizen must be ready and willing for real sacrifice of time and of substance and for hard personal service".

Hull's views were expressed in a statement prepared before he left for a West Virginia Mountain Resort to rest from his work at the Havana Conference of American Republic Foreign Ministers, which ended last week.

At Havana, Hull said, it was "agreed that full and adequate preparations for continental defence could not be taken too soon if the threatened danger from abroad was to be checked and terminated."

There was general agreement also, he said, that "if the peaceful nations of Europe had thus promptly organized themselves for self-defence on the most effective co-operative basis, the chances are that their situation and that of Europe would be vastly different today."

"The vast forces of lawlessness, conquest and destruction are still moving across the earth like a savage and dangerous animal at large," Hull's statment continued. "By their very nature, those forces will not stop unless and until they recognize that there exists unbreakable resistance.

"At Havana we forced new instrumentalities of continental defence. These will be of vast importance to our nation and to every American nation."

The Conference adopted a resolution proving that an act of aggression by a non-American state against an American state would be considered an act against all the countries signing the declaration.

Hull's statement indicated all possible speed here in carrying out other measures adopted at Havana, including those to relieve and strengthen the economy of Latin American countries and to check "Fifth Column" activities.

GIVES HUGE SUM TO TREASURY

London, Aug. 6 (CP).—John A. Fielden, 80-year-old bachelor of Holme Wood, Holme, has given £50,000 to the Chancellor of the Exchequer as a contribution to the war effort. At the start of the war he gave six ambulances costing £550 each for service in France.

Traffic Resumed on Burma Road

Rangoon, Burma, Aug. 6—(CP Reuters)—An official announcement today said traffic had been resumed over the Burma road to China for goods not prohibited by the British-Japanese agreement closing the road to war supplies for China. The road had been closed entirely while control arrangements were worked out.

TENSION APPEARS TO HAVE EASED LONDON STATES

London Agent For Big Japanese Firm Released Monday Night

NOT REPRISALS

British Home Office Decides Evidence Insufficient to Warrant Detention of Makihara Further

London, Aug. 6—(CP)—Diplomatic tension between Britain and Japan appeared to ease today as the government prepared a statement on the situation for presentation in the House of Commons this afternoon.

Either Prime Minister Churchill or Foreign Undersecretary R. A. Butler was to go before Commons with the government's statement on British-Japanese relations.

Prominent Japanese is Released

On the surface at least these relations were bettered by the release last night of Satoru Makihara, London agent for the big Mitsubishi business and banking interests, who was arrested Friday night in a round-up of Japanese throughout the empire.

The Home Office was said to have decided that the "evidence available" was "insufficient to warrant further detention" of Makihara. He and eight other Japanese were arrested in a drive the British said was for home security. The government denied the detentions were in reprisal for similar arrests of Britons in Japan.

The other eight remained in custody, including Shunsuke Takabe, a London representative of the Mitsui interests.

HANGAR, PLANES OF PRIVATE CLUB DAMAGED BY GALE

Men On Hand Hold Planes Down and Hold Doors Shut Against Twister

PLANES TOSSED ABOUT

Kitchener, Ont., Aug. 6 (CP).—A 60-mile gale damaged the hangar of the Kitchener-Waterloo airport late yesterday and badly damaged two aircraft. Jack Douglas, a member of the executive of the private flying club, said only the fact that there were men on hand to hold the planes down and hold doors shut against the 'twister' saved all the club's aircraft from being wrecked.

The wind came during a heavy rain storm, tearing part of the heavy doors of the hangar off their track and on top of two planes. The wind then carried the two planes up against the rafters of the hangar until the storm had subsided, and a third plane was tipped on one wing. A fourth machine was blown out of the hangar and men chased it down the field.

The loss has not been estimated.

ABANDONS PROPOSAL

Canberra, Aug. 6—(CP Reuters)—The Australian government has abandoned the proposal to seek from Westminster power to prolong the life of the present parliament whose term expires Nov. 28.

A government spokesman said that had the power been obtained it would have been used only in an Empire or Australian emergency but that lack of unanimity at pre-sessional meeting of the three parties—United Australia, United Country, and Labor—made it difficult to proceed with the plan.

Mary Pickford Will Re-Edit Old Films to Raise War Funds

Hollywood, Aug. 6—(AP)—Mary Pickford said today she plans to assist the Canadian Government in raising war relief funds and that her first venture in that direction will be to re-edit all her old films and combine the highlights into a cavalcade with a modern prologue.

"I have other plans in mind, but these are in a formative stage," the Toronto-born actress said. "I hope to go to Vancouver late in October or in November, where they are to auction a piece of jewelry I have contributed. The sponsors hope to raise about $25,000 from this for war relief purposes.

"I feel that I can raise more money, perhaps, with this idea of re-editing the old films than by a personal appearance tour, but I want to help all I possibly can. In the last war I served as chairman of the Women's Auxiliary, Motion Picture Division, of the American Red Cross."

British Accumulate More Planes Monthly Than Nazis

Germans Producing Now at Rate of 1,500 to 1,600 Monthly, It Is Estimated And British Production Runs 'Neck and Neck' With This

BRITISH ALSO IMPORT

33,431 British Bombs Dropped On Germany In Month, While Nazi Raiders Dumped Only 6,987 On British Soil

London, Aug. 6 (CP)—Britain was cheered by news that the monthly accumulation of aircraft in the United Kingdom now exceeds that of Germany, even though the country is still a bit behind in total numerical air strength.

Authorities, pointing to the increasing efficiencies of the Royal Air Force, said that in yesterday's fights three of the four enemy machines destroyed were shot down on the French side of the Channel by patrolling aircraft waiting for them. They never reached Britain.

Bombers shuttled over Germany all the night before last, dropping 14 tons of explosives, firing an oil plant at Sternkrade in the Ruhr and a hangar and other buildings at the airport of Krefeld. They returned undamaged.

Authorities reported also there was a wide discrepancy in the number of British bombs rained on Germany and the number of German missiles reaching earth in Britain. The R.A.F., they said, had aimed 33,431 bombs on German targets, in a single month while German raiders dumped only 6,987 on British soil.

Since the night of July 18-19, when Germany started large-scale raids on Britain, they said, Germany has lost 307 planes while the R.A.F. and other air services in their work have lost 172. The German losses do not include estimates of those so severely damaged they were unlikely to have reached their home ports.

Estimates of Plane Production

In actual figures, authorities said German aircraft production of all types is believed to be between 1,500 and 1,600 a month. Britain now is running "neck and neck" with this figure and exceeding it by imports for which she can pay and which she can carry away from overseas countries in her own ships.

ICELANDERS LIKE CANUCKS

Ottawa, Aug. 6—(CP)—Canadian troops are winning the good will of Icelanders, whose island they now guard against Nazi invasion, according to Arni Eggertsson of Winnipeg, who passed through here last night en route home after a visit to his native Iceland. Conversation between the troops and Icelanders has been facilitated by a booklet, "Icelandic for Soldiers," issued to troops by the Canadian Legion.

VIMY MEMORIAL IS REPORTED AS UNDAMAGED

Mr. King Reads to Commons Air Ministry Cable Stating That Aerial Photograph Does Not Show Any Damage

SCULPTOR RELIEVED

Ottawa, Aug. 6—(CP)—The Vimy Memorial in France has not suffered any war damage that can be seen from the air, Prime Minister Mackenzie King announced in the House of Commons today.

He read a brief cable from the British Air Ministry stating on aerial photograph of the monument recently taken "does not show any damage."

British Tommies returning to England on June 1 from Dunkirk told The Canadian Press war correspondent with the 1st Canadian division, Edwin S. Johnson, that the Vimy Ridge memorial had been shattered by German bombers.

They said they saw the wreckage of the memorial with its twin shafts that towered 140 feet over the plain of Douai. They said also the bombers deliberately wrecked Canadian, British and French cemeteries nearby.

The Germans subsequently denied the stories and said the memorial was undamaged.

Walter S. Allward, Toronto sculptor, designed the vast work of shining stone and supervised its construction. The work took 14 years and the memorial was unveiled in 1936 by King Edward VIII.

Sculptor Relieved

Toronto, Aug. 6—(CP)—"That is a great relief—but the memorial is still in German hands," said the Toronto sculptor, Walter S. Allward, today when he was informed of Prime Minister Mackenzie King's statement in parliament to Ottawa that the British Air Ministry has found no signs of damage to the massive Canadian memorial on Vimy Ridge.

Mr. Allward, who designed the graceful structure, said that naturally he was greatly relieved to hear the news after believing for many weeks that the Vimy memorial had been destroyed by the Germans during the battle of France.

TRIALS WILL BE DELAYED

Vichy, France, Aug. 6—(AP)—Actual trial of leaders accused of responsibility for France's lack of preparations and entry into the war with Germany will be delayed by a long preliminary judicial investigation, it was stated last night. The supreme court will meet at nearby Riom Thursday, but will submit the case immediately to investigation.

7 LEADERS OF SALVATION ARMY IN JAPAN HELD

Arrests Made on Suspicion of Espionage, War Office Announces

ARRESTS MADE JULY 31

Men Held Are Reliably Reported to be All Japanese and From Tokyo

Tokyo, Aug. 6—(AP)—Seven Salvation Army leaders, reliably reported to be all Japanese, have been arrested on suspicion of espionage, the War Office announced today.

The War Office said that those arrested included the Japanese commander-in-chief of the organization, which has its world headquarters in London. The arrests were made July 31, and the seven are still detained.

The Gendarmerie, confirming the War Office announcement, said it was unable to state the nationality of those under arrest, and the locale likewise was not given.

In usually reliable quarters, however, it was said that all were believed arrested in Tokyo.

The arrests came with a countryside round-up of Britons allegedly suspected of espionage, who at one time numbered more than a dozen, including many prominent business men. Now all but seven have been released.

MOBILIZATION ACT FAR-REACHING IN WAR EFFORT

History Is Made By Decisions Made In First Full Parliamentary Session of War

MILITARY TRAINING

By FRANK FLAHERTY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Aug. 6 (CP). — History-making decisions affecting Canada's internal economy as well as its contribution to the Empire's war for human rights and freedom were made during the first full parliamentary session of the second great war.

In war legislation the National Resources Mobilization Act was a measure of far-reaching importance and its approach to the problem of compulsory military service formed a new departure.

Among items of domestic legislation the Unemployment Insurance Act marked inauguration of a national program of social security and the budget raised taxation to a new high level.

The bill amending the Wheat Board Act, passed late in the session, continued the guarantee to the producer of 70 cents a bushel for No. 1 northern wheat, basis Fort William or Vancouver, and imposed a 15-cents a bushel processing tax on wheat used for domestic consumption.

A new House of Commons, fresh from a Dominion election, settled down to work on May 16.

Material and Human Resources.

The Mobiliation Act empowers the government to use all material and human resources of Canada for prosecution of the war. It requires every Canadian to place his property, his person and his services at the disposal of the government if and when required.

The power to mobilize human resources is subject only to a stipulation that no person may be com-

Arrest Follows Houde Statement On Registration

Man, Who Has Been Seven Times Mayor of Montreal, Taken to Undisclosed Camp Under Section of War Measures Act

HIS STORMY CAREER

Houde's Place as Mayor Will be Taken Temporarily by Pro-Mayor, Alderman E. Hamelin—Houde's Name Long Familiar in Newspaper Offices — Is Self-Styled 'Man of the People'

Ottawa, Aug. 6 (CP).—Under the Defence of Canada Regulations, Mayor Camilien Houde of Montreal will have the right to object to being interned. He was taken into custody in Montreal last night and interned under the War Measures Act.

An objection by Mayor Houde would go to Justice Minister Lapointe and he would refer it to an advisory commission which would hear the objections. Two such commissions have been appointed, one under Mr. Justice J. D. Hyndman and the other under Mr. Justice J. H. Fortier.

Every British subject interned has the right to register objection and have his case heard. This right does not extend to enemy aliens however.

Internment Given Prominence.

Both the Evening Standard and the Star displayed the picture of Houde in a Tweed suit and brilliant tie and the Star splashed the news under a seven-column headline.

Montreal, Aug. 6 (CP)—Camillien Houde, C.B.E., Mayor of Canada's largest city, and member of the Quebec legislature for a Montreal riding, was interned today.

The man who was seven times Mayor of Montreal, whose colorful career has kept him almost constantly in the news since 1928, was taken into custody as he left city hall late last night. He was taken to an undisclosed camp for internment, charged under a section of the War Measures Act.

Royal Canadian Mounted Police and Quebec Provincial Police cooperated in making the arrest. They acted on orders from Justice Minister Lapointe three days after Houde had issued a statement declaring that he was opposed to the government's plan for compulsory registration.

NAVAL SQUADRON ON CRUISE

Honolulu, Aug. 6 (A).—A powerful squadron of the United States fleet visited waters below the equator in the vicinity of Jarvis Island during a 10-day cruise completed Aug. 2.

The concentration of eight battleships, five cruisers and a number of destroyers was headed by the Flagship Pennsylvania, with Admiral James O. Richardson, commander-in-chief, aboard.

GERMAN BEER NON-ALCOHOLIC

Berlin, Aug. 6 (AP). — Germans have begun drinking non-alcoholic beer to quench their thirsts. It looks like beer, tastes like beer and contains the same ingredients—except the alcohol. The idea is attributed to Hitler, who is said to have long had a special beer prepared for him with alcohol content of only one per cent.

London, Aug. 6—(CP)—There are few jobs in Britain that women aren't doing today and none they wouldn't tackle if given a chance. Repercussions from the crumbling of France before the blitzkrieg pushed the national service doors a little further ajar to women here as more men became needed for the armed forces.

"Women were aware of the work they could do and were itching to do it even before France was overrun," Miss Elizabeth MacDonald, writer and influential member of many women's organizations, told me. "Their determination has only been strengthened to make 'it can't happen here' a reality. That's why I'm behind the Amazons Defence

Two Men Injured When Cars Collide

Two persons suffered injury Monday night as the result of a head-on collision in the village of Tweed. Dorsen Akey suffered slight concussion and lacerations of the head and face and Clayton Young Jr., suffered lacerations of the face. Both were allowed to return to their homes after receiving medical attention.

The two injured men were passengers in an automobile driven by Oscar Akey of Tweed, that collided head-on with an automobile driven by Joe Clement of Tweed. Both cars were badly damaged by the collision.

Chief Clare Hayes, Tweed, who investigated the accident stated today that charges of reckless driving had been laid against Oscar Akey.

TOWING COMPANY RESTRICTS NEWS

Refuses To Give Out Information Promiscuously As To Movement of Ships

Cleveland, Aug. 6 (AP). — The Great Lakes Towing Company, "in co-operation with the government", is restricting its distribution of information concerning movements of Great Lakes freighters, President Chester W. Willett said yesterday.

"We are now refusing to give out information of that kind promiscuously," Willett said. "We shall not furnish answers to telephone calls for information unless we are sure to whom we are talking. We started this fall, and now are tightening up more."

The company does harbor-towing in all the major Great Lakes ports except Milwaukee. It brings to dock the 300 freighters which are engaged in transporting iron ore from northern ranges to steel mills via the Sault Ste. Marie canal, which is closely guarded by the government.

Willett said relatives of crewmen would continue to receive consideration, and port lists would be available as usual to newspapers in the lakes territories for their own information, but other queries would be referred to the boats' owners for disposition as the latter saw fit.

WILL SPEED UP '2-OCEAN' FLEET

Mass Production Methods To Be Used In U. S. Naval Construction

Washington, Aug. 6—(AP) —The United States Navy is taking a leaf from industry's mass production book to speed up construction of the projected "two ocean" fleet.

Although they say there is no thought of turning out battleships like cup-cakes, officers engaged in adding more than 200 combat vessels to the existing navy asserted that they are hopeful of having the majority in service within about four years.

Standardization and duplication will play an important part in this drive for speed, officials said today.

Instead of trying to make each new battleship, cruiser or destroyer a little better than its predecessor, as it has in the past, the navy — to save time — is going to let one design stand for as many ships in each category as possible.

Some idea of the time factor involved may be gained from the fact that preparation of preliminary designs for the battleships North Carolina and Washington, two of the navy's newest 35,000-tonners which have just been launched, required more than a year.

STORM INTERRUPTS THEATRE PROGRAM

The sudden disruption of power at the McCarthy theatre during the Sunday midnight show, which resulted in the issuance of emergency tickets, and refund of admission prices to out-of-town patrons, was not the fault of the theatre equipment, but due to the fact that the circuit from which the power is derived was put temporarily out of action by electrical disturbances, Manager V. Freeman said today.

Unfortunately the theatre is placed on the circuit which was out of order for the longest period of time, he added. Other city theatres were able to continue performances after a slight delay.

DERBY WINNER READY FOR TRIP TO AKRON

Hopeful that their third attempt to wrest the World's Soap-Box title from its American holders will be successful, members of the Belleville Kinsmen Club completed arrangements today to make the annual trip to Akron, Ohio, where youthful aspirants for the title from all parts of the continent will vie for the honor on Sunday, August 11th.

Proud holder of the Canadian title youthful Donald McGown of Stirling, who showed a clean pair of Soap-Box heels to all comers at the annual Belleville classic in July, is all ready and eager to match his driving skill against the boys from "south of the border."

Kinsmen Cleo Colling, Orloff Lloyd, and James Fraser will in all likelihood accompany their protege to the Ohio city where, it is expected over 100,000 people will view the spectacle.

REGISTRAR PREPARES FOR REGISTRATION

With huge piles of literature, registration cards and questionnaires arranged in neat orderly piles, Registrar Col. W. Rierdon and Assistant Registrar Fred Wiggins, sat in Registration Headquarters in Shire Hall today awaiting the signal to go into action. National Registration will start on August 18th and continue for three days. Special registration offices will be placed throughout the city to facilitate the large task. Other offices have been arranged for throughout the riding of South Hastings.

FIRMER PRICES NOTED FOR RASPBERRIES

A decided strengthening in the price of berries was noted on the Belleville market on Tuesday morn-straight 15c the box with the blue variety retailing at two boxes for 25c. Huckleberries held steady at previous prices, selling at 15c the quart or at $1.15 to $1.25 per eleven quart basket.

Harvest apples sold at 30c the basket or at 10c the berry box with Red Astrachans being held for the same price. Plums made their initial appearance on the market, being held at 15c the berry box. Cherries sold for 70c to 75c the six-quart basket. Tomatoes were down to 50c for six-quart and $1.00 for eleven-quart baskets.

Potatoes held at last week's price at twenty-five cents per peck or at 90c the bushel while corn on the cob went at 25c the dozen.

FOUR NEW CONSTABLES REPORT FOR DUTY

Supplementing the Belleville district headquarters of the Ontario Provincial Police office, four new constables reported to Inspector Gardner here today. The new officers were Constable Stewart Patterson, formerly stationed at Sharbot Lake and Constables A. F. Grayling, G. J. Burton and J. S. McKenzie, all from general headquarters, at Queen's Park in Toronto.

The additions were necessary owing to several changes made over the week-end out of the Belleville district headquarters when Constable W. E. Smith left to join the Royal Canadian Artillery, Constable D. Adair was transferred to Cobourg, while Constable Chas. B. Hubbell was moved to Kingston, Inspector Gardner revealed today.

RUSS. SMITH GETS 26-POUND MUSKIE

Russell Smith, one of Belleville's well known disciples of Izaak Walton, was proudly displaying a 26-pound muskie yesterday. Mr. Smith made his strike in the Trent River while trolling and landed the fine finny beauty after some 15 minutes of battle. The prize beauty is now on display in Green's butcher shop window. Many other fine catches of game fish were reported throughout the Hastings County district over the holiday, an American tourist having landed a 37-pound 'lunge from Stoco Lake on Saturday. Fishing in the Bay of Quinte was also reported successful over the holiday also.

Service in the Foxboro Presbyterian Church was resumed on Sunday last, after having been closed for almost one month, during which time the interior of the church was completely redecorated and painted. Rev. J. W. MacDonald, the regular pastor had charge of the service.

The congregation expressed keen delight in the appearance of the church on the completion of the decorating, and the Board of Management are particularly appreciative of the services rendered by Mr. S. Gay, who had charge of the renovations.

Larger Production Of Cheese Wanted by Agricultural Board

An appeal to dairymen of Canada to increase the supply of milk by supplementary feeding, and to keep cheese factories open after the normal season in order to step up production of cheese, has been issued by the Agricultural Board of Canada, according to H. L. Fair, Hastings County agricultural representative.

The appeal follows the indication by the United Kingdom through the newly formed Dairy Products Purchasing Board that she will take all the cheese Canada can produce at a price of 14 cents f.o.b. the seaboard.

At present, the Agricultural Board points out, said Mr. Fair, prices of butterfat make milk more valuable when sold to a cheese factory than to a creamery. The price of cheese has been better this year, pastures have been excellent and a record number of factories operated during the winter or opened earlier in the Spring. For these reasons a large increase in cheese production in Canada would be expected, but this is not the case. Up to the end of June the make was only about 6,900,000 more than was manufactured in the same period last year.

Recruits of Headquarters Co'y Take Part in Fete at Madoc

Accept Challenge of 'B' Company and Defeat Madoc Company By 10 to 7

EARLY LEAD HELD

Trenton, Aug. 6—A detachment of recruits of Headquarters Company of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, stationed here, made a surprise visit to the Madoc Armouries yesterday afternoon to take part in the Reforestation and Conservation Day celebration.

The recruits were under the command of Major Angus Mowat, Officer Commanding the Headquarters Company. Trucks were loaned to Major Mowat from the Royal Canadian Air Force to transport the men to Madoc.

Following lunch served at Memorial Park, the recruits were lined up by Quartermaster Sergeant G. Trounce, for the parade. Leaving the armoury the soldiers marched through the village to the Fair Grounds where the celebration was taking place.

Accepting the challenge thrown out by members of "B" Company, of the H. & P. E. stationed at Madoc, the members of the Headquarters Company gathered together a softball team and defeated a team from the Madoc company, 10 to 7.

Headquarters Company took an early lead on their rivals in the first frame by gathering five runs and from that time on were never seriously threatened.

Three Girls Sustain Minor Injuries

Three girls were injured and taken to the Belleville General Hospital early Sunday morning, as the result of an accident two miles east of here. The injured were Ruth Farnham, Cannifton; Ethel Rush, Trenton and Grace Jeffrey of Trenton. All three girls suffered minor injuries and were released from the hospital yesterday morning.

The accident occurred during the heavy rainstorm that swept the district. An automobile driven westerly by Sgt. James Zufelt, of the R.C.A.F., Trenton, collided with a second car driven by Andrew Wilson, Toronto, causing only slight damage. The Zufelt car is alleged to have moved out of the line of traffic to collide with a third car driven by George Denike of Corbyville, in which the girls were riding. Both the Zufelt car and the Denike car were badly damaged by the impact but occupants in the first car escaped injury. Traffic officer J. Hatch investigated the accident.

Minister Suffers Broken Leg

Rev. Fred W. Clayton of Omaha, Nebraska, suffered a fractured leg and was admitted to the Belleville General Hospital, following an accident seven miles west of here, when his automobile went out of control.

TRIAL BY COURT MARTIAL

Singapore, Aug. 6—(CP Reuters)—The trial by court martial of Capt. Robert C. Loveday of the Royal Engineers on charges of defrauding the War Department and corruptly obtaining nearly £20,000 ($89,000) opened today. It is expected to last three weeks.

Ex-Police Officer Dies After Lengthy Illness

Trenton, August 6—One of Trenton's best known citizens, Ex-Sergeant John Graham White, died in the Toronto General Hospital following a lengthy illness of nearly six years. The late Mr. White served on the Trenton police force for 16 years and had a very distinguished record.

Sgt. White retired from the police force in 1935 due to his ill health and since that time has spent his time in and out of hospitals. He died early Sunday morning.

Born at Belfast, Ireland, he was in his 66th year. His wife predeceased him 40 years ago.

At the age of 16 years, he was employed as a stereotyper with the Belfast Telegram. He came to Canada in 1912 and found work in Toronto in his trade. Later he moved to Regina and worked as a stereotyper on the Regina Post until 1914 when he moved to Cobalt. In 1915 he was employed with the Ontario Hospital at Toronto. He joined the Sudbury police force in 1917 and after a few months on the beat was promoted to detective.

The late Sgt. White came to Trenton in 1919 and served on the Trenton police force until his retirement.

Glen Miller Wins Game

Trenton, Aug. 6—Playing off a grudge game, Glen Miller defeated their ancient rivals, the Canadian Doughnuts, 8 to 7, here Monday night. The Doughnuts and Glen Miller have run neck-and-neck throughout the season and the game was played to decide which was the better team.

Glen Miller collected all their runs in two frames, scoring four in the first and four in the fourth. The Doughnuts scored two in the second, two in the third and three in the seventh.

Burtt, on the mound for the Doughnuts, hurled the better game allowing 8 hits, striking out seven, while Watson hurling for the winners, allowed ten hits and struck out six.

Anderson and Coughlin, each with a triple and a single were the best at bat for Glen Miller, while LaMorre and Burtt with two singles apiece were the best for the Doughnuts. The line-ups:

OBITUARY

LATE THOMAS LOGAN

(Herchimer Avenue)

The funeral of Thomas Logan took place Saturday afternoon, Aug. 3rd., from the family residence, Herchimer Avenue, Thurlow township and many friends were present. The service in the home and at the graveside in Belleville cemetery was conducted by the Rev. E. Farnsworth.

The bearers were Messrs. William Davison, William Wilson, George Bawden, Harry Stebbings, Oscar Babcock and Edward Grimson, Sr.

The floral tributes were beautiful and many in number.

MRS. WILBERT D. McALLISTER

(Marysville)

(Contributed)

After an illness of some eleven weeks duration Mrs. Wilbert McAllister, Marysville, Ont., passed away at the Hotel Dieu Hospital, Kingston, Ont., on Wednesday, July 24th.

Deceased whose maiden name was Anna Josephine Williams, being the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Williams, Lonsdale, Ont., was born 32 years ago.

Being of a kind and loving disposition the deceased will long be remembered for the many acts of kindness she did during her short life. In religion she was a devout member of the Holy Name of Mary Church, Marysville.

Surviving to mourn her loss are her husband Mr. Wilbert McAllister and her parents Mr. and Mrs. John Williams and one sister Mary Willians of Lonsdale, and three brothers Frank, Cyril and Nicholas Williams of Detroit, Mich.

The many spiritual and floral offerings testified to the esteem in which the deceased was held.

The funeral was held on Friday, July 26th to the Holy Name of Mary Church, Marysville, where Rev. Fr. O'Gorman celebrated Requiem High Mass.

HELEN CARR

(Campbellford)

The death occurred in the Belleville General Hospital early this Tuesday morning, Aug. 6th., of Helen Carr, five-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Carr, Campbellford. She was a patient in the hospital only a few days.

Hitch-Hike 2,600 Miles to Enlist

Winnipeg, Aug. 6—(CP)— Two young Americans, who hitch-hiked 2,600 miles from Houston, Texas, J. W. James, 30, and S. V. Dutkiewicz, 21, were here today hoping to be accepted as volunteers in the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry. The men said on one occasion they nearly suffocated in a freshly-painted box car where they had been locked in while asleep.

Sunday School Picnic Proves Enjoyable Event

One of the most enjoyable picnics ever held by the Christian and Missionary Alliance Sunday School took place at Lakeshore Beach on Civic Holiday.

The trucks and cars loaded with happy scholars, parents and teachers left the church at 12.30 and journeyed to the beach where no time was lost in donning bathing suits and making the best of the beautiful beach.

At three o'clock time was called for races with the following programme and winners:

1. Beginners Dept.—1st Barbara Barriage, 2nd, Janice Beattie.
2. Primary Dept.—1st, Lorna Fraser, 2nd, Gerald Garrison.
3. Junior Girls—1st Audrey Tebworth, 2nd, Luella Fraser.
4. Junior Boys—1st Herbert Baragar, 2nd, Harold Barriage.
5. Intermediate Girls—1st Betty Baragar, 2nd, Annie Philips.
6. Intermediate Boys—1st, Ronald Wickett, 2nd, Milton Fraser.
7. Young People's Bible Class—Girls, 1st, Emmaline Mahone, 2nd, Marion Clou; boys, 1st, Bill Ross, 2nd, Ralph Atyeo.
8. Visitor's race — 1st, Dorothy Alderman, 2nd, M. Wilson.
9. Three-legged race (Girls)—1st, Miss Benner and Miss McCurdy, 2nd, Annie Phillips and Betty Baragar.
10. Three-legged race, (Boys)—1st, Gerald Atyeo and Bill Ross, 2nd, Ralph Atyeo and Gordon Dulyea.
11. Balloon race—1st, Mrs. Beatty, 2nd, Mr. Sauve.
12. Sack race—1st, Ralph Atyeo, 2nd Emmaline Mahone.
13. Needle and Thread race—1st Mr. Sauve and Miss Benner, 2nd Mr. Freeman and Margaret Atyeo.

By this time everyone was ready for lunch so all quickly gathered in the grove where the tables were spread and soon all had done justice to a lovely lunch, after which ice cream was passed around.

Almost seven o'clock, everybody tired, but happy, someone said, "peanut scramble" and was there ever a scramble! Tiredness was forgotten for a few minutes and what fun ensued! As soon as the last peanut and caramel were gone all were ready to start home, voting it one of the best picnics ever enjoyed.

'Y' Swimming Tank Popular With Children

Despite the lure of the old swimming hole and the various bathing facilities offered at the Victoria Park and Belleville Beaches, the Y.M.C.A. swimming tank is still a popular place among the children of the city, even during the summer holidays. Thirty-five to forty children take advantage of the "Y" tank every morning, boys on three days of the week and girls on two days, while the showers are also enjoyed by the children.

The fact that the water in the "Y" tank is perfectly clean, constantly filtered and kept at an even temperature, thus guarding against possible infectuous diseases which might be lingering in public swimming places, is thought to be the reason mothers prefer their children going to the "Y".

During the summer holidays when other activities at the "Y" are not as brisk, the management have begun a program of renovation in the building. The ceilings of the lobby and board room having become patchy, the plaster will be taken off and replaced with a new composition ceiling board.

Bancroft

Bancroft, (Special) — Mr. and Mrs. S. Patten of Detroit, Michigan and Mrs. E. Chambers of Corbyville, Ontario, spent the week-end at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Garrison of Bancroft.

Miss Doris Oakes of Toronto, is spending a few days with her aunt, Mrs. Charles Goodkey.

Mrs. E. Johnston and daughter Beverley of Shoemaker are visiting friends this week in town.

Mr. and Mrs. Leo O'Brien of Shoemaker are holidaying in Bancroft and surrounding district.

Mr. Wm. McAlpine, Miss Mayme O'Shaughnessy and Miss Ethel O'Shaughnessy motored to Kingston on Thursday.

The Rev. and Mrs. Hope Swayne and family of Merrickville are this week spending a vacation at their cottage on Trout Lake.

Miss Phylis Parks of Cooper is spending a holiday in Bancroft as the guest of Miss Patricia Fuller and Miss Dorothy Hagerman.

Mr. William Milton, inspector of the Institute for the Blind who is stationed in Kingston, was in town Tuesday and Wednesday of this week making a tour of Bancroft and surrounding district, visiting those afflicted with the loss of sight.

Miss Dorothy Hagerman returned home Wednesday after spending a few days with relatives in Madoc and Cooper.

The Rev. J. L. Kennedy of Bancroft was in La Passe, Quebec, on Thursday conducting the funeral of the late Father Burke.

Mr. Clarence Mahoney who was visiting friends in Quebec, returned home Friday morning.

Mrs. A. Rayfield, Miss Pearl Rayfield and friends from Toronto are spending their vacation at Bracken's cottage at Trout Lake.

Mr. Wm. Jessup, Mr. Wm. Lintz and Mr. Harold Bohart of Madawaska were in Bancroft Friday on business.

U. S. PLANS SIX TYPES WARPLANES

Fewer Types of Planes Will Mean Greatly Increased Acceleration In Production

By DEVON FRANCIS
Associated Press Aviation Editor

Washington, Aug. 6—(AP)— The United States Army gradually is reducing the number of types of warplanes in its defence brochure, and the result, aircraft manufacturers believe, will be reflected during the months to come in a sharply accelerated output on the production lines.

Even Germany, with the world's greatest air force and in the midst of a war, has too many kinds of warplanes for efficient mass manufacture, in the opinion of United States army officers. The evidence is accumulating that Hitler's Air Ministry is cutting down on the number of designs produced.

6 General Categories

The army air corps plans to have six general categories of planes: Interceptors, single-engine pursuits, twin-engine fighters, attack planes and medium and heavy bombers.

Up to now 18 combat types have been in the service of the air corps.

Here are some of the types of aircraft which will go into the discard in the drive for greater air power: Single-engine attacks, day and night bombardment planes, single-engine bombardment planes, general liaison planes and biplane pursuits.

Remaining in the non-combat types probably will be short-range corps and division observation planes.

New Heavy Bombers

The most sensational development in warplanes the world over is a new rangy heavy bomber capable of carrying multiple tons of bombs. The United States army's newest experimental machine is designed for a "payload" of 28 tons. Germany is reported to have six- and eight-engine long-range bombers in the process of manufacture.

Corps. The desire thousands of British women are expressing to be armed and trained to shoot is only one symptom that the lesson of France has been understood. Had the women over there been armed who knows what might have happened?"

Not Frail And Helpless

Red-headed, wide-awake Dr. Edith Summerskill, Labor M.P., agreed with her. "Yet it is being objected to by those who still believe we are frail and helpless creatures," she lamented.

"Don't you think it perfectly ridiculous that G. B. (another member of parliament) totters into the house between two sticks, trembling with age and weakness, and yet he is allowed to carry a gun if he wishes in the fond illusion that he may protect people like me?" she laughed.

It did sound ridiculous coming from this woman, nearly five feet 10 inches tall, the picture of health and strength, who had just returned from an hour on the House of Lord rifle range where she collected seven out of 10 bull's eyes.

Dr. Summerskill's patients are drawn from the women and girls of many industries. They come to her tired and worn after weeks of working 12 hours a day but there is a dynamic enthusiasm among the women behind those factory walls and tremendous will to win.

"They don't ask for a week or 10 days rest," she explained. "They say 'I'll be all right in a day or two, won't I doctor. Just give me a bottle of tonic to fix me up!'

"As one of my telephone girls expressed their feelings: 'Guess we've just got to speed up now we are on our own and just go to it as 'Erbie Morrison says.'"

Speed up is the word. It has given a handful of internationally known airwomen their chance — Amy Johnson, Mrs. Lambton and Mona Friedner among them. Thousands of girls want to be pilots.

"I'm in contact with these fine strong girls about 21 or 22 years old, now working in canteens handing out cups of tea or pounding typewriters, who would make excellent pilots," Dr. Summerskill continued. "They plead with me to do something for them. They say 'why so much protection for us? We are the real surplus population in England—aren't there nearly two million more women than men. Why shouldn't we fight then?'"

Thousands Offer New Positions

Every time a call goes out for women, thousands queue for the few positions open. When London bus companies asked for 200 "smart alert girls, used to handling money and who won't get flustered in awkward or difficult situations," more than 40 times as many who exactly fitted the bill applied, an official reported.

Housewives have discovered many ways of speeding up their part besides giving tons of aluminum kettles and sauce pans for building aircraft. Mass canning of the country's fruit by methods that require little sugar is proceeding at more than 1,000 "national jam" depots. Tired factory workers are being given a day's rest or a week-end by volunteer housewives. Some have joined in ARP work by guaranteeing supplies of hot water, blankets and bandages for the wounded.

Jobs Women Occupy

Women members of the National Cyclists Union have found jobs as messengers for the Minister of Information, ARP and other services. More thousands are applying. White coats and smart blue "kepis" are uniforms of girls delivering milk in parts of London. Garages throughout the country are filling with girl mechanics.

In London there are 140 policewomen but women are urging that the number be increased to release men for other work. Even the staid London banks have opened cashier jobs to women just as they did 25 years ago.

Another outlet for women desiring to help is the land army, in which many city girls are hard at work raising vegetables which will bring the country nearer self-sufficiency on the food front.

Salute to Flag Urged in Schools In British Columbia

Victoria, Aug. 6—(CP)—Revival of the practice of school children saluting the flag at the beginning of their school week is being urged by some organizations here which have called the attention of the education department to the fact that the ceremony was falling into disuse.

Chairman P. E. George of the Victoria School Board, said he intends to bring up the question at the next meeting

Dudley C. Durrant, Grand Factor, Native Sons of British Columbia, said the flag ceremony would bring home to children the principles of freedom and the democratic way of life. The mere raising of the flag as now done, means no more to the pupils than that school has started, he said.

A school regulation provides for children to parade before the flag and salute it each Monday morning and on the eve of national holidays, but the practice is carried out in few schools, he claimed.

PROVINCE OF ONTARIO

AN APPEAL FOR ARMS

The Provincial Police of the Province of Ontario, acting under the direction of the Attorney-General, are co-operating with and advising municipalities now organizing or having organized Volunteer Civil Guards.

There is now an urgent need for arms with which to equip such guards under proper supervision and direction. Therefore, this appeal is being made to the citizens of Ontario asking that they loan for the use of the Volunteer Civil Guards any available rifles and 12 gauge shotguns, together with ammunition, for the purpose of protecting the lives, property and homes of our people. Such donations will be gratefully received, officially acknowledged and a proper record kept.

Arms may be deposited at the headquarters of the Volunteer Civil Guard, Parliament Buildings, Toronto, or with any Ontario Provincial Police Officer throughout the Province.

Any further information may be obtained by addressing communications to the Parliament Buildings, Toronto, or consulting with the nearest Provincial Police Officer.

Girl Fractures Collar Bone In Fall From Truck Near Picton

Picton, Aug. 6 (Special). — Miss Ruth Whattam suffered a fractured collar bone and Miss Nono Kearney a bad shaking up when they were thrown from a truck owned by Harry Whattam on Friday evening. The accident happened on Union street near Mr. Fred Burford's. The truck was proceeding towards Picton when a cow crossed the road directly in front of it. The driver applied the brakes quickly but the occupants of the truck were thrown to the road. Miss Whattam was taken to the home of her uncle, Gordon Whattam, where the fracture was reduced. Miss Kearney was able to be taken to her home at Waupoos.

Miss Sheila Power is spending a week with Mr. and Mrs. Lou Dutton of Belleville at their cottage at Plainfield.

Mr. Fred Manlow lost a cow on Friday evening when the animal came in collision with a truck on Union street and had to be destroyed.

Mrs. John McLellan.

The death occurred at her home on Union street on Sunday, August 3, after a long illness, of Annie Williams, widow of the late John McLellan in her 70th year. She is survived by three sons, Carmel and John of Picton, Laverne of the staff of the Canadian Bank of Commerce of Toronto and formerly of Belleville, and one daughter, Kathleen, at home. The deceased was a member of St. Gregory's Church where Requiem Mass will be sung on Wednesday morning with interment in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Mr. Finlay McArthur has taken over the Supertest gas station following the enlistment of Carman Welbanks.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Knapman and daughters Harice and Dorothy are spending two weeks at their cottage near Peterboro.

Mr. C. O. King of North Bay arrived in town on Thursday night to spend a short holiday.

Mrs. David Harrington and young son Bobby left for Toronto on Thursday where Bobby entered the Sick Children's Hospital for a short time.

Mrs. E. E. Kimnach (Ida Johnson) of Pal Alto, Calif., is a guest for a month of her cousin, Mrs. H. Bedell and of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce McDonald, Paul street.

Mrs. Johnson, Sr., is arriving in Picton on Saturday from Toronto to make her home with her daughter, Mrs. Bruce McDonald.

Nancy Kelly and Robert Cummings, new screen sweethearts, featured with Roland (Topper) Young and Hugh Herbert in the comedy hit, "Private Affairs", now at the McCarthy Theatre.

BRITISH DOWN NAZI BOMBER

Four Enemy Aircraft Destroyed in Monday's Engagements

London, Aug. 6—The Air Ministry announced that British fighters had intercepted and downed a German bomber off the east coast of England and the Air Ministry and Ministry of Home Security issued a joint bulletin saying enemy aircraft dropped a small number of bombs during the night, doing no damage and causing no casualties.

The bulletin counted four enemy aircraft destroyed in "yesterday's engagements" which included a fight over the English channel in which R.A.F. planes shot down a German fighter.

With continuing German thrusts by air against various parts of the British Isles, some observers thought a major attack might come within the next few days or possibly a fortnight. A statement of Field Marshal Goering, the German Air Chief, that the raids so far have been but armed reconnaissance was accepted here as a fair description of the German strategy.

It was assumed that when any attack comes in force, the Royal Air Force may have to take on waves of raiders numbering as many as 500.

R.A.F. reconnaissance is understood to have disclosed large-scale German activity in the occupied areas of northern France. All the while the R.A.F. has been bombing barges along the Holland and Belgian coasts which the Germans may have massed for attack.

HUME ARENA DANCE FLOOR BEING EXTENDED

Workmen are employed today extending the dance floor at the Hume Arena. When completed the Arena dance floor will be the largest of its kind in Eastern Ontario. An additional 15 feet of hardwood is being laid to extend the dance floor to the length of 60 feet. Increased crowds attending Belleville's popular summer dance pavilion made the enlarging of the floor necessary, stated Manager Norman Barriage today.

Reforestation and Conservation Day, Sponsored by Madoc Young Men's Club, Attended by Over 3000

Varied Program of Music, Ball Games, Addresses and Tree-Planting Ceremony Enjoyed By Large Crowd

TWEED GIRL WINS SHETLAND PONY

Madoc, (Special)—Over 3000 people paid admission to Madoc's Reforestation and Conservation Day held at Madoc's Fair Grounds on August 5th. The day's events were sponsored by the Young Men's Club under the leadership of Mr. Cleworth Foster, assisted by the president of the club, Gordon Moon, and the young men of Madoc. From salute of the cannon at 1.30 p.m. a program was in progress continuously all afternoon and evening. Music was supplied by Campbellford Regimental Band and the bugle band of the Royal Canadian Air Force also visited the grounds during the afternoon. A continuous picture show in the main building was one of the features

A large tent housing exhibits of the Provincial Lands and Forest branch drew a large crowd, over 1000 people registered at the tent and received free souvenirs. A magician show, giving two concerts afternoon and evening created much merriment for the crowd and a baseball game with teams from Latta and Bancroft gave a splendid exhibition of ball, with Latta winning 12-3. In the evening the winners played off with Deloro, with the Deloro team winning 6-3. Three bombing planes from the Trenton airport gave some thrilling exhibitions during the afternoon.

Many Speakers

Another feature of the afternoon were addresses given by Reeve Geo. West of Madoc Village who then in turn introduced the following speakers: J. L. Churcher, Warden of Hastings County, Dr. H. E. Welsh, M.L.A., H. W. Crosbie, District Forester, George White, M. P., A. H. Richardson, Chief Forester for Ontario, W. H. Porter, Editor of Farmer's Advocate and Sect. of Ontario Reforestation and Conservation Association.

Mr. Rollins Honored

Tree planting ceremony was one of the interesting parts of the day's program. One maple tree was planted in honor of Mr. Samuel Rollins, former Treasurer of Madoc Fair Assn. Mr. John Bristol read the following address to Mr. Rollins:

"With respect and appreciation for you Mr. Rollins, as representative of Madoc's Young Men's Club, I present to you in honour of your untiring efforts to serve this community this maple tree. As it grows here in this spot we the members of Madoc's Young Men's Club and the citizens of Madoc will watch its growth and it will be an inspiration to each one of us to attempt to serve as well as you have. May you live long and happily to see it tower higher and higher here among the many other things of beauty which represent the work of your hands."

Rev. W. A. Hunter gave the dedicatory prayer. Reeve Nickle of Madoc Township and officers of Madoc Fair Board took part for the planting of the maple tree to the unknown soldier.

Captain Newel Broad of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment read an address and Father Hyland gave the dedicatory prayer with a guard of honor from Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment assisting. Music was rendered by the band.

Tweed Girl Wins Pony

Promptly at five o'clock the draw for the Shetland Pony for children of school age took place with Dr. Welsh, M.L.A. in charge. Many little anxious boys and girls awaited the draw with little Miss Evelyn Pigden of Riggs' School being chosen to draw the lucky number.

Miss Olive Marsh of Tweed was successful in holding the winning ticket on the pony. A second prize of ten dollars went to little Miss Judith Foster of Madoc village and 3rd prize of $5.00 to Master George Gammage of Madoc village.

Soldiers Win Tug-of-war

A tug-of-war game was carried out between the Campbellford bandmen and soldiers of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment with the latter coming out tops. The Red Cross of Madoc also were active in selling tickets on a Holstein heifer donated by Mr. Carl McCoy, cattle drover. The lucky draw being won by Mr. J. S. Morton of Stirling who returned the animal to the society and it was auctioned off and the Madoc branch realized a tidy sum for war work.

Bicycle races were run off for the boys and girls. During the evening the band gave an open air concert. This was followed by a splendid display of fire-works and a balloon ascension and a final program for the day was the dance in main building with music supplied by the Austin Girl's Orchestra.

Tommie Mason was commentator and master of ceremonies during the day. Hot dog stands had a busy afternoon and the midway in charge of the boys was kept busy. Altogether the Young Men's Club gave the citizens of Madoc and visitors from the surrounding country an afternoon and evening program which was very instructive and entertaining and can well be repeated next year.

Much Preparation Required Before Bombing Raid Begins

Pilots Plot Courses And Mechanics Check Planes During Hours Preceding the Raid

PILOT TELLS OF WORK

By DREW MIDDLETON
Associated Press Staff Writer

With The Royal Air Force, Somewhere in England, Aug. 6—(AP)—Long hours of methodical preparation go into every one of the hundreds of raids in which Royal Air Force bombers have battered at the heart of industrial Germany.

Here is a description typical of any of the last 30 days during which the R.A.F. has dropped 37,000 bombs.

Objective: The Ruhr Valley.

At noon, as orders come through specifying the target and the number of planes to be used, the R. A. F. station goes into action.

All through the afternoon, sweating men in overalls feed gas to the heavy bombers, overhaul motors, restock the gunners' supplies of machine-gun bullets, prepare the bomb racks.

Pilots bend over plotting their courses—"guns are pretty thick there. Better go north of it."

Then comes dinner, a merry meal despite the possibility that in 12 hours, at another meal, some places at the table may be empty.

At 11 p.m. when the English countryside sinks into sleep in the hush of a summer evening, a Whitley bomber, bearing two tons of bombs, trundles down the runway. A moment later it noses ponderously into the air.

The others follow. They fly above the airdrome for a moment, then the motors break into a roar and the formation heads east toward the channel.

As the drone of engines dies, the ground crews troop off to their billets to sleep. The raiders will keep silent until sometime during the night one word will flash back to the command, telling whether the bombing was successful.

Graphic Description

What's it like?

A Flight Lieutenant who has flown his Whitley over Germany two or three nights for six weeks gives this picture:

"We know the continent as we know our pockets, from the leaflet flights (which preceded actual bombings). It's easy going until we reach Germany. We rendezvous and then glide toward the target to obtain maximum surprise.

"When you near the target, things heat up. It's dark, then suddenly searchlights are around you like pillars of white, their anti-aircraft start to hammer.

"Their blackout is very good. So if there's no moon, we drop flares. Moonlit bombing is a picnic. The blackout does not help very much then. We go over the target, drop our 'sticks' (dropping the bombload in a line across the target) and head home singly."

German fighter planes don't bother him, he says, with the true bomber pilot's scorn of fighters.

When German barrage balloons were mentioned he laughed and said, "sometimes we give them a couple of rounds on our way home." As returning planes pass over the coast, they give a recognitional signal.

The ground crews wait at the airdrome counting the planes as they come in. The first plane lands and its weary crew steps out, joins in scanning the skies and counting other planes, its men swearing or praying according to their natures. Then they go silently to breakfast and bed.

The ground crews work the planes over to their ground "garages."

There is silence over the vast expanse of airdrome as dawn breaks.

But in five or six hours the telephone from general headquarters of the R.A.F. will ring briskly. Another night's work will start.

Toronto Anglers Get Limit Catch, Plus "Muskie"

"Why fishermen from this section of the province seek angling solace elsewhere is hard to understand," related three Toronto anglers at the police station yesterday afternoon as they displayed a fine catch of finny beauties. Messrs. Frank Thornton, William Roycroft and John Dolese all of Toronto, proudly displayed their limit of black bass, pickerel and culminated their day's effort by landing a 25 pound maskinonge. Mr. Thornton and Mr. Roycroft are both employees of the Toronto Post Office, while all three are members of the Toronto Anglers' Association. The trio of happy anglers made their limit catch of bass and pickerel in the Bay of Quinte, where they also landed the fine specimen of 'lunge.

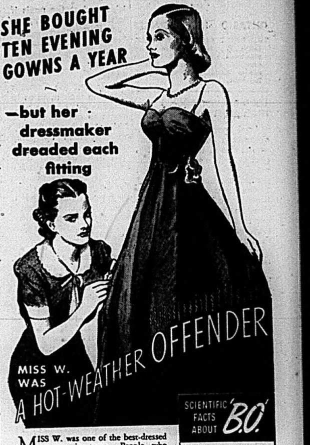
"We have often heard of the good fishing in the Bay of Quinte and now we are convinced that it is not necessary to go far afield to catch game fish. Why the Bay of Quinte is an ideal fishing grounds, why don't you people advertise this fact to the American public more?" asked Mr. Dolese of Sergeant Arthur Harman when he displayed his party's catch yesterday.

Wallbridge District Honors Enlisted Men

Two young men of the Wallbridge district, Mr. George Moore and Mr. Everett Woods, were signally honored by friends and neighbors of the Wallbridge vicinity on Friday evening when about one hundred persons gathered at the Town Hall to pay tribute to two boys who had recently responded to the call of their country to enlist with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment.

The two young men home on leave from their training camp were taken completely by surprise as they were asked to take seats of honor in the midst of their friends. Mr. S. Nicholson acting as master of ceremonies called the meeting to order and after impromptu speeches by members of the audience attesting to the fine character of George and Everett the two boys were presented with engraved wrist watches. Appropriate replies were heard as the friends were thanked for their thoughtful and praiseworthy gesture. A dance, followed by a delightful lunch, concluded the evening's fun.

So this is Broadway murmurs Eddie Albert while surrounded by an osculatory bevy of brunette beauty. That's what happens in "An Angel from Texas," the new comedy film now showing at the Capitol, and on the same program "Mutiny on the Bounty" with Clark Gable and Charles Laughton.



SHE BOUGHT TEN EVENING GOWNS A YEAR

MISS W. WAS A HOT-WEATHER OFFENDER

SCIENTIFIC FACTS ABOUT "B.O."

The adult skin has 2 to 3 million sweat glands which act as a cooling system, giving off from 1 to 3 pints of perspiration daily—even when we are sitting still. If perspiration stopped, we would die from hyperpyrexia (heat stroke).

Because much of the water in perspiration evaporates, we do not see or feel it. Summer heat, nervous excitement, heavy clothes or warm rooms quickly decompose this sweat deposit —turn it stale—cause offensive "B.O." (Body Odor).

MISS W. was one of the best-dressed women in town. People who didn't know her wondered why romance always passed her by . . . Her dressmaker knew the reason.

For all of us must perspire to live. Hot, sweltering weather increases perspiration. Left on the body, sweat deposits go stale—decompose. Then YOU have "B.O."

Check "B.O." before it starts by using Lifebuoy regularly. Lifebuoy contains an exclusive deodorizing ingredient not found in any other leading toilet soap. Used in your daily bath Lifebuoy stops "B.O.", its rich purifying lather washes stale perspiration deposits away—protects you from offending others.

"I'D BE GLAD TO LOSE HER BUSINESS JUST TO TELL HER WHAT I THINK OF HER PERSONAL HABITS.
"...BUT YOU COULD JUST MENTION LIFEBUOY, COULDN'T YOU?"
"I'VE GOT THE ONLY MAN IN THE WORLD FOR ME. TO HAVE AND TO HOLD FOREVER!
"YES-FOREVER, IF YOU STAY AS SWEET AS YOU ARE TODAY."

LORD BEAVERBROOK'S HIGH POSITION.

Lord Beaverbrook, the Canadian-born newspaper man, who is one of the leading figures in British public life and the dynamic head over aircraft production, has been named to the inner cabinet of Great Britain. It is only ten weeks since he joined the British cabinet as the head of the aircraft production ministry and in that time there has been great development in production of this essential of war.

What his post will be in the inner war cabinet is not clear. But he will be one of the great figures who will have the determination of the future welfare of the British people and the Empire and also of the world. His great genius in organization, in knowledge of men and human motives and his exhaustless energy have made him a figure in the newspaper and public life of the Old Land and now in the inner cabinet which directs the war policy.

Canadians are proud of Lord Beaverbrook and of the service he is able to render the Empire in these times.

HUN LOSSES IN AIR.

A story of Hun air losses which must be stunning to the nazi war machine is given in statements which Britain has given out regarding the casualties which have been inflicted upon the foe. The ratio has been extremely low for the British, such as twenty-five German planes to two losses in one instance, supremacy of the personnel of the R.A.F. and the mechanism of British planes stand pre-eminent. And this force has not yet nearly reached its stride.

In these days when Britain has prepared herself for the vaunted invasion by Hitler, these hun losses are recorded, Mr. Churchill warns the people not to be off their guard because of the delay in the reported attempt, but to be ready. The people are ready with confidence. They know that Hitler's air force has suffered the loss of many of its trained pilots. They know that there is much bluff in the German tactics and that Hitler knows that the British know it.

Today Britain pins her defence to three great defences, the Royal Navy, the Royal Air Force, and the British army. This is a hard nut for the German to think of cracking, for the navy keeps the seas open for British trade and blocks the Italian and the German nations from securing supplies. The British Air Force has given a better account of itself than the Nazis have done. And the British army is the largest in history. Of the material defences the people have read and there are many of which the public is not aware. There is the alert population. Production of war materials goes on apace and at any accelerated rate. Hitler cannot frighten these people for they have never yet been daunted by a dictator or anyone of "the likes" of Hitler.

MORE CANADIANS IN BRITAIN.

More Canadian soldiers have arrived in England, a great part of the second division. Theirs is the way of service to save the world from nazism and fascism.

Canada knows as every one of the Dominions and Colonies knows what Hitlerism and nazism would mean to the world—the end of everything worth living for, the end of everything for which the British people have struggled since time immemorial and the end of the hopes of further progress for the world.

Canadians know that and so Canada answers Hitler's peace offensive of over two weeks ago with more men to fight in the fortress of the British Isles against the nazis if the latter dare to attempt to invade Britain.

NAZIS' LEAFLET RAID.

Is it that the Germans are changing their mind as to the invincibility of their armaments to quench the fires of liberty in Albion? If not, why do they take up pamphlet raids?

It must be clear that the nazis did not attach any military value to the pamplet at the beginning of the war, or they would have used it as they did their propaganda or fifth column organizations.

In one quarter the German action in dropping pamphlets giving the text of Hitler's peace offensive proposals, is credited to lack of knowledge of conditions in Britain. "Can it be possible," asks The Ottawa Journal, "that the heads of the great propaganda bureau in Berlin know so little of conditions that they really thought it necessary to resort to leaflet raids to acquaint the British people with Hitler's peace proposals. "It is noted that Hitler's proposals were heard over the radio in Britain and that every paper carried the text and that it had been the subject of lengthy editorials and was referred to in Parliament. Yet Berlin thought it necessary to risk men and planes to tell the English people. Why?"

The Journal thinks that even officials Germans do not know conditions in England. "If that is true and there seems no other logical explanation of this leaflet raid, it's an odd reflection on the much-tooted efficiency of the German war-machine; on their intelligence service. The myth of German efficiently has deep roots but it should receive a body blow from this silly and useless effort."

In another quarter it is felt that the Nazis feel that surden victory is not possible and that the Nazis in desperation would try to get the British to make peace in the face of what appears to Hitler possible economic chaos. It is recalled that only last week Premier Molotoff of the Soviet Union of Russia, stated that Germany had failed in her chief objective to secure peace on conditions which would be favorable to herself.

Much has been said of the blitzkrieg. There has been blitzkrieging in the months of May and June, but a blitzkrieg has to go to the end to be a success. Blitzkriegs must means something like lightning with its bolts. The world is not forever in the chaos of an electric storm. Neither can blitzkriegs be long continued.

Hitler has his hands busy with military preparations and cannot avoid the economic problems which are before him, problems so great that he well sees that in this way lies his destruction. Poor in gold, nazi Germany has to struggle to find markets for barter but the routes of the world of trade are closed to the piratical nazi nation, and their companion Italy. How can Hitler barter to stave off economic troubles when the British blockade strengthens and strengthens its hold upon the enemy powers?

Knowledge, Plan, Prayer Turn Bare Acres into Crops

(New York Times)

Miss M. L. Reeve is not altogether sure that she has exorcised for good the evil spirits that for generations had hovered over the broad barren lands of Bagmoor Farm, near the English villages of Stanford and Sturston, in Norfolk.

The land belongs to Lord Walsingham. Farmer after farmer had tried his hand at raising crops on it, only to give up discouraged. The land was cursed, folk of the countryside said. They had no doubt of it. Was there not a legend about these sterile acres to that effect?

Laborers moved away from the villages to seek employment elsewhere. Farm houses and barns were falling into ruin. Weeds grew sparsely where wheat and meadows should have flourished. Lord Walsingham's agents could find no tenants.

Then two years ago along came Miss Reeve. She had taken a comprehensive course in a college of agriculture and was eager to turn her knowledge to account. She looked the waste land over and suggested to its owner that something ought to be done about it. Lord Walsingham was skeptical — very; but he was quite willing to let her, as his agent, go as far as she liked. On these terms of carte blanche she undertook the task.

She interested the no less unbelieving but curious villagers by bringing in large quantities of fertilizer and offering the men the job of plowing up the earth. She also wrote a prayer and hymn of supplication for the lifting of the curse which were said and sung in the village church. This swung the entire community over to her and won their enthusiastic cooperation.

News of her enterprise and initiative reached London. Through the influence of The London Daily Mail a reclamation subsidy was granted by the Minister of Agriculture. The government of Saskatchewan, Canada, learned what Miss Reeve was doing and sent her clover seed.

The first year, 1939, eighty cultivated acres produced wheat, barley and mustard of seed quality. This year 240 acres promise good crops and Miss Reeve composed a hymn of thankfulness, also sung by the villagers of Stanford and Sturston, over which prosperity is beginning to dawn.

But the blessing of fertility is shadowed by four-footed marauders.

"I rejoice that the earth is no longer bare," Mis Reeve told a reporter. "But has the curse really gone? Look at the rabbits! I have wired the whole place, but they get underneath."

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Itching—Pruritis

I have spoken before of trying to find the number of causes of headache. I counted over one hundred; others have counted many more than this.

It would seem that another simple yet annoying symptom has likewise a great many causes. I refer to itching, or pruritis as it is called.

Itching cannot be classed as pain and yet it can be so severe that it may cause the patient to actually tear his skin in his efforts to obtain relief.

So important is itching considered from the standpoint of comfort and health that a special article thereon by Dr. Arthur W. Stillians, Chicago, appeared in the Journal of the American Medical Association recently.

The causes of itching may be some disturbance of the skin itself, local causes, or to some general disturbance of the body.

Among the local causes are—

1.—Animal parasites such as itch mites and other insects that live on the skin, pin worms, and the parasite known as trichomonas.

2.—Vegetable irritants such as powder, nettles, fungi, plant juices, pollen, drugs.

3.—Mechanical irritants such as scratching and rubbing of clothing and the effect of wind.

4.—Thermal or heat irritants—cold or heat.

5.—Chemical irritants such as sulphur, mercury, nickel.

6.—Local secretions; sweat left in folds of skin, alkaline or too acid urine.

General causes of itching: 1. Irritations due to pressure of growths on abdominal organs. 2.—Deficient nutrition, anaemia, vitamin lack. 3. Poisoning of blood and tissues by liver disease and constipation. 4.—Gland disturbances such as diabetes (pancreas) exopthalmic goitre (thyroid) and the menopause. 5.—Sensitiveness to foods, drugs, and other substances. 6.—Nervous diseases.

The treatment of itching naturally depends upon the cause. Until cause is found, Dr. Stillians suggests the use of a soothing powder of equal parts of boracic acid, talcum, and zink stearate. Cooling the skin by cool wet compresses of boracic acid solution—a teaspoon to a pint of water—is also helpful. Calamine lotion is perhaps the most widely used preparation to relieve itching. Remember, try to find the cause of the itching.

A Citadel Of Freedom

(New York Times)

On Aug. 1, 1291, the men of the valley of Uri, of the valley of Schwiz and of the forest of the lower valley (Unterwalden) made an everlasting league and swore to stand by one another. This was the basis of the Confederation that grew in power, overthrew the Burgundian chivalry and drove out the Habsburgs. The medieval leagues of cities seldom lasted long. The league of these men of the rock, the mountain and the lake has been perpetual. Their bodies had to be strong to struggle with rigorous nature.

Passionately they loved their secluded valleys, their poor possessions. They defended them against intruders. The configuration of their country sharpened their instinct for independence. These Swiss pioneers of liberty, brought up almost in solitude, had a gift for military and political association, for equality and liberty. Because of their character, their history and their form of government the Swiss stand high in American esteem.

From its geographical situation and its economic wants a European war always makes peculiar difficulties for Switzerland. In the last war the preservation of neutrality was made all the harder by the difference of opinion between the French-speaking and the German-speaking cantons. The army had to be kept on a war footing, a costly business. In the present war even greater troubles are experienced. But at whatever cost, Switzerland is bound to defend her independence. On this day of commemoration Americans greet and honor her, at once a cradle and a citadel of freedom.

Curfew Rings At Windsor

(Windsor Star)

If all parents lived up to their responsibilities, revival of anything so antiquated as the curfew law would not be necessary. Unfortunately, however, parental discipline is something that is not generally enforced, so the 9 p. m. deadline Windsor has applied to children under the age of 16 must be approved.

After all, there is no reason why children, particularly boys in their early teens, should be permitted to wander at will through the streets and alleys at night, as many do in all parts of the city. Alley-prowling is undesirable at any time, but when lads can be seen tramping those routes as late as 10 and 11 p. m. it is obvious that they are not doing themselves any good.

If parents will not keep a check on the activities of their children after 9 p. m., then it is the unpleasant but important duty of the police to take a hand.

Children of the less privileged families are not the worst offenders. Authorities can cite instances in which the ringleaders of night gangs have been the spoiled brats of well-to-do homes. Now that the curfew law has been imposed, it should be enforced without regard to the social status of the persons involved.

Fate of Brittany

(Stratford Beacon-Herald)

Brittany, farthest to the west of the French provinces, has long seemed both for character and rugged scenery somewhat aloof from the rest of the country. If there is truth in the report that Germany plans to turn Brittany's five departments into a border state, with her own governor, then the separation will be intensified, and the unity which the French Republic strove to build up will in this instance have been defeated.

Brittany has been called the beggar maid of France, "the poor, the beautiful, the humble one". It is a land of strange speech, of granite cliffs and rocky promontories battered by the fierce Western sea, of extensive heaths and undulating oak woods, of ragged coast line, of white-coifed peasant women, of silent fishermen and the boldest seamen in the world.

Bretons fought under William the Conqueror, who came from their adjoining French province of Normandy,—but when he won his victory over England they did not follow to the captured country. The independence of Brittany was first threatened when Anne of Bretagne, with her rich dower, married Charles the Eighth, and when Claude, her daughter, became the bride of the chateau-building King Francis the 1st, then did the province on the coast become finally cemented with France.

But in spite of this union with France, the rugged land of Brittany bears a far stronger resemblance to the Cornish coast of England. Here are the same rugged reefs and granite cliffs, the same Celtic dialect, the poor fishermen, the stone-separated fields and the grey stone houses.

King's Pigeons

(Windsor Star)

Pigeons from the King's loft at Sandringham have been added to a pigeon post organized to operate in the event of a national emergency in Great Britain. The pigeon post was inaugurated in July last year by the Duchess of Kent when she visited Fort Dunlop and released the first flock of pigeons from their baskets.

On the eve of the outbreak of war a pair of blue checks arrived from E. W. Steele, the King's pigeon keeper. They are long distance birds, four or five years old, of the stock which has won the big races from Lerwick in Shteland and Bordeaux.

Today they have four young ones less than a month old, all at present being trained by Harry Collins, a fancier who has charge of the loft of 50 birds.

"They will do almost a mile a minute, except in a side wind," said Mr. Collins. "They can't fly at night. I have never known any homers trained for night flying. They come down to sleep and they will go two days without food."

In addition to the pigeon left at Headquarters, lofts are being opened up in other parts of the country for the service, which is the only organized civilian pigeon post in Great Britain.

By reducing messages to facsimile on a special thin film the birds can take 35,000 words in an aluminum carrier fixed to their legs. Each centre has apparatus for reducing the messages and for magnifying them to a readable script when received.

Food Situation In Belgium Stressed By U.S. Ambassador

London, Aug 6—(CP)— John Cudahy, United States Ambassador to Belgium, declared today that unless supplies of food from America reach Belgium by mid-September, people will be reduced to a condition "close to famine."

Cudahy said he would present the situation when he returns to the United States next week.

COLLEGES ON WHEELS

Regina Leader-Post

Time was when young men with an urge for adventure saddled their steeds and went off in search of the Holy Grail or the fountain of perpetual youth. The idea has passed out of fashion but it has its modern analogies. Not the least of these is the quest for that elusive will 'o the wisp, painless education.

Latest experiment in this fascinating field comes — like many of its predecessors — from the United States. It's the college on wheels, the portable pain-killer, alma mater on a trailer. More than a score of American universities will have travelling units this Summer, roaming over the highways from Canada to Mexico and from the Gulf to the Golden Gate.

Welcome signs will greet the students in most of the places where the caravans come to rest. But not everywhere. In Mexico they have been hooted and jeered at as "capitalists" and "economic royalists". This is rather like turning the iron in the wound since many students are in such dire financial straits that they scarcely know where their next meal is coming from.

Beyond a doubt, the idea has possibilities. As Kermit Holt, staff writer for the Associated Press, puts it: "It's fun to study history on the Plains of Abraham, in the Alamo, or at Bunker Hill. Geology is a pleasure in Yellowstone, Yosemite and the Grand Canyon. Literature can't be 'dry' in Sleepy Hollow or the House of the Seven Gables."

One can well believe that the fragrance of pine forests and the cool breezes from mountain lakes may prove better stimuli to scholastic achievement than the stuffy air of college rooms. But history, unfortunately, is not restricted to such idyllic spots. Nor, one fancies, is geology. Writers like John Steinbeck seem out to teach us that the matter of literature is to be found in some pretty dismal scenes.

Then, too, one can think of other stimuli, whose effect may be conjectured. Mosquitoes and black flies for example — or in Saskatchewan, grasshoppers.

And what happens to the warm humanity of a college professor when the mercury is out of sight and a tire goes flat or a rod goes west. For we learn that there are still to be professors in this brave new world — and, worse still, examinations.

But away with the sceptics. Off with their heads and on with the job. The open road to adventure is the royal road to learning. What's more, it is all marked out in neat red lines in the travel guide generously furnished by your local gas-and-oil dealer.

So let's be off to put to the test this newest of new ideas, to study in Nature's university, the oldest in the world.

Bombing is A Science

(Hamilton Spectator)

Among laymen there appears to be a popular misconception that bombing from the air is a sort of trial-by-error process, with bombs dropped directly over a target and falling much like a Sinn Feiner might drop a brick from the upper story of a building. The truth is that bombing, like many other phases of modern warfare, is a highly scientific form of assault based on precision of a hair's-breadth, and its timing determined by extremely sensitive instruments.

When a plane is in level flight, and a bomb is released, the bomb does not immediately drop downward; rather does it follow the same horizontal position as the plane, and its speed is also the same as that at which the plane is travelling. This horizontal trajectory continues until the bomb begins to lose its forward speed, and then it gradually slopes vertically toward the earth. The fins attached to it serve as rudders and prevent it from tail-spinning.

Wind drift, speed of the plane, and its altitude are all important factors in working out the trajectory a bomb must follow if it is to reach its mark. As a plane nears its objective, the navigator watches the bombing sight, which is the nerve centre of a bomber's finely-attuned equipment and can be manipulated to resolve the intricate calculations and the several elements that precede the release of the missile. The plane's altitude may commonly be ten thousand feet, its speed two hundred miles an hour, and the target as yet two miles away. The pilot must now head his ship on the target, keep it there, and faithfully maintain altitude, while the navigator is still concentrating on the bombing sight. At the instant that the sight shows the target to be in perfect alignment, the bomb is released, under these calculations, at a point one and one-third miles ahead of the target. The forward flight of the bomb is 294 feet a second. By the time the plane is directly over its objective, the bomb, if everything has been worked out accurately, is just hitting its target and exploding. It all sounds difficult and, admittedly, it is not easy.

To give a hypothetical example, suppose that the Krupp works were situated at King and Wentworth streets. A British bomber, flying at ten thousand feet and 200 miles an hour, would drop its bomb, or several of them, at a point about Bay and King streets, and would be grievously disappointed if the target were missed.

How all this can be done with consistent accuracy is perhaps hard for the layman to understand; but such is aerial warfare, as young British flyers are demonstrating it every day and night. Their aiming and timing of bombs are based on laws of mathematics and physics that are depended upon to produce an infallible result, all things being done equal.

42 Violent Deaths in Canada Over the Weekend Holiday

Drownings And Traffic Accidents Cause Majority of Deaths

15 IN ONTARIO

(By the Canadian Press)

Canada today counted at least 42 violent deaths—15 in Ontario—after a week-end extending from Saturday to Monday because of Civic Holiday in some centres. Traffic accidents and drownings accounted for the majority of deaths.

Quebec and Nova Scotia each recorded nine sudden deaths. There were nine deaths also in Western Canada.

Five persons were drowned in Ontario and auto crashes caused four deaths. Others included a murder, electrocution, suffocation and a fall.

Most sensational fatality was the death of William Linik, 50. His stabbed body was found in a shack in Etobicoke Township, suburban Toronto. Karl Worverenvetz, 51, Etobicoke, was charged with murder.

Charles Keillor, of Dutton, Ont., 17-year-old deckhand on the self-loading collier Midland Prince, was trapped in a bin of the boat at Toronto when hundreds of tons of coal poured in about him. His body was recovered after crew members and Toronto firemen worked unceasingly for six hours.

One of the worst traffic accidents in Eastern Canada occurred near Stittsville, 20 miles west of Ottawa. Edgar Bayliss, 21, Carp, was killed and eight other persons injured when two automobiles collided.

Three of the deaths in western Canada resulted from a car crash near Calgary. Two more were killed in a smash between two automobiles near Neepawa, Man.

Six persons were drowned in Quebec. Two automobile accidents and an electrocution caused the other deaths. Four persons were killed in traffic accidents in Nova Scotia. Three others were drowned and two died after falls.

TRAFFIC OFFICERS CHECK-UP ON DRIVERS' LICENCES

Many Motorists Found Without Their Permits Over the Weekend

ACCIDENT REPORTED

Mororists who failed to heed the warnings of the Highway Department relative to the police check-up of drivers not being in possession of driving licences for the current year, found themselves in difficulty when both the Provincial Motorcycle Patrol and city police conducted a thorough check-up of such delinquents over the holiday week end. Traffic tie-ups were reported on the highway west of Belleville as Motorcycle Patrolman Sergeant S. Hunter and Constables H. Caldwell and J. Hatch checked motorists for their drivers' licences. The same practice was conducted in the city with the result that several delinquents were found and charges will be preferred in each case. "No excuses were accepted, as ample warnings had been given all motorists," stated Sergeant Hunter of the Motorcycle Patrol toay.

Car Hits Guard Rail

Ernest Robinson, Deseronto, reported an accident to the police early Monday morning. Mr. Robinson told the authorities he had been blinded by the headlights of an oncoming motor car near the O.S.D. with the result his car collided with a guard rail west of the city damaging two posts. No injuries resulted.

Minor investigations kept city police busy over the weekend, the worst offence being a fistic outbreak at a local hotel, which came as the result of a "wrist-twisting" contest. Charges of intoxication will be preferred in this matter, Acting Chief Arthur Harman stated today.

Only five transients sought the solace of peaceful slumber at the police station over the holiday, one on Sunday night and the remainder Monday night when threatening skies saw a quartette seek dry sleeping quarters.

Century-old Stone House At Ivanhoe Destroyed by Fire

Home Owned By Mrs. Samuel Ray One of Oldest Structures In County

CAUSE UNKNOWN

The second connecting link of Hastings County with its pioneer past to be demolished within a week the old stone house on the 8th concession of Huntingdon Township near Ivanhoe, owned by Mrs. Samuel Ray, was completely destroyed by fire shortly after nine o'clock Sunday night. Practically all of the contents of the building fell prey to the flames. The loss was partially covered by insurance.

Neighbors attracted by the reflection of the flames which shot high in the air waged a futile battle, but were driven off by the intense heat and clouds of smoke.

The house had been converted to accommodate two families. Mrs. Ray and a son, Irwin, lived in one half, and another son, Stewart, and his family occupied the remaining part. Mr. and Mrs. Stewart Ray were absent from their home at the time of the fire.

Mrs. Samuel Ray had retired for the night and was awakened by dense smoke and the reflection of flames through a window. Handicapped by the absence of a telephone and other means of spreading the alarm Mrs. Ray notified nearby neighbors as quickly as possible, but the flames gained rapid headway and by the time help arrived had enveloped the entire structure.

The house was of solid stone and was another evidence of the ability of the master-craftsmen of long ago. It is said to be well over 100 years old. The origin of the blaze is undetermined.

Many Fine Catches Of Fish Reported

Local and visiting Izaak Waltons took advantage of the extra twenty-four hours at their disposal and the result was some fine catches hauled from the waters of the district. A seven-pound pickerel was caught in West Lake near Wellington with near record catches of bass taken from the waters of Lake Ontario near Waupoos and Black Creek. An American visitor caught a handsome fifteen-pound "muskie" from an unidentified northern lake. Moira Lake and river, Stoco Lake and other popular fishing grounds were well "patronized".

Yachting and other boating enthusiasts dotted the bay with "white wings" and the cacophony of marine motors. Two young men about 'fishboat' in which a new motor had "fishboat in which a new motor had been installed, from Deseronto to Belleville and when about half way home had the misfortune to have the power-plant "conk out". They drifted in the darkness of midnight in a pouring rain for upwards of an hour before the trouble was remedied and arrived home soaking wet but otherwise unharmed.

Generally speaking, the exigencies of war were laid temporarily aside by a heat-weary populace, but today Belleville returned to the sterner things of life, refreshed and ready to pick up the threads of activity where they were dropped on Saturday.

Closer Relationship With S. A. Countries Under Consideration

Ottawa, Aug. 6 (CP)—Exchange of diplomatic representations between Canada and some of the South American countries is under consideration, Prime Minister Mackenzie King told the House of Commons today.

He mentioned particularly Brazil and the Argentine as a "good guess" when questioned as to what South American countries he had in mind.

Mr. King intimated there was a possibility of following in South America the system adopted in Holland and Belgium where one minister served two countries with legation in the capital of each.

In reply to a suggestion from Rodney Adamson (Con. York West) that it would be mutually helpful to have Canadian high commissioner in India, the Prime Minister said he was in agreement and that if the "right man" became available it would be a simple matter to establish a high commissioner there.

NO CASUALTIES

London, Aug. 6 (CP)—A house was set afire in a northeast coastal town this afternoon when a German warplane, intercepted by a power-diving Spitfire, jettisoned its load of three explosive and 25 incendiary bombs and fled. There were no casualties.

City Residents Sought Comfort at Resorts During Warm Holiday

Blackouts electric storms, humidity, rains and a dash of sunshine were the ingredients that formed a hodge-podge of weather served up by the weatherman over the holiday.

A brief but severe electrical storm that passed over the city shortly after one o'clock Monday morning was responsible for a complete blackout of the city. A large branch of a tree blown down caused slight damage to a "breaker" at the Reid Street Hydro sub-station and was given as the reason for the sudden darkness.

Theatres of the city were plunged into blackness in the middle of midnight performances. While the service was only disrupted for a period of fifteen minutes, one theatre refunded patrons emergency tickets and called the show off.

While Sunday and Monday were generally fair, intermittent rains fell during Sunday night and Monday morning. Sunshine was accompanied by rather high humidity on Monday, that drove a sweltering citizenry to the comparative coolness of water-side resorts.

The usual heavy motor exodus from city was apparent over the holiday, with short treks being favored. A large number of out of town visitors took advantage of the holiday to "catch up" on their social duties, with many residents doing likewise.

Summer resorts, watering places, camps and summer cottages were thronged to capacity. The Outlet Beach, was black with cars and their occupants. Wellington, the Sandbanks, Oak Lake, and the northern holiday spots were mecas for crowds of diversion-seeking people. Driving, was considered to be more careful than usual, with no serious accidents being reported in this immediate district.

Belleville beaches again proved their popularity, with crowds availing themselves of the facilities there. Afternoon and evening of both Sunday and Monday saw the waters of the bay at this point crowded with swimmers.

CRATER MYSTERY STILL UNSOLVED

Ten Years Ago Today Jos. Crater, New York State Supreme Court Justice Last Seen

New York, Aug. 6 (AP)—The stranger-than-fiction disappearance of Joseph Fred Crater, the State Supreme Court Justice who stepped into a taxi and out of life ten years ago today, still is on the active "missing persons" list at police headquarters.

He is dead in court records, he is dead to his wife who collected $20,561 insurance on his life, but he "lives" in police files.

The two detectives originally assigned to the case were retired. Another, Detective Clinton Schlunsen, works on it today.

"And if we don't find Crater or indisputable evidence of his death before Schlunsen retires, another man will be assigned," said Captain John Stein.

On August 3, 1930, the independently wealthy jurist, then 41, cut short his Maine vacation and returned to New York, promising his wife his stay would be brief.

On the morning of August 6, he was busy in his rooms in the county court building. From there he went to his Fifth Avenue home and arranged through a secretary to withdraw $5,100 from two banks.

Last Seen Entering Cab

He ate supper later at a popular Broadway night spot. Shortly after 9 o'clock he walked out, in the company of friends, and stepped into a cab, alone.

No trace of him—or the taxi—has been found since.

Crater was reported in California, Canada, Alaska, Cuba, Mexico, up and down the continent. Each lead was eliminated, and the case had settled down to routine mystery when Mrs. Crater opened a drawer in their Fifth Avenue apartment and found a letter, insurance policies and $6,000 in cash, all from her missing husband.

Police insisted the money and papers weren't in the apartment when it was searched several times previously.

Today, Emil K. Ellis, attorney for Crater's wife, who remarried last year, insists that the judge was killed by two men who waited for him in a taxicab and dumped his body in New Jersey meadows—but he won't discuss his source of evidence.

"Crater was killed by someone in the know," Ellis said, and "I'll stake my reputation on it."

Young Girl Found In Dazed Condition

Orillia, Ont., Aug. 6 (CP)—A 16-year-old girl was discovered lying in a semi-conscious condition and suffering apparently from a beating on the verandah of her home here today and police arrested Cecil Thornton, 25, charging him with a serious offence.

According to the story told police by the girl the assault occurred in a downtown office to which she had been taken by a man. Apparently the girl was taken by motorcar back to her home in the early hours of the morning. Chief of Police William Carson said that the girl had suffered a bad beating and her hearing may be permanently affected.

GERMANS CLAIM STREICHER WELL

Was Recently Suspended From Position of Gauleiter for Franconia

Berlin, Aug. 6—(AP)—German authorities said today that Julius Streicher was in perfect health on his farm, Bleikertshof, near Nurnberg.

They made their statement in comment on a London Press report that Streicher, Governor of Franconia, was dead.

Streicher, it became known, was relieved some time ago of his duties as Gauleiter (Nazi party district leader) for Franconia but his name still appears in the masthead of Der Sturmer, Jew-baiting weekly.

The reasons for his suspension from the position of Gauleiter was not disclosed.

Reports Say Streicher Dead

London, Aug. 6—(CP)—A Reuter's News Agency dispatch said last night Julius Streicher, Governor of Franconia, and Germany's No. 1 Jew-baiter is dead, according to reports from a well-informed source in Germany. The news agency dated its story from the "German Frontier."

Streicher, 55, was with Hitler in Munich last Nov. 8 when a bomb exploded in the beer hall soon after Hitler had left.

Streicher was the spearhead of the anti-Jewish movement in Germany for many years, and founded the National Socialist Party in Franconia, where he was district leader.

Like many of Hitler's companions of early days when the Nazi party was struggling to power, he had served several jail terms. He was with the Fuehrer in the abortive Munich putsch in 1923 and was confined to Landsberg Penitentiary with Hitler.

He was editor and publisher of the Nazi sheet "Der Stuermer" devoted exclusively to Jew-baiting.

Streicher long exercised considerable influence with Hitler when other Nazis were content to leave the Jews undisturbed in German business, Streicher urged their removal. Streicher won.

When others drew the anti-Semitic line at things religious, Streicher demanded the razing of synagogues. Those at Munich and Nuremberg soon were demolished.

L. HICKS WINS GOLD CUP RACE

Racing in the speedy 225 cubic inch displacement class Lloyd Hicks' Class D speed boat "Baby Eugene" of this city, captured the main 225 Class Gold Cup speed boat honours at Rideau Ferry yesterday. After winning the Class D honors, Mr. Hicks was so satisfied with his craft that he entered in the feature event of the day and won the 225 class race staged by the Rideau Ferry Yacht Club annual regatta. In winning with his Baby Eugene, Mr. Hicks won the coveted Harry F. McLean Gold Cup, reputed to be the most valuable gold cup for 225 Class speed boat racing in Canada. The McLean Trophy, emblematic of the 225 class championship of the Rideau Ferry Yacht Club, is valued at $750.00 and bonded for that amount.

The McLean Gold Cup, which Mr. Hicks won and brought to Belleville in winning at Rideau Ferry now adorns a show place among the many valuable gold and silver trophies, which Mr. Hicks has won with his craft Baby Eugene and is proudly displayed in the Hicks' home here in Belleville. Some of the speediest 225 class craft in Eastern Canada competed in yesterday's 225 class race at Rideau Ferry, which makes Mr. Hicks' winning more creditable, as his craft is a Class D boat of under 100 horse power, but yesterday Baby Eugene was in perfect mechanical order and was never headed over the 6 1-2 mile race at Rideau Ferry near Smith's Falls.

Thus far this season Mr. Hicks' Baby Eugene is the leading point gaining craft in its Class D group in Canada, having finished second at Picton, Waterloo, Valleyfield, Que., Port Perry, and gaining two firsts yesterday Class D and the 225 class at Rideau Ferry.

Mr. Hicks is the proud possessor of many valuable gold and silver trophies won by his craft, Baby Eugene, but is justly proud of his recent accomplishment of winning the feature 225 gold cup event yesterday at Rideau Ferry. With the Baby Eugene, Mr. Hicks hopes to win the Class D C.N.E. honours at Toronto next month.

Palatial Yacht Aground on Reef

Little Current, Ont., Aug. 6—(C.P.)—The yacht Delphine II, owned by Mrs. Horace Dodge Dillman of Detroit, was today reported stranded on a reef off south Baymouth, Manitoulin Island, not far from the summer home of the Dodge family. The $2,000,000 vessel had a party of 16 and a crew of 52 aboard when she became fast but was said to be in no danger. Three tugs and the Tobermory ferryboat, Normac, are working to free the ship.

The palatial craft left Tobermory harbor yesterday and grounded during a fog.

The scene of the grounding is not far from the waters where Mrs. Dillman's nephew, Daniel Dodge, was drowned after a dynamite explosion that ended his honeymoon with the former Laurine MacDonald, Gore Bay telephone operator.

Three Armed Men Escape After Stealing Gasoline

Scott's Service Station Near Actinolite Held Up Early Sunday

POLICE GIVE CHASE

Three armed bandits held up Garnet Scott's service station on Highway No. 7 near Actinolite early Sunday morning and after stealing a quantity of gasoline escaped driving westerly towards Peterborough.

Speeding at 90 miles per hour over Highway No. 7 Chief Hayes of Tweed and Provincial Constable Arthur Dymond of Madoc, gave chase and nearly apprehended the bandit car, only to have chloride, which is used on Highway No. 7 to settle the dust, settle on the windshield of the police car which forced the driver to slow down.

Inspector Frank Gardner of the O.P.P., stated today that the bandits had skirted Peterborough, where a posse of police awaited them, and later escaped by way of Keene. The car used by the robbers had been stolen in Toronto on Saturday.

Mr. Scott notified the police of the holdup shortly after 2.00 a.m. Sunday. Chief Hayes and Constable Dymond placed their automobile across the No. 7 highway at the junction of No. 37 and No. 7 but the bandit car took to the ditch, struck a guard rail, snapping off two posts and evaded arrest.

Although Constable Dymond drew close behind the fleeing bandit car on several occasions the newly-sprinkled chloride thrown up by the fleeing car, settled on the windshield of the police car making visibility exceedingly poor for fast driving and the police abandoned the chase at Havelock, where they telephoned to Peterboro instructing the police there to blockade the road. The bandits skirted Peterboro however, and evaded aprehension.

POLICE TRIBUTE TO SOLDIER OFFICER

Members of the Provincial Police, the R.C.M.P. and the Highway Motorcycle Patrol met in the offices of the local O.P.P. Headquarters on Saturday to bid farewell to Lieut. W. E. Smith, who left to join the Royal Canadian Artillery school at Petawawa. Lieut. Smith has been connected with the O.P.P. for many years, having been stationed at the Belleville district headquarters for the past four years. On behalf of his fellow officers Inspector Frank Gardner presented Lieut. Smith with an initialled leather military kit, while the conventional salutations and good wishes were also extended him.

Bombing Threat Proves to be Hoax

Hollywood, Aug. 6—(AP)—A Bombing threat with fantastic possibilities—death or injury to hundreds of motion picture celebrities—simmered down to an apparent hoax today.

Formally dressed film notables thronged to the $5-a-seat gala opening last week of a week-long performance of three Noal Coward one-act plays for the benefit of the British war relief association of southern California. English film actors handled the stage roles.

Before the opening curtain a sign was discovered in a telephone booth at a drugstore adjoining the theatre, "Warning—Three time bombs planted in Dr. relief show. Do not go unless you want to be blown to bits. A. C. L."

While the capacity audience—including such personages as Ronald Colman, Charles Boyer, Mary Pickford and Hedy Lamarr, —sat undisturbed, homicide detectives quietly made a fruitless search for bombs.

BRITISH VIEW ON EVACUATIONS

London, Aug. 6—(CP Cable) — Geoffrey Shakespeare, Under-Secretary for the Dominions, told the House of Commons today that the government has come to the conclusion that it "ought not, in the existing circumstances, to take responsibility for sending children overseas unless they went in escorted ships."

The much-discussed problem popped up in the House again when a member began asking if financial assistance would be given by the government to aid the evacuation of poor children.

In the government view, Mr. Shakespeare replied, "to encourage by the offer of financial assistance the sending of children abroad otherwise (without naval escort) would be inconsistent with government policy."

ACCIDENT PROVES FATAL

Niagara Falls, Ont., Aug. 6 (CP)—John Charles Anderson, 52 died in the General Hospital today as a result of injuries received when he walked into a Michigan Central Railway train on Friday afternoon. He was mangled and it was found necessary to amputate both legs. He was a returned soldier and is survived by his wife.

The War Today

(By Guy Rhodes Canadian Press Staff Writer).

German air thrusts at Britain were feeble again today, indicating to some observers that Nazi aircraft now are being held at home for the long-threatened blitzkrieg.

Military spokesmen in the Reich have sought to spread the belief that raids on Britain thus far have been only armed reconnaissance flights to obtain information—something like the leaflet raids the Royal Air Force carried out over Germany for the first few months of the war.

Royal Air Force intelligence officers are inclined to agree with this contention and expect that when and blitzrieg comes—if it does — British fighter aircraft may have to contend with as many as 500 or even 1000 enemy planes at a time.

Suggestion of Use of Gliders

Some even suggest that German planes will appear towing strings of pilotless gliders loaded with food and equipment to supply men dropped by parachute from aerial troop transports.

Should this stunt actually be tried British farmers are likely to get a lot of free food and military equipment because, unless some new controlling device has been invented, it is impossible to land a glider accurately without a pilot.

Taking a motorless plane off the ground on the end of a tow-rope is easy. The glider will fly itself in reasonably good air if it is being towed, but coming down is something else again. Chances are it would pile into the towing plane on the ground of overshoot the mark and become lost.

No Secret Weapon Yet Seen

There has been a great deal of talk about secret weapons, but none has appeared so far in this war. The Nazis tried to boast that the magnetic mine was a secret weapon, but a quick glance through a few illustrated magazines of last-war vintage shows it was used in that conflict.

The only secret weapon to emerge so far in this war has been the element of surprise which is secret only until it is sprung and is as old as war itself. Strictly speaking there has not been a new weapon since aircraft were first employed in the war.

Blitzkrieg Not New

Even the tactical principle of the blitzkrieg is at least as old as the combined night infiltration and daylight massed charge of Zulu warriars behind rhinoceros-hide shields.

Weapons have been improved and explosives made more efficient. Old tactics have been streamlined and machines do many of the jobs men did in former wars. The tank, in principle as old as hannibal's armored elephants, has given protection to men who used to lead spearhead advances afoot or on horseback. The motorcycle, armored car, automatic and semi-automatic gun are merely improvements of weapons used in the last war.

Even the dreaded parachute troops aren't exactly new. They are only a fairly long stride from the man who used to delight you at the county fair by parachuting from a big round smoke balloon.

ITALIANS BEGIN ATTACK UPON BR. SOMALILAND

British Communique Reports Invasion Begun On Aug. 4th Is In Three Columns

Cairo, Egypt, Aug. 6 (CP)—Italian forces have begun an attack on British Somaliland which adjoins Ethiopia, a British communique reported today.

British Somaliland, 68,000 square miles in area and with a population of 345,000 is wedged between Ethiopia and Italian Somaliland and fronts on the Gulf of Aden.

The communique said:

"The invasion of British Somaliland began August 4. The enemy is operating in three columns, one moving on Oadweina (near the Ethiopian border), one on Hargeisa (just west of Oadweina) and one from Jire toward Gargara.

"Our land forces are organised to resist these advances in spite of the collapse of French Somaliland (to the northwest.)

"On other fronts, nothing to report."

Tass Agency Says 'Canadian Volunteer' Shot Society Member

Dispatch May Refer To Canadian Who Joined Finnish Brigade During War In Finland

Moscow, Aug. 6—(AP)—Tass, Soviet News Agency, claimed today in a dispatch from Helsinki that a member of the "Society for Friendship and Peace with U.S.S.R." had been shot and killed by a "Canadian volunteer," apparently meaning one of the Canadians who joined the Finnish international brigade during the Russo-Finnish war.

The shooting occurred during a public meeting in the Finnish capital, Tass claimed. The slayer was alleged to have aimed at one of the leaders of society who was addressing the meeting, but hit another member.

"The murderer was detained by workers," Tass said.

(The agency did not name the alleged slayer and gave no indication of when the shooting took place).

The News Agency added that the Finnish Press is persisting in its campaign against pro-Soviet society.

WEDDINGS

KINGSTON—LOWERY

Miss Thelma Pearl Lowery, youngest daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Lowery, of Frankford, and Mr. Wilbert Armstrong Kingston B.Com., son of the late Mr. and Mrs. George A. Kingston of Campbellford, were married at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Southworth, Frankford, Friday afternoon. Rev. J. F. Lane officiated.

The bride, given in marriage by her brother-in-law, Mr. A. E. Southworth, wore a pink chiffon gown and carried an ivory Bible and a bouquet of pink roses and baby's breath. She was attended by a junior bridesmaid, her niece, Miss Barbara Harrison, who wore peach sheer and carried sweet peas. Miss Aileen Harrison played the wedding music and during the signing of the register, Mrs. J. B. Cowell of Campbellford, sang.

Following the reception at which about thirty guests attended, Mr. and Mrs. Kingston, left by motor for a honeymoon in Muskoka, the bride wearing flowered blue crepe dress with Air Force blue redingote and black accessories. The couple will live in Campbellford.

KLANG—STEIN

A quiet, but interesting wedding was solemnized at Bridge Street parsonage on Saturday, August third at 2.30 o'clock, when Sylvia Josephine daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Stein of Lang, Sask., became the bride of Corporal Henry Robert Klang, R.C.A.F., Trenton, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Klang, also of Lang, Sask. The bride was winsome in her tailored suit of pin stripe light gray worsted with accessories in coral shade and corsage of pink roses and bouvardia. Mrs. Wesley G. Mercer matron of honour, was gowned in Alice blue and beige accessories with corsage of pink roses. Corporal Wm. H. C. Richardson, R.C.A.F., Trenton, was best man. The groom and his best man made a striking picture in the gray uniforms of the Air Force. Mrs. Peter Klang, mother of the groom, journeyed from Saskatchewan, to be present at her son's wedding. Her gown was redingote style in navy over black and white sheer with touches of tan in accessories. Rev. P. E. Purchase of Canfield, Ontario, performed the ceremony.

The happy couple will visit Toronto and Niagara Falls on their wedding trip. They will reside at 92 Victoria Ave., Belleville.

FOSTER—PAUL

Standards of summer flowers and wood fern formed a lovely setting in Danforth Avenue United Church, Toronto, yesterday afternoon for the marriage of Helen Valier Paul, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Austin Paul, Chester Avenue, Toronto, to Vincent Alexander Foster, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Alex. T. Foster of Belleville. Rev. Norman A. McMurray officiated and Mr. Charles Jacques played the wedding music. Mr. Roy Paul sang, "Because", during the signing of the register.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a lovely sheer gown of turquoise blue with matching accessories and carried a bouquet of Sweetheart roses and baby's breath. The bride also wore as her only ornament, a gold locket a gift of the groom. Miss Martha Mullholland was bridesmaid and Miss Barbara Paul, sister of the bride, was flower girl. The bridesmaid wore a pink sheer gown with matching rose accessories, and carried a mixed summer bouquet. The flower girl wore an orchid taffeta dress with green trimmings and bow to match. She also wore a gold locket, the gift of the bride, and carried an old-fashioned nosegay.

The best man was Mr. William Paul, brother of the bride and the ushers were Mr. James Martin and Mr. Robert Frankland.

Following the ceremony about seventy-five guests attended a reception held in Danforth Y.M.C.A. where a buffet luncheon was served. Mrs. Paul received wearing a graceful gown of rose crepe with grey accessories and a corsage of pink carnations. Mrs. Foster, who also received, was in a navy blue sheer gown, with white accessories and a corsage of white carnations.

The young couple then left by motor on a trip to Northern points, the bride travelling in a lovely lilac crepe dress with white flannel coat and matching accessories.

On their return Mr. and Mrs. Foster will make their home in Belleville.

FORD—GRANT

St. Thomas' Church was the scene of a pretty wedding at eight o'clock on Saturday evening, when Janet, daughter of Mr. John Grant, of this city, became the bride of Mr. Leonard Ford, Sunderland, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Ford, Wellington. Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne officiated.

The church was artistically decorated with hollyhocks for the occasion. The bride given in marriage by her father was charming in her gown of white lace and net over taffeta, the full skirt ending in a slight train. Her veil was caught to her hair with orange blossoms and she carried a bouquet of red roses.

Miss Mina Grant, sister of the bride, in pink and Miss Evelyn Ford, Wellington, sister of the groom in blue, were bridesmaids and wore similar frocks of lace and net over taffeta, with matching doll hats. Their bouquets were of pink roses.

Mr. Charles Barnett was groomsman and the ushers were Mr. Charles Bird and Mr. Bill Taylor.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Charles Barnett, 18 Victoria Avenue. Mrs. Barnett, wearing navy sheer with corsage of roses, and Mrs. Ford, mother of the groom, attired in blue sheer with corsage of roses, received with the bridal couple.

WATSON—COONEY

A very quiet wedding took place at five o'clock, on Sunday, July 21, in Trenton, when Eleanor Victoria Cooney, daughter of Mrs. Victoria and the late Mr. James Cooney, of Stockdale, became the bride of Austin Watson, son of Mr. John Watson and the late Mrs. Watson, of Wallsey, England. Rev. G. D. Campbell of Trenton United Church, officiated.

The bride was gowned in sundeck blue with white hat, gloves and shoes, and carried a bouquet of red roses.

Mrs. G. Curry acted as her sister's bridesmaid and was dressed in navy blue sheer crepe with white accessories. Mr. G. Curry attended the groom. Master Everett Cooney was ringbearer.

After the ceremony a reception was held in Stockdale at the bride's home where a dainty luncheon was served to immediate relatives and friends. The couple will live in Stockdale.

BLY—CRYDERMAN

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church Manse, on Saturday evening, at 8 p.m., by Rev. W. J. Walker when Marion Ruth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cryderman of Edmonton, Alta., became the bride of Gunner James A. Bly of the 32-34 Battery, R.C.A., son of Mr. and Mrs. John Bly of Belleville.

The bride looked charming in a gown of Queen's blue with toast-colored accessories. She wore a corsage of American Beauty roses.

The sister of the groom, Mrs. Hilda Mott, attended the bride, wearing a gown of Robin's egg blue with matching accessories and a corsage of pink roses.

His brother-in-law, Mr. Ernest Mott, attended the groom.

A reception was held at the home of the groom's mother, who received in a gown of orchid with matching accessories and a corsage of white and mauve sweetpeas.

Mrs. George Challies of Napanee, aunt of the bride, poured tea.

During the reception the bride and groom were presented with a beautiful chest of silver by Mr. Briens, of the C.N.R. the gift of the groom's associates.

BLAIND—McKENNA

A pretty wedding took place on Saturday afternoon, at five-thirty in St. Thomas' Chapel, when June, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James McKenna, became the bride of Mr. William Blaind, son of Mr. Ernest Blaind and the late Mrs. Blaind. Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne officiated.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was charming in her gown of azure blue crepe with white hat and accessories and bouquet of pink roses.

Miss Gertrude Burgess was bridesmaid and wore rose crepe. Her flowers were pink roses. Mr. James McKenna, brother of the bride, was groomsman.

A reception was held at the bride's home, 86 George Street, Mrs. McKenna receiving in navy sheer. After a motor trip, the bride and groom will reside in Belleville.

HUFFMAN—SMITH

A pretty wedding took place at eight o'clock on Monday morning, at St. Michael's' Church, when Nina Laurene, daughter of Thos. H. Smith and Mrs. Smith, became the bride of Mr. Vincent Douglas Huffman, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. V. Huffman. Rt. Rev. J. F. Nicholson, V.G., officiated.

Summer flowers adorned the church and made a lovely setting for the wedding. Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a charming costume of blue sheer the street length frock topped with a redingote of blue crepe, with white accessories. She carried a bouquet of red roses and baby's breath.

Mrs. Joseph Whalen as matron of honour, wore a street length dress of dusky rose lace with white accessories and carried a bouquet of red and pink roses.

Mr. Joseph Whalen was groomsman and the ushers were Mr. Leo Huffman and Mr. Raymond Huffman.

Following the ceremony, wedding breakfast was served at the New Queen's Hotel. Mrs. Smith, mother of the bride, in navy printed sheer, with corsage of sweetpeas and Mrs. Huffman, the groom's mother, wearing royal blue suede lace with corsage of sweetpeas, received with the bridal couple.

Mr. and Mrs. Huffman left on a wedding trip to Montreal and eastern points, the bride travelling in a navy sports suit with navy accessories. Upon their return they will reside in Belleville.

Beauty Vanishes With Bad Temper

"The boys will drag her out to a party or two."

By HELEN FOLLETT

Blessed with good health, good sense and good taste, any woman can make the beauty grade. The formula of beauty contains many ingredients. It isn't just a matter of dazzling eyes, fair complexion, silky hair well arranged and a figure that qualifies; it includes speech movement, manners, graciousness.

No listless girl will get any prizes nor will the one with the sharp tongue. The brainless beauty may catch attention but she hasn't any staying qualities. The boys will drag her out to a party or two and then they'll do, a fadeaway. It is necessary to be interesting and that means that one must do a bit of tall thinking.

A sense of humor is a priceless gift. Everyone enjoys the company of the gay, light-hearted lassie with smiles in her eyes and on her lips. Radiance, verve and good nature should be cultivated, and the way to do that is to think pleasantly of your fellow creatures. If you have a mad on at the world and everybody in it, this state of mind will be reflected in your face. Lines will appear before their time. The skin will not have good coloring because unpleasant emotions affect the functioning of the organs of the body. Don't believe it? Why, then does fear make your flesh creep, your heart beat? Why does jealousy turn the skin pale and anger redden it? Answer me those!

• • •

You can't overcome enlarged pores in a hurry. They've been a long time coming; they'll be a long time going. Changing the texture of the skin is a big job.

It gets that way because of wrong eating habits, too much protein, too much pastry, not enough green salads, vegetables and fruit juices.

Local treatments consist of free applications of cold water and witch hazel with a daily ice friction. Powder must be of light consistency, never ground in. Creams should not be used lavishly, and hot water never because it is relaxing to the pores.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Sowing Wild Oats Reaps No Orange Blossoms

Six weeks ago a worried mother of three daughters wrote to this column, saying that she was not opposed to modern antics on the part of the young. Her plaint was that it didn't seem to get them anywhere as the more conservative behavior of her day did.

The lady advised me to turn over the leaves in any old famly album and see how these not-so-beautiful girls invariably landed their men. I took her advice and studied the picture of the Cousin Jennies and Aunt Marias. None of these ladies had ever heard of a beauty parlor; their hair-dos looked as if they had been slicked back by a wet hair-brush and twisted into a walnut by a monkey wrench. Yet they got their man and presumably lived happily ever after.

My correspondent didn't object to her girls being ultra-modern. They all smoked like chimneys, were connoisseurs in the latest cocktails, rhumbaed, jitter-bugged, patronized roadhouses, and even, for a lark took in the dime-a-dance hang-outs.

These girls had loads of dates, but no proposals of marriage! Like the princesses in the fairy tail who each wore out a pair of dancing slippers every night their dogged restlessness got these three lovelies nowhere. And mamma bolstered by the fate of those homely Victorians in the family album, began to sit up and worry.

Why she pondered, did damsels like Cousin Jenny and Aunt Maria make good matches, have huge life insurance policies taken out in their interests and secure husbands who slaved for them? Two of her girls who had excellent jobs, wrote my correspondent, offered to keep on with them if the most likely of their suitors only said "the hard word", as the romantic Irish say. They got no takers.

The mother's letter to me was highly amusing. She said:

"Sowing wild oats reaps no orange blossoms. Wouldn't it be a good thing if my daughters, and the daughters of other women, going high, wide and handsome, dropped back into some of the old-fashioned amusements of my generation, when a girl's idea of freedom was not a foot on the brass rail.

"My girls haven't married, unsuccessfully or otherwise. Why don't we go back to some of the simple amusements that made for domesticity when the world was a happier place?" The lady suggested all sorts of out-of-door sports — campfire parties, bacon bats, chop parties, even roof parties.

Wife's Unfaithfulness Changed Killed His Love

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm a man of 28 years of age. I'm married, although I'm separated from my wife, and we have a seven-year old daughter. I left my wife four years ago and went to another state because I found out she was unfaithful to me. I was very much in love with her but when I found this out it turned me against her.

While away from her I fell in love with a girl who also loves me. And then I received a letter from my wife, saying she wanted to re-marry and asking that I come home and make some sort of settlement in regard to a divorce. When I returned to her home, I found it was all a trick to get me back, and she wants us to go back together again. She says it's "just for the baby's sake."

Although I'll do what I can to assist her financially, I don't believe I ought to sacrifice my whole life to one about whom I do not care any more. I love my little girl, but not my wife.

J.

Yours is indeed a complicated and difficult problem, but there is a way out. Haven't you a good friend preferably a lawyer, who can and will help you solve this case?

As always, my sympathy is with the little girl. Children of divorced parents, have a hard time. They are the innocent victims of circumstances.

Some Fathers Simply Won't Understand

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

"Dear Dr. Myers: I am sixteen years old and finishing my third year at high school. I live with my father's mother and his brothers and sisters. My father is only thirty-eight but he has very old-fashioned ideas. His sister, the one that stays at home, is only thirty-four. She has never gone out with boys or men in her life and in a way she may be called a manhater. . .

"My father works nights and I do not get to see him very often. When I do we never talk to each other as father and daughter but more like two strangers. He considers me more or less as a child. I know I'm not fully grown up but he should try to realize I am no longer a child.

"My first year at high school I did not pay any attention to the boys. The second year I was more accustomed to the routine and my studies. Then I joined several clubs. I became quite popular and made a lot of friends.

"Father said that when he thinks I'm old enough to go out he will let me know! I can't tell him a thing 'cause he simply won't listen. He thinks 18 is the right age at which to begin to notice boys. When I am 18 I shall be out working for a living. I feel that one should enjoy other young people's company before leaving high school because after a person leaves school and goes to work he becomes more settled down and begins to have new cares. I'm sure you will see my point. Will you please advise me how to get my father to see that if he forbids me all of the above he is depriving me of something that cannot be replaced."

My reply in part:

"While I agree with you, I keep thinking of the best thing for you to do. But for your aunt, your father might be more reasonable.

"Try not to let yourself 'blow-up' with either of them. Try to please them in other respects so you may lead them to be more ready to ease up in relation to your boy friend. Be open and above board. Any deception will be hazardous to your purpose.

"Working over a period of weeks, try to get into the good grace of Dad. Look after his physical comforts. Get him to tell you about his work and his interests. By and by, at a quiet moment, when with him alone, put your arms around his neck, look up into his eyes and, without any bitterness but with irresistible tenderness, quietly tell him your problem as you see it and beg him to relax on his regulations."

The Stars Say

For Tuesday, August 6

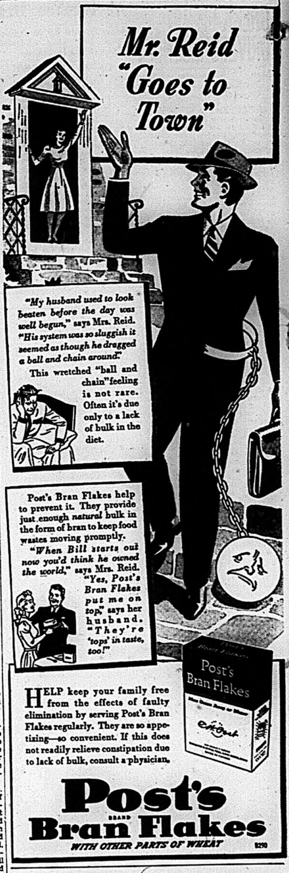
By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

A DAY of excellent promise, with all departments of effort moving toward high goals of fulfillment through industry, application and supplemented by much innovation, skill and ingenuity. There may be sudden and surprising developments calling for changed plans objectives and surroundings. Since there is a sign of treachery or undercover activities it might be advisable to exercise vigilance and precaution.

Those whose birthday it is should be assured of a prosperous, progressive and pleasant year, with unlooked for advantages to be developed by industry and sound judgment. Those in high places may be disposed to promote novel propositions showing much ingenuity and skill. But be prepared for changes of plans and surroundings. Also keep a watchful eye on dangers from duplicity, pitfalls and clever strategies. The mentality will be high keyed for invention, research and daring adventures. High ideals are also quickened possibly in the direction of social or humane efforts.

A child born on this day should have excellent creative ability originality and good judgment as well as dependability and sound ambitions. It will be extremely intuitive and impressionable.

RHEUMATIC ACHES and PAINS
If just one bottle of Ruma does not show you the quick, easy way to get rid of rheumatic aches and pains, it costs you nothing.
Don't suffer longer; try Ruma today and if you are not pleased with the results, your money will be refunded by J. S. McKeown. This is a generous offer to all rheumatic sufferers.



Mr. Reid "Goes to Town"
"My husband used to look beaten before the day was well begun," says Mrs. Reid. "His system was so sluggish it seemed as though he dragged a ball and chain around."
This wretched "ball and chain" feeling is not rare. Often it's due only to a lack of bulk in the diet.
Post's Bran Flakes help to prevent it. They provide just enough natural bulk in the form of bran to keep food wastes moving promptly.
"When Bill starts out now you'd think he owned the world," says Mrs. Reid. "Yes, Post's Bran Flakes put me on top," says her husband. "They're 'tops' in taste, too!"
HELP keep your family free from the effects of faulty elimination by serving Post's Bran Flakes regularly. They are so appetizing—so convenient. If this does not readily relieve constipation due to lack of bulk, consult a physician.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Keep Your Voice Down and Your Conversation Up

We have only to watch some people at resorts, and to listen to their uncontrolled voices, to realize that they apparently think that they cannot have a good time unless they talk loud or scream or screech. Customarily they may have a very pleasant laugh, but when they are on a holiday or on a vacation, they guffaw. Whereas they would ordinarily speak in a pelasant, low-pitched voice, in vacation-time they shout, they scream. Attracting attention eh? But what attention!

It isn't the loudest voice that makes the best impression. Think it over. If you have the inclination to be one of these unruly offenders of ears and manners, remember this: High spirits are delightful, indicate a holiday mood, but loud spirits are vulgar, depressingly common.

Your voice is a giveaway of you. If it's a high-pitched and shrill, it shows that you're excitable, lack poise. People who judge you first by your voice as people really do, will not be attracted to you. But if your voice is low-pitched and rich and warm-toned, will want to listen not only to your voice but also to what you say. For a good voice lends authority to what the voice has to say!

It's true that the people who feel that they must scream in order to have a good time have the especially unattractive habit of constantly screaming four or five of the current slang phrases. Apparently they feel that these phrases, if repeated often enough, form a witty background of conversation!

I am sure that if I should urge you to make an effort really to talk instead of using a slovenly collection of slang-phrases in lieu of conversation, you will probably make the plea that you want to rest your brain during your holidays.

Why not take the point of view that in these precious days when you are meeting new and attractive people, you are given a golden opportunity to express interesting ideas in such a gracious and delightful way that discriminating people will wish to develop the acquaintanceship into friendship? Here's the very material of personality of that much-desired charm.

So, when you're on your vacation, keep your voice down. . . .and your conversation up. Both efforts are inspiriting and inspiring.

Aerial Croquet Popular Version Of Old Game

Games are going to give you more fun this summer, if you follow the new play trend. Lots of people are playing them to banish war-time blues. Lots of others are fostering them—hostesses answering the summer problem of entertaining guests on week-ends and rainy Sundays. Most of the favorites are fairly inexpensive, can be played without a great deal of practice and are set up easily on the lawn or the beach.

Here are some of them—new ones and older favorites—that might answer some of your own summer hostess problems:

Three-Foot Wickets.

First choice seems to be a new version of an old-timer; it's aerial croquet. The course is laid out with three-foot high wire wickets that have a big ring in the top. The game is played with wooden balls and mallets that have been shaped to give the ball a lift. You lift the ball up through the rings in the wickets, one after another on around the course, winding up by sailing the ball into a suspended net bag.

Another aerial game is a new variation of bowling. If you want to try your hand at that, set up tiny wooden ten pins in regular bowling formation, take a rubber ball that's been made fast to a string and aim it at one of the ten pins. Hold to the string though. If you knock the ten-pins down and catch the ball on the return, the point is yours. If you fail to do either you lose.

Bat-trap-ball—a modern version of one o'cat—has other fans. The base is a wooden shoe which has a tongue-like trigger. To play, set the ball on the shoe, strike the trigger with the bat and as the ball flies into the air, clout it. If your opponents catch the ball on the fly you're out.

If you want your games a little more strenuous try Swedish ring catch. Players are armed with sticks that resemble billiard cues. One player has a rope ring on his stick. The idea is for him to throw the ring toward you and for you to catch it on your sword and spin it back to him so that he won't be able to spear it.

There's a new version of jai alai out now. It's not so fast and furious as the famous Cuban game. But don't worry, it's fast enough to enable you to work up a good circulation before a dip. It's played with wicker scoops that are held by a handle instead of being attached to the hand.

Badminton is a bigger favorite than ever. This year it is sometimes played with a ball of clipped wool instead of shuttlecock.

Amusement a little more fitted to the mood of Sunday luncheon guests can be found in various versions of darts, archery, horseshoes and ring toss. A new and different treatment appears in many of them. One dart board is designed to revolve while the throw is being made adding a little spice to the game. Horseshoes are rubber covered and stakes are set in blocks so that they can be used in the house or on the porch without much noise.

Blossoms on Chiffon

By ALICE ALDEN

For that last dress of summer, the one that is to bloom at the big country club dance and do duty until the end of the vacation season, there's nothing like a flowered chiffon. It is nice too after devoted allegiance to cottons and linens. Nan Gray wears a beauty, a delicate flowered white chiffon done on formal yet easy lines. The notion of combining patterned fabrics with those of solid tone is followed in this model.

The full circular skirt is patterned in dainty flowers of pink and blue, with the fabric brought into the corselet bodice of white chiffon which forms a drape over the bust. Short puff sleeves of the same flowered fabric as the skirt create a charming contrast to the low draped white chiffon neckline.

Molasses Perks Up Lagging Appetites

Here is something that will perk up appetites and eradicate that I-don't-give-a-care languor . . . molasses.

Recent scientific research conducted at a leading Eastern educational institution has shown molasses to be one of the richest food sources of iron, having even more iron available for the body than such familiar builders as spinach, oatmeal, eggs, raisins, oysters, mutton, and lettuce. In fact, iron in molasses is from 80 to 97 per cent. available for use by the body, depending upon the grade of molasses.

One tablespoon of molasses given children several times a day was recommended for preventing iron deficiency. Molasses can be used on cereals in place of other sweetening, or as a spread on bread and muffins, and one or two tablespoons of molasses in a glass of milk makes an excellent milk shake, appreciated particularly by children who dislike plain milk.

None of molasses' iron-richness is lost in cooking, according to the research findings, so puddings, gingerbread, and cookies in which molasses is an ingredient are fine desserts for children. Used plain as a sauce over ice cream it is another thought for dessert.

It seems a pity to fool the children . . but the truth is that molasses, no matter how swell it tastes, is really good for them. Just one of metalbolism's little jokes.

Woolknit Leads for the Beach Scene

By ALICE ALDEN

It's woolies down at the beach this year, as the girls flaunt handsome bathing suits of woolknit. Swimmers like these suits and say that they are as practical as they are smart. And they are nice for beach lounging too. In keeping with the vogue for stripes, this suit is of red and white in stripes that are cleverly used. The skirt, with horizontal stripes, is gored to make it comfortably flared.

But the real trick is that the skirt is detachable and can do duty as a cape. The suit underneath has a solid red maillot bottom and a softly draped halter bodice of vertical stripes. If you are looking for a suit that is a change from the ballerina type of thing or the one-piece elasticized satin model, here's your best bet. Nice, too, for the late vacationist who might strike cooler weather.

Your Child In Camp

Doctor Lists Pre-Vacation Precautions

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.

It is often remembered that the modern habit of sending boys and girls to camp in large groups would probably not have been feasible or advisable fifty years ago. The object of camp life is primarily health. Modern sanitation and preventive medicine have made such gatherings really safe from the health viewpoint. We wonder why nobody thought of them in our grandfather's time, but in our grandfather's time, camping concentrations would have been hazardous, not healthy.

The greatest single danger that has been eliminated is typhoid fever. The experience of American troops in camp concentrations during the Spanish-American War with the frightful incidence of typhoid followed by the experience of the British army in the Boer war in preventing it by individual inoculation showed the way to safety from this ancient curse, and that was only forty years ago. Every child that goes to camp should have a preventive typhoid inoculation. It's true it often spoils several days of vacation with a slight fever or sore arm, but it can be done long before camp starts. The same may be said of diphtheria prevention.

Safe Water.

The nature of the water supply will be investigated by any experienced camp director. If the camp secures its water supply from a city or village reservoir that is subject to frequent inspection, all well and good. Some camps own their own water shed, and can police it. If there is any question about the water supply chlorination is done.

The disposal of sewage, if trunk line sewers are not available, can be accomplished by septic tanks. Showers, regular bath equipment at the camps are more sanitary than tubs.

Milk supply must also be investigated. Most of the diseases of children in the summer forty years ago were from milk. It sounds fine to say a camp has its own dairy herd, but unless this is carefully inspected it is a source of danger. Milk should never be delivered to camp in bulk—in cans. Nothing larger than quart bottles.

The more separation of campers' sleeping quarters the better. When soldiers were herded in large barracks, during the last World War, contagious diseases broke out. When they were put in smaller sleeping quarters or tents this was reduced.

Physically Fit Campers.

The preliminary physical examination to see whether the camper is fit for all the strenuous activities of camp is also a protection.

One of the great benefits of camp life is to correct capricious appetites. The emphasis on vegetables, milk, fruits and the elimination of an overabundance of sweets makes for the building of strong, hard bodies and the loss of softness.

Suits for the Sub-Deb

By ALICE ALDEN

Teen age fashions manage to corral the chic and charm of adult modes, yet manage to retain that appealing simplicity that makes youthful clothes so delightful. Deanna Durbin wears ideal sub-deb fashions, clothes that are becoming for any youngster. Here is one of the new suits in her personal wardrobe. It is of pastel blue sheer wool in a novelty weave. The slightly flared skirt and smooth hip length fitted packet subscribe to the newest and best suit fashions.

Amusing little woolen hats with navy yarn bands fasten the front to the high round neckline. The hat is of white angora banded in navy. Gloves and shoes are of white suede but dark gloves and shoes and dark blue hat would carry the suit over the autumn in a blaze of smartness.

Guest Children Able Travellers

Guest children who arrived early this week from the British Isles are winning the hearts of those in Montreal whose duty it is to take care of them before they go on to their destinations. As one person put it: "Grown-up Canadians could well take tips from these British children on how to enter another country. These children seldom make a criticism and are determined to enjoy all they see and hear, and are grateful for all that is done for them."

One of those who have come into contact with the refugee children said yesterday that the English youngsters of five or six show adeptness at the matter of looking after baggage and all those things that constitute ravelling. This person felt that perhaps these English children were more advanced than Canadian children of the same age. "They're more serious-minded," was the way she expressed it.

She thought, on the other hand, that the English boys and girls of 16 and 17 were less sophisticated than their Canadian counterparts.

The small boys have delighted all those whose work it is to look after them by their interest in mechanical things. "That's a cow catcher over there, isn't it?" comes from more than one small boy, and there was hardly one of them who was not fascinated with the Canadian engines.

These youngsters do not compare Canada with England. When they admire something, they say, "Isn't it wonderful?" But they do not add that it's like or unlike something else in England.

THE VERY FIRST dinner ensemble of the season might well be that delightful model of black crepe, the dress simply made with a slim skirt and a wide belt of aquamarines, each stone singly set. With the frock is a choir-boy jacket with huge stone-set pockets.

Make Plans for One Picnic Every Week

By ALICE DENHOFF

The shops report a record run on picnic items this summer. Many new and very inexpensive picnic equipment items are making their debut. With outdoor grills, folding picnic kits and baskets, new lightweight folding tray-tables and such, there's no need anymore for the let's-share-a-sandwich-with-the-ants type of thing. It's a new era for picnic enthusiasts and with some of the equipment at hand you'll want to plan a picnic a week. With a small outlay, plus wise planning, a picnic can be a de luxe affair with the tantalizing perfume of grilled steak, wieners or bacon giving a Canadian woods hunting camp atmosphere to a field a few miles from town. Which after all, is the essence of a picnic.

Practical Grills.

One shop features a camp grill which may be easily assembled. The grill is supported by steel rods that anchor firmly in the ground. An extension fork has a hook for a pot holder that looks firm enough to support a witch's cauldron. The whole affair folds flat. There is a more elaborate grill, a copper pot with a heavy lid and heat-resistant handles. Inside is a lightweight iron brazier which holds the heating unit and which has a grill top. It is a neat, compact affair, a little more de luxe than the plain grill. Charcoal is the best medium for cooking and it is obtainable in briquet form. Any cook will tell you that meats cooked over charcoal are superior to all others in flavor. With a grill and a carton of briquets, the picnic should be a success. It is an investment that pays dividends plus in fun, health and good food.

Expert Packing.

Sensible packing and packaging is the first essential of the picnic, whatever the menu or equipment. Make use of those sandwich bags which keep sandwiches crisp and fresh. Plenty of waxed paper for wrapping will keep everything compact and in place. Pack salads in paper cups and the dressing in a separate cup, all with lids firmly in place or course. A penciled letter on each package will give the clue to contents and prevent unwrapping before needed. Confirmed picnickers will want those plastic containers for salt and pepper with screw tops over the shaker ends. If there is room, take along one of those kitchen paper towel rolls. Don't forget to include a couple of good, sharp kitchen knives. Pack carefully, placing the items as they are likely to be used. Wad any interstices with plenty of paper. We find paper napkins a great idea for this, and there can never be too many paper napkins at a picnic anyhow.

And don't forget a can opener!

"I Spy"

By JANET GOFF

When it comes to slacks, it seems most women don't dress to please most men. Summer has brought slacks out to public gatherings, including dog shows and race meets, a recent get-up noted being a combination of off-white flannel trousers, red crepe jacket and red play shoes. Some men are bothered by the simple idea of women in trousers . . . others claim it isn't the idea, but that women look less feminine in slacks.

GARDENING WITH FABRICS

By PATRICIA MONTCLAIR

A thrifty and charming substitute for a house in the country is the touch of country atmosphere in your city home. Matching draperies and slip covers of gayly flowered fabrics will work magic in brightening your rooms, and there's no need to let budget trouble stall redecorating plans. Good looking fabrics cost as little as 25 cents a yard.

Nowadays, even beginner sewers can copy all the latest decorator finishes for curtains and slip covers with a professional flourish, if they use the modern sewing machine attachments that are practically foolproof.

Omit Linings.

Let your gay new floral draperies hang straight. Linings aren't necessary; and that traditionally tedious matter of narrow hems can be disposed of in jig time, if you use the flange hemmer in your sewing machine kit for both the inside and outside edges.

Avoid having an all-over pattern on both walls and draperies; nothing makes a room look less restful. A plain fabric enhances the value of the patterned—plain draperies on a figured wall or figured draperies on a plain wall. If your walls are flowered or figured, perhaps a carefully chosen stripe is the answer.

The slip cover uses colored corded edges. This smart decorator finish used to be work for expert fingers; but today any beginner can copy the same effect with ease by using a corder attachment. The smart pleated apron that decorators favor for slip covers is just as easy to do with the aid of the pleater attachment which pleats and attaches the strip in one speedy operation.

These are just a few of the short cuts that make sewing, 1940 style, a hobby which is enjoyable as well as thrifty.

x x x

Don't put a picky little pattern on a big handsome chair. Use something bold, dramatic and large enough in scale. As a general rule, you will find that small patterns are just a bit cottagey or of the boudoir types, whereas larger ones are more suitable for the living room where family and friends gather.

There's no longer need to put up with drab poke-hole closets. The magic that turns a Plain Jane closet into a dainty, luxuriously feminine one, lies right at your finger tips. All you need it a few yards of gay, inexpensive fabrics and contrasting edgings. You can rejuvenate the whole closet — shelves, hat boxes, dress covers and all—in a few hours.

Frothy Ruffles.

Ruffled edging, for instance, used to be the test of a seamstress's patience, but now it's just as quick and easy as sewing a straight seam, if you employ a little ruffler gadget. Take your cut from the decorators and use yards and yards of ruffled edging to give your closet shelves, boxes and garment bags a smart feminine finish.

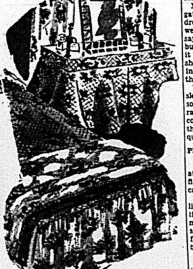
The skirt for the big box on the closet shelf is another fashion-right finish that's not too difficult for beginner sewers to tackle. There's a deft little pleater attachment in your modern sewing machine kit that does all the work.

If quilting is your idea of closet luxury, that's easy to achieve, even if you've never sewn a stitch. With the quilter attachment, you can tackle a glamorous bed jacket, too.

You can make your own dressing table, and very inexpensive, too, if you contribute a little work and thought. Begin with an unpainted, kidney-shaped table or use an odd table in your collection. Even an orange crate will do! Tack on a ruffled, pleated or quilted skirt; then hang an unframed mirror on the wall above.

Dress Lamps.

If you haven't yet made your summer lamp shade slips, don't despair. An hour or so will finish the job. Use the gay remnants in your sewing box, gather to fit, and finish with tiny buttons to fasten them on over the regular shades. Chintz, pique and organdie are suitable materials. These slips needn't be hemmed, but merely pinked around the edges.



GAY FABRICS BRING ALL THE CHARM OF FLOWER GARDEN INDOORS.

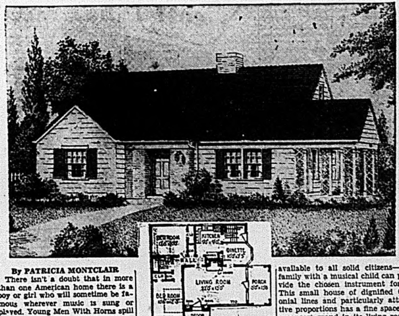
Lyric Note in Home Planning



By PATRICIA MONTCLAIR

There isn't a doubt that in more than one American home there is a boy or girl who will sometime be famous wherever music is sung or played. Young Men With Horns spill out of every Boy Scout unit and fraternity; the radio "discovers" so many infant crooners and coloraturas that one thinks of family life being said with music all over the nation; American girls have done so well in the ballet that they don't even bother to assume Russian names any more.

The sum total, from bewildered parents' viewpoints, is that no longer do the small fry have to be driven to "practice" at the point of the rod.

With such beautifully budgeted small houses as architects dream up for us today—plus the loan plans available to all solid citizens—any family with a musical child can provide the chosen instrument for it. This small house of dignified Colonial lines and particularly attractive proportions has a fine space for a concert grand in its living-room.

You know, don't you, that a piano must be placed against an inside wall, not where outdoors damp and temperature changes can attack it? This livingroom is a good type for the family with an ear—even if they don't get past the Good Old Summertime for family sings.

All-Stars From Lassies' Loop Walk Off Diamond With Eighth Inning Victory Over Local Men

Local Softball Fraternity Help Boys of 3-47 Battery to Secure Funds in Exhibition Game Here

(By G. H. C.)

There is no use talking, these women just can't be beaten. They'll have the last word in a verbal battle, at the dinner table or on the softball diamond. And last night at Coleman Flats they had the last word, the last time at bat, and by the aid of an alleged scorer, it seems, took the measure of the haughty softball mares of the species in an exhibition game that furnished a spot of good softball, plenty of fun, a good crowd, some rare diamond calisthenics and a good time for all concerned.

And by virtue of their 11-10 victory over the hitherto twinkling stars of the City Softball League, the feminine stars of the Ladies Mercantile loop, not only lowered the colors of the so-called he-men but assisted in gathering the handsome sum of $18.00 with which athletic equipment will be purchased for the gallant lads of "B" troop, 3-47th Battery R.C.A. now training at an eastern centre.

That alleged impresario of local sportdom, Ken J. Colling, whose more or less keen brain devised the idea, lined up two very healthy squads from both loops. He took personal charge of the males of the species and entrusted the gals to the ender care of Chuck Barnett and "Stub" Barrett. By some cool calculating, these two crafty gents of the ladies softball realm, struck at the psychological moment, and walked off the diamond with a victory tucked under their belts, and the impresario yelling protest, and seven different kinds of murder.

Reverse Pitching

However it was all good clean fun, and nobody was hurt. Plenty of star players from both loops saw action and the large crowd was treated to good diamond entertainment. For the gals, that trio of hitherto diamond enemies, Mike Powers "Ding" Luffman and Connie Harris did the hurling chores and held the potent bats of the boys to fifteen hits. Mary Lickfold and Betty Adams, Kresge and Zeller stars respectively, essayed the mound duties for the he-men and acquitted themselves nobly, only 10 safeties being chalked up against them. Had their support not become a bit bewildered with so many handsome gals in abbreviated shorts galloping around the bases, which caused them to get excited and throw the ball away when errors meant runs, the lady hurlers might have emerged in the win column.

There was plenty of hitting throughout the pastime with three home runs being poled to the outer pasture. Alas, only one counted, as Whiting, who hit for the circuit, overdid the thing and neglected to touch first base while looking at an attractive shortstop, and Barriage, who also clouted a four-bagger, in his haste to get home, passed pretty Betty Adams who was running ahead of him, and thus forfeited the run.

Gals Come Back

The boys grabbed a three-run lead in the third, but the gals came back with 4 in the same chukker. The score see-sawed until the last of the eighth, when due to an error and some cool calculating on the part of the gals' mentors, the game was called.

"Gee, that's funny grinned that irrepressible pair, Barrett and Barnett, "we could have sworn it was the ninth inning."

Twenty-five hits all told bounded off the various war-clubs. Kiser, men's third baseman, led the parade with three singles. Margaret Orr, Whiting and Helen Richardson got two-base hits, and everyone, with the exception of two or three, got a single. The gals pulled off a couple of sweet double plays to nip threatening rallies, while the outfielders of the males likewise scintillated with some fine running catches.

There were plenty of errors on the part of both squads, with the males showing signs of nervousness, when pretty base-runners bore down on them at top speed. However, you can't blame the fellows, especially those who have yet to feel the weight of the family rolling-pin.

Seriously, the committee in charge are well pleased with the result of their efforts and the fine sum taken through the medium of a silver collection will go a long way toward furnishing softball equipment for the Belleville troop of the 3-47th Battery.

MANY CANADIAN ATHLETES FLOCK TO THE COLORS

Prize Fighters to The Fore as Canada's Athletes Respond Gallantly.

SANDY SOMERVILLE IN

By DICK SHERIDAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, Aug. 6—(CP)—Canadian athletes have responded gallantly to the call to colors and the fighting men—the boxers—were right to the fore. The mittslingers, professional and amateur, jumped at the chance to enlist in the Canadian Active Service Force.

The more prominent boxers to join up include Orville Drouillard, Windsor; Billy Townsend, Vancouver; Tommy Bland, Toronto, and Bobby Leitham, Montreal, all former professional champions in their respective classes. Ross Galloway, St. Thomas, a former amateur titleholder, is in the Royal Canadian Navy.

Not as well known, to the current generation of fight fans but a favorite a decade ago is Soldier Jones of Toronto. Jones came back from the first Great War to campaign as a heavyweight. To get into the present conflict, he joined a medical corps unit stationed at Ottawa.

Perhaps the best known athlete soldier of all is Ross (Sandy) Somerville, many times Canadian golf champion and a former holder of the United States amateur crown. Somerville is in England with a unit from his home town, London, Ont.

Track And Field Men

Others who rank behind Somerville in athletic fame are Willard (Bill) Crocker, Montreal, Johnny Loaring, Windsor graduate of the University of Western Ontario, London and Cliff Bricker, Galt. Crocker has been Canadian singles tennis champion many times during his career.

Loaring and Bricker are known wherever track and field fans gather. Loaring, a sprinter and a hurdler and Bricker, a marathoner, have represented Canada at the Olympic and British Empire Games.

Two soldier footballers, both with long records of service, are Jimmy Keith, a member of Toronto Balmy Beach and Toronto Argonauts and Dr. Don Young, McGill University. In their prime Keith at outside and Young at flying wing were without peers. Keith joined a Toronto unit and was in the first contingent to go overseas. Dr. Young is with a medical corps in Montreal.

Professional hockey has contributed among others. Gordon "Tony" Savage, Calgary and Gordie Poirier, Montreal. Both are former Montreal Canadien players. In Belleville the softball players have responded in large numbers.

'PREACHER' ROWE WINS FOR WINGS HURLS 2-HITTER

Rochester Pitching Outfielder Has Unique Mound Record in 'Int.' Loop

TORONTO LOSES

A peculiar pitcher, even for a southpaw, is Elwin (Preacher) Rowe, the lanky lefthander who toils frequently for Rochester Red Wings.

He was hailed as a great prospect on the strength of his college strikeout record when he came up to St. Louis Cardinals in the middle of the 1938 season but he's never fulfilled that early promise. Neither has he ever looked like a flash-in-the-pan, for the Preacher is still pitching some remarkable games when he feels like it.

He's been tried both as a starter and in relief roles but he has only four victories and three complete games to his credit this season. There's no complaint however, about those three full games. He stopped Syracuse with three hits in June, beat the same club with seven hits late in July and last night turned in a two-hitter to down the third-place Baltimore Orioles 3-2.

It was a tough game for all hands, what with Orlin Collier limiting the Red Wings to five hits, showers frequently interrupting the game and Rochester making five errors but it finished with the Wings five full games in front of Newark Bears who took a 10-2 drubbing from Syracuse Chiefs.

Augie Bergame sent in the Wings' winning runs in the seventh with a triple behind a single and a walk. Less Hinckle stopped Newark with 10 scattered hits and six strikeouts.

Jersey City its hold on fourth place endangered won a daylight doubleheader from the last-place Toronto Leafs 12-0 and 3-1 while Montreal and Buffalo were idle. Hy Vandenberg and Sid Cohen pitched a pair of seven-hitters at the Leafs.

Browns Knock Tigers Off Top Rung As Whitehead Hurls Six-inning No-hitter; While Harder Wins for Cleveland

Indians Top American League by Scant Percentage Margin And Yankees Lose Again

PITCHERS COME THRU

Dodgers Beat Giants in Only National League Game Scheduled

Associated Press Sports Writer

Like decrepit fire horses answering the summons of a familiar bell, a quartet of the American League's tottering pitchers came charging on to the firing line yesterday with some of the season's most miraculous hurling, including an abbreviated no hitter.

Silent John Whitehead, who hadn't won a game in the big show this season, shut out Detroit Tigers 4-0 without a hit in the second game of a doubleheader and knocked the Bengals out of first place.

Whitehead pitched only six innings, because rain halted the game, and his performance won't get his name on the no-hit hall of fame list.

But it was a noteworthy bit of workmanship for Whitey, who could win only one game all last year, and it kept up the Browns' favorite sideline of knocking off the pacemakers. Previously this year they had bounced Boston Red Sox and Cleveland Indians out of first place.

Schoolboy Rowe, who served a term in the minors with the grim prospect that he might not get back into the big show, pitched six-hit ball to give Detroit a 9-2 verdict in the first game. It was the 10th victory against two defeats for Rowe, who had the help of home runs by Rudy York and Dick Bartell.

Harder Wins

Melvin Le Roy Harder, who has been so near the skids this year the fans in Cleveland have taken to booing him, pitched the Indians to a 10-1 triumph over Chicago White Sox and back into the league lead by a scant percentage margin. Harder came within one home run by Mike Kreevich of getting a shutout and gave only five hits over the route.

Another admirable comeback was the seven-hit 4-1 victory Fritz Ostermueller earned for the Red Sox over New York Yankees. The little lefthander, who will be 33 years old next month, didn't give more than one hit in any inning.

Jimmie Foxx hit his 25th homer with one on to help out and Yankee outfielder Tommy Henrich forgot how many were out in the fourth and intentionally dropped a fly trying for a double play with two already down.

Whitlow Wyatt, an old-timer resurrected from the minors last year, shut out New York Giants 6-0 last night with a six-hitter for Brooklyn Dodgers. This was the only action in the National League yesterday.

District open mixed doubles will be held in Belleville on Wednesday.

CORBYS MAKE IT THREE STRAIGHT OVER "OILERS"

Eighth Inning Rally Gives Corbys 11 to 9 Win Over Shell in 5th Game

CORBYS ONE UP

Corbys A.C. made it three straight over the Shell "Oilers" in the Belleville intermediate "A" playdowns of the O.A.S.A. at Coleman Flats Saturday evening, making the series stand at three games for Corbys as against two for the "Oilers" in a best four-in-seven series. The teams continue in the sixth game on Wednesday evening.

Both squads got off to a flying start as Corbys chalked up three runs in the initial frame without registering a single hit, Johnny Bawden walking five in the frame. Two walks off Harris, a single by Whalen and a circuit blow by Art Cole evened the count in the bottom half of the frame, however. Henn tripled as Shell scored two in the second, but Kiser and St. Louis hit in succession to score one for Corbys in the third. The Oilers took a decided lead in the last half of the third when Amo and after Ronsky singled, as a walk and an error gave the Shell boys a brace more the Oilers added another in the fourth after doubles by Cole and Whalen.

Corbys rallied in the fifth to score two on hits by Kiser a triple by Lundberg and a double by Harris and they knotted the count in the seventh when Cy Barriage walked, Kiser hit and St. Louis poked out a two base swat. Corbys salted the game away in the eighth when they cuffed Bawden for four solid base blows and scored three runs, Cy Barriage getting a single, while Chuck Barriage, Reid and St. Louis poled out his second double of the game. Shell rallied in the ninth to have two left stranded as the Corbys nipped the aggression promptly. Each team collected an even dozen hits as Bawden walked eight as against Harris' three.

Score by innings:

		R.	H.	E.
Corbys	301 020 230	11	12	4
Shell	322 100 001	9	12	4

Sports Roundup

(By Bill White, Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Aug. 6—(AP)—College chatter: All that heat out in Kansas isn't generated by the sun. The folks are getting all het up (1940 version) over the raids made on native sons by other state colleges. Latest to get away was the very good Gerald Tucker of Winfield, who will wear Northwestern's purple.

Personalities: Artie McGovern may get the assignment of whipping Wendell Willkie into shape for the campaign. . . . Washington writers say young Sid Hudson is the third best fielding pitcher in Nat. history (Walter Johnson and Jack Russell were the tops). . . . Jimmy Adamick, the Detroit boxer is a candidate for sheriff at Midland, Mich. . . . Elbie Fletcher, the Pirate first sacker and his missus will be pricing tiny garments any day now.

From the mail bag:

"The afternoon feature of the New York baseball writers' field day will be the time-honored annual ball game between the New York and Brooklyn chapters for the John J. McGraw Trophy. Everything possible will then be done to revive the contestants."—John Drebinger, N.Y., Times.

Playing inspired softball the Corby's A.C. have rallied in a most spectacular manner in the local O.A.S.A. playdowns. After the "Oilers" had taken the first two games of the series the ultimate result seemed to be in the well-known bag, but Gerald Barriage's charges have played sensational and inspired softball since and on Saturday night beat Johnnie Bawden and company 11-9 to chalk up their third consecutive win of the series and now are leading the local O.A.S.A. playdowns at three games to two. On Saturday the "Oilers" got away to a flying start, scoring eight runs in the first four frames, but Harris and his contemporaries tightened up and only gave the Shell a ninth inning tally during the remainder of the pastime. Johnnie Bawden developed a wild streak, walking eight to Connie Harris' three free trips. Some lusty clouting was seen as both teams collected an even dozen safeties, including Art Cole's first inning circuit blow, but the free tickets proved the difference as the teams continue in the sixth game on Wednesday.

Just as a comparison, last night in Kingston they held a war charity softball game, Belleville "Oilers" versus Kingston and there were upwards of 5,000 people at the Cricket Field, there having been 3,000 tickets sold prior to the game. Here in Belleville the two local softball associations, men's and girls', staged a similar game at Coleman Flats and there weren't 300 adults in attendance. However, the collection was gratifying under the circumstances, something like $18, being realized for the purchase of sports equipment for the boys in the 3-47th Battery, many of whom are former Belleville lads. Gunners Carson, Reid and McGuire took up the collection, which should go far towards the purchase of enough softball equipment to last the boys the remainder of the season. Incidentally Clem Bowler personally presented the 47th boys with a fielder's mitt today. As for the actual game, the girls claim an 11 to 10 victory over the men, but Chuck Barnett and Stub Barrett's strategy in calling off activities early in the eighth assisted their cause. Girls versus men at sports is a novelty, but one a season is sufficient. The competition is unfair to the girls in every sense or angle.

Taking copy from the Sarnia "Imperials," the Peterborough senior football team notified Secretary Harold Bailey of the O.R.F.U., that the "Orfuns" had disbanded for the remainder of the war period. Out in Peterboro' their baseball team is faced with the problem of getting players off from their work owing to increased business activities, which no doubt prompted the Liftlock City football moguls in their move. President Hugh Campbell officially announced the withdrawal of the "Orfuns" over the holiday. Showing their good intentions, however, the Peterboro club offered any military unit their football equipment for use during the autumn semester. War work was given as the principal reason for the "Orfuns" having to disband.

Do you remember when Harold S. Vanderbilt's yacht, Ranger, won its fourth victory over T. O. M. Sopwith's Endeavor II, at Newport, R. I., three years ago today. It was Great Britain's 16th unsuccessful bid for the America's cup which has remained in the United States since 1851?

Ed Shortt, who assists at the local Y.M.C.A., in the matter of war sports equipment dispersements, informed us today that through the local branch of the "Y" thus far the sum of $650.00 has been expended upon the comforts of Canadian soldiers. Volleyballs, softball equipment, ping pongs, checkers and other indoor recreational goods have been supplied army units from Cobourg to Kingston. Belleville boys in the 34th and 47th Batteries, the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment and the 14th of Cobourg have all been treated alike. Throughout Canada upwards to a million dollars will be spent by the "Y" providing sports and recreation equipment during the year to assure comforts for our soldiers, sailors and airmen, revealed Mr. Shortt today. This also includes books and writing material, which is provided gratis so that the men in khaki may be in close communication with the home fires at all times.

We ran into three employees of the Toronto Post Office headquarters here yesterday. The trio had heard of the splendid fishing facilities in the Bay of Quinte. The reports received in Toronto were proven when these three men, Frank Thornton, Jack Dolese and William Roycroft secured their limit of black bass, pickerel and to culminate a perfect day of fishing, they landed a beautiful 25 pound maskinonge of which they were justly proud. "Why the people of Belleville don't advertise the splendid fishing facilities of the Bay of Quinte to tourists is more than I can understand. Why you people have just what American tourists are clamouring for, fine scenery and the best game fishing in the country," Mr. Dolese told us as he proudly displayed that 25-pound muskie. "Won't the boys back in Toronto be envious when they see that beauty?" he proudly remarked.

Sport Spice — Tonight sees the opening game of the Zeller-Kresge finals in the girls' softball loop, when Betty Adams and Mary Lickfold will doubtless be the starting hurlers.... Johnny Bawden's fireball was in rare shape last night in Kingston when the Shell "Oilers" beat an all-star team from the Limestone City 9 to 7.... The pastime attracted the largest crowd of the season, while Bawden and the Oilers made merry, at the expense of a couple of Kingston hurlers, to score four in the first, from whence they were never headed.. Johnnie only ran into difficulty in the ninth as he eased off and the Kingston 'stars' scored three.... Cy Barriage of Corbys, was the only outside player with the "Oilers"..... Bill Whalen, Stan Amo and Barriage paced the Shell hitters as every member of the local "mushball nine" counted at least one hit... It's really a race in the American League this year. Detroit won two and lost one over the holiday to drop back into second place .... Cleveland won a brace of games and are mathematically leading the junior loop at Cincinnati continues to dominate the National, but neither major league race will be decided this year much before September, say Labor Day.

Yesterday's Stars

(By the Associated Press)

Schoolboy Rowe, Tigers, and John Whitehead, Browns — Former's six-hit hurling won first game and latter pitched no-hit, no-run ball for six innings to take nightcap.

Little Benny's Note Book

My sister Gladdis and Harvey came over to play bridge after supper, and they were talking to pop and ma about different subjects such as wars being so expensive and not worth it and ma said to pop O Willyum tel lthem about the woman who came over to our table while we were having dinner on the Stitz roof and insisted you were somebody elts.

O yes, that was a rich one, tell them about that, pop said, and ma said, No, you tell them, I insist, you tell it so well.

Well, okay this woman comes barging over to our table with her arms stretched out and her eyes lighted up like 80 watt bulbs, a well dressed woman but as wide as a barn door, pop said, and ma said, Now Willyum she wasn't so fat, she was quite well proportioned, and very good looking.

All right, she was only as wide as a bathroom door and I didn't say she wasn't good looking, pop said, and ma said, I know you didn't exactly say so, but you implied that a woman couldn't be fat and good looking at the same time, and this woman wasn't fat at all, she was about my figure.

Okay, you can have her at your own figure, go on with the story, pop said, and ma said, Now Willyum I'll do nothing of the kind, I want you to tell it, you're the only one tells it just right.

Well let's see, what did she call me, O yes, she insisted I was somebody named Harry Gelder, and she wouldn't take no for an answer, pop said, and ma said, Harry Helder, wasn't it deer?

Maybe it was Harry Belder, who's telling this story? pop said, and ma said, Why you are of course, and pop said, That's where you're wrong, I've resigned, and ma said, Well if you wont tell it then it will have to stay untold, because I assure you I wont tell it.

Wich she didn't, the result being bridge.

HOW TO OVERCOME ITCHING PILES

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is highly recommended, is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

OVERHEATED PIPES CAUSE SOME DAMAGE

An overheated stove in the kitchen of the home of Mrs. K. Juby at 27 Altxander Street, caused damage amounting to approximately $25 on Monday morning when the walls and ceiling became ablaze. Firemen experienced little difficulty in extinguishing the blaze however, as it proved unnecessary to run a line from a hydrant and only the booster tank was needed to overcome the flames.

This proved to be the only fire over the long week-end as one other alarm turned in from a residence on Charles Street late Saturday evening proved to be a false alarm.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Private Affairs."

"Private Affairs," the new Universal comedy starring Nancy Kelly, Robert Cummings, Hugh Herbert and Roland (Topper) Young, is now showing at the McCarthy Theatre and for a breezy light frolicsome slice of entertainment here is film-fare which every member of the family will more than happily enjoy. A screen vaudeville hit entitled "Naughty Nineties," also a new screen novelty, a two-color cartoon treat "Jolly Little Elves," and latest worldwide Fox News events on the same program make this present McCarthy Theatre presentation a show that is top-ranking amongst all anyone has or will enjoy this year.

"Blondie Has Servant Trouble
The Bumsteads are coming!

Still as hilariously funny and warmly human as they were in their past five hits, they're due here again this week at the McCarthy Theatre in "Blondie Has Servant Trouble." All the family, Dagwood, Blondie, Baby Dumpling and Daisy are in this new film laugh hit based on Chic Young's famous comic strip. Be sure you meet them at the McCarthy and bring along your entire family, for the family party of a lifetime.

"Military Academy," starring Tommy Kelly (of Tom Sawyer fame) and also one of the original "Dead End" kids, Bobby Jordan, two of Hollywood's most popular juvenile stars, will be shown on the same program with "Blondie Has Servant Trouble."

AT THE CAPITOL

"Mutiny on the Bounty"

"Mutiny on the Bounty," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's sea classic that is now playing at the Capitol Theatre, is a picture that must take the highest place of all sea dramas converted to the motion picture screen.

Three stars top a notable cast of more than fifty featured players but the outstanding star of all is the sturdy little square-rigger, "H.M.S. Bounty," which figured in one of the most dramatic chapters of sea dramas more than 150 years ago.

A Great Achievement

"Mutiny on the Bounty," a crowning production achievement of the late Irving G. Thalberg, is the sea adventure immortalized in the sensational book of Charles Nordoff and James Norman Hall.

It is the true story of a scientific expedition of a group of men who rise in mutiny against the tyranny of their captain and who are eventually tracked down by the long arm of England's sea law and led back to an ignoble death on a yardarm.

Charles Laughton, as Captain Bligh, far surpasses any performance of his spectacular screen career. He gives the role of Bligh the breath of life that only the original Bligh could give it.

Clark Gable appears as the leader of the mutineers, Fletcher Christian, and through his characterization climbs one more notch higher as the most popular male star of the films.

"An Angel from Texas"

A colored cartoon completes the bill.

ADRIAN STYLE FLASHES FROM "SUSAN AND GOD"

Patriotism comes to the fore in the evening gown at top which uses knife pleating from shoulder strap to hem of the ten-yard wide skirt which has long flowing drapes, both in back and front, of vivid red and blue. The low bodice is joined to the skirt by a wide girdle of twined crepe in the red and blue.

Above: a white flannel suit, classically tailored, with sedate white pearl buttons fastening the fitted jacket which comes well down over the hips. With this Susan carries a bag which is attached to a stick, "Hobo" fashion. The black ribbon border of the veil adds piquant contrast to the smart white hat.

At bottom: Adrian delved into the exotic to create the star's stunning hostess robe. Dipping rainbow colors into paint pots of blazing hues, he chose vermillion, purple, gold and green for the full sweeping pajama suit whose trousers are wide enough for a triple skirt. With it goes a full-length robe in the green with harem skirt. A turban of varied colors may be wound tightly around the head, covering every strand of the hair and ending in a high peak at the crown.

HOW TO GET A CASH LOAN
WITHOUT ENDORSERS OR GUARANTORS

Payments to fit your budget—Quick, private service

Now you can apply for a Household Finance loan without coming to our office. You need no endorsers, no bankable security to borrow $20 to $500. You may repay your loan on the schedule which best fits your own monthly budget.

Choose your own payments

Suppose that you need $100. You find this amount in the first column of the table below. Then read across, picking out the monthly payment which you wish to make. You will see that monthly payments of $7.78, for instance, will repay your loan in full in fifteen months. Or twelve monthly payments of $9.46 each will also repay a $100 loan if you pay on schedule. There is nothing more to pay. You may wish to borrow an amount not in the table. If so, just tell us how much you need and for how long.

You can borrow $20 to $500 if you can make these convenient monthly payments

CHAPTER 2

Disclosure

As Rod opened the door and switched on the light he looked pleased and proud to show Brooks his new apartment.

The large living-room, furnished in the modern manner, had a newness of a room not lived in. Over a square divan was a round mirror and before the divan a round white table. There were several chairs, a mahogany wall table with a vase of fresh flowers, white lamps, a small ivory radio and a soft brown rug. Venetian blinds shut out the city lights. Brooke felt the absence of a desk and books.

With pride he showed her the tiny kitchen and his bedroom quite crowded with a complete new suite. On the table beside his bed was an enlarged snapshot of her, laughing, her hair wild, taken on a windy autumn day.

"It's lovely, Rod." Obviously he was delighted with it.

"I thought you'd like it. I have a maid come in every morning to clean up. It's the first time I've really lived since I went away to school."

This place is big enough for two, she thought. Why didn't he say it? But he said nothing; he was looking at her. One moment he was aloof and casual, the next aware of her. There were times when his remoteness irritated and frightened her. What brought them close she did not know.

But suddenly he was close again, his warm face against hers.

"Brooke...you're so beautiful.... We can't be here often...."

"No, darling." Yes, darling. Oh, I understand, I must. A plan for your life doesn't include a wife in your twenty-fourth year, a wife who would be a hindrance and a burden, a baby perhaps in your twenty-fifth year. It just isn't in the pattern!

With a desperate little chuckle he said, "I'm going to take you back now."

"Your work. Oh. I forgot."

"I wish I could."

She had not removed her coat and hat.

At the elevator in her hotel he took her hand and held it between his. "I'll call you tomorrow. Good night, Brooke."

Both happy and unhappy, she went into her room. She pulled her hat from her hair and slipped out of the heavy coat. But she knew that many evenings with Rod had been like this — the momentary reaching of a summit, the inevitable plunge and indescribable disappointment that followed. I can't possess him, she thought. I can't own all of him and share every thought. I'm too sensitive, too aware of his change of moods. I must realize that there is a part of him I shall never have; the part that spends eight hours a day in an office I've never seen and with people I've never met.

When she had considered bringing a swift end to her Chatham life, there had been only great optimism; in New York she would see Rod frequently. The complications arising from proximity she had not once considered except in the superficial matter of clothes. But now she knew that there would be people to meet, people like the stout, shrewd Mr. Glass and attractive, interesting-looking Julian Carlton. And she must not be found wanting. She could bear it if women said with hostility and jealousy, "Rod Westover's small-town sweetheart," but she could not bear it if they said it depreciatively.

When she had undressed and put on a warm blue robe, she went to the window, opened it and peered out. Instantly the quiet room was filled with din. One felt so small here. And one had to be self-sufficient to meet the challenge. For no longer was New York a place for a gay, brief week end. It was home...

Brooke awoke at seven, clear-headed and hungry, and began to plan the day while she permitted herself the luxury of breakfast in her room.

Calling Rod's old number, she heard Jim's drawling, lazy southern voice say sleepily, "Hello. Jim Bartlett speaking. Who is it?"

"It's Brooke...."

"Brooke? Well, haw ore you? It's been...."

"A long time. But I'm here to stay for a while. I'll tell you about it....."

"Any time you say."

"Tonight? Rod's working tonight. I saw him last night."

"Tonight? Sure. Spaghetti and Chianti at seven. Where are you?"

I have one friend to start with, she thought. Jim. No challenge to be met there. No perplexities. They would talk a great deal and laugh and eat quantities of spaghetti and drink Chianti in the little Italian restaurant where they had been often with Grace and Rod. Breakfast, Jim's unfailing friendliness and the prospect of buying clothes warmed her and dispelled many of the distressing thoughts which last night had kept her awake.

Before she went out she wrote hastily to Grace: "I saw Rod last night and he looks splendid though a little tired. His new apartment, about which you probably knew and which was kept as a surprise for me, is lovely."

She would not mention the differences between Rod and Jim, hoping they could be settled.

"I talked with Jim this morning and we're having dinner together tonight. I'm glad and grateful that you urged a few days of freedom for me before Mrs. Kingsbury arrived. I need them. Forgive the brevity of this. There will be more to tell you after Monday. Come down soon. Love, Brooke."

Later in the day she would write to her father what was certain to be a strained but optimistic little note. Neither with Rod nor with Mrs. Kingsbury must she fail because her father gloomily anticipated her failure with both.

Weary, poorer but elated, she returned to the room late that afternoon, carrying several packages and seeing that others had arrived. Of her two hundred dollars of savings she had spent more than a hundred for two costumes. One was a black suit, with a bit of Persian lamb trimming, which could be worn on mild winter days and far into the spring, a chartreuse satin blouse and another crazy little black hat. The other was a black chiffon dinner dress with a clinging voluminous skirt and a long black velvet evening wrap.

Misgivings of her extravagance were quickly dispelled as she opened the packages eagerly and dressed and undressed several times before she wore for Jim what she had worn last night. Then the strained but optimistic little note to her father while she waited.

When Jim called, she said that she would be down directly. As she stepped from the elevator and saw him, no heightened feelings made her wordless, but a pleasant glow warmed her to see some one who was unfailingly the same. She went toward him, her white gloved hand outstretched, her face so vital and lovely that it was Jim who felt that speech would be difficult.

Wearing a brown suit and a brown sport coat too big for his tall gaunt figure, his dark hair unbrushed, he was as disheveled as ever. To Grace, Jim's lean, sallow face spelled undernourishment and she yearned, Brooke knew, to have him in New Hampshire long enough to "fatten him up." His blue eyes were bright but dreamy, his smile as slow as his voice. But all Jim's charm lay in his slow smile.

Of his background, as he had told Brooke once in his calm, unconcerned manner, there was little to tell. The third son of a Virginia farmer, he had gone west to college and some to New York to work. He liked football, symphonies, the French language, Shakespeare, brunettes and sleep. His mother had died and the second son, with a shrewish wife Jim couldn't tolerate, had come to the farm to live. He wrote to his father regularly; sent him money he could ill afford, remembered innumerable Virginia relatives at Christmas and went to the farm once every summer. Concerning Jim and girls, Rod had said once, "Poor Jim hasn't much taste in women. He was in love once but she married somebody else. I don't think he's ever got over it."

He took Brooke's hand, grinned and said, "Is it Saturday — or am I wrong? You look swell."

"Thank you — and it's Friday and I've come to stay."

"That is great news! When is it taking place?"

She colored. He thought that she and Rod were going to be married....

"No, it isn't that. I have a job here."

"Oh!"

In the taxi she told him about Mrs. Kingsbury's offer and her quick acceptance. When she mentioned Rod and tried to make her remarks about the new apartment casual, Jim looked away. She knew then that in whatever had passed between the two men Jim had been hurt.

The small, inexpensive restaurant was crowded and noisy. Jim spoke to the proprietor, a swarthy grinning little man, to his wife who had once been beautiful, and to their daughter, a waitress, who would never be beautiful. When an order for spaghetti and wine sent the girl away, Jim lighted a cigarette and looked across the table and through the smoke at Brooke.

"I guess Rod told you...."

Wishing that the place were less crowded and noisy, she nodded. "He told me a little, Jim."

"It isn't that I objected to his leaving. I minded, of course. But I sort of expected it sometime." Frowning, he looked down and knocked the ash from his cigarette. "I got sore at him for what's happening to him. Can't you see it, Brooke?"

"He's always been ambitious, Jim. He's always wanted the best. I've encouraged him and I understand what he is trying to do"

He glanced up. "At the expense of you and his mother? You've both given him every break, been entirely unselfish. It's time now he did something for you." His slow smile again.... "You can tell me it isn't any of my affair if you want to...."

"You are his oldest friend and it is your affair what's happening to him. Oh, Jim, I hated to see this happen between you two. It's my affair to straighten it out. It's a difference in viewpoints, mainly. You have different goals, pleasures, preferences."

Drink Coca-Cola Delicious and Refreshing

"You could think I was jealous of Rod."

"But knowing you, I know you aren't."

He chuckled. "You mean I'm a lazy, satisfied cuss who'll never amount to much. I guess I am. But I do some of the things I like to do, and I don't much care what the other fellow thinks of me. I have fun in my own way. I couldn't stand the responsibility of other people's big expectations of me."

Shall I tell him that at times I'm frightened and disappointed, she thought. No, not yet. It would be unfair to Rod. If ever she had to lower her colors, she knew that she could turn to him — if she needed him....

When the spaghetti and wine came, he said, "I hope you'll let me know when Rod is working, and we'll do this often."

She did not say, "Perhaps some night the three of us again," feeling certain that the friendship of two boys who had shared the same room since their freshman year had come to an end. Had she been alone then, she would have cried. Instead she asked him to pass the cheese, asked him about his work and whether he had bought any new symphonies recently to add to his collection.

There was only a low murmur of voices when the waitress came for their plates and Jim lighted another cigarette.

"Is there any good reason why you can't come up to the apartment and listen to my latest symphony, Brooke?"

She laughed. "Of course there isn't. A perfect evening."

As soon as she entered the poorly illuminated, untidy room furnished with old, dusty furniture, she took off her hat and coat and gloves and sat on the lumpy sofa. Jim picked up several days' collection of newspapers from one chair, a shirt from another, and carried them to the kitchen, along with a very much cluttered ash tray. When he came back, he turned on a table lamp beside an old phonograph, looked over his records and put on one. Then, sitting beside Brooke, he crossed his long legs, filled his pipe, lighted it and listened with rapt attention to Beethoven.

They did not speak until it was over. Then Jim got up, went to look over his records, changed his mind and turned about. He said simply, "Brooke...."

His expression of unhappiness startled her.

"What is it, Jim?"

"Brooke, I don't know whether to tell you or not. It's been going through my mind all day...."

"Something about Rod?"

"You're bound to know. And I... damn it, I don't know whether to prepare you or say nothing, hoping....."

"You mean Rod and — and some girl, don't you?" There was nothing else to guess....

"She isn't a girl. She's a woman years older than Rod and as rich as hell. I feel like a...."

CHAPTER 3

Irene Davies

"No. Go on. Tell me." Brooke's throat felt constricted.

Jim came over and sat beside her. "Her name is Irene Davies. Mrs. Davies. She's divorced. Her divorced, husband's name may not mean anything to you but in business it means millions. I don't know much about her except that obviously she's accepted everywhere, gives parties on the grand scale, has houses here and abroad and.. Well, Rod met her at Barney Glass's and she's been telephoning him ever since."

His voice was gentler when he spoke again, looking into her pale, shocked face. "Oh, it's probably nothing to worry about, I guess. But Irene Davies is a clever woman from what I hear and you'd better be on your guard if you meet her...."

Would she meet her tomorrow?

"What is she like, Jim?"

"I've never seen her. Rod had a picture of her taken in St. Moritz a couple of years ago. She isn't pretty but she's — what do you say — chic? She's small and dark and sharp-featured, with good teeth." After a moment he said, "I'm not saying Rod's in love with her, because I don't know. He knew I didn't approve of it so he didn't tell me much. Naturally he didn't bring her here."

"You mustn't try to make it easy for me. I want to know the truth, Jim."

"I know he isn't in love with her. He's in love with you. She isn't the first woman to chase him. Rod's a good-looking guy, Brooke. But this woman has a couple million dollars. And this is the truth, too. He's been in love with you ever since I've known him, and he was chased plenty in college. The very close attachment between you two is something I — I haven't seen often, Brooke. He's one of the most moral men I've ever known, too. Clean and wholesome. We used to kid him about it out at school. He's one-tracked: be a success, marry Brooke, take care of my mother. He never thought of anything else. But something's happened to him in the last six months and he's thinking beyond his measure, spending beyond his income. And he's always been tight, had to be in school. You can't make a million dollars but you can marry it...."

Though it hurt, she said, "Perhaps he's outgrown all of us...."

"That's ridiculous. He's only slightly above average. He took honors in school because he studied while the rest of us loafed or played, and he's gone ahead in business because he's dependable. He's worked like a dog, and he's produced."

He lowered his voice when he said, "And Irene Davies wants him because he's good-looking and he's the freshest, cleanest-cut man she's seen in more years than she cares to remember and because, up to now, he hasn't been easy to get."

"How old is she?"

His smile was crooked. "I doubt if any one knows — or even if she remembers any more."

At least I'm young, Brooke thought. That thought relieved the tension for a moment. Then, because Jim looked guilty and miserable, she said, "Don't censure yourself for telling me. I'm glad you did. If I see some one small and chic tomorrow afternoon at Barney Glass's, I'll know it's she and try to be prepared for her." She nodded. "Yes, I'm going there tomorrow afternoon with Rod."

Suddenly the inner tension increased violently. Had Rod really worked tonight? She despised herself for doubting, for thinking that perhaps at this very moment he was somewhere with some one "small and dark and sharp-featured, with good teeth." But no doubt her mental picture of Mrs. Davies was wrong. Tension relaxed. A dull ache sickened her when she thought that after tonight, when he made excuses for not seeing her, she would visualize him with Irene Davies, knowing that he had lied to be with her.

Jim said, "Damn it, I've made you unhappy. Why didn't I keep it to myself?"

Yes, why didn't you? she thought. She said, "It's all right. Play another record and then I must go."

Next he put on a Strauss waltz..

Less than an hour later she said good night to Jim quite cheerfully beside the elevator, and promised to call him when she was settled with Mrs. Kingsbury next week.

In her room, she took off her things slowly and sank into a chair, her mind a bedlam—music, Jim's words, the mental picture of a woman she had never seen. It was all slightly unreal. But no, on the contrary, yesterday and today had shaken her to reality. The idyll in New Hampshire of a girl who had loved and waited and written letters and dreamed was visionary. Now she knew that she would never know the comfort of that unreality again.

Rod sent orchids and telephoned, sounding quite cheerful. He inquired casually about Jim.

Brooke spent a quiet pensive day, going for a walk after lunching alone in the coffee shop adjoining the lobby. But Fifth avenue, thickly peopled on a sunny Saturday afternoon, seemed to isolate her and increased her loneliness. The dreaded late afternoon to come was comparable to going into battle. Yet no matter how inferior or frightened she felt those feelings must not be conveyed to others.

Though she spoke to herself with firmness, only a lame courage came to her aid. The thought that Rod was but a susceptible young man being lured by money angered her. She had to believe in both him and herself! Jim and her father, both by-standers, analyzed coldly and cynically. What she needed most, Brooke felt, was Grace's wholesale "It's all nonsense!"

Returning to the hotel, she dressed with special care. She put on the black suit and chartreuse satin blouse, the tall-heeled black suede pumps and the crazy little black hat, feeling better as she pinned the orchids to the lapel of the short black coat. If a graph had been kept of her feelings for the past two days, she thought, it would be a most irregular one.

Rod called and she said she would be down directly. As she approached him, his dark eyes went over her keenly, then approvingly.

Please be kind, she thought. Don't put me on the defensive. Never before have I needed your kindness and your love more.

"You look marvelous!" Rod said as if he didn't expect her to meet his approval.

"Thank you, and for the orchids, too. I feel very festive," she said. She thought: I'm lying. I don't feel festive. I'm scared.

In the taxi he held her hand and looked at her with tender detachment.

"You're going to meet a lot of people," he said almost paternally. "Of course at these things you don't meet half the people there and the ones you do meet don't remember you the next time they see you. We'll go to dinner afterward and I've tickets for the theatre."

She said lightly, laughing a little, "Don't make me feel so small-town, Rod!"

Forcing a brittle little laugh to accompany hers, he said, "Have I? I'm sorry. But I wish some one had taken me in hand when I first came. I was horribly small-town. Barney did finally."

"He's been very nice to you, hasn't he?"

"More than that. He's made everything possible for me at the office and outside the office." He smiled. "The fair-haired lad — or something. And there are people who are jealous, who dislike me for his interest. He's hard-boiled, very much the self-made man—less than a high-school education. But I admire him — because he's on top."

Brooke looked at him. "It's so good being with you, again...."

"And with you," leaning over to kiss her lightly, "looking so lovely." Then abruptly, as the taxi drew up at the curb in front of a tall apartment house, "We're here".

x x x

The large room, hazy with smoke and already filled with more people than it could comfortably accommodate, was so startlingly modern, the furniture all angles, that Brooke thought she had come upon a movie set. How comically incongruous was the bald, fat little man in his own home! And Brooke, who liked to live more with the old than with the new, felt uncomfortable.

"Some one small and dark and sharp-featured, with good teeth"?

There were several women who fitted Jim's very general description of Irene Davies. Brooke glanced around, meeting strange eyes everywhere until, far across the room and tall enough to be seen over other heads, Julian Carlton smiled at her. When she tried to smile, her mouth was trembling but she knew that even so far away the keen eyes in the sunburned face must see gratitude.

Barney Glass came to them from another room. His fat florid face screwed up in a grin of welcome, his bald head, his thin legs supporting his heavy body, made Brooke think of Humpty Dumpty. "I think I shall like Humpty Dumpty," she thought.

Rod introduced them. Barney's voice was rough but good-humored. "I've heard a lot about you, Brooke. You haven't had a drink yet? Won't do! Some fisherman," and glanced up at Rod, "you've got here. Had all the luck last summer."

Brooke nodded. "I heard."

Barney said, "The only big fish I got was the one I helped somebody else pull in."

Rod said, "He's modest, Brooke. He keeps the taxidermist both busy and wealthy."

"See what I can do about getting you a drink," Barney said.

They followed him, Rod saying "Hello" to various people but not stopping to chat.

Stopping, turning as Rod did also, Brooke saw a small, slender but well-rounded figure sheathed in gold lame, a small brown hat edged with mink over a small, smooth, shining dark head. Her features were irregular, her skin unroughed, her small eyes bright and animated, her vivid mouth parted into a brilliant smile. Jim had been right, Brooke thought. Irene Davies was chic and had good teeth. And she could probably turn her brilliant smile on and off at will.

To Rod, "Hello, dear. How are you? Do you know......"

But Rod introduced Brooke first.

Irene said, "I'm glad to know you. I've heard so much about you."

Merchant Shipping Losses For Week Ending July 29th

London, Aug. 6—(CP)—Mercantile shipping losses due to axis war action for the week ended July 29 were 18 British ships totalling 65,601 tons and two Allied ships totalling 7,090 tons, the Admiralty announced today.

It was denied authoritatively that H.M.S. Resolution was hit by a bomb or that a cruiser was damaged off the Baleares Islands in the Mediterranean.

A German claim to have sunk 229,298 tons of shipping during that week was termed "absurd."

The Admiralty said "enemy losses to Aug. 1 were approximately 1,172,000 tons, including 918,000 German and 254,000 Italian, plus 26,000 tons of former neutral shipping which had been brought under axis control.

"Michael, what a fool I am!" Joyce said, still red from embarrassment. "I don't know What I was thinking of!"

He put a hand on her shoulder.

"There's always been Paul. And I didn't want to make you uncomfortable and perhaps have to go away.

"For a little while after he went to England I hoped that the Paul dynasty was over; then he came back and the letters commenced again. I think he loves you. I don't think he knew it in that first year or two; it sounds more as if he did now. I'm not in the picture at all."

"I'm horribly sorry I said that stupid thing!" the girl murmured. "You've done so much for me; you've been so wonderful when I was heartbroken and impatient and — and dumb about everything. You've let me talk to you when I couldn't talk to any one else. I'm crying, but I don't know why!" she said, smiling with brimming eyes. "I'd say you were like a brother to me, Michael, only you're nearer than Ben ever was. And if ever I've made you unhappy I'm sorrier than I know how to say. You — you—" She stopped out of words, flushed and confused. "You know that, don't you?" she stammered in conclusion.

"It would be very hard for any man to have been here as I've been during these years, and not love you, Joyce," Michael said. "You were an adorable child when you came; you're a woman now. I've seen you cooking, playing with your kitten, raking the yard, scolding, happy, crying, comforting them all when you needed comfort so badly yourself! I've seen you in old sweaters on picnics and drying your hair, and dressed as Lady Teazle—

"But I've never seen you when you weren't the most wonderful woman God ever made," he added in a silence. "You know how poor I am; you know exactly what life would be up in the shack. I've never offered it to you and I never will! I'm going to stay on here after you go away, and work out things with your father; you'll come back for visits, and so will Dodo and Lissy and Ben, and pretty soon I'll be Uncle Mike to the crowd."

"You know that what you have has had nothing to do with it, Michael," the girl said in a voice she held low and steady. "I was in love with Paul when I came here. When I thought he didn't care for me it didn't make any difference; I loved him just as much."

"I knew you did!" Michael said. "And this June he will be home again?"

"Well, perhaps later than that. His stepfather died and he's been helping his mother get her estate. But they say it will be all settled in June or July. Then he comes out here."

"To stay?"

"To practice law. He'll be in his father's firm."

"And then I suppose we'll have some news?"

"I don't exactly know," she said hesitantly. "He writes as if we — sort of — belonged to each other, but he doesn't say."

The man looked down at her gravely.

"Then we'll just have to wait for midsummer," he finally said. "And suppose that even then it isn't right, Joyce?"

"I don't know," she said.

There was the click of a latch behind them and they both turned to see William Ballard in his pajamas.

"I'm glad you're up, Joycie," he said. "Your mother isn't well. She's got a pain in her side. I'm going to get a doctor, and you go up to her."

"I'll get Nubbins," the younger man said. "I'm dressed."

Joyce ran upstairs. It was the first step in a long Calvary for them all.

x x x

Despite warning weeks of illness the end seemed stunningly sudden. Joyce felt dazed when it was over. When Lissy and Ben and Dodo had gone away, the house was empty.

Her father was strangely quiet; he wandered about like a person in a dream. That Sally had been unreasonable, difficult, unhelpful in all the crises of the last few years, was all forgotten now. They only remembered her fierce loyalties, the vibrant energy that spread about her like a visible thing and made life exciting. It was very real grief that was felt by all Sally Ballard's children.

Joyce got into the habit of following the men about the farm.

"I see what you get out of it, Dad," she told him.

He and Michael adored her and did their best to spoil her. They never returned from San Francisco or San Jose without bringing her a little present; a cake of fragrant soap, a penknife for her cross-word puzzle pencils, a pair of fine silk stockings. In the evenings, when she sat flushed and lovely between them, the two men would watch her as she talked, lose the sense of her words for the sheer pleasure of watching the red mouth enunciate them.

Now and then Paul wrote to Joyce. There was never anything but nonsense in the letters, but the sight of his handwriting always made her heart leap. She would keep the letters unanswered as long as she could force her courage to do so; after ten days, two weeks, she would write him in the same flippant vein; she would save didiculous anecdotes, work out fantastic phrases to make her replies amusing. It was a sorry business; she loved Paul, she didn't want to write to him in this fashion, but he had set the pace and she could only follow. Neither Michael nor her father ever heard her speak of Paul, but deep in Joyce's heart lived the undying thought of him; he was never long absent from her mind.

She wondered how they would close the gap of this parting or if ever they would see each other again. She would not go to meet him this time; she would never again enter that hot crowded hurried world of his to be confused and hurt. It wasn't her world. It wasn't the world of girls who had kitchen work to do, who fed baby chickens and watched the tiny radishes and lettuces come up in the chill sweet spring sunshine. "He must still like me, or he wouldn't write to me," Joyce would muse. "But there may be a dozen other girls in his life now. I'd never know it if there were!"

Arthur Tallant came out from England and Michael went up to San Francisco and spent two days with him, bringing him down to the farmhouse on a March afternoon when spring was just tiptoeing into view. The willows all along the creek were green, the first fruit blossoms were out, and yellow mustard had washed like a wave over the fields. Everything looked its best and Joyce looked her loveliest too as she welcomed the English visitor.

She and her father and the two men scrambled up the long hill to Michael's cabin after luncheon. "Arty" liked the cabin immensely; Arty liked Joyce instantly and she liked him.

He had been as one of them for about ten days when late one afternoon Joyce came out from the kitchen to see a smart car sweep about the drive and come to a halt within a few feet of her. A man, a tall man in a brown coat, jumped out. Paul!

Their outstretched hands met; their eyes met; she was in his arms; they were both laughing. But when they drew apart, still linked by their hands, Joyce's eyes were wet.

"You're wonderful!" Paul said. "It's so good to see you again!"

"Claire said she wrote you I was coming."

"She did, and she was sweet about it; they wanted be to come up, as I did two years ago. But I couldn't! But, Paul, you weren't to arrive until today."

"And I didn't, darling!"

"You didn't arrive today!"

"This morning at ten. Claire met me and we went into town and had lunch with Dad. At two I was on my way. This is the car a fellow and I brought across the continent."

There was a bench under the oak; she had drawn him to it; they were both seated. A lull came in their eager talk, and they looked at each other. Paul said that Claire looked fine and his father looked fine, and asked for Joyce's father. His face flushed a little and he added:

"You've had it rough. I'm so sorry. I—you had my letter?"

"You sent me a lovely letter." Joyce's face wrinkled; she bit her lower lip. "It's made a tremendous change here," she went on, not very steadily. "That was why I couldn't go to Claire and wait for you. Dad's so much alone. He's — you'll see; it had been much improved in the years since the Ballards had come to the neighborhood; it had a porch now and a shower.

"Why shouldn't we batch it here for a bit?" Arty asked enthusiastically.

"Why shouldn't you stay in our spare room?" Joyce said. It was settled the English cousin should stay for a fortnight anyway, and he and Michael should divide their time between the farmhouse and the cabin.

he's much quieter than he was."

"Poor kid!" Paul said. There was another silence. "And Dodo's married," he stated rather than asked.

"Oh, yes; and with two babies! Jack and Mary. Mary's getting so adorable!"

"And Lissy?"

"Yes, and she and Archie have great expectations too. It seems so sad. Mother loved babies so, and she'd have three grandchildren already. But they do help Dad."

Paul regarded her with great satisfaction. "Gosh, you're thin!"

"Well, I am a little thin now, but it's all right. I eat like a hired man and I sleep ten hours a night. But I've been awfully busy; there's something to do every minute."

"You're doing it all now, I suppose?"

"Oh, no; I have Isabelle Dunker to help in the kitchen. She's marvelous. The place is always like a pin. Only I can't leave Dad long."

"Where's Michael?"

"Oh, he's here. We couldn't live without Michael. He's fixed that old cabin in the canyon — it's quite cute! And his cousin's here. Arthur Tallant, — Captain Arthur Tallant of the Royal Somethings. You're home," she added simply. "For how long this time?"

"For keeps. How does that sound?

"Heavenly."

"I finished two weeks ago. I had to go up and see my aunt in Boston, and pick Tony up. It took us about a week to get started."

And now what?"

"Dad thinks I can loaf for a while and go into the firm about the first of August." Paul put his arm about her. "And if, in about six weeks, you and I should step off," he began. "How about it, Joyce? I lost you once through being a fool. But I'll never let you go again."

"You didn't lose me."

"I know, but I acted like a skunk the time we were down there at Del Monte — let you go home on the train, didn't write for months"

"It didn't matter. I didn't really belong in that group. I couldn't compete with Elisa," Joyce said, with a smile for the remembered miseries of that visit. "What's become of her?"

"I don't know. I never saw her after that. Shall we tell your father today, Joy? This is March. Why not early in May?"

"A QUEER CREW"

London—(CP)—An old resident mourns the closing of the Victoria Hotel in the West End, saying he never found out why the stained glass window portrayed Virgil, Hipparchus, Praxiteles, Plutarch and Socrates; a "queer crew for a dining room."

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Aug. 6 (CP)—Gold shares chalked up a minor advance in the early session on Toronto Exchange today, showing an index gain of .19 at noon while other index groups were slightly lower. Tradin dwindled to a decidedly dull tempo and only 44,000 shares changed hands in the first three hours.

Buying orders accumulated for the golds over the Civic Holiday East Malartic, Central Patricia, Kerr-Addison, Teck Hughes and Pickle Crow improved narrowly. In the base metal group, Nickel, Pend Oreille and Ventures eased off narrowly.

Foods were the strongest of the industrial list and the steels, Senior oils and utilities were unchanged in the average. Walkers Common up a point to 39, was the strongest of the liquors.

A decline of 5 cents for Home Oil to 1.57 was about the only adjustment in the Western Oil list.

WALL STREET

New York, Aug. 6—(AP) —Bids for stocks were reduced in today's market and leading issues generally cut prices fractions to a point or so.

Offerings in the forenoon were a bit more urgent than in recent sessions. There were subsequent slowdowns but recoveries were scarce near the fourth hour.

On the offside were shares of U. S. Steel, Chrysler, United Aircraft, Douglas Aircraft, Consolidated Edison, Anaconda, Union Carbide, Eastman Kodak, Great Northern and International Paper.

Up occasionally were Woolworth, Montgomery Ward, Goodyear and Dupton.

Canadian issues were generally inactive, Canadian Pacific and Hiram Walker held unchanged while Canada 4s, in the bond market, dipped 3-8 point.

LIVESTOCK

Toronto, Aug. 7 (CP).—Good killing cattle sold readily up to mid-session on the Livestock Exchange today. Fresh receipts included 2,100 western cattle, mostly stockers. Except for a sprinkling of good cattle the quality of killing cattle offered was plain.

Fed calves were strong. Sheep and lambs were firm. No price was established for hogs. The cattle hold over from last week was 700 head.

Receipts—Cattle 3,550, calves including 700 westerns, 1,975, hogs 1,175, sheep and lambs 650.

Price in the cattle section—Best butcher steers and heifers, strong to 15 cents higher $8-$8.25; medium quality steers and heifers slow $7.25-$7.75 with comming downward to $6.50; butcher cows firm $4-$5.25 with a few up to $5.50; canners and cutters $2.75-$3.50; a few good butcher bulls $5-$5.25; bolognas $4.25-$4.75; fed calves strong to 15 cents higher at $9-$9.75 for good to choice, medium $7.50; stocker trade active at steady prices, best bringing $7-$7.25 and common selling downward to $5.50.

ood vealers sold at stronger prices to 25 cents higher most making $9.50 with a few tops at $10 and common downward to $6. Grassers $5-$5.50.

The light offering of lambs held firm at $9.50-$10 for most good ewes and wethers with a few at $10.50 and bucks $9-$9.50.

Hogs sold previously $8-$8.25 off trucks for bacons and $11 dressed-weight.

Hog Quotations

Toronto, Aug. 6—(CP)—Brantford, Hull and Stratford reported unchanged hog prices at Bacon-Hog markets early this morning. Stratford reported the market unsettled.

Dressedweight: Brantford $10.50 Hull, $10.65, Stratford $10.50 plus transportation.

Brantford later reported liveweight $7.50 and Chatham liveweight $7.50; dressedweight $10.25. These prices were unchanged.

Registration Here Will be Done In Regular Polling Booths

Col. W. R. Rierdon, Chief Registrar, States No Special Booths Will Be Set Up In Manufacturing Plants

WORK WELL IN HAND

All registration of persons in the South Hastings electoral district in connection with the Dominion of Canada National Registration to take place this month, will be done at regular polling booths, such as at schools, church halls, etc., and not as in some cases in other districts, at special registration booths set up in large manufacturing plants for the convenience of its workers, stated Chief Registrar Col. W. R. Rierdon, this morning.

Certain industrial plants in the district had offered this service, revealed Mr. Riedron, but after a full consideration of the matter by the local committee, it was decided that such measures would be unnecessary in this riding. Such booths would only add to the difficulty and to the work of the official registrar, said Mr. Rierdon, as it was thought under this scheme there would be no way in which to determine whether certain persons had registered or not.

The work of preparing for the registration has almost been completed by Mr. Rierdon, Chief Registrar for this district, with all forms and registration cards needed for each polling booth in the district having been allotted and ready for shipment to the various polling booths. Included among the papers to be distributed is a book of National Registration Regulations and a book of instructions for the use of the Deputy Registrars and Voluntary Assistant Deputy Registrars.

Volunteer workers for polling booths in this district are coming in fairly well, according to Mr. Pierdon, who reports a vital interest being taken in the registration by all persons contacted.

The Deputy Registrars for the city have not been appointed as yet, but will be appointed within the week.

ALLAN'S MILLS HOME DESTROYED

Residence of Harry Sweet Is Total Loss With Contents

Allan's Mills, August 6.—(Special) — When Monday's early morning storm was at its height the home of Mr. Harry Sweet was completely destroyed by fire between one and two o'clock. The building, a frame structure became the prey to flames that started in the wall behind the kitchen stove. House and its contents were totally lost. Last year in harvest time, the barn of the property was burned to the ground when threshing operations were in progress and all that is now left standing of the farm buildings is a garage. Plans had been made to rebuild the barn this year.

Mr. Sweet was away from home at the time of Monday's fire, and Mrs. Sweet and children were saved from the flames, and watched their home burn to the ground in the midst of drenching rain storm. Neighbours who had arrived promptly at the news of the fire were unable to stop the progress of the flames.

MOBILIZATION ACT

pelled to serve in the military forces outside Canada.

Compulsory Military Training.

First result of the measure was a plan for compulsory military traincame the organization of machinery came the organiation of machinery for a national registration, Aug. 19, 20 and 21.

Passage of the Mabilization Act and announcement of compulsory military training came shortly after the Franco-German armistice.

As a preliminary to the Unemployment Insurance Bill the Commons and Senate, passed an address asking the British parliament to amend the British North America Act adding unemployment insurance to the subjects over which parliament has jurisdiction. This was done without delay and removed the constitutional obstacle which resulted in the 1935 employment and social insurance act being found ultra vires by the courts.

Record War Budget

The monetary demands of war caused a record budget.

A war appropriation of $700,000,000 was passed early in the session and the non-war estimates, pared to the bone aggregated just over $450,000,000.

To raise as much of these sums as possible the budget provided for higher taxes on incomes and reduced exemptions, a National Defence Tax of two and in some cases three per cent. on incomes over and above the income tax with additional levies on cigars, cigarettes, matches and automobiles.

At the start of the session Hon. R. B. Hanson was chosen leader of the opposition by his Conservative colleagues in the House, succeeding Hon. R. J. Manion who failed to gain a seat at the Dominion election in March.

Death of Hon. N. Rogers

Death of Hon. Norman Rogers in an airplane crash deprived the department of National Defence of its chief early in June and cast a gloom over the session.

The cabinet shuffle that followed Mr. Rogers' death resulted in the appointment of three new ministers. Hon. A. L. Macdonald resigned as Premier of Nova Scotia to take over the Navy portfolio. Hon. W. P. Mulock of North York, was made Postmaster General and Hon. Colin Gibson of Hamilton West, became Minister of National Revenue.

War Services Department

A new department of National War Services was set up by an act rushed through both Houses and before it was passed Hon. J. G. Gardiner was designated to head it and set about the work of organization for the national registration. For the time being Mr. Gardiner also retained his former portfolio as Minister of Agriculture.

Persistent demands early in the session from opposition spokesmen for a National Government representative of all parties were rejected by Prime Minister Mackenzie King but he disclosed he had tried to obtain the services of some outstanding men outside of parliament and failed.

Mr. King invited representatives of the opposition parties to sit in with the war committee as associate members. In this way, he said, they would become acquainted with confidential aspects of war policy which could not be disclosed in the House and could make a contribution to the formation of policies.

The offer was rejected because Mr. Hanson said, it meant responsibility without power.

ARREST FOLLOWS

His Statement to Press

"I do not myself believe that I am held to conform to the said law and I have no intention of so doing," the statement said. "I ask the population not to conform, knowing full well what I am doing presently and to what I expose myself."

The statement was made to Montreal newspapermen who gathered in Mayor Houde's office at his invitation. After he had dictated the statement he initialled a copy for each reporter present.

The events leading up to the statement were typical of Houde's stormy progress through Montreal municipal affairs. They go back to a day last May when Montreal was placed under the supervision of the Quebec Municipal Commission after the city had failed to meet obligations exceeding $6,000,000.

When the provincial government placed the city under commission control the city's charter was revised radically. An administrator was appointed who could overrule decisions of the elected municipal government. Houde did not take kindly to the revision although, in a humorous speech to the legislative assembly he told fellow members that it would make him "a sort of Lord Mayor."

Houde's dislike of the restraining hand of the commission reached a peak when Administrator Honore Parent granted federal authorities the use of five municipal buildings for the national registration later this month. He appealed to the municipal committee of five to protest against Parent's action.

It was after four members of the committee had agreed to the protest, with only Alderman John Kerry dissenting, that Houde called newspapermen to his office and issued his statement. Its first paragraph was directed against Parent, but the remainder of the statement gave Houde's ideas about the national registration plan.

Press Advised Not to Use Story

The worries of newspapermen began several hours after the statement was issued. The Montreal Gazette printed the statement in its early edition of Friday night, together with a front-page editorial attacking the Mayor's stand. Statement and editorial were deleted from later editions by direction of the censors at Ottawa. At the same time, other newspapers were directed not to use the story.

Opposition Leader Hanson rose in the House of Commons the next day, read part of Houde's statement and asked what the government planned to do. He attacked the censorship regulations which had prevented use of the story.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King said that the matter was under consideration. In a later statement —on Monda—he upheld the decision of the censors, and said that The Gazette should not have published the story in its first edition Friday. The censorship which allowed use of that part of the story dealt with in debate in the House of Commons Saturday and Monday, were relaxed still further after Superintendent H. R. Gagnon of the Montreal division, R.C.M.P. announced the arrest early today.

Welcomed Sovereigns 14 Months Ago

The man who welcomed the King and Queen to Montreal 14 months ago submitted quietly when police surrounded him as he left the City Hall. He was taken to R. C.M.P. headquarters for a 35-minute questioning, and then placed in an automobile bound for an undisclosed destination.

Motorcycle police had cleared a way for Mayor Houde on innumerable occasions, before. But this time it was not Mayor Houde, smiling and bowing, who occupied the back seat. It was Camillien Houde, glum and quiet.

Instead of the cheering throngs that Houde had become accustomed to, there were only a few passersby who gazed silently at the car as it passed.

Former Insurance Agent

The 50-year-old former insurance agent began his career in municipal politics when he defeated Mayor Mederic Martin in 1928. Martin had been Montreal's chief magistrate for a decade. Houde, sometimes in favor in the years that followed and sometimes out of it, reached the low point in his political career when the Provincial Legislature decided that Montreal was no longer capable of caring for her own affairs without supervision.

Probably the greatest outbreak of indignation that Houde ever drew down upon himself, prior to the issue of his statement against registration, followed an address to a Montreal youth group in which he expressed pro-Fascist ideas. English and French-Canadian organizations joined in protesting against his remarks.

Holds Italian Title

(He is the holder of the title of Commander of the Order of the Crown of Italy.)

He made the headlines again last May when he seconded a motion presented in the Quebec Legislative Assembly, denouncing conscription and urging continuation of a "moderate" war effort by Canada. The motion was defeated.

Mayor Houde was last elected to office in December, 1938, for a two-year term. His place will be taken temporarily by the pro-mayor, Alderman E. Hamelin, Procedure when the mayoralty is vacant, is for the City Clerk to call a meeting of council at which an Alderman is chosen to finish out the the portion of the mayoral term.

Mayor Seven Times

Camillien Houde is a name long familiar to newspaper offices. The man who has been seven times Mayor of Montreal, a self-styled "man of the people", has acted time and again in a manner tinged with enough "color" to keep him almost constantly in the public eye.

Prior to the incident leading to his internment, the 50-year-old former insurance agent last "made" the headlines in May when he seconded a motion presented in the Quebec Legislative Assembly, denouncing conscription and urging continuation of a "moderate" war effort by Canada. The motion was defeated.

Early in 1938, Houde evoked a wave of protest from England and French-Canadian organizations alike when he expressed pro-Fascist sentiments at a banquet here.

One of his terms as Mayor ended abruptly Aug. 27, 1936, just 10 days after Maurice Duplessis' Union Nationales won an overwhelming victory over Quebec's Liberal government.

Disagreed With Duplessis

A statement issued by Houde said he was in disagreement with Duplessis regarding policies concerning Montreal's finances and added that the situation was complicated by "intense nationalism which is bound to have serious consequences for French Canadians in the near future."

He said he could not follow the "new orientation of our people on to ground which leads straight to secession of Quebec from Confederation."

But Houde was not content to vacate city hall for good and two years later he came back to win the mayoralty again. It was during this campaign that Houde, referring to the forthcoming Royal visit, reminded a west end audience that he held the order of the British Empire and remarked that if he should be called upon to play official host to Their Majesties he would have enough poise to "keep from stepping on the Queen's train."

When Houde in 1928 defeated the power mayor Mederic Martin, who had been Montreal's Chief Magistrate for a decade, he began a career in municipal politics which reached its ebbs at the Provincial Legislature session which ended May 22.

Montreal, unable to meet obligations exceeding $6,000,000, was placed under control of the Quebec Municipal Commission and the city's charter was revised radically under terms of a government bill. Houde, in a humorous speech, told his fellow members of the legislative assembly the bill would make him "a sort of a Lord Mayor."

CIGARETTE CAUSE OF CAR CRASH

Bancroft Motorist While Trying To Extinguish Smouldering Cigarette Loses Control of Car

Bancroft, Aug. 6.—(Special)—Efforts to extinguish a smouldering blaze in his clothing caused by a dropped cigarette, caused Kenneth Card, Bancroft, to lose control of his automobile on the Maynooth-Whitney road early Sunday evening, and send it crashing into an iron bridge causing considerable damage to the vehicle.

Mrs. Card and infant baby were hurled against the windshield by the force of the impact causing shock and bruises to the mother and facial cuts to the baby. Three-year-old Chester Card son, of Mr. and Mrs. Card, who was riding in the rear seat was thrown over the back of the front seat. His head struck the rear-view mirror causing painful lacerations.

The injured were taken to Maynooth where they received medical treatment, and allowed to proceed home. The car was later towed to Maynooth for repairs. Mr. and Mrs. Card were proceeding to Maynooth to attend the christening of their infant son.

Mr. Card had accidentally dropped the lighted cigarette on the clothing, and was endeavoring to put out a smouldering blaze when his car went out of control.

GORILLA IN BAD TEMPER

Philadelphia, Aug. 6 (AP).—They threw a birthday party for Bamboo, the Philadelphia Zoo's 400-pound gorilla, and Bamboo threw it right back. The 14-year-old gorilla ripped to shreds a "happy birthday" cardboard sign, smashed a half watermelon against his cage bars and spattered spectators with fragments of a 20-pound cake. His disposition hasn't improved—he did the same thing last year.

50 Over-Age U. S. Destroyers Should be Sent to U. K.—Pershing

Many U. S. Newspapers Approve Proposal In Interests of Western Hemisphere Defence — Lindbergh Attacked For Latest Speech on 'Appeasement of Adolf Hitler'

VIEWS OUTSPOKEN

New York, Aug. 6—(CP)— Press approval of proposals that the United States make available to Great Britain its spare over-age destroyers was clearly indicated today, along with irritation with Col. Charles Lindbergh who, as one newspaper put it, "now stands four-square for the appeasement of Adolf Hitler."

Sunday addresses by the noted aviator and by Gen. John J. Pershing, who led the American Expeditionary Force in the first Great War, on the United States' attitude to the war in Europe prompted immediate editorial comment in American newspapers. A survey of representative papers showed a majority favored proposals to aid embattled Britain.

Pershing's Attitude

Pershing urged that in the interest of western hemisphere defence at least 50 destroyers of first Great War vintage be made available to Britain immediately. Lindbergh, who previously had advocated that the United States remain aloof from Europe and that Canada withdraw from the British Empire, said the United States should "co-operate" with Germany if she wins the war.

Pershing's propcsal, also advanced by organizations such as the committee defend America by aiding the Allies and some prominent individuals, was supported strongly by the influential New York Times, New York Herald Tribune and many other leading papers. The Louisville, Ky., Times put it this way: "General Pershing shouldn't have had to use that this country's surplus destroyers be sent to Great Britain. They should have been on the way."

Scattered Opposition

While the Minneapolis Star-Journal said bluntly the United States should sell to Britain "up to 100" of the old destroyers, there also was scattered, but important, opposition to the idea. This appeared to be mainly on legal grounds and was summed up by the Rochester, N. Y. Democrat and Chronicle: "For one nation to give another ships of war to be used against an enemy makes the donor nation thereby an enemy of the second and an ally of the first."

Lindbergh, under fire ever since he made his first address last winter in which he expressed disapproval of Canada's going to war, again came in for criticism. The Charlotte, N.C., Observer's comment was representative:

"Little Charlie Lindbergh did a good day's work Sunday for his Nazi friends in Berlin. Passages in his speech clearly indicate that his motive was not an unmixed desire to keep America out of war."

Pershing's View Called Realistic

The Indianapolis Star summarized what appeared to be American public opinion in an important question by saying:

"This (Gen. Pershing's) analysis of world conditions seems more realistic and sound than the attitude voiced by Col. Lindbergh.. ..The public seconds Lindbergh's desire to keep out of war. Many cannot accept his reference to 'cooperation' with Europe, even though Germany wins the war. There can be no cooperation with Hitlerism, since that implies mutual confidence and fair dealing."

AWARDED D.F.C.

London, Aug. 6 (CP).—Flt. Lt. Alvin Thomas Williams, son of Rev. George Williams of Toronto, who was listed as missing in June, has been awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross, it was announced in the Official Gazette today. No details of the award were given.

MORE MONEY FROM N. IRELAND

Belfast, Northern Ireland, Aug. 6 (CP).—Finance Minister J. M. Andrews, introducing a supplementary budget in parliament today, estimated Northern Ireland would contribute £8,000,000 (about $26,700,000) to the Imperial Exchequer this year instead of £4,500,000 as provided under the previous budget.

Greenwood Declares War May Be Prolonged And Prodigious Suffering May Be Inflicted Before Victory Is Achieved Unless British And Allied Resources And Those of Their Friends Are Mobilized To Fullest Extent

London, Aug. 7 —Arthur Greenwood, Minister without Portfolio, announced to the House of Commons today the organization of a committee composed of himself as chairman, Neville Chamberlain and Sir Kingsley Wood to direct Britain's economic war policy.

Mr. Greenwood, Labor member of the war cabinet, said the committee is a wartime experiment with the task of concerting and directing the work of all ministerial committees dealing with economic problems.

He said the war may be prolonged and prodigious suffering may be inflicted before victory is achieved unless all the economic resources of our commonwealth, our allies and friends are mobilized to the Situation in Europe

He said Germany and the territories she has overrun are facing famine this winter and that next spring the pinch will be even worse.

"Hitler cannot add starvation to slavery without running the grave risk of revolution within his own territory," he added.

Some of Germany's chief industrial areas and airdromes have "suffered very heavy punishment" from British fliers and the "output undoubtedly is seriously interfered with," the minister said.

"Oil refineries, stores, railway junctions, marshalling yards, docks and ships have been and will continue to be targets for our deadly bombing planes, night by night and week by week, more heavily as our bombing strength increases."

Why The Weather?

Showers of anything! There are reports indicating that almost anything may fall in a shower besides water. Frogs, fishes, fruit, salt, dust of all colors, and many other things furnish spice to the reports. Due to the suction action of some winds, all reports seem at least possible, although some are doubted. One observer, for instance, reported frogs falling behind him, but not in front. However, there are well authenticated cases of colored rains which derive their color from dust and pollen which are easily picked up by the wind and brought down by the rain. The "blood rains" reported in Europe were due to the red dust picked up in the Sahara Desert.

CUDAHY'S WORDS ARE CRITICIZED

London Daily Express Says Any U. S. Food Sent To 'Continent' Could Be Counted On To Reach Nazi Machine

London, Aug. 7—(CP)— Statements made by the United States Ambassador to Belgium, John Cudahy, concerning possible famine in German-held territories on the continent were severely criticized by the London press today.

The Daily Express said that any United States food sent to the peoples on the continent could be counted upon to reach the Nazi war machine instead.

The News Chronicle, terming Cudahy's statements "sensational," reported that unofficial comment in London circles was "sharply critical."

"It was generally felt," The News Chronicle said, "that on grounds of good taste alone this is hardly the time for a foreign diplomat, ostensibly in England on a purely private visit, to praise openly the German conduct of their invasion of an innocent neutral and by implication to make it appear that Britain is responsible for famine in Belgium and other German-occupied territory."

Nazis to Blame

The Express said that if famine visits the continent this winter the Nazis are to be blamed.

"Mr. Cudahy is an honest observer," said The Express, "though of course the Nazis were on their best behavior when he was observing. His point of view will carry great weight. For many Americans will be inclined to blame the British blockade for the forthcoming famine.. ..

"The best reply to Mr. Cudahy's story is to tell the world how Hitler hopes to starve OUR women and children."

PRIME MINISTER KING HONORED ON 21st ANNIVERSARY

Followers of Liberal Chieftan Present Him With Roses On Anniversary of His 21 Years As Leader

WON FIVE ELECTIONS

Ottawa, Aug. 7—(CP)—A bouquet of 21 red roses adorned the desk of Prime Minister Mackenzie King in the House of Commons today. They were the gift of his followers on the occasion of the 21st anniversary of his selection as national leader of the Liberal Party.

Formal verbal congratulations to the Prime Minister were voiced by Hon. Grote Stirling, acting Conservative leader and Justice Minister Lapointe, Dean of the House.

Mr. Lapointe said it was a remarkable achievement for a man to be leader of his country after 21 years in party leadership. Mr. King had come through six general elections, five of them successfully.

"Today in this crisis," said Mr. Lapointe, "he is not only the man of a party but the man of Canada, of his country. He represents the spirit of Canada, its determination, its vigor, its will to achieve victory."

Record Gold Production In Canada in 1939

Ottawa, Aug' 7.—(CP)— Quantity and value of gold produced in Canada during 1939 were the greatest ever recorded in the history of the Canadian mining industry, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics said today in its annal review of the industry.

Production of new gold from all primary sources totalled 5,094,379 fine troy ounces, compared with 4,725,117 the previous year. Gross value of output was $184,115,951, an increase of 10.8 per cent from 1938.

Ontario Mines contributed 3,086,076 fine ounces, Quebec 953,377, British Columbia 626,970 and Manitoba 180,875. Lesser quantities were recovered in the Yukon, Saskatchewan, Nova Scotia, the Northwest Territories and Alberta.

According to preliminiary statistics of world production, Canada probably ranked second or third as a gold producing country, being exceded only by the Union of South Africa and possibly Russia.

DEFENCE PLANS RUSHED, DECLARES CHINESE PRESS

China Said To Be Prepared To Take Military Steps If Japan Establishes Bases

CHINESE REPORTS

Japanese Deny Stories That Japan Has Made New, Sweeping Demands On French Indo-China Government

London, Aug. 7—(CP)—A Reuters (British news agency) dispatch from Shanghai today said the Chinese were reported to have warned French authorities they would take military measures if the Japanese were permitted to establish bases in French Indo-China.

It quoted the Chinese press as reporting that Chinese troops were moving toward the frontier of Indo-China and that defensive preparations were being rushed.

Chinese reports from Shanghai two days ago said Japan had made new, sweeping demands on the French Indo-China government, including the right to use the French railway into the Chinese province of Yunnan for military operations and to establish a military or naval base on the Indo-China coast.

An official Japanese spokesman in Tokyo, however, denied the reports.

AIR TRAINING PERIODS REDUCED

Six Weeks To Be Cut Off For Air Gunners And Wireless Operators Under Plan

Ottawa, Aug. 7—(CP)—Shortening of the elementary, intermediate and advanced training periods under the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan from eight to seven weeks each was announced Tuesday by Air Minister Power. He said the move, at the request of the United Kingdom was designed to accelerate the output of pilots.

The United Kingdom has advised that training overseas of air gunners and wireless operators has been reduced from 24 weeks to 18 weeks and action will be taken shortly to cut these courses at the wireless schools in Canada first by two and then by four weeks.

Subsequent courses will be on an 18-week basis, Mr. Power added. This shortening of the courses will bring about a proportionate increase in wireless operators and air gunners trained but the Air Minister said he could not give precise figures on these increases at present.

Mr. Power"s statement followed a meeting of the Supervisory Board of the training plan at which acceleration of the scheme was reviewed.

Altogether, Mr. Power said, the changes in courses will reduce the time it takes to make an airman from a civilian to 25 weeks for pilots compared with 28 under the original schedule, 22 for air observers, compared with 26, and 28 for air gunners, compared with 32.

Britain's 'Moat' Is Now Immeasurably Defended—Alexander

'Her Ramparts Are Far Higher and Broader' Than At Close of Battle of France—Reward of British Working People Is Foreseen In a New Britain

London, Aug 7—(CP)—A. V. Alexander, First Lord of the Admiralty, told a luncheon audience today that his feeling regarding the defence of Britain, "far from being one of pessimism, is one of great encouragement."

He declared that Britain's "moat" (the English Channel and North Sea) is "now immeasurably defended and her ramparts are far higher and broader" than they were when the battle of France ended.

"There has been much talk about war aims." said Mr. Alexander. "Here is one which brooks no denial or delay.

"Our working men and women have responded magnificently to any and every call made upon them. Their reward must be a new Britain. Peace will come; never again must the unemployed become the forgotten men of the peace.

Mr. Alexander said it probably would not be known until the end of the war to what extent the Germans were laying mines around Britain's coasts by plane. Whenever this is even suspected, he said, traffic in the affected waterways is stopped or rerouted while minesweepers begin their patient work.

This, he intimated, explained recurring rumors to the effect that this or that British port had been closed.

Wilkins Plans Expedition To Fly To North Pole To Support Dr. Cook's Claim

Pittsburgh, Aug. 7—(AP)— Explorer Sir Hubert Wilkins and an associate, taking a plane for Detroit yesterday, said they planned to form an expedition there to fly to the North Pole in an attempt to substantiate the claim of the late Dr. Frederick A. Cook that he discovered it.

Wilkins' companion was Ralph Shainwald-Von-Ahlefield, President of the Cook Arctic Club, Larchmont, N.Y., which is trying to raise $100,000 to finance the expedition.

Dr. Cook died at New Rochelle, N.Y., on Monday disappointed to the end that the world failed to acknowledge his claim that he, and not the late Rear Admiral Robert E. Peary, was the first to reach the pole.

Permanent Munitions Industry Envisioned as U. S. Defence

Washington, Aug. 7—(AP)— A permanent munitions industry, owned largely by the Federal Government and capable of supplying an army of 2,000,000 men, emerged today as one of the major goals of the United States defence program.

Robert P. Patterson, new assistant Secretary of War, described as an "innovation" the idea that most of the projected 60 ordnance plants to be built with government funds would be established on a permanent basis.

Patterson said new powder, loading and storage plants would be designed for long life. He made it plain, however, they would be operated only for such periods as are necessary to prepare the required stocks of munitions.

The army already has been given $244,000,000 of the $700,000,000 required for the new plants and has contracted with the Dupont interests to operate a $25,000,000 powder plant in southern Indiana. A shortage of labor capable of manning the necessary loading plants is proving something of a problem, Patterson said. He added that one or two such plants probably would be the next for which contracts would be let.

BAKERS CANNOT RAISE PRICE OF BREAD, ORDER

Price Is Set By Wartime Board As That Prevailing On July 23rd

MILLERS, BAKERS SHARE

Ottawa, Aug. 7—(CP)—The Wartime Prices and Trade Board, exercising for the first time its power to fix prices for necessities of life, pegged bread and flour prices yesterday at quotations prevailing July 23 before the 15-cents a bushel processing tax was placed on wheat for domestic use.

The Board's action, effective today, was similar to steps taken during the first Great War when prices of flour and bread were controlled by the cost-of living commissioner.

First rise in bread prices brought to the attention of the Board after imposition of the processing tax was a cent-a-loaf up-

ON INSPECTION TOUR

Halifax, Aug. 7—(CP)—Brigadier W. W. Foster of Ottawa, director of auxiliary services for the navy, army and air force, was in Halifax today on a general tour of inspection of units under his supervision. Another military visitor was Maj. Gen. T. V. Anderson, Inspector General for Central Canada.

GIVES HUGE SUM TO TREASURY

London, Aug. 6 (CP).—John A. Fielden, 80-year-old bachelor of Holme Wood, Holme, has given £50,000 to the Chancellor of the Exchequer as a contribution to the war effort. At the start of the war he gave six ambulances costing £550 each for service in France.

750 TELEPHONES IN BANK CANADA IS M. P.'S CLAIM

J. F. Pouliot Says Governor of Bank Urges All To Save But He Receives $30,000 Salary

ILSLEY'S REPLY

Ottawa, Aug. 7 (CP)—Jean Francois Pouliot (Lib. Temiscouata), speaking yesterday in the House of Commons, claimed the Bank of Canada has 750 telephones and that there are 450 girl employees, each with a telephone.

Graham Towers, Governor of the Bank of Canada, Mr. Pouliot said, "urges all Canadians to tighten their belts, but he receives a salary of $30,000."

Finance Minister Ilsley, after a quick glance at the Bank of Canada telephone list, replied that Mr. Pouliot had counted the names listed instead of the telephones and on the first page it was to be noted that one telephone served nine

Daughter of Soldier Overseas Killed When Car Overturns

Hamilton, Ont., Aug. 7 (CP)— Five-year-old Georgina Forbes of Oakville, whose father is overseas with the Canadian Active Service Force, was killed in an accident on the Queen Elizabeth Highway west of Oakville today and five other children suffered injuries.

The Forbes child was riding with the other children in a car driven by her uncle. Pte. Fred Forbes of the Royal Hamilton Light Infantry. The car overturned in a crash as it turned into the lane of Pte. Forbes' farm. Among the injured were two young brothers of the dead girl.

TIDAL WATERS MAROON COAST OF LOUISIANA

Nineteen Persons Are Missing And Thousands Are Marooned By Tropical Storm

GULF WATERS HIGH

Fishing Industry Badly Hit, And Most of Muskrats Believed Drowned

New Orleans, Aug. 7—(AP) — Nineteen persons were missing today and thousands of others marooned by tidal waters as a tropical disturbance continued moving westward along the Louisiana coastline toward Texas.

The two-day-old storm pushed gulf waters to near record heights in the many lakes and bays that dot the coast and sent trappers and fishermen scampering for refuge to courthouses, schools and other public buildings located inland.

The 19 persons were reported missing out of Morgan City, La., on fishing trips, and included the Rev. Jules S. Toups, a Roman Catholic Priest, and C. Russell Brownwell, wealthy member of the State Legislature.

The refugees faced not only the prospect of losing their homes to wind and water but their means of livelihood also. Conservation officials said the disturbance would hurt fishing and shrimping and drown most of the season's muskrats, principal fur animals of the affected sections.

MISSING AVIATOR AWARDED D. F. C.

Rev. George Williams Believes Son's Award Was For Service Over Narvik

Brockville, Ont., Aug. 7—(CP) — Rev. George Williams, Secretary of the Missionary and Maintenance Fund of the United Church of Canada, said here Tuesday he believed his missing son, Flt. Lt. Alvin Williams of the Royal Air Force, had been awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross for heroic action over Narvik.

(Announcement of the award was made in London).

Flt. Lt. Williams has been missing for almost two months and his father, who is vacationing here, said a notice from the Air Ministry a few days ago indicated that hope was being given up that he would be located. He is believed to have been lost when the aircraft carrier Glorious was torpedoed off the northern Norwegian coast.

The 24-year old R.A.F. officer was born in Minden, Ont., and was educated in Toronto. He paid his own way to England three years ago to join the R.A.F. He was married three weeks before he was first reported as missing.

Nazis Halt Refugee Trains in France

Vichy, France, Aug. 7—(AP) — Repatriation of refugees from Belgium and Lorraine was suspended today as a result of German refusal to allow passage of refugee trains into occupied France. The reason for the German action was not made public, but it was understood to be a temporary measure.

Mail service between occupied and unoccupied France has been suspended for several days.

Corsair, $2,000,000 Yacht, Sails to Join British War Service

New York, Aug. 7—(AP) — The largest pleasure craft ever built in the United States, the 343-foot Corsair formerly owned by J. P. Morgan, has sailed to enter the British War Service.

The $2,000,000 yacht departed Sunday, her destination and mission secret. She was sold last May to a British firm representing the British Government.

Marine sources thought the Corsair might head for a Canadian port to be camouflaged and armed. She has a 25,000-mile cruising range.

The Corsair is the fourth Morgan yacht—bearing the same name—to enter war service. The first Corsair, sold by Morgan's father in 1890, was wrecked on a reef during the Spanish-American war while running dispatches under charter for the Associated Press between Cuba and Jamaica.

The second Corsair, sold by the elder Morgan to the United States government, was renamed the Gloucester and saw active service in the Spanish-American war.

The third Corsair, loaned to the United States navy during the last war, was armed for convoy duty out of Brest, France, with the 6th Flotilla, called the "suicide flotilla".

When she returned to New York in 1919 she wore on her funnel two service chevrons awarded by the navy. The veteran ship, renamed the Oceanographer, is in the service of the United States Geodetic Survey.

Is Duce Planning Attack on Egypt On Large Scale?

British Official Circles In Cairo Deny Italians Have Crossed Border — Small Mobile British Force of Desert Fighters Is Opposite To Italian Concentration In Bardia Area

BRITISH PREPARED

Some Observers See Reported Preparations For Attack On England As For Purpose of Diversion

London, Aug. 7 (CP)—A concentration of at least two Italian divisions was reported on the Libyan frontier near the Mediterranean coast today and British military circles declared "it looks as though the Italians are ready" to advance into Egypt in a large scale attempt to fulfill one of Mussolini's dreams —possession of Suez.

Official circles at Cairo denied, however, that the Italians already had crossed the frontier.

"The only Italian officers presently on Egyptian soil are one General and 818 officers and other ranks-prisoners," said a semi-official statement at British headquarters in Egypt.

FIERY ARGUMENT ENLIVENS SESSION

Senators Holt And Minton Indulge In Frank Talk In U. S. Senate

Washington, Aug. 7 (AP)—A movement to form a United States "Home Guard" composed primarily of war veterans gathered headway in Congress today as the Senate approached a vote on the bill permitting the president to order the National Guard into active training. Chairman Morris Sheppard (Dem. Texas), asked the Senate Military Committee to begin work Friday on legislation authorizing formation of State militia units to replace Guardsmen called into federal service.

The measure, he told reporters, probably will follow generally plans outlined yesterday by President Roosevelt at a Hyde Park press conference.

Mr. Roosevelt said that the organizations probably would be built around a nucleus of trained men furnished by the American Legion and the veterans of foreign wars.

Senate debate on the National Guard Bill was interrupted yesterday by a fiery argument between Senators Rush Holt (Dem.-West Virginia) and Herman Minton (Dem.-Indiana) in which the words "liar" and "slacker" were shouted.

Minton precipitated a heated exchange when he arose to shout, after Holt had attacked the Conscription Bill, that he was "getting impatient with being lectured by a slacker family."

Holt quickly dubbed "malicious lies" Minton's charges that Holt's father had opposed sending food to the soldiers in France in the last war and Minton's assertion that Holt's brother had been "hidden away" in South America at that time to avoid the draft.

"If ever the administration wants filth to be thrown," Holt added, "they get the Senator from Indiana to throw it."

Water to Play Great Role In African War

Heat And Thirst Most Powerful National Defences Against Italians Assembled In Libyan Desert

(By Larry Allen Associated Press Staff Writer).

Cairo, Egypt, Aug. 7 (AP)—The African war, suddenly assuming a more important part in the big conflict, may be decided as much by water as by bullets and bombs.

Britain's most powerful natural defences against the troops assembled by Mussolini in the Libyan desert are thirst and heat.

There is a waterless stretch of blazing desert of almost 400 miles between the Italian positions and the British base at Mersa Matruh, on the Mediterranean coast. Temperatures of 115 and 120 degrees are Marshal Rodolfo Graziani, Mussolini's commander in Libya, will have to transport all his water over dusty trails almost devoid of cover and subject to the attacks of the Royal Air Force and motorized British land units. The British forces are composed of hardy fighting men, some of the Empire's most famous regiments, who have been trained for years in the desert warfare.

The British forces would have a line of oases to fall back upon.

The naval blockade of the Libyan coast already has prevented much needed supply ships from getting through from Italy, while the R.A.F. has been subjecting Graziani's bases at Tobruch, Bardia and Derna to daily attacks.

British bombers scored one early success on this front when they succeeded in wrecking a pipeline carrying water to beleaguered Fort Capuzzo, an Italian outpost. This stone fort was taken by the British forces early in the war, but was recaptured by the Italians.

Since then the thirsty, half-starved Italian garrison has held on despite the stifling heat and the attacks of British mobile units which have succeeded in destroying and scattering supply and relief trains attempting to get through with aid.

In the simultaneous attacks on British Somaliland, the Italians also have to contend with extreme heat and thirst, complicated by a race to beat the rainy season due to start late in October. Then the downpours will turn the country into mud.

Attempting to drive through the hill passes to Oadweina, Hargeisa and Garagaral, native camel breeding centres, the Italians have to march from 80 to 150 miles to reach the sea.

Every shot fired by the Italians brings the day closer when Mussolini's African empire must crumble, British officials say, because the British navy makes it impossible for ships to bring fresh aid.

PARLIAMENT IS ADJOURNED

Members Instructed To Be Ready To Assemble Earlier Than Nov. 5 If Necessity Should Arise

Ottawa, Aug. 7.—(CP)—The first session of Canada's 19th Parliament adjourned at 1.12 pm. E.D.T. today after sitting since May 16. It will convene again Nov. 5.

While the adjournment was taken to Nov. 5, the members of both the Commons and the Senate were instructed to be ready to assemble earlier should developments necessitate calling parliament before that date.

TRUCK DRIVES INTO SIDE OF BOX CAR

The alertness of Conductor D. E. Morrison and Brakeman R. Walker as they jumped from a freight train in Peterborough yesterday, undoubtedly saved their lives when a large transport crashed into a box car on which the train crew was riding inside the city limits. The transport was practically demolished.

John Lewis, the truck driver, and his helper, Frank Clarke, were admitted to hospital suffering from lacerations about the head and face as the result of flying glass. According to Peterborough police the warning signals at the crossing and the engine bell were both sounding as the truck drove over the crossing into the moving freight train. The city shunter was spotting a freight car when the transport crashed into the side of it, forcing the crew to jump for safety.

BOYS' CAMP AT MOIRA LAKE BEING PREPARED FOR ACTIVE SEASON

The Belleville Boys' Camp at Moira Lake has been a busy place during the past ten days as workers have been engaged in a general clean-up, paint-up campaign. The recreational hall which was broken down last winter owing to the weight of snow on the roof, has been completely rebuilt, with this building as well as the dining hall receiving a new coat of paint in readiness for the next contingent of campers to take up residence.

On Monday, August 12th, the Leaders' Camp will open at Moira Lake. This camp, called "Beau Lac" Camp is sponsored under the auspices of the Ontario Religious Education Council which specializes in the training of leaders in young people's work.

TRAINED FARM HELP CONTINUES SCARCE

Demand for experienced farm hands is increasing in this district with applicants very scarce, Employment Office officials stated today.

The few that are willing to work on the farms are demanding $35. per month or $1.50 per day. The majority of farmers are hesitating to pay these amounts with general offers ranging around $30 the month and between $1.25 and $1.50 the day.

The serious shortage of trained domestics continues. A number of school girls are registering daily for positions as nurse-maids, but little call has been received for their services. A number of residents desirous of employing trained domestics have applied to outside points, but with little success thus far.

GIRL GUIDE TROOPS LEAVE FOR CAMP

The guides were in charge of Miss Mary Roberts and left from the Armories at an early hour. Other city troops have completed their annual sessions at camp.

ANGLER FINDS FISHING GOOD NEAR BAY BRIDGE

Mr. I. G. Hefkey, manager of the Royal Bank of Canada branch here agrees with recent visitors that the fishing in this district is second to none.

Every morning Mr. Hefkey wends his way to the Bay Bridge with his trusty fishing pole, selects himself a comfortable place on the rocks nearby and casts his line. "Rarely," he said, "I come home without some trophy of the chase. But one day this week I had exceptional luck. When the morning's fishing was completed I had two pickerel weighing 5 1-4 and 3 pounds respectively and five of the nicest bass you ever saw."

"Far away pastures may look green," he laughed, "but the fishing 'grass' hereabouts is still pretty good."

TOURIST HELPED OUT OF BUMPER TANGLE

At least one Quebec motorist will return home with the thought that Bellevillians are friendly and quite willing to help a fellow out of a jam. Yesterday afternoon a passing motorist swung rather abruptly into a vacant parking place on Front Street only to awake out of his reverie as his rear fender caught in the bumper of a parked car. His face was a study in perplexity as he viewed the damage and discovered to his evident consternation that he could not move his car without further damage to the fender as the bumper of the parked car was wedged securely behind his rear wheel barring either forward or backward movement.

Interested bystanders soon had him out of difficulty however, as willing helpers lifted the car sideways to free it and the tourist went happily on his way.

WORKMEN CLEAN UP RIVER BED NEAR THE UPPER BRIDGE

There was a rumble, a clatter and a roar emitting from beneath the Upper Bridge and pedestrians rushed to the railing only to witness the strange sight of a truck backing slowly up the centre of the Moira River. Although first impressions suggested an accident with the truck crashing through a railing, it was learned that the truck was on a perfectly legitimate errand, even though out of its usual haunts.

Trucks and men in the employ of the Public Works Department are at present engaged in cleaning out the bed of the river in the vicinity of the bridge and workmen in long rubber boots load the trucks with shale rock embedded in the river to be taken to the city quarry to be crushed for use on the city streets.

COMPOSER OF WAR SONG PAYS VISIT TO REG. HINCHEY

Mr. Albert McNutt, Toronto, author and composed of the famous first Great War song "We'll Never Let the Old Flag Fall" was in the city last night, in connection with an arrangement for his new musical effort "We'll Win the War with Wings."

Accompanying Mr. McNutt was Mr. Laidlaw F. Addison, conductor of the Toronto Symphony Band, and well-known in musical circles here. Mr. Addison, who edited the new war-song and gave it its first radio broadcast a week ago, stated that the new composition is already taking the country by storm and predicts for it a similar success as Mr. McNutt's famous 1914-18 effort.

The two artists were guests of Mr. E. Reg. Hinchey during their brief stay here.

HUNTERS HAND IN GUNS FOR V. C. G.

Citizens Urged To Turn Over Fire Arms For Use In Case of Emergency

In response to the request of the Federal government for the use of privately owned rifles and shot guns for use in the Volunteer Civil Guard, two citizens have already come forward and loaned valuable rifles to the authorities.

Yesterday Carl Crosby, of this city, loaned his 38-50 rifle to the government, placing the fire-arm in the custody of Inspector Frank Gardner of the Provincial Police. Today Dr. J. R. Guthridge, left his .303 high-powered rifle and a box of .303 ammunition at the police station in care of Acting Chief Arthur Harman to be used in case of necessity by the V.C.G.

Citizens are urged to turn over their shot guns, rifles and ammunition to the Provincial or city police for use by the Volunteer Civil Guard for the duration of the war. Forms will be filled out upon which is placed the name of the owner, the type of fire-arm, serial number, etc., in order that each gun may be identified and subsequently returned to its rightful owner. Owners are given a receipt from the authorities, an exact duplication of the registration sent to Ottawa.

All such shot guns and rifles are safely stored in designated armouries under the jurisdiction of the Ontario Provincial Police and are taken care of in a manner so as to insure the preservation of the guns. Sporting enthusiasts will doubtless forego autumn hunting this year in order to supplement the government's efforts to arm Canada's Volunteer Civic Guards.

FISHERMEN NET 27lb. STURGEON

24-Lb. Lake Trout, 10½-Lb. Whitefish And 3½-Lb. Shad Also Netted By Lake Fishermen

South Bay, Aug. 7—Main Duck Island fishermen, Thompson and Brisbin, brought to that island fishery the largest fish taken from local waters this season, a twenty-seven pound sturgeon. The fish measured 43 inches in length.

At the Point Traverse fishing colony a ten and a half pound whitefish was netted by Stinson Hyatt and a few days ago another fisherman found entangled in fishing gear a three and a half pound shad and a 24 pound salmon trout.

Catches of fish at the Main Ducks are exceedingly light at present, while at Point Traverse, fishing operations are being hampered somewhat by myriads of small shad that are infesting their nets.

SAYS BAHAMAS WILL PROSPER

Retiring Governor Sir Charles Dundas Makes Prediction of Windsors' Administration

Nassau, Bahamas, Aug. 7 (CP)—A prediction that the Bahama Islands will prosper under the administration of the Duke of Windsor came from the retiring Governor, Sir Charles Dundas, before he sailed today for a new post in Africa. The Duke and Duchess of Windsor are expected to land at Bermuda tomorrow.

"I leave you now in distinguished and capable hands," he said in a farewell broadcast to the islands.

"My successor's rank is but one of his outstanding qualities. He is endowed with natural ability and great experience of men and affairs and exceptional knowledge of the Empire and of many foreign lands.

Greater Prosperity After Peace

"The Bahamas have fared well in time of war, but I predict that when peace returns they will prosper more than ever and with such prospects under such leadership I have every confidence in the colony's future.

"Naturally, your future, like that of the whole world, depends on the return of peace with victory for British arms. A German victory could bring only unending war and misery because the world as a whole would never remain passive under German domination which would be restricted to the end."

The retiring Governor said the Bahamas "always will feel near to their great neighboring country, the United States."

"This war," he added, "has demonstrated profoundly that the hope of the world for liberty and justice rests on British and American co-operation."

PRICE GOES DOWN

Kansas City, Aug. 7—(AP)—Some 350 mules and horses, once destined for war, are going back to the barn. The French Purchasing Commission which bought the animals for the army before the fall of France, received at a re-sale only half price for them. Mules brought $55 to $155; horses $35 to $85.

CREW LANDED

Belfast, Northern Ireland, Aug. 7.— (CP)—Twenty-nine survivors of the crew of the 8,400-ton Greek vessel Bendos, torpedoed off Tory Island near the northwest Donegal coast Sunday night landed in lifeboats at Carrigart yesterday. The torpedoed ship carried a crew of 32.

GAYDA CHARGES HULL RAISING PHANTOM THREAT

Italian Editor Denies Any Axis Intent To Carry War Into Western Hemisphere

CLAIMS NO MENACE

Rome, Aug. 7—(AP) — Virginio Gayda, Editor of Il Giornale D'Italia, in an article today accused Cordell Hull, United States Secretary of State, of "creating a phantom of German-Italian menace" for political purposes.

The Fascist spokesman claimed that the axis powers have no intention of carrying the war into the western hemisphere.

"It is evident that Hull would like to alarm the American nations with a feeling that a transfer of the war to the American continent by the victorious axis powers is more or less imminent," Gayda wrote.

"It is well now to point out once more that this insinuation is absolutely unfounded, arbitrary and —let it be said with respect for the eminent American statesman— tendentious rather than provocative."

(Mr. Hull's statement yesterday asked the American people to "be ready and willing for real sacrifice of time and substance and for hard personal service" and to "arm to such an extent that the forces of conquest and ruin will not dare to make an attack on us or any part of this hemisphere.")

Italy and Germany entered the war to solve European problems and "never thought and will never think of threatening other continents," Gayda claimed.

IRISH ARE READY TO FIGHT INVADER

Arms In Northern Ireland And Eire Brought To Arm Local Defence Forces

Belfast, Aug. 7 (CP)—The Irish are ready to fight any invader with the weapons they once used in the days of "The Trouble."

Police and other officials wink and shake off awkward questions as hidden arms caches, both in Northern Ireland and Eire, are brought out to arm local defence forces.

In Eire hundreds of rifles, revolvers, machine guns and piles of ammunition, hidden for 18 years, are being handed out to the home guards. They had been greased, wrapped in oil-soaked cloth and stored away when the fighting between Free Staters and Republicans ceased in 1922.

Northern Ireland local defence forces are being armed with rifles smuggled into Ulster by Unionists when the northern Irish decided to fight home rule.

LITTLE DAMAGE SO FAR

Halifax, Aug. 7.—(CP)— Henry D. Hicks, 1939 Nova Scotia Rhodes scholar, is back in Canada today with the message Britain is fighting this war "with a view to reconstruction after she has conquered Germany." German air raids, he said, have done little damage to camouflaged British factories.

Tourist from Rochester Loses Purse Containing Immigration Papers

An American tourist found himself in a rather embarrassing position in Belleville today. J. C. Quinn of Rochester, N.Y., has been visiting friends and relatives at Lonsdale and while in Belleville yesterday Mr. Quinn lost his wallet containing a large sum of money plus immigration and passport papers. "If I don't get those immigration papers recovered, I just can't get back into the United States," Mr. Quinn told Acting Chief Arthur Harman as he reported his loss. The papers cannot be used by any other person, who might seek to illegally enter the United States while in possession of them, Mr. Quinn added.

Otherwise in local police circles activities were quiet and serene, no arrests having been necessary in Belleville since the holiday weekend.

DODGE LUXURY YACHT PULLED OFF REEF

Little Current, Ont., Aug. 7.—(CP)—Released late yesterday from a reef near South Baymouth where it had gone aground in fog Monday, the $2,000,000 luxury yacht Delphine II, owned by Mrs. Horace Dodge Dillman of Detroit, left this Manitoulin Island port today.

The three-deck yacht, carrying 16 guests and a crew of 52, ran aground not far from the point where Daniel Dodge, nephew of Mrs. Dillman, met death two years ago while honeymooning with his bride, the former Laurine MacDonald, Gore Bay telephone operator.

Mrs. Daniel Dodge is summering at her cottage on Manitoulin Island and was not a passenger on the Delphine.

The craft was released by a powerful tug from Sault Ste. Marie after three local tugs and the ferry-boat Normac had been unable to budge it.

MEMBERS OF MILITIA MUST REGISTER

Ottawa, Aug. 7.—(CP)—Members of the non-permanent active militia will have to register like all other Canadians between 16 and 60 in the National Registration next Aug. 19, 20 and 21, it was stated authoritatively today by a spokesman for the department of National War Services.

Ottawa, Aug. 7. — (CP) —Jules Castonguay, chief registrar for Canada for National Registration Aug. 19, 20 and 21, has ruled that inmates and staffs of religious or benevolent institutions, hospitals and convalescent homes may be registered in their institutions.

Mr. Castonguay further directed that Indians and Eskimos will not be required to register, thus ending considerable speculation on how registration would be carried on among these natives in the outlying regions.

Carbon Dioxide Has Many Uses In Modern War

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE

(Associated Press Science Editor)

New York, Aug. 7 (AP)—The gas surprise of this war is harmless carbon dioxide.

Carbon dioxide is the fizz of soft drinks, the collar on beer, the stuff that man exhales with every breath.

With all nations set for poison gas as a result of experience in the Great War, carbon dioxide CO2, stole in the back way.

It ferried the Germans across flooded Dutch lowlands and European rivers.

It is saving aviators on both sides from fire and from drowning.

The facts about the war uses of this gas come from Walter Kidde, New York engineer who was one of the pioneers in use of carbon dioxide for fire-fighting. He poured gasoline into the hold of a derelict ship at London, lighted it and snuffed it out with jets of carbon dioxide before a surprised audience.

A bottle about twice the size of the family quart-of-milk container is attached to folded rubber boats. It is filled with liquefied carbon dioxide, which is carbon dioxide gas under pressure.

A turn of a valve releases this liquid, which expands so fast it rushes out as gas and inflates a large boat in a few seconds. That's how the Nazis crossed the water defences of the lowlands.

Similar bottles of the gas in three seconds inflate the rubber life rafts of aviators dropping into the sea.

The fighter who has to bail out over water yanks a cord on his vest. This opens a tiny bottle of liquid carbon dioxide which inflates the vest to the volume of a life preserver.

The extremely small liquid compass into which a huge volume of carbon dioxide gas will conveniently and safely pack renders it a formidable factor in attack over water. The gas is lightweight, can't be seen, is odorless and has a very slight sharp taste.

In the form of water wings, the carbon dioxide bags are used for land planes which have to fight over water.

For fire-fighting, one of the newest uses is British. Dry ice (solid carbon dioxide at about 110 degrees below zero) is held ready at training fields. When a cadet crash results in a flaming plane, the dry ice brigade, in asbestos suits, rushes up with projectors that send a snow-storm on the plane.

The carbon dioxide vaporising from the dry ice—not the cold—holds back the flames so the cadet may be rescued even if the plane burns.

Military planes for some years have had automatic carbon dioxide fire extinguishers in the cockpit and around the engine. Sometimes a dangerous engine fire is smothered. Warships use similar carbon dioxide fire-smothering devices in engine rooms and around fuel tanks.

Mr. Kidde says The Netherlands is the first country where the Germans used carbon dioxide for invasion. The Netherlands is the country which first manufactured this gas about 300 years ago.

OBITUARY

LATE MRS. ALICE CADE,
(Deseronto)

Deseronto, (Special)—The death occurred Sunday of Mrs. Alice Cade at the home of her son, Mr. William Cade, after a lengthy illness.

The deceased, who was in her 88th year, was a native of Tamworth, Ont.

Surviving to mourn her loss are two daughters, Mrs. Jackson of Kingston and Mrs. Godfrey of Rochester, N.Y., and two sons, William Cade of Deseronto and Stanley Cade of Tamworth.

The funeral was held on Tuesday and was conducted by Rev. J. McAvoy of the United Church. Interment was made in Riverview Cemetery, Napanee.

WILLIAM HENDERSON

William Henderson, who resided at 149 Pinnacle Street, passed away in the Belleville General Hospital early Tuesday evening, August 6th. He was in failing health for some time.

The late Mr. Henderson was born in Barrie fifty-three years ago. For some time he resided in Western Canada and for the past twelve years he made his home in Belleville. At various times he was employed at the Court House building. He was unmarried.

Surviving him is one brother, Mr. Hugh Henderson, Kingston.

Resting at the Martin Funeral Home, Church Street. The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

BENTON GOODMAN
Greenfield

There passed away at Greenfield, Ontario, Mr. Benton Goodman, formerly of this district. The late Mr. Goodman suffered a stroke nearly two years ago and recently a serious heart condition developed from which he passed away on August 5th.

The late Mr. Goodman was born sixty-five years ago in Tyendinaga township, being a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Goodman. When a young man he learned cheesemaking and some years ago he went east and followed this occupation around Alexandria and Dalkeith districts until ill health prevented.

He leaves to mourn his passing four sons: Clarence and Lorne, both cheesemakers near Alexandria; Herbert and Tupper at home, also two brothers and one sister, Mr. Fred Goodman, Milford; Mr. Clarence Goodman and Miss Lottie Goodman, Plainfield.

KIWANIANS' "I.Q." TOPS SPELLING

Novel Contest At Service Club Luncheon Evokes Merriment

GOVERNOR PRESENT

It may have been the heat and it may have been the humidity, or again it may have been that lackadaisical feeling that follows an exceptionally well-enjoyed meal, but suffice it to say that members of the Belleville Kiwanis Club fell down badly at the impromptu spelling match provided for them by Kiwanian Eddie Shapiro at the regular weekly luncheon at the Bay of Quinte Country Club on Tuesday.

However, the clubmen gained some consolation by proving to the master of ceremonies for the occasion that their intelligence quotient was much higher than there ability to spell, for the difficult questions fired at them during the quiz part of the program were in the most part answered perfectly.

At that there was a lot of humor injected into the proceedings. Jim Cowan told the clubmen in answer to a query that he preferred a half-ton of ten dollar gold pieces to a ton of five dollar pieces-of-eight. Another gave forth long Latin phraseology when asked what the letters "S.O.S." represented.

A baseball game in which correctly spelled words represented hits, and so forth, resulted in a tie when the final innings ended. It was a lot of fun for all concerned and good summer fare for the clubmen.

Lieut. Governor Speaks

A distinguished visitor to the luncheon was Lieutenant-Governor Jack McKone of Peterborough who dropped in in order to keep sixteen years of uninterrupted Kiwanis attendance unblemished. Lieut. Governor McKone, briefly addressed the club and brought greetings from the St. John, N.B. club members. He will pay his formal visit to Belleville in the near future.

Discussion of the sale of tickets for the forthcoming Kiwanis Karnival occupied the business session of the luncheon. Members signified their intention of aiding in the sale by taking additional books of tickets to sell.

Other guests included Neil Smith, Stratford, G. Wright and H. Carson of Niagara Falls and former president of the local club Ab Boynton, now of Cornwall. President William Anderson was in the chair, with Kiwanians Jack MacIntosh and Grant acting as song-leaders and sergeant-at-arms respectively. Leo Riggs provided the musical accompaniment in his usual masterful manner.

British Confidence Seen In Arrival of Plane

New York, Aug. 7— (CP) —The New York Times, commenting editorially upon the arrival here of the British flying boat Clare, said today that the fact the craft made the trip across the Atlantic and that service via the northern route is to be resumed "gives heartening evidence of increasing British confidence and strength in the air."

It added: "That such service, linking the United States directly with Britain, will speed the interchange of opinion goes without saying."

WORLD WAR GUN TO BE RETURNED TO GERMANY

For 20 years this field gun, a trophy of the world war, stood as a war memorial in a little town in the south of England. You see it here taking the first step toward its return to Germany. It is en route to the scrap yards to be melted down into steel for British bombs and other sinews of war.

French Minister Permitted to Stay At Post Says King

Ottawa, Aug. 7 — (CP)—Canada has permitted the French Minister, Rene Ristelhueber, to remain at his post in Ottawa and carry out his duties, Prime Minister Mackenzie King told the House of Commons Tuesday.

He said he believed this met with the approval of the British government, although it has, to a certain extent, severed relations with France.

The Prime Minister said he was convinced the French minister would not be sending to his government any information which might be injurious to Canada if it fell into the hands of the German authorities in France.

"Mr. Ristelhueber is a very honorable man and has given us every reason to believe his sole desire is similar to our own. He is doing everything he can to relieve the situation."

The question came up during discussion of External Affairs Department estimates and was raised by King Hazen (Con. Saint John-Albert) who asked for a statement on the status of the new French minister who came to Canada shortly before the French capitulation.

"In relations between countries today there are circumstances that are difficult and sometimes critical," Mr. King said. "Canada's policy has been to avoid anything that would add to these difficulties."

There had been "certain serverances" of relations between the United Kingdom and France, but not complete severance. French consuls-general were still functioning normally in Great Britain and the empire.

SURRENDER BADGES

York, England (CP)—Included in the mass of scrap metal collected by the London, Midland and Scottish Railway are 450 "war service" medals issued to employees of the Lancashire and Yorkshire Railway in the First Great War.

SUCCEEDS FARLEY

National committeeman from New York and long-time friend of the president Edward J. Flynn, Bronx Democratic leader, was named to direct Roosevelt's third-term campaign. He succeeds Postmaster James A. Farley as Democratic national chairman. The selection was made at a meeting of party leaders in the White House.

CARETAKER WOUNDED BY SUSPECTED BURGLAR EXPECTED TO RECOVER

Sudbury, Ont., Aug. 7—(CP)—George Thompson, 71-year old caretaker of the Acme block here wounded during a struggle with a suspected burglar on Saturday night, was reported in good condition and is expected to make a speedy recovery.

Thompson was shot in the neck during the struggle with the man whom he discovered while making his regular rounds. Immediately after the shot was fired the man ran away and Thompson went out to the street where he was seen by a departmental store employee who notified police.

Officers took Thompson to hospital where a .32 calibre bullet was removed from his throat.

Carmel Friends Honor Popular Couple

Carmel friends of Mr. and Mrs. Merle Robinson (nee Miss Monna Wright), gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Reynolds on Wednesday evening, July 31, and presented them with a beautiful tri-light reflector lamp and magazine stand. During the past three years Mrs. Robinson has been a successful teacher at Carmel School.

Mr. John Patterson acted as chairman and speeches were made by him and Mr. Herbert Howes. Guitar music by Misses Evelyn and Ethel Fox was much enjoyed. Misses M. Waddell and Hazel Hicks sang a duet after which Mrs. Ben Clarke recited. Little Misses Jean Lattone and Jean Sills favoured with a duet. Miss Irene Haynes then read an address.

The address signed on behalf of the friends of Carmel—Mr. and Mrs. Carl Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Reynolds and Miss Irene Haynes.

Both the bride and groom replied after which "For They are Jolly Good Fellows" was sung. A lovely lunch of sandwiches, cakes, tarts and lemonade was served and a social time was enjoyed by all.

Pte. David Wellman Honored by Friends

Allan's Mills —About seventy-five friends gathered on Saturday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. David Wellmans, Bonarlaw, to honor their son, Private David Wellman. An address expressing the high esteem and good wishes of his friends was read by Elmer McInroy, signed on behalf of the community by Harold Stiles, Ernest Stiles and Kenneth McKeown. The presentation of a handsome wrist watch was made by Kenneth McKeown. A fitting reply was made by the guest of honor.

With Allan McComb as chairman, the interesting evening's program included addresses by a number of neighbors and instrumental selections by Phyllis Barlow and Mrs. Harold Styles.

A dainty lunch brought the happy occasion to a close.

Mr. Wm. Stiles Jr., of Chatham, spent the week end with his parents Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Stiles.

Dr. Lorne Wellman of Waterloo, and son, Marvin, of the Bank of Commerce, Bowmanville, are holidaying with Mr. and Mrs. D. Wellman ,while fishing on the Trent River on Thursday Mr. Marvin Wellman landed a muskellunge weighing 15 1-2 lbs.

Mr. Ken Reid of Montreal, spent the week end with Mrs. Reid and family.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Redden of Trent Bridge, spent Monday evening with Mr. and Mrs. D. Wellman.

Mrs. Gussie Stiles spent a couple of weeks in this vicinity.

Mrs. Thos. McKeown of Stirling, and Miss Grace Stuart of Windsor, spent a few days with Mr. John McKeown and family.

Miss Marjorie McKeown visited friends in Hamilton for a few days.

The McKeown picnic was held at Birds Beach on Monday over one hundred friends sat down to a sumptuous dinner provided by the ladies. The afternoon was spent in games, races and bathing.

GENERAL ELKINS APPOINTED TO ARMY COMMAND

Will Procede at Once to Coordinate Activities in Eastern Canada and Newfoundland.

CENTRAL CONTROL

Ottawa, Aug. 7—(CP)—New ramparts are being erected to ward off attack alike on the western end of Great Britain's main supply line and on Canadian soil.

Maj.-Gen. William H. P. Elkins will take over his new post as head of Canada's eastern military command within a week or 10 days and proceed at once to co-ordinate activities of all troops stationed in eastern Canada and nearby outposts.

Announcement of General Elkins' appointment was made Monday by Defence Minister Ralston just a week after decision to establish the Eastern Command.

The trend of events overseas will to some extent determine the degree to which the eastern extremeties of Canada are organized into a defence area as Great Britain is now organized.

The new command, however, will be responsible for the military defence of the three Maritime provinces, Newfoundland and the approaches to the St. Lawrence River, including Labrador, the Gaspe Peninsula and the north shore of the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

In that task, of course, it will share duties with the Royal Canadian Navy and the Royal Canadian Air Force.

Prior to the outbreak of war measures were taken to provide for the defence of Canada's eastern shores and key ports. Coast defence batteries were installed. Coast defence units were organized in the militia. With the outbreak of war these units were mobilized and now maintain a continuous watch by their guns.

The new command will bring these coastal defence establishments, units of the Non-permanent Active Militia and units of the Canadian Active Service Force in the area under a central control.

As units of the 3rd and 4th divisions, now training at various points in Canada complete their work they may be moved into the Command. Col. Ralston has stated these divisions are not required overseas at the moment.

Thus General Elkins will become the counterpart in Canada of Lieut. Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton who commands the Canadian Corps in the United Kingdom. He will be in charge of a body of fighting men organized in the manner most suitable for the defence of the far-flung territories for which he is responsible.

Gen. Elkins goes to his new command from the post of Master General of the Ordnance at National Defence headquarters. In that post he has been responsible for the equipment of Canada's military forces at home and overseas.

Lawn Tea Aids War Work Fund

Madoc — On Thursday afternoon the Women's Institute held a very successful lawn tea at the home of Mrs. Wesley Hulin. The home-cooking table was ably taken charge of by Mrs. Jesse Reed and Mrs. Kernahan. The hostess was assisted by Mrs. Carl McCoy in receiving the guests. Mrs. Finch was kept busy all afternoon with tea cup reading. A dainty lunch was served with the President, Mrs. B. L. Tanner pouring tea and Mesdames Tayler, Burris, Tosh, Beatty, C. Caverly, L. Ashley and Corrigal serving. The receipts of the afternoon were very gratifying and the money will be used for comforts for the soldiers.

On Thursday evening, the Trinity United Church choir, held a social evening at the home of Mrs. Hulin for one of its members, Miss Edna Salisbury, who is leaving Madoc to make her home in Toronto. The evening was spent in games and singing and a dainty lunch was served. Best wishes for Miss Salisbury in her new position was voiced by members of the choir.

On Friday evening a pleasant event took place at the home of Mrs. Grant Fraser, who entertained in honor of Miss Salisbury. Cards were enjoyed during the evening and after lunch Mrs. Hulin read an appropriate poem while Mrs. Robert Bristol presented Miss Salisbury with a travelling bag. Miss Salisbury leaves shortly for Toronto, where she has accepted a position.

GRACIE FIELDS SAYS SHE'S TIRED OF CRITICISM

Declares She And Her Italian Husband Were Entitled To Take Money Out of England

BRITISH M.P.'S CRITICIZE

Toronto, Aug. 7 (CP)—Gracie Fields, English singing comedienne, said last night in a telephone interview from North Bay with a Toronto newspaper that she is "sick and tired of this whole business" of criticism of her American tour and the fact that she and her Italian husband were allowed to take substantial sums of money from England.

(The names of Miss Fields and her Italian husband, Monty Banks, came before the British House of Commons yesterday when it was revealed they were allowed to take £28,000 as well as jewelry from England to the United States last fall.)

Miss Fields spent 20 minutes at the North Bay airport before leaving on the last leg of a journey to Toronto from Hollywood. She arrived in Toronto today and is scheduled to make a public appearance.

All Assets in England

"All my assets are in England," she said. "I don't know why I should be persecuted like this. Let the government look up their files. They will soon find out that I haven't taken everything out of the country. This is not the first time the matter has been brought up in parliament."

Asked about her husband, Miss Fields said Banks was an Italian subject but that "he didn't do anything wrong and neither did I."

"I have been working harder in the past few months than I ever have before and it hasn't been for myself," Miss Fields said. "I am getting sick of it. It is all so unpleasant.

"My home is in England. I intend to go back. I can't understand why I should be persecuted. Everything I have, and the same applies to my husband, is the government's whenever they want it."

Says Law Not Transgressed

The actress claimed that her husband at the time he took money out of England, was entitled to do so and in no way transgressed the law.

"I seem to have annoyed a lot of people by marrying an Italian," she said. "It was all right before the war. I haven't earned a penny for myself since the war started. I am disgusted with the whole thing. It is not fair.

"I have turned down several attractive offers to do this work. I don't blame Canada or the Canadian people for this unpleasantness. They have been wonderful to me."

Miss Fields is in America in connection with the war work. Several months ago she appeared at Valcartier military camp in Quebec and entertained the troops.

Substantial Assets In England

London, Aug. 7 (CP)—An accountant for Gracie Fields, Lancashire comedienne now in Canada, issued a statement today declaring that she had "substantial assets" in England.

The Navy League, meantime, reported that Miss Fields had arranged to give her services without a fee at 32 concerts from Vancouver to Halifax in aiding the League to supply comforts to the men of the British Navy.

A Treasury spokesman told the House of Commons yesterday that Miss Fields had not sought to take more than the regulation $50 when she went to the United States recently, but last fall she and her Italian husband, Monty Banks, took a total of about $112,000 out of the country with them.

J. J. Davidson, a Labor member, asked whether the Treasury knew that Miss Fields and Banks "left practically no assets in this country after enjoying its generosity for years."

(Today in Toronto Miss Fields declared that she and her husband had done nothing wrong, that most of her assets were in England and that she intended to return there.)

'ON THE SIDE OF THE ANGELS AGAINST LUCIFER'

Cardinal Hinsley in a broadcast to the British armed forces from London said on Monday, "You are on the side of the angels in the struggle against the pride of Lucifer."

Hitler's crowd of Nazis could not be on the side of the angels. Hitler's leading Nazis and his minor Nazis are supporters of a devastating creed, that of an all-conquering racialism which has caused this war. Without the vile doctrine of German nationalism and the carefully inculcated mad notions that the Germans are a race so much superior to the rest of the world that the rest of the world might well be wiped out, there could have been no war.

The Nazis have broken with all the restraining influences of civilization and have acted as a whirlwind to the smaller peoples who happened to be located in the path of the Huns. As nationalism could not go with religion, the Nazis placed chains about religion. And so it is with every one of the cultural values of life, the Nazis have destroyed them where they could.

But the Nazis cannot conquer souls. They bear the stain of the evil forces from which Nazism sprang, selfishness, violence, greed, slaughter. They are in very sense the henchmen of the principle of Lucifer as it is manifested in the German Nazis.

If ever arms were taken up in the defence of the finer things of life, the civilization and blessings that we know, it is today when the British people with what remains of the allies, stand up as the last bulwark in Europe against the Nazis, whose smear will be one of the darkest spots on the pages of history. In the future the world will probably look back and wonder why Europe endured the monstrosity of lack of principle which Nazism exemplifies and supports.

The enemy is on the side of evil. Those who fight for the maintenance of freedom are in every truth fighting on the side of the angels to down the evil forces which Nazism would make dominate the world if it could.

OUTSIDE BRITAIN AND ACROSS THE CHANNEL

Eleven months after starting the war, Adolf Hitler is outside England there to remain, blitzkrieg or no blitzkrieg. Never will his feet which have soiled the fair lands of Holland, Belgium, Poland, Czecho-Slovakia, France and Norway make an imprint on the earth of Albion. That is the land which Germany has barred against herself by her repacity and envy and spirit of revenge. It is Nazi madness which has made Britain strong and will make Germany weak.

In this land, bristling with defence, dwell the people who fear no Hitler as they feared no Napoleon in another day. They dwell there, strong and heroic because they are defending home and the right. Outside and from across the Channel the hungry enemy feeds his jealous eye.

Hitler stands where Napoleon stood 135 years ago and the waters of the Channel said to the little Corporal of the Eighteenth Century what it says to the little Corporal of the Twentieth Century, "Take your last look and be gone."

LOOTING NAZIS NOT BROTHERS' KEEPERS

The Nazi is a picture of absolute selfishness of greed and lust of power. The people that devastated France can only warn France which she has robbed that Germany cannot feed the French people. No one but a fool ever thought the Nazis would feed any but themselves. But the German is a perfect demonstration of the colossal madness of the Nazi regime.

Nazis will let the people go with scant food, even the peoples whom Germany has looted. Germany is not her brother's keeper. She is the looter of her neighbors.

AS BRITAIN'S WARPLANES GROW IN NUMBER

There was cheering news yesterday to those who see all staked on Britain's stalwart defence of the world. That news was that British airplane manufacture is proceeding at a rate which has caught up in monthly production with the Nazis and that in addition Britain is adding to her strength by buying war planes. With the acceleration which is taking place in the making of planes under Bord Beaverbrook, there is drawing nearer the inevitable day when the numerical strength of the Royal Air Force will overtake the total strength in numbers of the German force and then steadily pass it adding more and more machines until the enemy is far outstretched. That last period will be a great day for the nations now in the chains of the Huns and for expectant civilization for it will mean the beginning of the end of that oppression which has settled itself upon the world like a nightmare. The only thing Hitler could give the world be an intensified Nazidom of hate, greed, violence, cruelty, ruthlessness and that only if the Hun could win, but in the nature of things he cannot because the forces of justice are arraying themselves against him. That growth of opinion that the Hun must fail is steadily being manifested in most lands of the earth. The vastly superior Royal Air Force of the future will be a sign that the day is at hand when Hitler's vain attempt to seize the world he stands on will end in collapse of everything that is Nazi in spirit.

Other cheering news concerned the bombing reports. 33,431 British bombs were dropped in a month on German military targets and only 6,987 bombs of the Nazis were dropped on British territory. What does that show? No doubt superiority of British airmanship, the thoroughness which the enemy airmen lack, and superiority of machines used by the R. A. F. It no doubt also means that Britain can spare the bombs for the work it does is work that counts in wrecking the enemy's lifelines of transportation and that either Germany cannot spare so many or that she is keeping them in expectation of the order to raid, some seem to believe. More likely German bombs are less expertly dropped and inferior in make. Nazi planes are not so capable.

This is one of the elements of the great strength of the British. Other great factors in none of which Hitler has made a dint, are British economic and trade supremacy, the British army, and the Royal Navy and the serried ranks of the populace.

Auto Deaths Increase in U. S. 'War Jitters' Seen as Factor

Chicago. — Traffic fatalities throughout the United States during the first six months this year were 14,740, or 1,040 greater than for the same period last year, the National Safety Council reported. The increase was 8 per cent.

The council stated that June was the ninth consecutive month to show an increase over the same month of the preceding year, its jump of 15 per cent. being the greatest recorded since March, 1937.

"War jitters" and an increase of about 7 per cent. in vehicle mileage were cited by the council as factors responsible for the greater number of fatalities.

"Although the basic reasons are psychological, rather than physical, and cannot be accurately measured by accident reports," the council stated, "we believe that the nation's traffic habits reflect an attitude of recklessness, preoccupation and confusion of values growing out of the war in Europe. The traffic toll began to rise almost simultaneously with the outbreak of war and reached its peak in June, when France surrendered."

Twenty-four of forty reporting States recorded increases in traffic deaths for June, three had no change and thirteen had decreases. The largest increases were reported by Mountain and South Atlantic States, with 29 per cent and 20 per cent respectively. North Atlantic States showed a 19 per cent increase for June.

The smallest increase was in the North Central States, with 10 per cent. The Pacific States showed a decrease of 4 per cent.

At the end of May the 1940 death totals for sixteen of forty-two reporting States were lower than last year's comparable totals. With the addition of June the totals for only ten of forty reporting States continued to show decreases.

South Dakota fatalities were 23 per cent under 1939. Nebraska had 18 per cent fewer deaths. Vermont reported a 14 per cent reduction.

Among cities, those with 50,000 to 100,000 population had the poorest record in June, with a 32 per cent increase over the same month last year. Their six-month total was 22 per cent greater than last year.

Cities of more than 500,000 population came next, with a six-month increase of 11 per cent. These cities, however, showed only 1 per cent increase for June alone.

The best city records were made by those of 250,000 to 500,000 population. June deaths decreased 4 per cent and the six-month total was 2 per cent less than in 1939.

Of the 422 reporting cities, eighty-five showed decreases in fatalities in June, 242 showed no change and ninety-five had increases. For the six-month period, however, 153 cities had fewer deaths than last year, 100 had no change and 169 had increases.

There were no June deaths in 279 cities. Kansas City, Mo., with 412,600 population, was the largest of these. Three other cities with populations between 250,000 and 500,000, Rochester, Providence and Toledo, also had a fatality-free month.

At the end of June there were still 110 reporting cities which had no deaths in 1940. The largest was Lakewood, Ohio (population 75,400) followed by Atlantic City (68,800).

Boston had the lowest death rate of cities of more than 500,000 population, with cumulative rate of 9.9 per 100,000 population. Two months ago it was in third place. Buffalo moved to second place with a rate of 10.3, while St. Louis stayed in third place with 11.1, followed by New York City with 11.5.

Provdence was in first place among cities 250,000 to 500,000 population with a rate of 4.7, followed by Kansas City with 5.3.

Lynn, Mass., led cities of 100,000 to 250,000 population with a rate of only 1.9, the lowest for any city with more than 100,000 population. Worcester, Mass., and Hartford, Conn., were in second and third places.

Queen Elizabeth's Prayer in 1588

(New York Sun)

With assaults on their island kingdom of daily occurrence and the menace of invasion ever hanging over them, the British find time to turn back the pages of history and refresh themselves with sustaining spiritual fare from the past. It was in 1588 that Philip II of Spain sent against England the "Great Armada." Elizabeth ruled and according to the London Times she appealed to the Deity for aid in this prayer: "We do instantly beseech Thee of Thy gracious goodness, to be merciful to the Church militant here upon earth and at this time compassed about with most strong and subtle adversaries. O! let Thine enemies know that Thou hast received England which they most of all for Thy Gospel's sake do malign into Thine own protection. Set a wall about it, O Lord, and evermore mightily defend it. Let it be a comfort to the afflicted, a help to the oppressed, and a defence to Thy Church and people persecuted abroad. And, forasmuch as this cause is new in hand, direct, and go before our armies both by sea and land. Bless them and prosper them, and grant unto them honourable success and victory. Thou art our help and shield. O! give good and prosperous success to all those that fight this battle against the enemies of Thy Gospel." The Armada sailed and failed; the British today pray for deliverance from another peril.

Anniversary Of 'Britannia'

(New York Times)

A fortunate bit of collaboration between Thomas Arne, the composer, and James Thomson, author of "The Seasons," resulted two hundred years ago this month in the production of an opera, "The Masque of Alfred." David Mallet collaborated with Thomson on the libretto, but seems to have had nothing to do with the one song in it which was to survive. The song was "Rule, Britannia." One verse has special significance today:

Still more majestic shalt thou rise,
More dreadful from each foreign stroke;
As the loud blast that the skies
Serves but to root thy native oak.

English literature has quite a number of these sturdy songs, on the martial side but paying tribute to freedom. One thinks of those almost startling lines of Thomas Campbell in "Ye Mariners of England":

The meteor flag of England
Shall yet terrific burn.

But Campbell had his gentler moments, and Arne wrote the sensitively lovely music for many of Shakespeare's songs, including "Blow, blow, thou Winter wind."

If You Love A Dog

(Hamilton Spectator)

Dog lovers will remember this new story from England where some Canadians discovered, in a deserted village, a little canine cemetery where eight dogs had been buried by some long-gone friend of these faithful pets. Any one who has had a dog for a lengthy period, perhaps fifteen years, can enter into the feelings of any man who has lost, one after another, as many as eight; for successive losses of this kind almost amount to tragedy for the tender-hearted. The Canadian soldiers, who discovered the little graves and the weather-beaten stone, cleared away the weeds and planted flowers, so that now the inscription is more legible, to appeal to far-away dog lovers in other lands. It reads:

Good-bye—may he who next shall own
My garden spare this tiny stone
That marks the spot where trouble free
You sleep and dream, perchance of me.
I hope he will, yet wherefore fret,
We could not if we would, forget
Each other. When in turn the dark
Shall clear my eyes, your joyous bark
Will greet me, echoing to the sky—
Till then, dear loving hearts, good-bye.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Blood Pressure is Necessary

There was a time when a physician simply said 'Your blood pressure is a little high so you'd better rest a little more and eat a little less food". The patient followed this advice without asking questions. Today the patient figures out what he thinks his blood pressure should be—100 plus his age—and if it is higher than that he may become alarmed. Each time he visits his physician he wants his blood pressure read, and feels better or worse according to the reading of his blood pressure.

As a matter of fact, the blood pressure, as with the pulse rate, varies with the time of day, the food eaten or the work done. Excitement or anxiety can raise the blood pressure twenty points within a minute or two, just as shock or emotional disturbance may reduce it twenty points within the same time.

The first point to remember is that there must be "pressure" behind the blood to send it to distant parts of the body, and if enough pressure is not behind it the blood will not reach these parts in sufficient quantity to nourish the parts; in the brain—an uphill climb for blood—insufficient blood means fainting or collapse.

When the blood pressure gets too low to force the blood along, or so high that it bursts, or breaks through, a blood vessel, then the importance of a nearly normal or normal blood pressure becomes a matter of concern to most individuals.

However, instead of wondering about your blood pressure and whether it is too high or too low, your best plan is to consult your physician about twice a year for a check up of blood pressure, heart, and kidneys.

The systolic pressure as it is called, the pressure usually referred to, is when the heart is squeezing the blood out of the heart. The pressure is at its highest point. Yet it is the diastolic pressure, when heart is really resting, that is most important. If diastolic pressure is high with the heart not pumping behind the blood then real rest is necessary because this shows tenseness or hardening of the blood vessels throughout the body.

High blood pressure may be caused by infection, but if infection is not removed the blood vessels finally become weary, and low blood pressure follows.

5th CENTURY CULTURE EVIDENCE FOUND IN HONDURAS JUNGLES

The story of exploring hitherto unknown land in the Mosquitia Territory of Honduras and of discovering evidences of gold, silver, platinum and oil deep in jungles inhabited only by Indians, was told by Theodore A. Morde on his return to New York City from a five-month trip through the Mosquitia Territory. Mr. Morde, with Laurence Brown, served as co-leader of the third Honduras expedition of the Museum of the American Indian (Heye Foundation), at Broadway and 155th Street.

Mr. Morde said the expedition also had discovered evidences of a thriving agricultural civilization, that of the Chorotegans, which probably was contemporary with that of the Mayan Indians. He brought several thousand examples of Chorotegan art, which, he said, date back to the fifth and sixth centuries. These art objects, which will become the property of the Museum of the American Indian, include sculptured religious idols, stone household utensils, a six-tone flute and primitive razor blades.

Civilization Wiped Out

Mr. Morde said evidence indicated that the Chorotegan civilization had been wiped out by some major catastrophe. Only the small tribe of Paya Indians remains. The Payas, with the Sumu and Miskito Indians, are the only modern inhabitants of this rich agricultural land, he added.

Their lives and habits had been unknown even to the Honduran Government, Mr. Morde said, until the American expedition started its long journey in native pitpans (forty-foot wooden canoes). All information gathered by the expedition will be made available to the government and the National Geographic Society which cooperated as sponsor for the trip.

Among the rarities brought back by Mr. Morde is the only known specimen of the "Sacred Bird of the Chorotegans," a bird with a sunburst pattern in its plumage which the ornithologist of the National Museum of Honduras was unable to identify. Mr. Morde said the bird had been kept by the expedition since it was found as a fledgling after one member of the party had shot the male parent in a search for food. The killing of the father bird was looked upon as "horrible" by the superstitious Payas, Mr. Morde said. Ornithologists in this country will attempt to identify the bird.

A major objective of the expedition was to discover the "Lost City of the Monkey God." Mr. Morde said the city was found and that an expedition would return to it next January to commence excavation.

"A big part of our job," he continued, "was charting rivers and streams which no white man had ever traversed before. We even had to name several of the rivers."

Indian Culture Primitive

Mr. Morde described the Indians living in the territory as "extremely primitive." "Their culture," he said, "is that of the wood age. Everything, including needles, thread, and cooking utensils, is made of wood. Such stone implements as they have, come from the earlier civilization of the territory."

The expedition lived under native conditions, traveling only by boat with the help of Suma guides. Stopping in the Miskito Indian village of Avas Ducban, they came upon an outbreak of the black water fever (an advanced form of malaria) which Mr. Morde stopped by injections of American medicine.

He forecast that the territory, which is in Southern Honduras, soon would be opened to commercial use. Besides the silver, platinum and gold, samples of which were brought here, Mr. Morde reports the discovery of fertile farm land and flat areas which might be used as air bases. He said it was impossible to estimate the oil possibilities, but "there is definitely evidence of oil-bearing land."

Britain is Ready to Buy 'Hundreds of Millions of Dollars' of U.S. Tanks, Guns

Arthur B. Purvis, British Purchasing Agent, Tells Reporters at Washington Britain Seeking Many Types of Supplies Not Previously Purchased In the U. S.—New Program Is For Material For Some Time In Future

Washington, Aug. 7 (AP)— The British government started negotiations here today for "hundreds of millions of dollars" of tanks, artillery, and other war supplies in addition to all previous Allied orders.

Arthur B. Purvis, chief British purchasing agent, who presented the program to Treasury Secretary Henry Morgenthau, told reporters that his government now is seeking the purchase of many types of supplies not previously purchased in the United States. He emphasized tanks and field artillery.

Britain previously bought some old artillery that the United States had left over from the first Great War, but the new program is for new weapons.

Purvis declined to estimate to what figure the new program might expand total British purchases in the United States, but previous purchases, mostly airplanes, amounted to well over $1,000,000,000.

He explained that the new program is for material to be delivered a considerable time in the future.

He indicated that previous purchases had been made, to a large extent, on the basis of immediate needs, and that new programs are being shaped on anticipated future needs.

Col. Burns Appointed Special Assistant To Maj. Gen. Crerar

Ottawa, Aug. 7 (AP)—Col. E. L. M. Burns, formerly General Staff Officer, first grade, at Canadian military headquarters in London has been appointed special assistant to Major-General H. D. G. Crerar, chief of the general staff, Defence Minister Ralston announced today.

He returned recently from England, shortly after General Crerar came back to become chief of the general staff. While in England, Col. Burns worked closely with General Crerar in organizing and establishing the Canadian headquarters.

He had been appointed G.S.O. I. with the 2nd. Division, Canadian Active Service Force, but the appointment was switched and he will remain in Ottawa.

Col. Burns is one of the younger men holding key positions in Canada's growing military organization. Although only 43, he has had long and varied military career, including service in the first Great War.

Born at Westmount, Que., he was educated at Lower Canada College, Montreal, and the Royal Military College, Kingston, Ont.

He served in France and Belgium from August, 1916, to April, 1919, and was wounded. For services rendered he was awarded the Military Cross.

Canada Gets Class "D" Destroyer to Replace the Fraser

Ottawa, Aug. 6. (CP)—H.M.C.S. Margaree, latest addition to Canada's Navy, is a Class "D" destroyer and not one of the tribal class, it was learned today at naval headquarters.

The Margaree is replacing the H.M.C.S. Fraser, lost in evacuation operations off Bordeaux, France. A naval spokesman said yesterday when the announcement was made that the new vessel was of the tribal class but this was in error.

Tribal class destroyers are larger than the "D" class ships. The Margaree, as one of the latter type, has a tonnage of 1,375 tons, a complement of 145 officers and men and an armament consisting of four 4.7 inch guns six smaller guns and eight 21 inch torpedo tubes.

Rumors Heard Of Ship Sinking Unconfirmed

New York, Aug. 7 (AP)—Unconfirmed reports in shipping circles here said today that the British motorship passenger liner Accra, 9,337 tons, had been sunk off the Irish coast, en route to Canada. These reports said that the ship was torpedoed when three days off the English coast.

(There was no confirmation from British sources.)

Last Thursday MacKay Radio picked up an SOS from an unidentified ship saying she had been torpedoed about 400 miles off the Irish coast. Nothing more was heard after the original report.

The Accra traded between England and Africa before the war, but like most English passenger liners she was taken over by the Admiralty.

Montreal, Aug. 7 (CP)—Elder Dempster Lines, owners of the British motorship passenger liner Accra, reported sunk off the Irish coast, said today they had received no reports that the Accra was en route to Canada nor that she had been sunk. As far as they knew the Accra was still operating between Liverpool and the West Coast of Africa.

GENERAL COUNCIL OF UNITED CHURCH TO MEET SEPT. 11

Toronto, Aug. 7—(CP)—Rev. Dr. Gordon A. Sisco, Secretary of the General Council of the United Church of Canada, announced today the General Council will open meetings to last at least a week in Winnipeg Sept. 11.

An attendance of 268 commissioners, including an equal number of ministers and non-ministerial members, is expected.

Among matters to be discussed will be ministerial salaries, recruits for the ministry, finances of the church and urban problems.

Election of a new moderator to succeed Rt. Rev. Dr. John W. Woodside of Ottawa will take place the first night of the meeting. Already nominated for the post are:

Rev. Dr. J. C. Cochrane, Superintendent of Northern Ontario Missions, North Bay; Rev. Dr. Charles Endicott, Secretary of the Missionary and Maintenance Committee, Toronto; Rev. J. W. Falconer, Pine Hill Divinity Hall, Halifax; Rev. Dr. E. Crossley Hunter of Hamilton; Rev. Dr. A. D. MacKenzie of Regina; Rev. Dr. P. T. Pilkey, Winnipeg; Rev. Dr. A. S. Tuttle, Principal of St. Stephen's College, Edmonton and Rev. Dr. W. Harold Young, Toronto. Others may be nominated at the meeting.

The War Today

By Guy Rhoades

Canadian Press Staff Writer

The battle of Britain smouldered today but the battle of Africa burst into action which experts believe will bring early successes to the Italians, but final victory to the British and Egyptians.

Benito Mussolini, forgetting a recent promise nto to attack Egypt, sent his forces from Libya against the ancient kingdom, but Egyptian authorities said the only Italian soldiers on their soil were several hundred prisoners.

Mussolini ordered roughly 500,000 Italian and native troops into three operations, against Egypt, against Kenya Colony and against British Somaliland. The Egyptian campaign was considered the really important one for its success would threaten the Suez Canal toward which the Duce has shown covetousness ever since he embarked on the policy of an "Italian" Mediterranean.

In the Egyptian campaign Italy has 250,000 men commanded by Marshal Rodolfo Graziani. Opposing these is a smaller British force composed for the most part of veteran desert warriors and commanded by Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell who has fought campaigns in India, Egypt, Palestine and Trans-Jordan.

The British force is highly mobile, possessed of high striking power, and it controls the water supply for the battle zone.

Mussolini, as usual, omitted the formality of declaring war before striking at a country which had remained non-belligerent, if not neutral. The Egyptian army, trained and armed by Britain, presumably now will be called upon to fight.

Tough Going Seen For Duce's Men

The Italians probably will find soon that they have a tough proposition on their hands. It is their job to attack while the British fight an offensive defence, harrying them, breaking their supply lines and communications and cutting off their water supply.

Lack of water probably will give the Italian army in the desert as much trouble as anything. Both men and engines need more water in a land where the temperature rockets from the chill 40's of night time to the blazing 120's of noon.

To Mussolini the new campaign may be one of desperation to seek the products of the rich Nile, once the granary for ancient Rome, and the metals and fibres he needs to run his war machine.

If he should win he would win a lot and Britain would lose greatly, perhaps having to surrender her control of the Near East altogether. The would mean loss of the Persian Gulf oil supplies, loss of influence in Turkey and loss of prestige in the Orient—to the advantage of Japan.

However, strategists are confident Britain will not lose.

Besides the whole Mohammedan world dislikes the Nazi-Fascist doctrine of racialism and conquest and now Mussolini has tossed an armful of fuel onto that smouldering fire.

He has attacked without warning the world's leading independent Mohammedan country.

Rome Communique

Rome, Aug. 7 (AP)—Today's Italian communique:

"Our air formations have bombed the oil centre of Haifa (Palestine) for the third time, setting fire to more gasoline tanks and hitting the port works. All our planes returned. According to news from reliable sources fires caused by the first bombardment of Haifa lasted several days. The shell refinery was destroyed in the second bombardment.

(A dispatch from Jerusalem said damage caused in the raid on Haifa was slight.)

"In North Africa, enemy encampments south of Sollum and the Alexandria-Mersa Matruh railway were bombed. An English four-motored plane of the Sunderland type was shot down by our chasers in front of Tobruk and the crew, composed of three officers and eight men, were taken prisoner. In East Africa the air and naval bases of Aden and Berbera were effectively bombed and an enemy plane was shot down.

(These claims were not confirmed from British sources.)

"Our columns have crossed the British Somaliland frontier at several points."

(British sources said the Italians are expected to advance a short distance into British territory in this operation.)

TAINTED FLOUR CAUSES ILLNESS

Peterborough, Ont., Aug. 7 (CP)—Members of the family of William Darling of Dummer township, are reported making good recovery today from illness traced to tainted flour. Nearly a dozen persons became ill and considered their ailment of mysterious origin until they noticed a dog became ill after eating a piece of home-made bread.

It is believed the flour used in making the bread was contaminated by the container in which it was kept. A sample of the flour has been sent away for analysis.

COMMONS SITS UNTIL 1.30 A. M.

Last Minute Drive To End Session Finds House Approving $120,000,000 Estimates

By C. R. BLACKBURN

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Aug. 7—(CP)—After a sitting of 14 1-2 hours, with time out for meals, the House of Commons adjourned shortly before 1.30 a.m. EDT today with the sessional program completed. Only the formalities of royal assent to government bills remains before adjournment at noon until Nov. 5.

In a last minute drive to end the session, the House approved estimates amounting to $120,000,000 in the last 5 1-2 hours of the sitting. The $12,000,000 estimate of the Revenue Department went through in about one minute.

Because of the war Prime Minister Mackenzie King decided some days ago that prorogation would not take place. Rather parliament will stand ready to be summoned at any time between now and Nov. 5 if circumstances warrant, but will meet in any event on that date.

If, at that time, the government is ready to proceed with a lengthy program, parliament will be immediately prorogued and meet again on the following Thursday for the second regular session. Otherwise it will deal with what business has accumulated in the three months' recess and prorogue to meet again early in 1941 for the regular session.

Supply Bill Dealt With by Senate

Twice yesterday the Senate, with all its visible work completed, met to deal with the last measure from the Commons—the supply bill—and finally adjourned until 12 o'clock today.

Mr. King thanked members for their co-operation in sitting long hours during the past fortnight. Then the House adjourned until 12.15 o'clock to await the call to the Senate to witness royal assent. The Senate will approve the Supply Bill, final act of the Commons, containing the $450,000,000 of appropriations approved late Saturday, Monday and yesterday, for carrying on the ordinary business of government.

These appropriations are in addition to the $700,000,000 voted early in the session to cover war costs for the current fiscal year.

Feature of the last working hours of the House was a division in Committee of Supply in which the government found themselves voting with the minority. This was on an item in Finance Minister Ilsley's estimates to grant an annuity of $1,500 a year to Georges Gonthier, retired auditor-general.

Mr. Gonthier was retired about a year ago under legislation requiring him to go on superannuation at the age of 70. His civil service superannuation amounts to about $4,750 a year. For 16 years he has received a salary of $15,000 a year.

Mr. Ilsley advised the House that while the government would vote for this grant, members of the House were not to look upon it as a government measure and to vote as they wished.

The minister said the item was placed in the estimates because Mr. Gonthier had been engaged in the belief that he was appointed for life and that he claimed, at least, he should have been allowed to remain in office until he was 75 when his pension would have been $1,500 a year more than if he retired at 70. The government supported him in this.

Dr. J. J. McCann (Lib. Renfrew) declared it would be "an outrage of public justice" to make this grant. The tenor of debate was that Mr. Gonthier had been drawing a high salary for many years and the fact he had contributed to the civil superannuation fund indicated his acceptance of the truth that his appointment was not for life.

Bruce McNevin (Lib. Victoria, Ont.) moved an amendment to reduce the grant to $1 a year, the formal method of nullifying a vote in the estimates. It was carried by a counting of heads, 36 to 27.

Mr. King 21 Years Party Leader

Close of the session comes on the 21st anniversary of Mr. King's selection as leader of the Liberal party. He was chosen at the Liberal convention held in Ottawa 21 years ago today.

While the Prime Minister has, of necessity, been out of the House for much of the session, he was present with seven of his Ministers when the final vote was taken on the Gonthier item.

The relief situation in Vancouver is "next to desperate" and "very likely to lead to trouble unless something is done," Angus MacInnis, (CCF-Vancouver East) said during consideration of the Labor Department estimates.

Drastic relief regulations, Mr. MacInnis said, cut single men off entirely in larger centres and some married men with families were being struck off the rolls.

He protested that while great numbers were unemployed, industries were working long hours of overtime. He thought there should be greater division of available work. Employers should be made to register needs for men with government employment offices.

Labor Minister McLarty said it was his belief that until all unemployed were absorbed no workers should be asked or allowed to work longer than normal hours.

Recomendations Made Law

All recommendations of the Special Commons Committee on Defence of Canada Regulations are to be carried into effect, Justice Minister Lapointe told the House. He said he had recommended they be made into law without any exception.

Howard Green, (Con.-Vancouver South), who questioned the Minister, said he believed the government should revert to the former custom of having a Solicitor General as well as a Justice Minister so that one Minister could devote himself to Defence of Canada Regulations.

Any suggestions would be studied carefully, Mr. Lapointe said but even if a Solicitor-General were appointed the responsibility under the Defence of Canada Regulations would still rest uopn the Minister.

Defence of Canada Regulations

The report of the Defence of Canada Regulations Committee was presented to the House of Commons Aug. 1 and recommended that British subjects of German or Italian origin, naturalized after Sept. 1, 1922, will be required to register along with enemy aliens. At present such persons must register only if naturalized after Sept. 1, 1929.

The committee also said court hearings on applications for naturalization by enemy aliens should be stopped and recommended regular reports to parliament on the number of persons interned and an amendment to the regulations to preserve the rights of persons engaged in lawful strikes.

WEYGAND'S SON RETURNS TO HOME

Walks 300 Miles From Nazi Camp To "Free" Territory

(By Lloyd Lehrbas)

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Vichy, France, Aug. 7.—(AP)—Capt. Jacques Weygand, son of General Maxime Weygand, arrived here today after escaping from his German captors in Northern France and walking nearly 300 miles before crossing into "free" territory.

Weygand, who fought with the forces his father commanded, resumed his duties at the war office immediately upon arrival.

He is only one of thousands of fighting men drifting back to receive a welcome from parents or wives who had given them up for dead.

The fate of many others is being learned belatedly with the publication of long delayed casualty lists and the names of those now held in German prison camps.

Mms. Francois Pietri, wife of the Communications Minister learned that her son, Lt. Edmond Carrachin is a prisoner in German-occupied territory.

As the Germans said they will permit her to visit him she is one of the first women who will attempt to go to prison camps in Northern France to comfort sons and husbands who must wait until a Treaty of Peace is signed to obtain their freedom.

The fate of the bearers of many famous French names, including descendants of Napoleon's marshals, was disclosed in the first trickle of authentic information.

Prince Paul Murat, a descendant of the King of Naples and a cavalry officer at the start of the war, was reported imprisoned at Montereau.

The Duc D'Albufera, a descendant of Marshal Suchet and an officer of Dragoons, was listed as a German prisoner. His brother, Count Napoleon D'Albufera escaped.

Count De Vogue, son-in-law of Count Vladimir D'Ormesson, French Ambassador to the Vatican, was reported killed in action. His father, Count Charles De Vogue, was killed in the last war.

Count Stanislaus D'Herbemont is a prisoner of war in Germany and Viscount D'Allieres, whose mother was an American, was seriously wounded in a mine explosion.

Trenton and District

32 Recruits Join H. Q. Company H. and P. E. Regiment

Trenton, Aug. 7—Thirty-two recruits were taken on the strength Tuesday night with Headquarters Company of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, now stationed here. The recruits were accepted at Frankford and Stirling, where platoons are being formed to be connected with the local company.

Major Angus Mowat announced that strength of Headquarters Company will be approximately 250 after the medical examination is held tonight.

Drill nights have been changed from three nights a week to two nights a week, according to orders from Regimental Headquarters. Formerly drill was held on Monday, Wednesday and Friday nights, but now the drills have been changed to Tuesday and Thursday nights. Voluntary drills for the N.C.O.'s will be held on Monday and Wednesday nights.

John Grahame White

A large number of friends attended the funeral of the late ex-Sergeant John Grahame White, held from the Northey Funeral Home, Tuesday afternoon.

The late Mr. White served on the Trenton police force for sixteen years before retiring due to ill health in 1935. He died in the Toronto General Hospital, on Sunday, August 4th., after nearly six years of ill-health.

Rev. J. L. Hutcheson, of St. George's Anglican Church, conducted the service at the church and at St. George's cemetery.

Honorary pall bearers were: Special Agent Fred Chapman, of the Canadian National Railways police; Chief William Bain, Trenton; Constable Frank Lozo, Trenton; retired Constable John Miller, Trenton; Councillor Hugh O'Rourke; Councillor Henry LaFleur; ex-Councillor George LaBrashe.

The pall bearers were: Sergt. Walter Probert, Trenton; Sergt. Arthur Booth, Belleville; Sergt. S. Hunter, O.P.P., Belleville; Corp. Wheeler, R.C.A.F. Military Police; Constable Jack Taylor and Constable D. Ellis, Belleville. Traffic Officer J. Hatch provided motorcycle escort.

Home Defence Volunteers Display Splendid Progress in Route March

Arms and legs swinging in unison with the precision of soldiers of long training, officers and members of the Argyll Light Infantry (Tank) swung along city streets in an extended route march Tuesday night to the martial strains of their own regimental bands.

The shirt-sleeved volunteers, who are rapidly rounding into shape, elicited the admiration of sidewalk spectators as they marched along Bridge Street to Bleecker Avenue to Victoria and by a circuitous route to the parade grounds at the Collegiate campus and the Armouries.

Evidence of adaptability to military training and the ability of their instructors was seen on the fine appearance of the raw recruits of a few weeks ago. Like veterans they wheeled at the various intersections with scarcely a rank being out of line. Eyes straight to the front, their feet keeping time to the skirling pibrochs of the Belleville Pipe Band and the blare of Argyll Lifht Infantry brass band, the men presented a fine appearance to the crowds that lined city thoroughfares and streets to watch them pass.

Detachment Canadian Airmen Have Long Ocean Voyage Aboard French Aircraft Carrier Bearn

(Frank Flaherty)

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Aug. 7.—(CP)— The tragedy of the fall of France has a special meaning for Squadron Leader Adelard Raymond of Montreal and a detachment of airmen of the Royal Canadian Air Force. Recently returned to Canada from Martinique, they were aboard the French Aircraft Carrier Bearn as that ship roamed the Atlantic seeking a safe French port of entry while German forces over-ran the Homeland.

The Bearn sailed from an East Coast Canadian port for Brest, loaded with American aircraft ready for action in the battle of France. Squadron Leader Raymond was in command of a party of more than 100 airmen who loaded the aircraft which were flown or shipped from the United States.

With a smaller detachment of men he sailed on the Bearn to assist in servicing the aircraft and to instruct the French airmen in their operation and servicing.

He told the story of the Atlantic odyssey to The Canadian Press in an exclusive interview today.

Throughout the long voyage and during their stay at Martinique, the Canadians received excellent treatment and every courtesy from the French. There was never a suggestion that they be interned on the island and the French authorities raised no objection to their departure when a British warship arrived to pick them up.

16 Days at Sea

"We were 16 days at sea aboard the "Bearn," said Squadron Leader Raymond. "We left an east coast Canadian port for Brest but when word of the Dunkerque disaster was received we were re-routed to Bordeaux.

"When Bordeaux fell a day before we were due to arrive, our destination was changed to Casa Blanca in Morocco where our French friends firmly believed, they would be able to continue the fight on French soil. They were thrilled at the prospect and drank toasts to the battles to come."

Later the Bearn received orders to proceed to Martinique and turned back westwards. Throughout the trip the Bearn was accompanied by a powerful French cruiser which, along with other vessels of the French fighting fleet, is now at Martinique.

The arrival at Martinique was far from the last of the ocean travels of the Canadian airmen. The British cruiser took them only to a British island in the West Indies where they caught another ship which took them further and they had a number of stops and changes of ship before they finally reached a Canadian port. Squadron Leader Raymond changed ship no fewer than 14 times but the other members of the party had fewer changes.

The Canadian Air Force party was loaned to the French government to assist in the transport of American built aircraft. The Bearn was to ferry aircraft across the Atlantic and that was her first trip.

Dropped Depth Charges

While no hostile craft were seen on the voyage the Bearn dropped depth charges once when submarines were reported in the vicinity and the Canadian airmen manned the anti-aircraft guns ready for a possible air attack.

A veteran flier, Squadron Leader Raymond served in the Royal Flying Corps in the first Great War. Later he operated his own commercial air service in Montreal and prior to the outbreak of the present hostilities was Officer Commanding No. 118 bomber squadron of the auxiliary air force.

When war broke out his squadron was assigned to duty in the Maritime Provinces and took part in the patrolling of Canadian coastal waters.

He is a brother of Senator Donat Raymond of Montreal.

BRITISH VICTORY NECESSARY TO FREE BELGIUM

U. S. Minister Cudahy Says Also There Is No Antagonism Toward Britain In Belgium

ARE IN TIGHT SPOT

London, Aug. 7—(CP)—The common people of Belgium are "almost unanimous in believing that a victory of the British is their only hope of salvation," John Cudahy, United States Minister in Brussels before and during the German invasion, declared today.

Amplifying statements made yesterday in an interview, which drew criticism in the British Press, Mr. Cudahy said "There is no antagonism toward the British in Belgium."

"Naturally many large industrialists are trying to orient themselves to the new order," he explained. "But they are facing realities and have no other choice. However, I do not say that any of these are pro-German. They are just people in a tight spot."

Diplomatic sources in London, commenting guardedly on the minister's statement that the Nazis had committed no atrocities in Belgium, said: "Of course Mr. Cudahy speaks only of the period when he was in Belgium. The diplomatic corps was withdrawn July 15. There has been no word from Belgium since."

WEDDINGS

BYGOTT—WOODS

A quiet wedding was solemnized in St. Thomas Chapel, on Saturday, when Grace Woods, daughter of Mr. A. A. Woods, Cobourg, became the bride of Lieutenant John P. Bygott, only son of Major and Mrs. J. M. Bygott of Campbellford. The wedding was solemnized by Rev. A. [illegible]auchamp Payne. Mrs. C. E. [illegible]sulter of Port Hope, was her sister's only attendant and Mr. J. J. Lewis assisted the groom. Lieutenant and Mrs. Bygott will reside in Campbellford.

CHRISTOPHER—WILSON

A quiet wedding was solemnized on Saturday at Bayside United Church parsonage, when Audrey Ellen, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wilson was united in marriage to Frederick Sylvester, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Christopher. Reverend W. E. Mercer officiated.

The bride looked lovely in a street length dress of dusky rose sheer, white picture hat and other white accessories.

Mr. Albert Christopher, brother of the groom, was best man.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, Trent Road.

The bride and groom left later on a short wedding trip to Niagara Falls and points west, and upon their return will reside in Belleville.

DUMINIE—KELLEY

A pretty mid-summer wedding took place yesterday morning at St. Michael's Church at eight-thirty when Mercedes (Teddy), youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Kelley, became the bride of Mr. Douglas Duminie, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Duminie. The ceremony was performed by Rt. Rev. J. F. Nicholson, V.G.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was charming in turquoise sheer with square lace neckline, lace-bordered sleeves, the lovely lines of the gown enhanced with lace panels in the back and front of the skirt. She wore a picture hat of white eyelet embroidery matching accessories, and corsage of Briarcliffe roses.

Miss Doris Duminie was bridesmaid and wore a Lucerne blue crepe dress, white picture hat and accessories with corsage of Briarcliffe roses. Mr. James Belair was groomsman.

Following the ceremony wedding breakfast was served at the New Queen's Hotel. Mrs. Kelley, mother of the bride, wearing rose sheer, with navy hat and accessories and corsage of sweetpeas and lilies of the valley and Mrs. Duminie, mother of the groom, attired in powder blue sheer with black and white picture hat and corsage of sweetpeas and lilies of the valley, received with the bride and groom.

Later, Mr. and Mrs. Duminie left on a wedding trip to Muskoka Lakes and Northern Ontario, the bride travelling in dove gray Sanchilla crepe with contrasting hat in lake blue. Upon their return they will reside in Belleville.

A pretty wedding took place on Saturday morning at St. Michael's Church, when Thelma Ann Marie, daughter of Mrs. Mary and the late H. A. Wasmund of Hybla, became the bride of Vincent Goldie, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Fitzgibbon of this city. Rt. Rev. J. F. Nicholson V.G., officiated.

The bride looked charming in a street length frock of dusky rose with blue redingote, blue turban and white accessories. She wore a corsage of Talisman roses and sweetpeas.

Miss Rosila Murphy acted as bridesmaid wearing a powder blue dress with white accessories. She wore a corsage of pink roses and sweetpeas.

Mr. Edward Fitzgibbon attended his brother as groomsman.

A reception was held at the home of the groom's mother, who received in a gown of dark mauve with a corsage of white and mauve sweet peas.

After the reception the happy couple left on a motor trip to points west. On their return they will reside in Belleville.

BAY OF QUINTE INSTITUTE

Mrs. O. Ketcheson held a Red Cross tea at her home on Friday afternoon of last week in connection with the Bay of Quinte Women's Institute. The day was all that could be expected. The spacious verandah gave much pleasure to the guests who enjoyed the outdoor air. Mrs. Frost was at the table of home-made cooking and candy. A bean guessing contest was won by Mrs. Fred Wilson. Mrs. D. Carr and Mrs. C. Stickle looked after the tea cup reading which created much merriment. Mrs. Ritchie Ketcheson welcomed the guests. Mrs. P. Bolton invited the guests to the dining room. Mrs. Fred Aikens and Mrs. Fred Wilson poured tea. Miss Margaret Reid and Miss Rhoda Hunt assisted in serving. Little Miss Barbara Carr and Miss Jean Sandercock who looked charming in their red bandeaus and Red Cross badges also assisted in a very helpful manner. Mrs. Fred Carr, treasurer reported a total of $16.60 realized. All returned to their homes happy for the social hour spent together for this worthy purpose.

FOXBORO W.M.S.

The August meeting of the W.M.S. was held on Thursday afternoon in the S.S. rooms. The theme was "The Stewardship of Life" and the President, Mrs. Priest, gave the central thought "As we devote a portion of our income, cheerfully and systematically to the extension of the Kingdom of God, we recognize our stewardship. After singing a hymn various themes for meditation were given by Miss A. Clarke, Mrs. H. Kilpatrick, Mrs. F. Spencer, Mrs. S. C. Gay, and Mrs. E. Tummon and a beautiful prayer of consecration to the Master's Service was given by the president followed by prayers for peace, friends, enemies and missionaries by Mrs. J. G. Sills and Mrs. W. Hodgen.

The treasurer reported and heralds for Canada, Korea and Trinidad reported.

Mrs. J. W. Daniels then sang a beautiful solo "Beautiful Story of Love" followed by an interesting reading by Mrs. S. C. Gay, stressing the fact that all men are brothers with one Father. The meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

CANNIFTON W.M.S.

The August meeting of Cannifton W.M.S. was held in the Sunday School rooms. The President, Mrs. Mills occupied the chair and opened the meeting by singing a hymn. Mrs. Armstrong assisted with the Worship Service by reading the Scripture which referred to the "Stewardship of Thankfulness".

Mrs. Empson, the treasurer, reported that so far this year $85.00 had been sent to the Presbyterial.

A letter of thanks was received from Mrs. Campbell.

Plans were started for the convention which is to be held in Cannifton in October. Another chapter of the Study Book was well reviewed by Mrs. A. Loucks. The meeting was closed with the Mispah Benediction.

The Stars Say

For Wednesday, August 7

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

A MODERATELY successful day, with certain rather surprising developments probably in connection with contracts, litigation, insurance or bequests. And yet there are possibilities of loss, reverses, extravagance or heavy expenditures. Be practical about this, or the benefits may ooze through the fingers. Also safe-guard the health and that of the family, especially elderly females. Do not run counter to elders or superiors. Use discretion or diplomacy.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a rather successful year, with the interests centered on new contracts, insurance or probable conservatism and wise judgment, lest the good fortune slip away through extravagance or self-indulgence. Use finesse when dealing with superiors or elders and safeguard the welfare of the latter.

A child born on this day should be endowed with many social graces and talents, being artistic, idealistic, congenial and affable, but pleasure-loving.

For Thursday, August 8

A MODERATELY active and successful state of affairs is read from interesting astral influences. The mind will vibrate to a high pitch of novelty and ingenuity, with the probability of new and strange adventures in which employers or those of financial influence will be disposed to take a generous hand. Nevertheless, there are some indications of disappointment, loss of reversals. And a tendency to be lavish in expenditures should be subdued. Taking a bold chance might prove hazardous.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a moderately successful year if they will be determined about big business coups, either in speculation or perilous investments. No time for gambling, although the mind will be strongly bent in the direction of audacious spending, especially in projects of novelty or boldly constructive efforts or inventions.

BABY'S
TEETHING UPSETS QUICKLY CHECKED
YOUR BABY must "get a tooth". But he need not get a fever with it—if baby's mother is wise he won't.
Here is what one wise mother, Mrs. Archie Beghie, of Consecon, has to say: "We have not lost one night's rest through teething as I always use my old standby, Baby's Own Tablets. They are worth their weight in gold."
And Mrs. B. A. Sebine, of Galt, Ont., says: "I have given Baby's Own Tablets to my baby girl since she was three weeks old and, although she cut her teeth rapidly (all four molars at once) she has never yet wakened us at night. I would not be without these tablets."
Give these safe, sweet-tasting tablets at the first sign of teething fever. Easy to take, prompt in action, yet safe. Analyst's certificate in every package.
Also effective in Constipation, Simple Fever, Diarrhoea, Upset Stomach, Colic, Simple Croup and Fretfulness. Get a box today. Sickness so often strikes in the night. 25 cents. Money back if you are not satisfied.

TRY A LITTLE "MAKE-UP"
When you have a homely meat pie
AN EXTRA TOUCH of flavour can change the homeliest meat pie into a most delectable dish for luncheon or supper. Give your own pies this flavour appeal by adding a spoonful or so of H. P. Sauce to the meat just before you pop on the top crust. You'll have the grandest flavour in your pie and everyone will thoroughly enjoy it.
Many other dishes besides meat pies need a little making up in flavour in order to lift them above the commonplace. This is where H. P. Sauce can be of valuable service to you. Use this thick, fruity sauce from England in your cooking: Serve it with meats, fish, fowl, macaroni and cheese dishes and many other foods.

BRITISH WOMEN, BY HUNDREDS, JOIN DEFENCE CORPS

Amazons Defence Corps Units Springing Up All Over U. K.

WILL DEFEND HOMES

By GLADYS ARNOLD
Canadian Press Correspondent

London, Aug. 7 (CP)—"The female of the species is deadlier than the male . . ."

The faces of some 400 women following in sober earnest the instructions of Captain Field, ex-serviceman and crack shot, at a meeting of the Amazons Defence Corps in London, expressed the determination of British women to prove the poet more than right.

Hundreds of A.D.C. units are springing up all over the United Kingdom at the call of Mrs. Venetie Foster, an expert markswoman.

"And why not," she declared. "At the moment I'm sure there isn't a woman in Britain who isn't fully conscious of what Hitler's success would mean to her family. We may imagine the maternal instinct of defence of her children is a little lost under the veneer of civilization laid down in the past few centuries But the thought of having our children mentally and morally destroyed as has been the youth of Germany arouses every fighting instinct in womanhood."

The new organization is classless and non-partisan. There are titled women and women from the humblest parts of the East End of London. They range in age from 16 to 65 and each woman at the meeting returned home to form further units. Hand - grenade throwing, full and expert use of guns—even courses in Jujitsu—are being arranged .

The question "could you kill man —could you pull the trigger?" brought an affirmative response from old and young.

Said Miss Boyd: "I live at Hampstead. There's no doubt in a moment of danger it might be a choice spot to land parachutists. If I met one, and met with the slightest resistance I would not hesitate to shoot him. One must think of what he would do to our women and children—or he might even destroy hundreds of men in a factory. We know they would be ruthless—we've seen what they did in other countries—in France."

Mrs. E. H. Breading, white haired, gentle-looking, turned out to have been a shell inspector during the first Great War. She explained quietly that she had handled every sort of high explosive and is not afraid of a gun.

Miss Frances Brown of Surrey, was the first member of the Corps to put theory into action Patrolling (voluntarily and unofficially) one morning she spotted a Nazi bomber at 5.30 a.m., reported it immediately and it was brought down.

SHANNONVILLE W.M.S.

The W.M.S. of Shannonville United Church met at the United Church on Thursday afternoon, August first, with the President, Mrs. Frank Doxtator in charge and Mrs. H. Shetler presided at the piano. All joined in singing "God Save the King". Plans were made for a tea.

Mrs. Fred Taylor, group leader took charge and gave a reading on Christian Stewardship and the Scripture lesson from the 103rd Psalm. Mrs. Everett Stratton gave a reading. Mrs. Roberts gave one also and offered prayer. Mrs. H. Shetler gave a fine reading entitled "Remnants". Mrs. Doxtator also gave a reading and Miss Ina Liddle read a paper on the Study Book prepared by Mrs. W. S. Dies on "Methods of Education in India". After the closing hymn all joined in repeating the Mizpah benediction. Eleven members were present and the collection amounted to $2.30 and for the flower fund fifty-five cents.

MT. PLEASANT W.A.

The ladies of Mt. Pleasant W.M.S. and W.A. held their July meeting at the home of Rev. Mr. and Mrs. McKenzie. The meeting opened with hymn 259 followed by prayer by Rev. Mr. McKenzie. The Scripture lesson was read by Mrs. Helen Spencer. Readings were given by Mrs. McKenzie, Mrs. Charlie Treverton and Mrs. John Boldrick. Hymn 356 was sung. Miss Lottie Goodman closed the meeting by prayer. The collection was taken by Mrs. Charlie Treverton $1.75.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Annabelle Hunts a Husband

So you're going on your vacation, my dear Annabelle, and this time you hope to meet an eligible man.

You tell me you're 27, but are never taken for a day over 22; you are easy on the eyes, dress well, and your last three vacations were sorry disappointments. You met nothing but dowagers, "wife-watched husbands, acting as nursemaids for spoiled children". And at the last place—some sort of a camp—you met dreary girls who were supposed to be made over athletics but were not, and never a man but the milkman and the hobble-de-hoy who left the ice.

And so, Annabelle, you're of two minds: Shall you chance another of these melancholy holidays, or put your vacation money in a bond, a fur coat, or a savings account? Well, my dear, you might do any of those things and be more sure of meeting that almost unknown quantity—an eligible man—than if you continue to fly to some Adamless Eden for your summer holiday.

The happy hunting ground for the girl-shy male is right here in the shadow of the skyscrapers and the baking brick and asphalt of the teeming city. More men are caught in towns during the summer months than flies on flypaper. Bear that in mind, Annabelle.

The type of man regarded as eligible is not found very often at the average summer resort. He has to stay dressed up; he has to work like a stevedore dancing with girls in stuffy ballrooms of evenings, and unless he's the shyest of shy violets, he doesn't enjoy being continually mobbed by girls languishing from the usual nine-to-one ratio of girls to men at such places. If a man is presentable he'd rather share this terrific competition with others of the male persuasion.

Eligibles—real eligibles—like more primitive vacations where they can relax, wear rough clothes, fish, swim, sail, and cook their own messes in the open. They don't plan for girls. They're taking a vacation from them too, and girls must be mighty clever to know how to stalk this type of vacationing game.

The best bet, as I've had in ,confidence addressed to this column, is to get some woman related to one of the campers to surprise them with a gift of fresh vegetables and fruit. Girl tags along and hopes for the best. The man, the place, the hour has sometimes turned the trick, but it's a chancy business. Even then, girls may find a sulky bunch of campers who can do without vegetable gifts as well as girls.

But the city—the great, teeming, hot city—is a girl's best bet in stalking eligibles.

Long summer vacations are incompatible with the successful male. He probably takes his holiday on a winter cruise. But no normal man wants to stay cooped in a house when the thermometer soars. He thinks of rivers, rowboats, canoes, suppers cooked in the open with someone who likes that sort of thing too. Even the humbler "moonlight boatride" at so much per head is not to be overlooked.

Nearly all cities have resorts, and the eligible bachelor who may be so shy that he hardly speaks to a girl at an adjoining desk in winter time, will be driven by yearning for the great out-of-doors, to pluck up courage and ask her for a date.

Yes, my dear Annabelle, my suggestion to you is to try the city this time.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Orphan Bride

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

1.—Who announces the marriage when the bride's parents are dead, and the bride has been self-supporting and away from home?

2.—Who addresses the envelopes of the announcements?

3.—How are the inner and outer envelopes addressed, especially in cases including entire families?

A Reader.

1.—When the bride's parents are not living, her nearest male relative may sponsor the marriage announcements. If the bride has no male relatives, the announcements may be sent in the name of a sister, preferably a married sister, or of an aunt, including the name of her husband.

2.—The bride-elect herself, if she has time, may address these announcements, or she may "draft" for this service anyone with a good handwriting.

3—The outer envelope is addressed in the usual form (with only the really necessary abbreviations, such as Mr. and Mrs.):

Mr. and Mrs. George King
123 Home Street
Homeville
Minnesota

On the inner envelope, with the unmucilaged flap, is written only the name: Mr. and Mrs. George King. Or, if preferred, Mr. and Mrs. King.

The form Mr. and Mrs. George King and family is socially taboo. If possible, one announcement should be addressed to Mr. and Mrs. and a separate one sent to each grown member of the family. If this means too many for the budget to bear, this form may be used:

Mr. and Mrs. George King
Miss Mary King

If there are several grown daughters in the family or several grown sons, one invitation may be addressed to The Misses King—(or this may be written under the name of the parents), and one addressed to The Messrs. King.

Correct Attire

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

Would a white double-breasted coat, black trousers, stiff white shirt, and black tie be grossly incorrect for a man to wear to a formal midsummer wedding? I realize that full-dress would be strictly correct, but thought perhaps the less formal attire might be worn, considering the season of the year. Would a Tuxedo be permissible?

I. N. J.

A midsummer wedding usually does mean that there is a greater latitude for men's attire. If it is in the evening, it wouldn't I am sure, be considered improper for a man guest to wear a Tuxedo, with the customary black coat or the white dinner jacket.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Letters to the Quins

It has been very interesting to observe the way the Dionne Quintuplets have progressed in typewriting during the six months since they first were given portables as part of their educational work. I regarded the machines at first more as playthings now I can see that they are valuable tools for children to use. Recently I had my eyes really opened.

Someone had suggested that it would be a good idea if the Quintuplets would write a letter to the British and French refugee children who are being brought over to this country in such numbers. When the suggestion was made, I said we would see what we could do. I didn't know whether the children would grasp the significance of the plight of these war-shaken boys and girls from Europe. However, I put the matter up to the nurses, for I thought they would be much better able to explain it to the youngsters than I could, and waited results.

Next morning when I came to the Nursery, I was handed five typewritten letters. Each one contained one or two sentences and each was signed by one of the Quins.

"Those are exactly the things the children said", I was told as I read them over.

"Yes", I agreed, "but, why didn't you let the children type them themselves? They'd be more authentic".

"But they did type them themselves", the nurse remonstrated.

The sheets were as neat as I could do myself. Hardly a mistake or a word crossed out. It was a surprise. But I found that the children given time, can copy down sentences punctuation marks, grave, circumflex and acute accents with scarcely a mistake.

"Of course, this takes a little time. If we hurried them, they wouldn't be so perfect", Miss Dubeau explained.

I thought the matter over a few minutes, and then I suggested that letters should be typed out in more of a hurry.

"If we send letters like these out, without a mistake, people won't believe that six-year-old children did them", was my argument. I think I was right too, for I know I was a bit skeptical of the authorship of those letters and I know a good deal more what to expect from the Quintuplets than most persons.

The messages themselves were all different. Emilie wanted to bring the refugees up to live with the Quins. "We have a couple of extra rooms", she explained.

Yvonne was very sorry that these children had had to leave their mother and father, and come to this country. "They are good to us here, and I'm sure they'll be good to you", she wrote.

I don't think Cecile is any more fond of food than the others, but her letter hoped that the refugees would find plenty to eat and wear. Both Annette and Marie wanted to know how they could help make the refugee children happier.

I don't think the Quintuplets really appreciate what war really is, but they do understand that it causes a dreadful lot of unhappiness and misery in the world, particularly to children and to women and to those who have no part in the fighting.

PINE GROVE BRANCH W.I.

The Pine Grove W.I. met at the home of Mrs. Percy Meale, Thursday, July 25, 1940, with fifteen members and one visitor present. The President, Mrs. F. Heasman was the presiding officer and opened the meeting with the "Institute Ode".

The treasurer's report showed a cash balance $21.16. It was decided that $5 be given the Red Cross and $2 donation be given the Junior Farmers. It was decided to have a quilting at Mrs. Hamblin's with a 15c picnic dinner.

Current events were given by Mrs. Meale. Mrs. H. Dafoe convener for Health, Child Welfare, Vitamins and Calories, conducted the following:— A talk on Vitamins, Mrs. F. Finkle;; Mrs. W. Lough —Fruit and Vegetable juice for the baby; Mrs. F. Lough—Vitamins Fortify Strength; a patriotic poem, Mrs. E. Harton; a talk on calories, Mrs. H. Dafoe; a reading, Mrs. W. Rodgers; "Children and Their Food" Miss G. Coulter; "Feeding the Baby", Mrs. C. Marisette; a humorous poem, Mrs. F. Campbell.

Mrs. R. Vanderwater played and sang, "There'll Always Be an England" for the closing number.

Lunch was served and a social time spent.

Make Jams and Jellies with CERTO-
Quick-Easy-SURE!
3 out of 4 Prizewinners in Jam and Jelly Contests use CERTO Regularly
Mrs. Olive M. Wallace of Lennoxville, Que.—Prizewinner at Sherbrooke Exhibition, writes: "I use Certo, for perfect results, in making all my prize-winning jams and jellies".
Why Certo Makes Better Jams and Jellies Quickly and Easily
SAVES TIME and WORK
It takes such a short time to make Certo jams and jellies. That's because you need give only a one-minute to two-minute full, rolling boil for jam—a half-minute to a minute for jelly. "It is so quickly and easily made," writes Mrs. Thelma Yelland, Prizewinner at Lindsay Fair (Ont.).
SO ECONOMICAL
Since very little juice has time to boil away, you get about half again more jam or jelly from an equal amount of fruit. Says Mrs. Mabel Colwell, Prizewinner at Saskatoon Exhibition: "I get much more jam or jelly from the same amount of fruit."
CERTO is concentrated FRUIT PECTIN . . . the natural jellifying substance extracted from fruit in which it is most abundant.
FRESH TASTE—BRIGHT COLOUR
In this very short boil all the fresh natural taste and bright natural colour remain unspoiled and unchanged. "I get more jam or jelly with a better, more natural flavour," writes Mrs. A. Connell, Prizewinner at Red Deer (Alta.) Fair.
NO GUESSWORK
With Certo you get tested, easy-to-follow recipes. Follow them exactly and you can be sure of results. "You are assured of success before you start," writes Mrs. George Collett, Prizewinner at Rainy River Valley Fair (Ont.).
FREE BOOK OF 72 RECIPES
Under the label of every bottle of Certo there is a book of 72 tested recipes for jams and jellies. Different fruits need different handling, so Certo gives you a separate recipe for each fruit. . . . Be sure to follow each recipe exactly. E30

Vacation School Held At Hazzards' With Splendid Success

Queensboro—A number of Queensboro children attended the Vacation School held at Hazzard's United Church on the Queensboro charge during the past week. Thirty-one children in all attended the school. A very pleasant and profitable time was spent by the children each forenoon from nine o'clock until twelve with Mrs. E. D. Snelgrove and Miss Minnie Moorcroft acting as leaders. They were assisted by Misses Doris Broad, Dorothea Harris and Jean Love, members of the C.G.I.T. Group.

On Friday evening the parents and others interested in the work met at the church and a very interesting programme was given by the children. The numbers were taken from the week's work and during the evening the girls presented the leaders of the Red Cross of Hazzards' branch and Queensboro branch with a quilt top made by them during the school hours also material to finish it and four knitted dresses for Refugee children. The boys had on display several pieces of excellent handicraft which they had made from wood. A very impressive candlelight service "The Light of the World" led by Rev. E. D. Snelgrove closed the programme.

MINE SWEEPERS OF THE CANADIAN NAVY KEEP SHIPPING LANES CLEARED

Day after day in fair weather and foul, the stout little mine-sweeping vessels of the Royal Navy buck the gales of the Atlantic to insure safe passage through Canadian waters to the heavily laden convoys that shuffle across the sea from the Dominion's eastern ports. The captain and chief officer of one of these gallant little mine-sweepers are shown, UPPER LEFT, scanning the sea from the bridge of their ship. Carrying a full load of depth charges, the stout vessels are also armed with a gun on the bow to deal a severe blow to surface craft, UPPER RIGHT. Part of the rigging used in sweeping mines is shown being stowed aboard, LOWER RIGHT. On either side of the sailors may be seen the deadly depth charges ready to be released at the first sign of enemy submarine. The paravane on ingenious device used in sweeping mines from shipping channels, is shown being brought aboard, LOWER LEFT.

Tigers Regain Leadership as Newsom Chalks up 14th Win, Indians Slip With a Split

Newsom Hurls Detroit Back Onto Top Rung With Seven-Hit Mound Effort Over Browns

FELLER IN RELIEF

None of Top Teams In National Play; Pirates Beat Cardinals 3 to 1

By JUDSON BAILEY

Associated Press Sports Writer

After one day in the doghouse Detroit Tigers are running on top of the American League again and big Buck Newsom is back in the win column. Newsom conquered St. Louis Browns 6-2 last night for his 14th victory of the year.

Newsom pitched seven-hit ball, but walked eight men and in the ninth inning he filled the bases with two out. Archie McKain stepped in and fanned Walt Judnich to end the game. The Tigers assaulted three St. Louis hurlers with 11 hits, including a home run and a double by Rudy York.

With Newsom again in winning stride after his thumb injury the Tigers appear to have the best pitching in the league and the records show they have the best batting average.

Cleveland Indians divided a doubleheader to back out of the momentary margin they had assumed Monday. Lefty Thornton Lee of Chicago White Sox pitched his second successive two-hitter to whip the Tribe 5-1 in the first game. Cleveland edged out a 3-2 decision in the nightcap with Bob Feller saving the game for Johnny Allen. Feller came in with two out and two on in the ninth. Jeff Heath dropped a pop fly to let in two runs, but Bob got the next man.

It was another day of good pitching all around and no losing team collected more than three runs.

The best twirling was a one-hit performance by Sid Hudson, Washington's big pickup from the Class D Florida State League.

Hudson shut out Philadelphia Athletics 11-0, missing a no-hitter when Sam Chapman singled in the seventh. He had the help of a 13-hit offensive. He personally contributed a two-run triple. Jim Bloodworth and Gee Walker hit homers.

New York Yankees fell apart again as they dropped their fourth straight game, 8-3 to the Red Sox. Boston made 14 hits and was aided by two Yankee errors during a three-run rally that broke a tie in the seventh.

None of the first division clubs in the National League got into action yesterday, and Pittsburgh Pirates took advantage of the lull to beat St. Louis Cardinals 3-1 and move into a tie for fifth place. Ken Heintzelman gave nine hits to the Redbirds, but he struck out six and squelched a ninth inning threat by fanning two batters. A second scheduled game was halted by darkness.

Boston Bees plastered a double licking on the Phillies 3-0 and 12-2 for Philadelphia's sixth straight setback. Manuel Salvo shutout the tailenders in the first game with four-hit hurling. In the nightcap Lefty Joe Sullivan kept seven hits spaced while his mates blasted out 15 safeties.

Amateur Gridders Have Last Fling

Chicago, Aug. 7 — (AP) — The Green Bay Packers, scourge of professional football, have a date with trouble Aug. 29.

That's the night the pro champions line up against a "dream squad" of collegians having their last fling at football glory as amateur gridders.

The game, which usually attracts 80,000 spectators, will reunite for a night the famed and feared Iowa combination of Coach Eddie Anderson and his dazzling triple-threat halfback, Nile Kinnick.

Anderson was selected as head coach of the all-stars in a nation-wide poll. In a similar contest Kinnick was designed as a starter in the game, polling more votes than any other player.

The game, originated in 1934 as a charity attraction, has left neither side with a margin in six years. Two games ended in ties, the all-stars won two and the pros two.

WINGS, BEARS STAGE BATTLE FOR LEAD

Newark Beats Chiefs Twice To Forge Ahead In International

ROCHESTER LOST

Toronto Did Not Lose Simply Because They Were Idle

The Rochester-Newark struggle in the International Baseball League seems to be taking on the aspect of an English bumping race—the kind in which the leading crew has to keep from being touched by the one behind or drop out. Today they resemble two crews jerking toward finish line. As first the Red Wings spurt into the clear the Bears rally and almost touch them.

Bears today are 3 1-2 games off the pace as result of a double victory over Syracuse Chiefs last night and Rochester 8-1 loss to Montreal.

Bruins ended a three game losing streak by taking the seven inning first game 4-3 and then returned to maul the Chiefs 15-3 in the nightcap.

Sparkling mound work by George Washburn and Norman Branch featured the twin killing. Washburn permitted four hits in the opener and Branch held the Chiefs to five hits in the second game. Home runs by Alex Kampouris and Henry Majeski figured in the Bears 16 hit assault on three Syracuse hurlers in the after-piece.

Max Macon limited the Red Wings to six safeties and had a shutout until the ninth, when two singles and a Montreal error gave Rochester its lone tally. Herschel Lyons started for Rochester in quest of his 15th victory, but was shelled from the box in the seventh.

Jersey City lost 6-3 to Buffalo. Young Hal White handed Jersey its third straight defeat, winning a pitcher's duel from Frank Pearce. It was his 10th triumph of the year.

Baltimore and Toronto were idle.

Argo Football Team Enlists

Toronto, Aug. 7—(CP)—The Argonaut football team of the Interprovincial Union and Argonaut oarsmen will enlist with separate units of the non-permanent active militia, it was decided at a special meeting here last night.

The footballers, several of whom have already signed with the Toronto Scottish Regiment, voted in favor of moving intact into that unit, and the oarsmen, following the example of famed double-blue scullers of former years, have enlisted with the Toronto 48th Highlanders.

Mrs. Ethel Mars Pays $5,800 for Unknown Colt

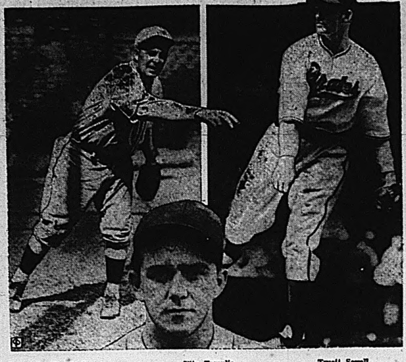
Saratoga Springs, N.Y., Aug. 7—(AP)—One of the principal reasons for the success of Saratoga's yearling sales in the last few years is Mrs. Ethel V. Mars of Chicago, owner of the Milky Way Farm at Pulaski, Tenn.

Mrs. Mars has invented or "gambled" huge sums in the sales here each year—spending as much as $100,000 some seasons. She has picked up a good many fast youngsters and some that weren't worth the price of oats.

She made her first appearance of the year in the sales paddock last night, determined to get a chestnut colt by Jack High out of Sweet Mary, offered by L. P. Holton. She had to go to $5,800, top price of the sale so far but she got him. She also paid $1,500 for a filly by Saxon — no regrets from Creekview Farm.

As a result of these purchases and a couple of high prices paid by Jack Howard and Donald P. Ross, last night's sale of 45 head produced $40,975 for an average of $910. The opening sale Friday averaged only $741 a head.

Dodgers, Pirates Have Star Hurlers In Tamulis, Fitzsimmons and Sewell



Freddy Fitzsimmons Vito Tamulis Truett Sewell

(By Walter L. Johns, Central Press Canadian Writer)

New York, Aug. 7 — While a glance at the record will disclose that most of the good pitchers in the major leagues are prospering this year, and the list includes Bobby Feller, Buck Newsom and Bucky Walters, another glance will reveal the names of three others who are heading the percentage columns but relegated to a back seat in the public's sports eye.

Our reference is to Vito Tamulis and old Freddie Fitzsimmons of the Brooklyn Dodgers and Truett (Rip) Sewell of the lagging Pittsburgh Pirates.

Tamulis, a southpaw formerly with the Yanks and the Browns, is deserving of special credit for his aid to the Dodgers this year. The only southpaw on Durocher's staff, Tammy has been contributing important victories to the Dodger cause, whether now lost or not, either as a relief hurler or from a starting position.

To Yanks First

The Lithuanian portsider has hurled several good games, one a three-hitter. His record shows seven victories against one defeat.

Tamulis won nine games while losing eight last year. He won 12 against six losses in 1938. Brooklyn got him by waivers. While with the Yanks Tammy won 11 games and lost five. He broke into baseball in 1930 with Chambersburg and had several seasons in the minors before the Yanks took him from Newark in 1934.

Only other Dodger pitchers to show a better win record are Luke Hamlin, the ace of the staff, and Fitzsimmons.

Now in his sixteenth season in the majors, Freddie stands near the top of the heap in the percentage table. Winner of 192 games prior to this season, the Mishawaka, Ind., veteran already has won those eight to achieve rank with the few who have hurled 200 or more major league victories.

Fitzsimmons, now 39 years old, has been with the Dodgers but three years. He won 11 in 1938 and but seven last year. Now, in what may be his last season, he already has surpassed the 1939 season's totals.

Sewell is Surprise

The Irish righthander broke into baseball back in 1920 with Muskegon of the Central league. He moved to Indianapolis and then to the New York Giants where he remained until he was traded to the Dodgers in June, 1937.

Truett (Rip) Sewell, tall righthander of the Pirates, is giving both Tamulis and Fitzsimmons a race for the top spot on the National league honor list. And his performance is more or less amazing for Sewell hasn't been considered a star.

In fact, the record books reveal that Sewell didn't win his first major league game until last year, although he had been on the Detroit Tiger staff as far back as 1932 and was in 17 games with the Pirates in 1938.

Last year he contributed his share of victories, 10, against nine losses.

To date, he has lost but one game while winning seven.

Sewell, a native of Decatur, Ala., broke into organized baseball with Raleigh in the Piedmont league in 1931.

LATTA TAKES FIRST PLACE IN S. H. L.

Defeats Shannonville 12-1 To Take Bye Into Finals

Playing a sudden death game on the Cannifton diamond last evening to determine which team would finish in first place and thereby receive a bye in the finals, Latta had no trouble in defeating the Shannonville nine by a lopsided 12-1 score. Latta will now await a winner to be declared between Cannifton and Shannonville in the semi-final series which will start on Friday evening.

Latta batters showed no mercy on the slants of Barberstock, Shannonville hurler, and cuffed his offerings to all corners of the lot for a total of 13 hits as they scored four runs in the initial frame, three in the second and never were headed as they continued to mount the score as the game progressed. The Shannonville nine counted their lone tally in the second inning, but the final score does not indicate the play as errors by the losers at crucial moments aided considerably in mounting the final count.

Foster, Wager, Marsh, Callaghan and Meraw led the hitters for the Latta nine, while Harrison played well defensively, making two nice catches in the outfield to cut off Shannonville runs.

For Shannonville, Cook was the only batter to collect more than one safety off Marsh's delivery, with Reid, Houston, J. Maracle, Snider, Smith and Juby also getting singles.

Barriage and Empson handled the game.

Sports Roundup

(By Bill White Associated Press Sports Writer).

New York, Aug. 7 (AP)—Know why the kids in the Metropolitan ball parks pray for triples rather than homers? Because every one hit entitles 10 underprivileged children to two weeks in the country—as guests of the refrigeration industry. The Children's Welfare Federation selects 'em. The good old underprivileged Dodgers hit 11 in July to seven apiece for the Jints and Yanks....They've increased the lure in the Los Angeles open 5 to 10 grand.

Dick Cullum, sports ed of the Minneapolis Times-Tribune, has folks out there all upset over the possibility that Bernie Bierman, being a marine major in the reserves, may be training a battalion of leathernecks this fall, and not the Golden Gophers. However, he softens the blow by pointing out that Bernie's capable assistants leave the school still "abundantly equipped."

Looks as though Tony Pelleteri may have another Andy K in High Breeze. The youngster is running with bandaged forelegs and may have Andy's notorious ankle trouble ....Johnny Sefick usually starts behind the plate for Sunbury Indians of the Inter-State League, but he's wound up pitching the last innings of several recent games.

VAN HORN BOWS OUT OF TENNIS TOURNEY AT RYE

Welby Van Horn Is No Longer Tennis Topic

Rye, N.Y., Aug. 7—(AP)—Welby Van Horn, the boy who was going to make everybody forget about Bill Tilden last year, is just an interesting topic for speculation this season.

Welby did nothing to remind the spectators of Tilden yesterday when he bowed out of the eastern grass courts tennis championships before Hal Surface, Kansas City veteran. He lost 6-0, 6-3.

Last summer he came from nowhere to earn fourth place in the national rankings after losing to Bobby Riggs in the final of the national singles. Before that he'd just been No. 2 in the junior rankings.

It was no great surprise that the veteran Surface won yesterday. A paint salesman in the off season, Hal played little during the winter and has been getting into shape on the present tour. He never has been ranked higher than seventh, in 1938, but he isn't likely to drop lower than his present No. 12 spot.

ZELLERS WIN FIRST GAME OF PLAYDOWNS

Defeat K-Nines 30 to 11 In One-Sided Contest of Three-in-Five Series

GARROW'S BIG BAT

Barnett's Winners Clout Many Hits As Betty Adams Subdues Losers

Scoring seemingly at will and in every inning, the "Chuck" Barnett-led Zeller softball nine took the first game in a three-out-of-five series for the championship in the Mercantile Ladies' Softball championship at the East Belleville playgrounds last evening as they outscored and outhit the K-Nines to win going away by the lopsided 30-11 score.

After playing superb ball in the semi-finals against the Vikings, whom they forced into the discard, the K-Nines last night could do nothing right as the infield and outfield committed a comedy of errors which allowed the Zeller base runners to circle the diamond almost at will.

Betty Adams pitched for the victorious Zeller nine and limited the losers to twelve hits, of which only one, that a double by Adams in the last inning, was for extra bases. The Zeller nine, on the other hand cuffed the offerings of Mary Lickfold to all corners of the lot as they pounded out a total of 28 safe hits of which nine were of the extra base variety.

Garrow Leads

Helen Garrow with three doubles, a triple and a single, led all the hitters of the night as she cuffed one for the circuit in the fifth but was called out for omitting to touch third base. Hunter and Corden with four singles each also hit well, while Colden conked out a triple and two singles. Donovan a double and two singles and Emerson also hitting for a double and two singles. "Butch" Adams for the losers was the only hitter to hit with consistency as she hit a double and two singles, with Corneal and E. Orr getting two singles.

Zellers—Bennett, 3b; Colden, 2b; Garrow ss; Adams p; Emerson 1b; Hunter cf; Corden lf; Moore rf and Donovan c.

K-Nines—Clarke, rf; Richardson, 3b; Corneal, lf; M. Orr, cf; Thompson, c; E. Orr, 1b; Connell, 2b; Adams ss and Lickfold, p.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with Ken J. Colling

Perhaps the proudest man in Belleville today is Lloyd Hicks, owner and driver of the Class D powerboat, Baby Eugene, and justly he should be proud of his craft. On Civic Holiday Lloyd entered his boat in the annual Rideau Ferry Yacht Club regatta and handily won the Class D championship. For years Lloyd has wanted to compete in the feature 225 class Gold Cup event at the various regattas in which he has raced, but it was not until Monday at Rideau Ferry that he entered his Class D boat, Baby Eugene, in the feature 225 class event. Yes, like the tale in the story book, Baby Eugene went on to win the 225 class, after winning the Class D honors. However, it was not until Mr. Hicks was presented with the mammoth Harry F. McLean Gold Cup, that he realized what speedy company he had been lurking in. The McLean Gold Cup sets on a large mahogany base and stands fully three feet high and is bonded for $750.00. We saw this valuable trophy, among the many others now in Mr. Hicks' possession yesterday, and it is much larger than the Picton or Belleville gold cups and is not valued to access at $750.00.

We cannot blame Lloyd Hicks for being proud of his winning, as he came home with a smaller gold cup, emblematic of the Class D Rideau Ferry Yacht Club championship as well. The 225 Class Gold Cup was presented to the Rideau Yacht Club in 1937 and has been won by some of the speediest craft on the continent. Mr. Hicks' "Baby Eugene" was in rare mechanical form on Monday and worked letter-perfect, he told us. Incidentally Lloyd's speed boat is the leading craft in the Class D group in Canada, as he has never been below second place in any of the five races in which he has competed this season. Lloyd hopes to win the Class D honors at Toronto C.N.E. races and thereby win the Canadian championship for 1940 in his class. Fortunately for him his points gained in the feature 225 Class at Rideau Ferry count in the Canadian championship also. Incidentally the Baby Eugene established a class record for the one mile run at the C.N.E. at Toronto in 1937 and Lloyd is hoping for a repeat in 1940. Personally this corner feels that Mr. Hicks should place his McLean Gold Cup on display in a downtown store window, as it is one of the finest trophies we have ever seen and would be appreciated by our fellow citizens.

Nearly the whole Toronto Maple Leaf Hockey team of the N.H.L. have signed for N.P.A.M training with the Toronto Scottish Regiment and Connie Smythe hopes his puck charges will complete their military training before the N.H.L season opens. Incidentally Lieut.-Col. W. A. MacBrien, of the Toronto Scottish and a director of the Toronto Maple Leafs, made it possible for the Leafian players to join his unit in a group. Incidentally Johnny (Peanuts) O'Flanerty, of the Goodyears, will try out with the Leafs this fall. It is expected the N.H.L. will operate as usual this winter, arrangements being made between the immigration authorities of the U.S.A. and Canada to permit the clubs to cross the border for scheduled games.

Do you remember when Gertrude Ederle of the United States became the first woman swimmer to conquer the treacherous English Channel 14 years ago today. She swam the tide-swollen waters in 14 hours and 31 minutes.

There will be no game between Shell and Corbys this evening owing to military training, but the series is to continue next Saturday night at the Flats, giving both teams a full week's rest between games. Secretary Harry Knott announced this morning that in the event the "Oilers" win Saturday night, however, the seventh and deciding game will have to be played on Wednesday Aug. 14th without fail. "The winner of the Shell-Corby series must be ready to meet the Trenton winner in Trenton on Aug. 16th, with the second game scheduled to be played in Belleville on Monday, Aug. 19th, therefore regardless as to what the future holds, our series in Belleville must be concluded by one week from tonight," explained Secretary Knott after conferring with President Ken Edgecombe. Incidentally the winner of the Belleville-Trenton series are scheduled to meet Kingston on Aug. 23rd. It is unfortunate that such arrangements must be adhered to, but military training comes first whenever it is at all possible to accommodate the players, who have joined the N.P.A.M.

It was a case of not much competition when Chuck Barnett's Big-Z lassies trampled over Stub Barrett's K-Nines in the first game of the girls' city softball championship last night. The Zeller nine won 30-11 and going away fast. They cuffed the offerings of Mary Lickfold hard, often and to every corner of the ballyard, with Helen Garrow, Zeller shortstop, having a perfect night at bat. Incidentally the K-Nines just couldn't get Garrow out, while Betty Adams, hurling for the winners, was in rare form and literally had the Barrett-led squad eating out of her hand. However, the K-Nines were handicapped in the loss of their regular third-saker, Helen Belnap, who is on vacation. This forced Skipper Barrett to shuffle his infield, but the way the Zellers were going last night it would have taken a dozen Belnaps to whittle 'em down. The K-Nines feel they just got a bad game out of their system while Chuck Barnett and his Zeller crowd say it's in the bag for three straight.

SPORT SPICE — Morley Wyman, manager of Zellers, sent a telegram to the East Belleville playgrounds wishing his girls luck and victory last night. . . . Morley is vacationing at present. . . . The tip is out—the local softball heads had better get together, or else. . . . In Jack Doyle's Broadway betting book the Indians and Red Stockings are pennant choices in the two major leagues. . . . Doyle calls the Indians, Tigers and Red Sox to finish one, two, three in the American League. . . . Incidentally there used to be a saying: "The American League wins the world series, but the National League makes the money with close pennant races." . . . Looks as though the latter part of the statement is to be reversed this year, while the first phrase remains unsolved until October. . . . Rapid Bob Feller filled in nicely as a relief hurler yesterday, saving Johnny Allen's face.

Yesterday's Stars

(By The Associated Press)

Sid Hudson, Senators: Pitched one-hit shutout against Athletics.

Joe Cronin, Red Sox: Made three hits and batted in three runs to lead team to victory over Yankees.

Ken Heintzelman, Pirates: Kept nine hits scattered and struck out six to beat Cardinals.

Manuel Salvo and Eddie Miller, Bees: Salvo pitched four-hit ball in first game of doubleheader with Phils and Miller punched homer in each contest.

Archie McKain, Tigers: Rescued Buck Newsom in ninth inning and struck out Browns' final batter.

NAVY PROTESTS, PICTURE VANISHES

Attitude of U. S. Navy To Painting 'Sailors And Floozies' Stirs Prompt Action

San Francisco, Aug. 7 (AP)—The roisterous title—"Sailors and Floozies"—was bad enough, but when the United States Navy saw that painting, it had been outraged.

The result was that Paul Cadmus' conception of a sailor's diversions ashore came down in a hurry from where it was hanging in the Palace of Fine Arts at Treasure Island.

Conceding that the painting was "unnecessarily dirty," Dr. Walter Heilin, one of the officials at the Fine Arts Exhibit, said "If it were a master work, I'd take a stand against shelving it."

"But so far as I'm concerned, it's not a masterpiece and is just unpleasant," he explained.

"The navy wanted to make a to do about the picture, so we thought it simpler to remove it."

Second Painting to Stir Navy

"Sailors and Floozies" was not the first painting by Cadmus, a satiric artist, to arouse the Navy's displeasure. Back in 1934 he turned out a picture called "The Fleet's In," which Admiral Hugh Rodman called an "unwarranted insult to the Navy."

The Admiral saw a photograph of "The Fleet's In" and, before it could be exhibited, denounced it as something that must have "originated in the imagination of someone who had no conception of actual conditions in our service."

The picture, painted by Cadmus for the Government's public works of art project and intended to be hung in Washington, promptly vanished.

LADY BUCKLAND CAPTURES NAZI 'FLIER'

London, Aug. 7 (CP)—Lady Buckland, widow of Lord Buckland, and sister-in-law of Lord Camrose, publisher of The Daily Telegraph, today captured a Nazi aviator who had been roaming England nine days.

Lady Buckland came upon the airman as she motored along a country road near Bristol. Noting his unusual appearance, she questioned him and then marched him off to the authorities. The German flier had been at large since he bailed out of his disabled plane. The military and the police had sought him continuously after his plane fell.

Amish Leader Gets Barn Built in a Day

New Market, Md., Aug. 7—(AP)—Benjamin Stoltzfus' big new barn glistened in the sunlight today, as fine a farm building as could be found in St. Mary's County.

It was a landmark to the Amish in Maryland—and the inspiration of more talk than any project the sleepy southern Maryland county has seen in months, too, because it went up just like that—in one day, and farmer Stoltzfus paid out not a cent for labor.

Stoltzfus is the leader of an Amish colony that migrated recently from Pennsylvania, and when he got ready to build his barn 100 of his Amish Brethren from that State came down to help.

They don't own cars, but they hired private cars and a chartered bus and journeyed 160 miles to aid the "Maryland colonists." The latter, about 25 of them, moved out of Pennsylvania last year in search for less expensive land.

The barn, a 78-by-58 foot affair, went up with magical speed as the heavily bearded Amish worked almost silently under a hot sun in their typical garb—block shoes, buttonless trousers, dark shirts and pork-pie hats.

They brought the womenfolk along to prepare dinner and ate in shifts, the women, in black dresses and lace bonnets, serving up heaping platters of meat and vegetables, custards and sauces.

DIES OF INJURIES

Ottawa, Aug. 7.—(CP)— James M. Steel, 36, of Carp, Ont., died in hospital last night from injuries received last night in an automobile collision which also claimed the life of Edgar Bayliss, 21, of Carp.

Steel, manager of the Stittsville softball team of which Bayliss was a member, suffered internal injuries. Bayliss was killed instantly. Six other players on the team riding in Steel's car, were hurt but did not require hospital treatment.

The accident occurred when the team was en route for a game at Manotick. Tom Bailey, 32, of Oxford Mills, driver of the other car, and his passenger, Thomas A. Ferguson, 63, of North Augusta, also were injured and are in hospital here.

DEATHS

HENDERSON — In the Belleville General Hospital, on Tuesday evening, August 6th., 1940, William Henderson, late residence, 149 Pinnacle Street, age 53 years.

Resting at the Martin Funeral Home, Church Street, from where the funeral will take place on Thursday afternoon, August 8th. Service in the chapel at 2 o'clock.

Interment Belleville cemetery. A7-1t

AT THE BELLE

"Susan and God"

"Susan and God," Rachel Crothers' fast, funny romantic comedy which enjoyed an eight-month run on Broadway before being taken on the road is now on the Belle Theatre screen with Joan Crawford finding her most effervescent role as Susan, and Frederic March costarred as her husband, Barrie.

Story of a social gadabout who adopts a new social fad and insists on trying to convert her friends, only to make a muddle of their lives and her own, "Susan and God" boasts one of the strongest casts of the season in support of Miss Crawford and March. Ruth Hussey is seen as Charlotte, family friend who is secretly in love with Barrie. Rita Hayworth is Leonora, the young actress who is married to the much older Hutchins Stubbs, played by Nigel Bruce, but who is in the throes of a flirtation with a young matinee idol, Clyde Rochester, enacted by John Carroll.

Plays Daughter

Rita Quigley, young newcomer to films, appears as Blossom, the lonely, unwanted daughter of Susan and Barrie and Rose Hobart is Irene Burroughs, at whose Long Island estate much of the action of the piece takes place. Bruce Cabot plays Mike O'Hara, young sportsman in love with Irene.

Completing the cast are Constance Collier as Lady Wigstaff, leader of the new social movement, Gloria DeHaven and Richard O. Crane as school friends of Blossom, Norma Mitchell as Paige, Susan's secretary, Marjorie Main and Aldrich Bowker.

The screen play by Anita Loos, notable for its scintillating dialogue blends hilarious comedy with highly dramatic situations as Susan finds herself caught in her own net and forced to practice what she preaches in order to keep "face." Finally she finds that her scatterbrained actions have antagonized all her former intimates and have apparently lost her husband and the new-found adoration of her daughter.

Adrian's latest distinctive fashions for spring, summer and fall highlight the production, while the sets by Cedric Gibbons and associate Randall Duell establish new ideas in interior decoration for modern homes.

Directed by Cukor

George Cukor, who directed such other smash hits as "The Women," "Holiday," "Camille" and "Dinner at Eight" guided "Susan and God," with Hunt Stromberg, responsible for a long series of screen successes producing.

During the action of the story Joan were Adrian's most starting gown creations—tomorrow's modes.

"Front of Steel" is the title of the new Canada Carries On series film to be presented on the same program.

AT THE CAPITOL

"The Man Who Couldn't Talk."

An unusual and absorbing idea in mystery films comes to the Capitol Theatre next with 20th Century-Fox's drama, "The Man Who Wouldn't Talk." From the outset of the film, when a murder is committed, the audience and the police know at once who committed the crime; the mystery is the identity of the killer and his motive. Confessing to the slaying, the murderer, who calls himself Joe Monday, refuses to speak another word even in his own defense. The result is a highly exciting story well played by Lloyd Nolan, in the title role, Jean Rogers, Richard Clarke, Onslow Stevens and Eric Blore. David Burton directed. On the same program—

"Chip of the Flying U"

One of western fiction's most popular characters comes to life in the person of Johnny Mack Brown who plays the title role in the modernized screen version of the novel, "Chip of the Flying U."

Third in Universal's new series of western dramas starring Brown, "Chip of the Flying U" features Bob Baker and Fuzzy Knight in the top supporting roles, with Doris Weston and The Texas Rangers, well-known radio cowboy singers, also prominently cast.

To complete this big double feature programme is the 4th of the Canada Carries On series, "The Front of Steel" authentic scenes of the German war machine in action. See the Canadian industrys' answer! Machines of war forged by skilled Canadian workmen. Also shown is the thrilling serial "Buck Rogers" and Canadian Universal News.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Blondie Has Servant Trouble"

Leave it to the Bumsteads to show you how to be gay in spite of yourself! Their latest outburst of adventures, with its inevitable onslaught on the funny-bone is due to set McCarthy theatre audiences into a right good humor this weekend when the latest characterization of Chic Young's famous comic strip arrives in "Blondie Has Servant Trouble."

In this sixth of these popular laugh crammed "Blondie" feature-comedies all the family are back with the top-notch performances which have come to mark their work in these comic strip roles animated on the screen. Arthur Lake lives his part of Dagwood, the happy pappy. Penny Singleton returns as beautiful Blondie, Larry Simms portrays Baby Dumpling and Daisy the pooch is again portrayed by Daisy herself. "Blondie Has Servant Trouble" is just what the doctor would order right now for a laugh tonic and we recommend that everyone is in for a barrel of fun when "Blondie" again flashes on the McCarthy Theatre screen.

"Military Academy"

For extra added screen enjoyment the program also includes Tommy Kelly (of Tom Sawyer fame) Bobby Jordon (one of the original "Dead End" kids) and a great supporting cast in one of the most delightful dramas which will come to the screen this season, "Military Academy." Make your dates now to see these two hits, "Blondie Has Servant Trouble" and "Military Academy," a great double feature next at the McCarthy.

"Private Affairs"

Starring Roland (Topper) Young, Nancy Kelly, Hugh Herbert and Robert Cummings "Private Affairs" the four-star laugh hit is now showing at the McCarthy, in addition to an excellent screen vaudeville short subject "The Naughty Nineties," which is recommended as one of the best treats you will see this year. A clever two-color cartoon, a new screen novelty entitled "Jolly Little Elves" and latest Fox News events complete this program which should be on everybodys "must see" list.

NAZI CONSULAR STAFF SHAKEUP IS FORECAST

Havana Conference Measures Likely To Have This Result In Western World

NAZIS PERTURBED

Washington, Aug. 7 (AP)— A shakeup of German diplomatic and consular staffs in the western hemisphere was forecast in reliable quarters today as a result of measures adopted at the Havana Pan-American conference against "fifth column" activities.

German authorities were said to be perturbed by the determined attitude of the American republics and by the manner in which some Nazi officials have aroused concern in the countries where they were stationed.

A possible withdrawal of a considerable number and their replacement by diplomatic officials less active as Nazi party members was expected by some well-informed persons.

Washington developments relating to foreign agents' activities included:

1. The Interstate Commission on crime demanded an investigation of what it termed "Nazi-Fascists" use of attaches of legations and consulates for subversive propaganda and other fifth column activities."

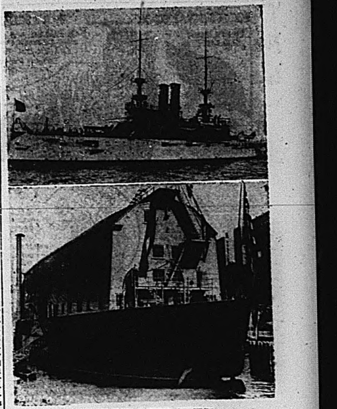
2. The Federal Bureau of Investigation announced its field officers would go on a 24-hour daily schedule to expedite investigations of fifth column suspects.

3. The House passed and sent to the Senate a measure to permit the F.B.I. to tap wires in investigations of sabotage, treason and espionage.

One German agent in the United States believed listed for early recall to Berlin was Dr. Gerhard Westrick, the commercial counselor of the German Embassy, whose operations in New York have received widespread publicity.

While his conference were on Monday with Hans Thomsen, German Charge D'Affaires, was said officially to have brought no change in his status, the publicity given his relations with prominent business men in New York and his activities generally was understood to have met disapproval of German authorities.

Another possibly due for a transfer was Baron Edgar Von Spiegel, German Consul General at New Orleans. A remark attributed to him that Germany would not forget the aid given its enemies by the United States caused a state department inquiry. The incident was closed with a notice to the German Embassy that foreign diplomatic and consular officials must refrain from public discussion of United States' policies and attitudes.



BACK INTO ACTIVE SERVICE

The U.S. battleship Illinois, commissioned in 1901, used with the battle fleet in the World War, and later converted into a floating naval militia armory in the Hudson River, N.Y., is again going to sea. It is being refitted at a training ship at a cost of $187,000 for use by, the new Midshipmen Reserve, designed to train 5,000 officers. TOP, the Illinois as a unit of the fleet. LOWER, as a floating armory.

Satko Seeks Farm Of 122 Acres For Alaskan Home

Juneau, Alaska, Aug. 7—(AP) —The Alaska home that Paul Satko envisioned three years ago when he began to build his strange ark in Richmond, Va., is in the process of construction.

Satko filed application for a homestead of 122 acres of river bottom 27 miles north of here. He purchased a $50 automobile and plans daily trips to the land to cut trees and build a home.

His family of eight continue to live aboard the crudely-built ark which brought them here from Tacoma, Wash., after colorful voyage.

Satko failed to find work in Virginia at his welding trade so he built the boat, hauled it across the country with his family, finished it at Tacoma and sought a new life in the far north rather than live on relief.

3 KILLED AT LEBANON, O.

Lebanon, O., Aug. 7 (AP) —Three men were killed today in an explosion that wrecked a powder-processing building of the King Powder Company, at nearby King's Mills.

Steve Resibois, a workman, said the dead were Charles Risibois, his son; Hobart Combs, 35, and Wm. Reed, 45.

The cause of the explosion was not known immediately.

CHAPTER 4

Comedy or Tragedy?

Warmth, friendliness, charm and laughter flowed from Irene Davies as she introduced the little group about her. "She holds them together," Brooke thought. "How can one be other than what one is inside? How can one talk animatedly of nothing in particular, nothing important?"

Irene was saying to a striking-looking blonde, "Why, it's nothing, darling. If you fall down, what does it matter? Snow is soft. And I tell you, it's the most divine sensation....and the place has everything, simply everything...." She turned to Brooke. "I hope we shall see a lot of each other and that Rod will bring you to see me. No special invitation. Just phone and drop in. I like people to drop in."

Dismissing Brooke, she turned to Rod. "Do you recall what we were discussing last Saturday? I know that positively...."

Brooke heard no more. For Julian Carlton suddenly appeared at her side, saying, "I think Barney is still looking for that drink, thinking that you and Rod are following. Now if you'll follow me...."

Glad to get away from Irene and her listening clique, Brooke followed Julian to the kitchen. He helped himself to bottles, found ice, clean glasses, glancing at her to say, "We know each other only unofficially. How do you like your Martini? Very dry?"

"I don't know the difference."

He laughed as he poured the mixture into the glasses. Then, "Sorry. No olives." Giving her a glass, he looked at her directly. "Will you have an unembellished Martini with me here in the kitchen?" Raising his glass, he said what, if it were meant to be flippant, fell short of its goal! "To you—of course."

Part of her mind she had left in the crowded adjoining room with Rod and a vivacious, talkative woman; only part of her mind was in this brightly lighted kitchen with a man who stirred her curiosity to the point of wanting to ask him questions about himself.

If his next remark were intended to flatter, it too fell short of its goal. It seemed to Brooke that with all sincerity he said, his well-cut mouth curving. "You are very lovely." Then, "What part of New Hampshire is your home?"

"Chatham. Do you know it?"

"I've driven through it many times on my way to Maine. Many fine trees, white houses, the usual mill, and a traffic officer...."

She smiled. "I can't let you speak disparagingly of our Mr. Ben. We have a curfew in Chatham, too."

"What did you do there?"

"I was secretary to a doctor...."

"Must be interesting. You were?"

"I have a position here now."

His eyes narrowed. "I was going to ask you why, if your time was limited, you and Rod spent it at something like this."

"You came...."

He chuckled. "Yes. But I had a reason. Every one has a reason for being here except you and Rod. Barney knows it. That's why he's probably taking one of his little naps, which account for his apparently tirelessness when every one else is exhausted."

"Is every one here important?"

He smiled again. "Not very. Another cocktail?"

"Thank you, no. You don't...."

"You're right. I mixed only two."

Coming for her glass, standing above her in the glaring light, he said, "I'd like to see you again, Brooke, but that's impossible, isn't it?"

She glanced up quickly, her eyes startled. "I'm afraid it is. You see, Rod and I are going to be married."

Without a word he turned and took the glasses to the small white table.

Brooke turned on a high black heel and went into the living-room. The scene had changed. Many had departed and no longer was Irene the centre of a little group. Sitting between Rod and a strange young man, she was listening to the latter, her eyes lively. Rod looked pleased and interested. Their host was nowhere in sight.

Irene was saying, "How interesting, Jack! I had no idea. She simply dropped out of sight in a sanatorium in Switzerland! I'm so glad she's...." Seeing Brooke, "Oh, hello dear. There's room for you...."

Rod arose and smiled. Hadn't he missed her? To be sure, he wasn't angry that she had disappeared....

He said, "I'm afraid we must be going...."

If she's in love with him, Brooke thought, why is she being nice to me? There was no doubt of Irene's vital interest in Rod. Her restless bright eyes invariably shifted back to him. Her charm, her chic, her pose Brooke could not deny. Yet how often when they were younger had she heard Rod say of various Chatham girls, "She talks too much." While wanting to go so that she could be alone with him, wanting to go too because something instinctive unconsciously arose to protect what it loved, and yet somehow held fast by her curiosity and the fascination of a woman comparable to no other woman she had ever known, she thought of Julian Carlton again but did not see him in the room.

Irene held out a firm white hand on which gleamed an exquisite square-cut emerald. "Good-bye, dear. Do call us." To Rod she said simply, her lively eyes mocking, her husky, musical voice somewhat softer. "Good-bye."

When they were in the hall, Barney hurried to them.

"Going? I've been on the phone all this time." He grinned at Rod. "More work for you, boy." To Brooke, "We've been a long time meeting you and now that we have, we must see each other often."

"Thank you. I hope we shall."

After the smoke and warmth, she welcomed the cold.

In the taxi Rod said, smiling slightly, "Well?"

Brooke took a deep breath. "Barney probably wouldn't be at all flattered if he knew he reminded me of Humpty Dumpty."

Rod laughed. "On the contrary, he'd love it!"

"He's devoted to you...."

"I know. They tell me I'm his first real protege. He's a grand person, a little crude at times..."

But it was not until they were dining somewhat less elegantly than they had two nights before that she asked, "Rod, who is Mrs. Davies?"

Briefly he looked away, then back at her. "Her past or her present."

"I imagine it took a good deal of past to make her what she is at present."

For a moment he didn't answer. Then, "She married for the first time when she was fifteen, had a baby when she was sixteen, and went to France during the war with her husband, an aviator, who cracked up over there. She was on the stage when she met Leslie Davies and married him. He's enormously rich. When they were divorced, he settled a million on her. About two years ago her first husband's mother died — Irene hadn't heard of her since the war — and left Irene's son the bulk of her fortune. She's one of the most generous people I've ever known."

She's in love with you, Rod. You know it, don't you? And though she doesn't look it, she's years and years older than you. You know she's in love with you, don't you? Irene Davies isn't the sort to play a guessing game very long; she hasn't many good years left. Every expression was to make you conscious of her, Rod. I have only one weapon, my love for you....

She lowered her lashes until they were flat against her face when Rod said, "She's a remarkable woman." And not until she knew her eyes were untroubled did she look up and ask, "And Julian Carlton? He mixed me a cocktail in the kitchen...."

Rod chuckled. "I know. He's — well, not only is he a brilliant lawyer, he's from a brilliant family. They've all carved niches for themselves somewhere — science or politics or education. He's pretty difficult to know. Spends most of his free time travelling or in Washington...."

He lowered his head and she looked across the table at him, her fear naked in her eyes. Fear that her one weapon of love would not be enough. Regret that lovers cannot live alone in the world. Wonder of words spoken in dim places. Civilization made love a gigantic responsibility, robbed it of beauty and breathing space....

The stage is set, she thought. The first act is over and though characters will be presented in the acts to come, I don't know yet who is the hero or heroine or villain, whether it is a comedy or a tragedy.

x x x

A call from Ellen, Mrs. Kingsbury's maid, on Sunday evening before Brooke went to dinner with Rod, told her that Mrs. Kingsbury had arrived and expected her the following morning at an address in the East Sixties.

And so on Monday at nine o'clock knowing that although Mrs. Kingsbury did not stir until ten Ellen would be up, Brooke pressed the bell of an apartment on the ground floor of a large apartment building.

Ellen, gray, middle-aged, timid but capable, wearing a blue-gray uniform, admitted her cordially into a living-room much longer than it was wide. It was furnished in a nondescript manner but was comfortable. The windows were open (Brooke remembered Mrs. Kingsbury's passion for fresh air, one fortunately that she shared) and the bright chintz draperies were blowing. Off the living-room she saw a small dining-room with a mahogany table which could not adequately seat more than four, and four thin-legged mahogany chairs.

Ellen led the way to a bedroom. "This is your room. I hope you are going to like it with us. Is there anything I can get for you? Mrs. Kingsbury isn't awake yet."

Brooke smiled. "No, there's nothing, thank you. But will you tell Mrs. Kingsbury that I am here when she awakens? I think I am going to be very comfortable." The motherliness of the spinster Ellen cheered her.

When Ellen left the high-ceilinged square room, Brooke pulled off her brown hat, slipped out of the brown coat, tightened the belt of her slim green jersey frock and set about unpacking. Her hands lingered on a large photograph of Rod which she placed on the maple table beside the narrow maple bed. Together for the whole of yesterday, they had been as if they were lovers alone in the world, and in his last kiss he had given himself.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was up in my room reading Paul Peppy on Destroyer D9 and ma looked in saying, Benny, I want you to go around to the store for me.

Aw G, ma, I mean jimminy, I was just going to start fixing up my room, I said, and ma said, Well, far be it from me to interrupt such a miracle. But for goodness sakes if you're going to do it, do it thoroughly and put a little will power behind it and dont act as if you were picking flowers in a dream. Now for instants, first and formost you'd better get to work on that closit, she said.

Aw heck, ma, G roozalem, I was going to get to that closit later, I mean the closit's not quite a part of the room, I said, and ma said, Well I must admit it can stand a single undivided effort, it's a proverbial shambles. Then in that case you can start with your desk, that desk is just one solid disorderly litter, she said.

No it's not, ma, it's just in a special kind of order, I bet I can tell you where every single thing is on that desk, just name a few things and I'll prove it, I said. It's just arranged according to my personnel sistem, I said, and ma said, And so is all that junk under your bed, I suppose. I want you to throw out every bit of that trash. Empty cans and slabs of dirty wood and goodness knows what all, she said.

Jimminy Chrissmas, ma, every single thing under that bed is useful, holey smokes there's nothing under there I haven't got some idea about, I said, and ma said, Well all right, all right, but at least you might store them somewhere out of site.

Sure, I did, I mean they are, that's what they're doing under the bed, I said, and ma said, And as for the draws in your dresser, I know what they look like without looking.

Aw G, ma, I'll go to the store for you, I need some fresh air exercize anyways, I said, and ma said, O such a boy.

Meaning me.

SENATOR HITS AT FORD, LINDBERGH

Washington, Aug. 6 (AP).—Henry Ford and Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, Senator William Smathers (Dem., New Jersey) said today, should "pick up the little iron crosses given them by Hitler and go back to Germany."

"In fact," the senator said in an interview, "I'm for having the country provide them free transportation to Germany."

The automobile manufacturer, Smathers stated, "with his hand on the Hitler cross says he will make airplanes to defend the United States but not Britain. Everyone knows that in helping to defend Britain we are defending ourselves."

Taking issue with Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's suggestion for United States co-operation with Germany if she wins the war, Senator Claude Pepper (Dem., Florida) termed the aviator "the chief of the fifth column in this country".

Pepper Favors Pershing's Proposal.

Pepper replied in the senate yesterday to Lindbergh's Sunday speech at a Chicago peace rally, about the time Senator Burton Wheeler (Dem., Montana) criticized General John J. Pershing for proposing that at least fifty American destroyers be made available to Great Britain. Wheeler told the senate that the suggestion is "a step toward war".

Pepper told his colleagues that within a short time "the American people will have to decide whether they are going to follow the chief of the fifth column in this country—Col. Lindbergh—or are going to follow General Pershing."

Recalling that a "cross of recognition and merit" had been bestowed on Lindbergh by Marshal Goering, Pepper said that Pershing never received a medal from the "head of the German air corps".

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Aug 7—(CP)— The market suffered a general setback in slow trading through the early session with mines leading the decline. Gold stocks had an index loss of .71 by noon and base metals were down .57. Other groups held better. Turnover in the first three hours totalled 66,000 shares.

Macassa, Kerr Addison, Wright-Hargreaves, Central Patricia and a few other golds were soft and losses of a cent or two were scattered through the penny group. Base metal weakness affected Nickel, Waite-Amulet, Sherritt and Pend Oreille.

Losses were limited to fractions mainly in industrials and a few of the interlisted pivotal issues appeared in the trade. Calgary and Edmonton weakened 5 to 1.35, Home Oil held at 1.60 and other western oils were steady and slow.

WALL STREET

New York, Aug. 7—(AP)—Prices clung doggedly near previous levels in a wary, scant stock market today.

Fractional dips among the leaders were largely erased in one of the slowest morning sessions in 22 years and, near the fourth hour, tiny gains were almost as numerous as similar losses.

Representative of the general market movement were the various positions assumed by the steels during the day. U.S. Steel and Bethlehem, for example, moved by fractions both below and above yesterday's levels from time to time. The same applied to Union Carbide, General Motors and Montgomery Ward. Generally on the downside were Dupont, Eastman, Westinghouse and Southern Railway.

Canadian issues were easy. Distillers Seagram, Dome Mines and Canadian Pacific dipped fractions. Hiram Walker was unchanged.

EGG PRICES 1½-2 CENTS HIGHER

Toronto, Aug. 7 — Substantial price gains were registered by eggs on the Toronto open produce market yesterday, while butter declined fractionally.

Light receipts and a good demand kept egg prices moving upward throughout the day. At the close, A-large eggs were selling at 24 1-2c to 25c in the graded section, up 1 1-2c to 2c from Saturday's level. Dealers said a late week-end inquiry had helped to boost prices. A-large eggs sold to retailers at 26c, up 1c to 2c from Saturday. Other grades also advanced.

Demand for butter was so weak that it was difficult to establish prices. First-grade Ontario solids eased to 22 3-4c in the morning and went to 22 1-2c later in the day. Only a few sales were made, however, at either price. Dealers attributed the indifference of buyers to the unfavorable storage stock figures released Saturday.

Montreal Produce

Butter: First-grade creamery prints, jobbing price, 24 1-4c to 24 1-2c; first grade solids, jobbing price, 23 3-4c to 24c.

Eggs: Graded shipments in used free cases, selling price, A-large, 26c; A-medium, 24c; B, 19 1-2c; C, 15c. Receipts, 1,418 cases.

PARLIAMENT

New Loans Effective

New social and war legislation, reaching deep into the life of the country, became law today when Sir Lyman P. Duff, Deputy Governor-General, gave royal assent to 24 government measures, four private bills and 61 divorce bills.

Assent was given to the Unemployment Insurance Act making contributory unemployment insurance compulsory for 2,100,000 workers.

The severity of the war struck a note in the law-making with the enactment of a bill providing the death penalty for acts of treachery. It received royal assent.

Another important bill becoming law today was the amendment to the Canada Wheat Act, making new provision for handling Canada's wealth in grain.

Earlier the Senate passed the Government's Supply Bill, which was adopted by the Commons at 1.28 a.m. EDT. this morning, after sitting past the regular 11 p.m. adjournment hour.

Senator Meighen Speaks

Conservative Leader Meighen spoke briefly saying that if it were customary to debate financial measures in the Senate he would offer criticism of the inclusion in the Bill of some millions of dollars advanced for railway equipment.

He complimented members of the Senate who had remained in attendance during the last days of the session "the more so since there was no work to do".

Senator Meighen protested that the regulations governing the mobilization for military training had not been tabled in the Senate before adjournment.

Senator Dandurand said it had been hoped to have the regulations ready to be tabled before adjournment but in any event they followed very closely the statement made in the Commons by Hon. J. G. Gardiner, Minister of National War Services which statement Senator Dandurand had also read in the Senate.

"I could have told the Senator a week ago the regulations would not be tabled before adjournment to give this house an opportunity to discuss them", replied Senator Meighen. "It is making a monkey of Parliament".

KILLED UNDER LUMP OF CONCRETE

Winnipeg, Aug. 7 (CP)—Crushed beneath a huge lump of conrete while helping to move a service station building, Nick Kobzisty, 48, of Winnipeg, was instantly killed here last night. Kobzisty was lying under the ledge of concrete adjusting moving rollers when the piece fell on him.

The Queen Sends Greetings To 100-Year-Old Woman

Carnegie, Man., Aug. 7 (CP) — Queen Elizabeth was among the first to send congratulations to Mrs. A. U. Walker who celebrated her 100th. birthday here Monday. Mrs. Walker was born in Scotland and came to Canada in 1863. She has lived at Carnegie, 150 miles west of Winnipeg, for the past fifty-six years.

Hog Quotations

Toronto, Aug. 7—(CP)—Brantford and Stratford reported unchanged prices in Bacon-Hog Markets reporting early today. Hull reportedthe quotation $10.50 dressedweight, 15 cents below last week's close, prices having fallen to that level yesterday, not $10.65 as reported.

Dressedweight: Brantford $10.50 Hull $10.50, Stratford $10.50 plus transportation.

London and Chatham later reported prices unchanged.

Liveweight: Chatham $7.50.

Dressedweight: Chatham $10.25 London $10.50.

LIVESTOCK

Montreal, Aug. 7—(CP)—Trading was dull on Montreal Livestock markets today, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported.

Receipts: Cattle 11, calves 72, sheep and lambs 5, and hogs 150.

There was not enough cattle and lambs offered to make a market.

Veal calves were steady at $8 for common light veals to $8.50 for tops. Drinkers brought $5-$6 and grassers mostly $4.50.

Bacon hogs, fed and watered, made $8.50 and also $8.50 off trucks. Selects drew $1 premium with the regular cuts on off grades. Sows were $3.50-$4.25. Hogs sold on rail grade brought $11.30 hot weight.

Toronto, Aug. 7 (CP)—Cattle trade was firm at yesterday's price level up to mid-session on the livestock market today. Killing cattle were selling readily. Veal calves were firm. The late run of lambs sold 50 cents higher. Sheep were steady. No price was established for hogs. The cattle holdover from Tuesday was 1,200 head.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Marketing Service were: Cattle 510; Calves 320; hogs 630; sheep and lambs 200.

Choice weighty steers sold at $8.50-$8.60 with common selling downward to $7.50. Good butcher steers and heifers brought $8-$8.25 with most of the offering common to medium selling at $6.50-$7.75. Butcher cows sold at $4 for common up to $5.25 for good with a few making $5.50. Good butcher bulls sold at $5-$5.25 with bolognas at $4.50-$4.75. Fed calves sold at $9-$9.75 for good to choice with medium selling downward to $8. A few common to medium stockers sold at $5.25-$6.75.

Veal calves sold at $9.50-$10 for good to choice with common selling downward to $6. Grassers sold at $5-$5.50.

Good ewe and wether lambs sold at $10.50 off car and $10 off truck with bucks at $1 discount per cwt. Culls sold at $8-$8.50.

Sheep sold at $5 for good light ewes and down to $2.50 for culls.

Hogs sold previously at $8.25 off trucks for bacons and $11 dressed weight.

Toronto, Aug. 7—(CP) — Early cattle trade was slow at unchanged prices on the Livestock Market here today. Lambs were stronger. Veal calves were firm. Sheep were steady. No price was established for hogs. The cattle holdover from Tuesday was 1,200 head.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Marketing Service were: Cattle 265, calves 191, hogs 250, sheep and lambs 105.

A few weighty steers sold at $8 to $8.60 with eight head at a top of $8.75. Butcher cows sold at $4 to $4.50. Plain stockers ranged from $5.25 to $6.

Good to choice veal calves sold at $9.50 to $10 with common selling downward to $6.

Lambs sold at $10.50 off car and $10 off truck for good ewes and wethers, with bucks at $1 discount and culls at $8 to $8.50.

Hogs closed previously at $8.25 off trucks for bacons and $11 dressedweight.

OUT HOPS A CHICK

Goldsboro, N.C., Aug. 7 (AP)—Former John Start couldn't account for the plaintive peeping coming from somewhere in the huse and he knew he hadn't any baby chicks. But when he opened a door to a cabinet, out hopped a chick. He says the heat wave hatched one of the eggs stored there.

IS DUCE PLANNING

Military circles in London said the two Italian divisions were concentrated in the Bardia area, adjacent to the Egyptian frontier.

British Desert Fighters

This concentration is opened by a small mobile British force of expert desert fighters who have been carrying out the first phase of the operations in Africa, a sort of guerrilla warfare of lighting raids, skirmishes and reconnaissance expeditions.

Britons were warned today by The Daily Express, which is owned by the Minister for aircraft production, Lord Beaverbrook, that they may expect "some Italian successes" in the war in Africa.

These signs of an impending offensive against Egypt, which would have as its ultimate objective the severing of the British Empire's control of the eastern Mediterranean, coupled with a triple drive against British Somaliland, raised the belief in many quarters that the axis next big objective is the continent of Africa.

In the eyes of these observers the reported preparations for the attack on England are for the purpose of diversion.

Bitter Struggle Foreseen in Somaliland

A bitter struggle between the British and Italians in Somaliland was forecast by military circles, who said the main Italian column is striking at Berbera, on the coast of the Gulf of Aden.

This column is between "6,000 and 7,000 strong, with some guns. and tanks," it was reported by military sources here.

The first of the three columns of Italians, who entered the British protectorate on Sunday, is moving on Gargara and Zeila. The second and main force is pointing toward Hargeisa, 30 miles from the frontier, and about 100 miles along a "highway" to Berbera. The third is aimed at Odweina, 60 miles east of Hargeisa.

"Zeila is a coastal village of little importance, with a road running 150 miles along the coast of Berbera," said British military quarters. "Possession of either port will mean little to the Italians, who, of course, do not control the sea.

Both Zeila and Berbera are across from the British protectorate of Aden, however, and the Italians may hope ultimately to be in a position to close the southern entrance to the Red Sea.

British military circles said the Italian columns moving on Gargeisa and Odweina would have to cross high hills over a single track road "barely negotiable for vehicles."

Brig. A. R. Chater is the British commander in Somaliland. He leads forces including the famous Somaliland camel corps, which, contrary to its name, is partly mechanized, the King's African Rifles and "some others."

Enemy Well Provisioned

The coincidence of the attacks, and the carefully provisioned advances of Mussolini's Libyan forces noted by scouts, were regarded by some observers as possibly the beginnings of a "grand strategy" by the axis high commands.

The Italians may be planning to "mop up" British Somaliland and the Aden protectorate to gain control of the southern entrance of the Red Sea, and then attack Egypt from Libya on one side and from the Red Sea on the other.

Persistent reports of German concentrations on the Spanish border, and Spanish propaganda calling for the return of Gibraltar, also would fall in with this line of African attack, it was noted.

The bulk of imperial Germany's colonial empire was concentrated in Africa. The Nazis have persistently declared they want these colonies back.

Industrial Germany needs the gold, tin, copper, vanadium, industrial diamonds, cotton, cocoa, palm oil, rice, sugar, sisal and rubber that she could get from Africa.

Italy's own colonial empire is in Africa, and Mussolini wishes to consolidate it by connecting up Libya and Ethiopia, now separated by British possessions.

He also has said that, for Italy, the Mediterranean is "life itself." If he got control of Egypt he would be a long way toward breaking Britain's grip on that sea.

For Britain, however, her strongholds at Gibraltar, Malta and Suez protect the shipping lanes which make possible the holding together of the empire.

For the "Battle of Africa" Italy is estimated to have 500,000 native and white soldiers, many of them with modern mechanical and motor equipment.

Britain's forces are far smaller, but they are schooled in years of fighting and living under the peculiar conditions of the desert.

Italy has 500,000 native and white soldiers in Africa, with many of her legions mechanized and modernly equipped. Britain's forces are far less in numbers.

Express Warns Path Not Easy

The warning that Britain's path will not be easy in Africa came from the Dily Express, owned by Lord Beaverbrook, Minister for Aircraft Production who last week was made a member of the nation's inner war cabinet.

"We must be prepared for some Italian successes," the paper said, "for Britain must concentrate on: 1. Ensuring the ultimate collapse of Mussolini's African Empire by cutting off supplies from Italy; and 2. Preparing to resist invasion here."

'Sideshow' in Somaliland

The British minimized the importance of the Italian invasion of British Somaliland, which the Express called a "sideshow". All Italy will get there, said The Express, would be "sand, a foothold opposite Aden and a victory to uplift Italian morale."

Not so much was said about Egypt, however, where the Italians presumably are aiming to drive eastward toward the Suez Canal.

The British, though their forces are smaller than those of the Italians, control the water supplies, and contend that small, easily shifted veteran units ultimately can beat back attacks by larger forces.

Camel Corps Now Mechanized

British dispatches said the picturesque Somali camel corps, now a mechanized force, has been fighting grimly against superior numbers in British Somaliland, supported by Royal Air Force planes bombing the Italians.

R.A.F. and South African reinforcements were ready in Aden, the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan and Kenya if needed, it was said.

The British and Italian air forces in Africa are rated about equal in number of planes.

The Express indicated that British control of the Mediterranean and Red Seas eventually would hurt Italy by cutting off supplies from her colonial forces and that Britain would need time to win.

REGIMENT HAS A FEW VACANCIES FOR VOLUNTEERS

Argyll Regt. Is Recruited Almost To Full Strength

AUG. 15 DEADLINE

With August 15th set as the deadline for voluntary enlistment in the non-permanent regiments of the active militia of Canada there are still a few vacancies on the Argyll Light Infantry (Tank) Regiment to be filled by physically fit men. Lieut.-Colonel A. B. Gribble, Officer Commanding, announced today.

Upwards of six hundred volunteer civilians have been recruited by the regiment, but this number has been depleted considerably through physical unfitness and other reasons, Col. Gribble added. He stressed the fact that voluntary enlistment will definitely end on August 15th and urged potential volunteers to get in touch with regimental headquarters as soon as possible.

Four hundred all ranks of the regiment will leave for camp early in September, where the syllabus of training as set down by the Department of National Defence will be undergone. Approximately half of the personnel of the non-permanent active militia units in Military District No. 3, which embraces Belleville and environs, will have completed their camp training by the end of this month when the remaining half will commence its training.

Colonel Gribble expressed himself as being satisfied with the general response of civilians to the call for volunteers for his unit. He also voiced his satisfaction with the progress being made by his men in training, and felt they will compare well with those of other units.

Regimental Sergeant-Major Sam Johnson, and Sergeant Sarlie, who recently completed instructional courses in Kingston, and who have been in charge of instructions of the A.L.I., will leave for an eastern training camp within a day or so where they will assume charge of instruction for personnel of units undergoing camp training.

OBITUARY

MRS. ELIZABETH JANE BROUGH

West Huntingdon (Special) — After an illness of many weeks duration there passed peacefully away Mrs. Elizabeth Jane Brough, widow of the late William Francis Brough, and was in her 83rd year.

Mrs. Brough lived the greater part of her life in the village of Fuller, and was widely known and highly respected by a large circle of friends. She was a faithful member of Fuller United Church and when health permitted took an active part in the branches of the church work, especially in the W.M.S. She was ever willing to assist her neighbors and friends in time of need, the esteem in which she was held was evidenced by the largely attended funeral which was held in Moira United Church on Tuesday afternoon, and was conducted by her minister Mr. Kenneth Stewart, who gave a very inspiring and comforting message. The choir gave as an anthem "God's Way is the Best Way." and Mr. Frank Palmer, of Ivanhoe, gave a solo.

Interment was made in the Moira cemetery. The bearers were grandsons of the deceased and were Arthur, George, Frank and Morden Brough, Lorne and Bentson Goodman.

CHINESE SEAMEN FREED OF CHARGES OF DISOBEYING

Halifax, Aug. 7 (CP)—Freed of charges of disobeying their captain, 11 Chinese seamen here are scheduled to be returned to their home port of Singapore. They were put ashore by a vessel which called here several weeks ago and charged with refusing to sail into European waters.

The counsel for the men, L. A. Kitz, Halifax, announced they were sailing back to China as they wished, via the Panama Canal.

GERMANY'S FLYING NEWSBOYS WORK HARD ON ROUTES

Nazi Fliers Continue To Shower U. K. With Leaflets Bearing Hitler's Reichstag Speech

ALSO SOME BOMBS

By D. E. Burritt

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Aug. 7.—(CP Cable)—Germany's flying newsboys are continuing daily delivery of a neat tabloid edition containing an unabridged version of Hitler's Reichstag speech—but the circulation is diminishing.

Early today Nazi planes made the customary delivery over a smaller route and added unattractive circulation premiums of incendiary bombs, many of which fell in the Bristol Channel.

Apparently the airmen have been convinced by the German Press that the British are not allowed to read the propaganda leaflets which have been dropped in several parts of the United Kingdom within the past week and that the papers are all picked up by frantic collectors immediately they hit the ground.

As a matter of fact facsimiles have appeared in most British papers which also have displayed pictures of numerous persons with wide grins pretending to read Hitler's "Last appeal to reason".

Enterprising collectors have gathered copies and sold them for a shilling each for the benefit of the Red Cross while many families have gathered all possible in view of the official appeal to conserve paper supplies of every kind.

The only warning against the public handling the leaflets indiscriminately came from Cmdr. Oliver Locker, who suggested in the House of Commons that the papers were not dangerous from the point of view of contamination by reading "but by physical poison which might spread disease and death".

Planes were reported over southwest England, Scotland and Wales last night. Some incendiary bombs were dropped in Scotland but no damage nor casualties were reported.

In southwest England, in the Bristol Channel area, the Germans dropped leaflets containing Hitler's "Peace or destruction" ultimatum and some bombs. A government communique said "damage was negligible and there were no casualties".

BAKERS

turn in Vancouver and in making the ruling, the Board said "the concerted action of bakers in a western city in increasing bread prices immediately had left the Board with no alternative."

'To Prevent Exploitation'

The Board said its order was in the nature of a "standstill" ruling, applicable until there has been opportunity to inquire more fully into effects of the wheat processing tax on the milling and baking industries.

This, said the Board, "is to prevent exploitation of consumers of bread and flour while the implications of recent legislation are being studied."

The Board ordered millers to share with bakers the levy of 70 cents a barrel on flour, resulting from the processing tax on wheat milled for domestic human consumption which was announced two weeks ago in the House of Commons by Trade Minister MacKinnon as being effective at midnight July 23.

Says Rise Unjustified

Mr. MacKinnon said the 15 cents-a-bushel levy was not sufficient to cause a rise in bread prices and later suggested that the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, under Hector B. MacKinnon would be the authority to guard against increases.

The processing tax is collected by the miller when he sells the flour and is turned over monthly to the general fund of the Canadian Wheat Board.

It was imposed to bring domestic prices in line with production costs rather than the present depressed world prices.

people.

"I felt sure there were not nearly so many telephones as the honorable member said there were," Mr. Ilsley said.

As the estimates for each department have been called in the past two days, Mr. Pouliot has asked the Minister if the reductions made were on the recommendation of the economic committee of which Mr. Towers and Dr. W. C. Clark, Deputy Minister of Finance, are members.

"I hope the Minister will take with a grain of salt any recommendations that come from those gentlemen," Mr. Pouliot said during discussion of the estimates of mines and resources.

Both officials were appointed during the last Conservative regime and have frequently been attacked by Mr. Pouliot.

Entry List of Livestock At Belleville Fair Expected To be Largest Ever Recorded

Over 100 Head Pure-Bred Holstein Cattle Already Entered—New Cattle Sheds Under Construction

MANY OTHER GOOD ATTRACTIONS

The largest entry list of livestock, horses, poultry, etc., in the history of the organization, will greet patrons of the Belleville Fair which opens here on August 29th and continues for the following two days, Secretary Arthur L. Burke announced on Wednesday.

Over one hundred head of pure-bred Holstein cattle have already been entered, and this number can be used as a criterion for other breeds, he added. Every phase of livestock entered shows figures well over those of the corresponding period of a year ago. "In fact," Mr. Burke said, "we have more cattle entered now than the sheds will accommodate."

To overcome this difficulty, which has been a problem for Fair Directors for the past few years, new cattle sheds are being erected. Actual construction was started on Tuesday with Roy Eggleton, Stirling contractor, in charge of operations. The new sheds will house 150 head of cattle.

Entries for pure-bred horses, cattle, sheep and swine will close on Thursday, August 15th; other classes of horses on August 26th, and poultry and all other classes on the same date.

Directors of the Fair are highly optimistic over the success of the 1940 edition of their exhibition. They feel that in view of the fact that the Kingston Fair and a number of county fairs have been cancelled, the entry list and attendance here will be greatly increased, and all preparations are being made to accommodate a large crowd.

Other attractions, they stated, will be as good if not better than former years and the fair as a whole, will be one that should make history in exhibition annals of the city and county.

$5,000 Voted to Help Win War By Knights Templar of Canada

Sovereign Grand Priory Holds Smaller 'War Time' Meeting In Belleville In Place of Cancelled General Assembly

For the last two days meetings have been held in the Hotel Quinte of the Sovereign Great Priory of Canada, Knights Templar. Belleville has been selected for the 1941 assembly of this body, but owing to war conditions, the Grand Master cancelled the general assembly and held a smaller "war time" meeting.

Representatives were present from as far west as Calgary and east to Halifax and Saint John.

The sum of five thousand dollars was voted to help win the war.

Belleville was the unanimous choice for the 1941 assembly.

Most Eminent Knight, F. Davey Diamond, the Supreme Grand Master, presided over the meeting.

MISSING BALLAD FOUND IN COAT

Believed To Have Been First Literary Work of Benj. Franklin

Boston, Aug. 7 (AP)—Discovery of a ballad that may have been the first literary work of Benjamin Franklin, lost for 175 years, was revealed last night by Maurice Babcock, Jr., son of the keeper of Boston light.

Titled "The Lighthouse Tragedy," the ballad was mentioned in Franklin's autobiography but Franklin students have sought it in vain.

Babcock said he found the tattered, yellowed, single sheet—in old English characters—in the pocket of a rotting leather jacket he came across in the ruins of an old house on lonely middle Brewster Island, in Boston harbor.

The autobiography relates that Franklin wrote it as a boy of 14 at the inducement of his brother, a printer. News of the drowning of George Worthylake, first keeper of Boston light, his wife Anne and their daughter Ruth, had just come to the mainland. The tragedy became the topic of the ballad.

The brother printed it and young Benjamin hawked copies on Boston streets.

TWO YOUTHS INJURED AS CAR HITS TRUCK

Vercheres, Que., Aug. 7—(CP)—Two young men were critically injured and a third seriously hurt last night when their automobile crashed into the rear of a stone-laden truck parked on the highway near here.

Alfred Robillard, 24, Montreal and Maurice Courtemanche, 28, Ste. Anne Du Lac, Que., were taken to a Montreal hospital where doctors held little hope for their recovery.

Marcel Belanger, 20, Montreal, also was seriously hurt. The truck had been left on the highway with a tire blow-out by its owner, Lucien Gervais of Varennes.

$500 FINE ON BOOKS OVERDUE 49 YEARS

Woodstock, Ill., Aug. 7 (AP)—Note to the waiting list:: ":The Gates Ajar" and "Woman's Friendship" are available again at the library. The books, 49 years overdue and "fines" of $500 on each unpaid, were found under the flooring of an old building.

CHARGED WITH SETTING FIRE TO TWO HORSES ON WHICH LIQUID WAS POURED

Scottsville, Ky., Aug. 7 (AP)—Farmers Floyd Stafford and Jack Mitchell were fined $10 and costs each yesterday on charges that they poured an inflammable liquid on two horses and then set fire to them to make them work.

U.S. Defence Pact With Canada Is Advocated

New York, Aug. 7 (CP)—The New York Herald Tribune, reiterating editorially its belief that "urgent national defence" demands the dispatch of spare American destroyers to aid Great Britain, urged anew today negotiations of a defence treaty with Canada.

It termed such a treaty a "pressing need from the American point of view."

Germans Deny Special Pressure Used on Turkey

Berlin, Aug. 7—(AP)— Nazi spokesmen asserted today that, although "the fact that Turkey has certain understandings with our enemy, England, naturally demands alert watchfulness," Germany is not exerting any special pressure on Turkey for clarification of her stand in the war.

Reports that Germany and Italy had asked the Ankara government to define its attitude were current yesterday in Rome.

"Since the beginning of the war we have put certain questions to Turkey at various times, all of which have been answered," the Nazis said. "We also have concluded a trade agreement."

Expression of Loyalty Gets Royal Response

Royal appreciation of loyal assurances forwarded to His Majesty King George, by the Bishop, clergy and delegaes of the First Synod of the Free Church of England, during the annual session held here some time ago, was received yesterday by Bishop George Marshall in a communication from the Private Secretary of the King.

The communication stated,—

"The Private Secretary is commanded by the King to convey to the Bishop, Clergy and Delegates of the First Synod of the Free Church of England, otherwise called the Reformed Episcopal Church, His Majesty's sincere thanks for their message of loyal assurances.

"The King deeply appreciates such messages which, in these anxious days, are a source of great encouragement to him."

Great Britain Keeps Dominions Informed

London, Aug. 6.—(CP Cable) — Clement Attlee, Lord Privy Seal, gave the House of Commons assurance today that the government would continue to "maintain the closest touch with the governments of the Dominions in all aspects of foreign policy".

The information was given in reply to a question asked by I. C. Hannah Conservative, who wanted to know "if the Prime Minister would give assurance that the government would not enter into any permanent obligations on the continent without the fullest consultations with the Dominion governments."

Ryan of this town Tuesday tendered his resignation to council in order to carry on military duties with the Midland Regiment. He is a Second Lieutenant in Headquarters Company, 1st battalion of the Midland Regiment stationed in Lindsay.

SHINING WINDOWS

by Kathleen Norris

INSTALMENT 26.

"That would give us all June and July for a honeymoon," Paul said, enthusiastically. "We could take the car and go up to Banff and fool around—go down to Santa Barbara. My mother's rolling in dough now. She's going to take a place in Santa Barbara. She's divorced again, or rather, it never was a marriage—this third one."

"Oh, horrible for her!" Joyce exclaimed. "Did he desert her?"

"Oh, no; she was the one that found it out. You see, her second husband—the man she lived with only two months—died last December," Paul explained amusedly, "and he had a tremendous lot of money. So Mother had a lawyer fix it that her divorce from him never was legal, and she left Pete cold in Paris, and came over here and started a claim on Louie Crowder's money. And she got it. She'll be here in ten days and she wants me to drive her down to Santa Barbara to look for a place. And why not you too?"

"Oh, but I couldn't leave Dad!"

"Why, but look here, you're going to leave him for good, aren't you?"

"Yes, I know." Her face was flushed with exquisite color. He thought he had never seen her as lovely as she was this afternoon.

"But—we've planned if I did," she explained, "that Dodo and Charley will live here with Dad, and Isabelle Dunker will stay on after she has her baby. It can be right here with Dodo's babies——"

"Who is this Isabelle, anyway?"

"She's a widow, and she was starving—actually starving. She was widowed last August, and the baby is coming in a month and she hadn't a cent or a friend. They'd just come here from Kansas when he was killed. So she came up here and we all just love her! But let's talk about us. I've not seen you for so long. I've not heard your voice for so long that it all seems like a dream!"

"It's years," he said soberly.

"More than two. It was the summer Dodo was married."

"We'll tell 'em here, and tell Dodo tomorrow. How far away does Dodo live?"

"The milk ranch is about fifty miles. But she's here in Merriwell now with Charley's family. They're having hard times on account of milk and butter being so terribly overproduced."

"Say, listen, how long has this depression been your favorite topic?" Paul asked with a grin. "As far as you're concerned, it's over. We tell the folks tonight how's that? Then you and Dodo talk over the date, and how you want it. I don't care; I don't suppose we want a big fuss, do we?"

"Oh, no!" the girl agreed eagerly.

"Well, we'll be married somewhere. If my mother has a place in Santa Barbara she'd like it there—or Claire would let us use her town apartment; that doesn't matter. Then Mr. and Mrs. Paul von Schwerin get into their car—and away. Does that sound good to you?"

"It sounds too much happiness."

"Listen, Joy—here's about money: We'll get piles of presents of course, chairs and clocks and things, and silver, and Mother'll give us a big check. So that'll start us off with a bang. Then I'll have about four hundred a month from some bonds, and the firm will pay me something to start with—a hundred anyway—and we'll spend our week-ends with Dad and Claire to save money, and because it'll mean a lot of fun—there's always something going on at the club. We can do it on that, can't we?"

"We'll be rich," the girl said.

"We'll be rottenly poor!" Paul altered it. "But Mother'll come through; she's got all kinds now."

Joyce sighed from sheer happiness, leaned her shoulder against him, and felt his arm about her. Somehow she didn't want to talk about the money.

The long soft shadows of the spring afternoon lengthened. Joyce was suddenly on her feet. Paul would stay for dinner and she must make it festive. She took him into the kitchen, introduced him to Isabelle.

William Ballard came in with a wooden pail filled with eggs. He welcomed the newcomer cordially, but with a sudden shadow in his eyes.

"Feels like winter out," William Ballard said.

"I was telling Joyce I wouldn't know this room. 'Member what it looked like when you first came over here?"

"It was a bleak-looking place! But we've grown fond of it, Joyce and I." Quite suddenly Joyce's heart ached fiercely for her father. She went over and put her arm around his neck.

Michael and Arty came in just before dinner. Paul was introduced to the strange Englishman, and dinner was served. Joyce looked about the circle of the men with great satisfaction. Pink candles burning. Isabelle bringing in the fried chicken and new asparagus, three men about the board keeping the conversation moving. Not so bad a result, considering the despairing outlook of four years ago!

Joyce thought that she had never been so happy in her life. This was one of the hours that repaid a woman for waiting and hoping and enduring.

"It's good to see you so happy, Joyce," Michael said to her later in the evening when Paul had gone.

If there was a questioning note in his voice she did not hear it.

"It's good to be happy!"

"You're going up to visit his people?"

"His father and stepmother, yes. He comes back for me on Friday. And later we may drive down to Santa Barbara to see his mother."

"Definite plans?"

The girl flushed and laughed.

"Well, pretty definite. For autumn sometime, I imagine."

"What he said at dinner—about Canada, you remember?—made me think it might be sooner."

"I know. He said June. In fact, he said May. But this is March; that's too soon! I've been thinking about him," Joyce said seriously, with a little upward jerk of her head that indicated the direction her father had just taken on his way up to bed. "I don't want to—shock him with too much change. I'd rather wait and see how things go with Dodo and Charley here. And then there's Isabelle's baby. I shouldn't feel comfortable if everything weren't finished off here. But I don't know," she added. "I knew Paul was coming back of course, but now that it's happened, it seems too much like—breaking things up, like leaving more than I'd gain—I don't mean that of course—because when you love a person——"

x x x

"Dad," Joyce said suddenly out of a long silence. Her father looked up.

They were in the parlor; it was night; Arty and Michael and Ben had gone off to bed. The room was lighted only by one lamp; its corners were filled with mellow shapes and shadows.

"Dad," Joyce said, "before you—before any one marries any one, how can they—be sure?"

"You mean of being happy, Joyce?"

"Well, not exactly that. That sounds so—flat somehow, as if one had to be amused with dances and songs! No. I mean of one's own heart," Joyce formulated it slowly. "I mean—to be sure it's all right, to be sure it's the most you could feel for any one, ever."

"I think you know that, Joyce. There's a sort of buoyancy, of exhilaration, that carries you along. You're impatient. You can't wait to belong to each other, to have yourselves in a little world inside the world, and no one else in at all. Now with you, darling," he added. "You and Paul. You've tested your affection with years of absence, letters, joys and sorrows. You have all that to assure you—to prove to you that you needn't be afraid of any change."

"Suppose you are afraid you won't change?" she said in an undertone.

For a minute he regarded her gravely.

"Is it so, Joyce?" he asked then. "Does that mean that you have changed toward Paul?"

"No, I don't think I have! I think I like him even better than I ever did; certainly he's nicer! I mean, if ever there was anything years ago, that I—sort of—wished was different in Paul, it really is changed. He's working hard, and he's more sensible, and he feels about the way his friends act just as I do—of course he does things they do—but he's quite different from Claire and all of them——"

"What things do they do, for example?" William Ballard asked.

"Oh, well, you know when I was with them last week? I got there Friday for dinner and we were all going over to the Friedmanns'—there was hardly time to dress—and we all had cocktails downstairs. A lot of people came in for them, and we were about an hour late for dinner, but so was every one else so that didn't matter. At the Friedmanns' there were more cocktails, and then the silly stuff began about your husband and wife and what was Yvonne Porter doing up in your room and all that sort of thing—they never get tired of it! Then we had part of the dinner—soup and fish and chicken—and we rushed away, Bobby and Barbara Friedmann and a boy and Olivette Shepherd, and we went to the Barrows' for Elizabeth's dance, and it was a terrible flop.

"She's a debutante, you know, and they had this dance in a perfectly magnificent house. But everything was cold and slow somehow, and the boys began to take the girls down to Rotty's for drinks. Elizabeth's grandmother would only let them have punch, and a lot of people didn't come, and it was terrible. So about one o'clock Ratsy Taylor asked us all to go over to her place and we could turn on the radio and dance. Lots of the boys were drunk then, and everything was awful; nobody said goodby to the Barrows, and we all went, and the boys made up twenty dollars and waked up the Taylors' butler and asked him to get them drinks."

"Ha!" William Ballard commented simply, watching her.

"And Paul and I didn't go home until after three and every one by that time was simply—blotto," Joyce said impressively. "And even Paul had had too much. That wasn't any fun!"

"No," her father agreed slowly, "that wasn't any fun. Then what?"

"Oh, then every one slept late, and we all had breakfast in our rooms, and at about one we all went to watch the polo. Paul played. And then it all began again. Cocktails from five on until after seven, and everything so—so frivolous, somehow, and so crazy, and so—so talky. I get so mad at myself for talking so much, but they all do. They make fun of every one; they are most of them divorced and—and everything!" Joyce finished with a sudden flatness in her tone.

VICE-REGAL PARTY VISITS PETAWAWA

Earl of Athlone Visits Military Camp Where All Phases of Warfare Are Demonstrated

By KEN CLARK
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Petawawa Military Camp, Ont., Aug. 7—(CP)—The thousands of men camped in the low, sandy hills of Petawawa some 125 miles northwest of Ottawa went back to routine training today after putting on a show for the Governor-General and Princess Alice that to untrained observers seemed about as close to real war as most people would want to come.

As the vice-regal motorcade proceeded through the camp its progress was timed so that at every halt a different phase of the work of modern soldiery could be observed.

The men were building bridges, putting things up and tearing them down, dashing from one point to another in high-speed lorries, blasting imaginary enemy strongholds with their guns and shooting down make-believe enemy air raiders.

The party saw recruits drilling raggedly and swinging their arms furiously. They saw the 2nd division engineers demonstrating model transport and watched imitation gas attacks. And the Earl of Athlone enjoyed everything immensely.

At one point gas-masked recruits, their helmets covered with twigs for camouflage, ran rapidly in single file over difficult ground and crossed a pontoon bridge.

"Take it easy men" shouted their officer. They flung themselves into cover and began sniping at their foe.

Squads of signallers worked with their flags. Demolition units cleared roads and at one stop in the vice-regal tour the artillery appeared over a rise, swung into a wide circle and rushed across a field set up shop a few yards from the autocade.

For miles around the camp swarmed with activity and the happiest man appeared to be one under a shower in the "degassing" station. He just stayed there and grinned while the party passed slowly in front of him.

The Governor-General asked one question after another. It was the first time the commander-in-chief of the Canadian forces had visited a military camp since his appointment as Governor-General.

Presentation

On Monday evening, July 29, a large crowd of friends and neighbours gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Robinson to tender a miscellaneous shower in honour of Mr. and Mrs. Merle Robinson, who were recently married.

Rev. W. Sterling proved a very capable chairman and Mrs. Bruce Sherman read an address. The address was signed on behalf of the community—Bruce Sherman, Leslie McLaren, Edward Lazier, Harold Sherman, Clarene Hagerman.

Suitable replies were made by both the bride and groom. "For They are Jolly Good Fellows" was sung, and lunch was served. All enjoyed a social time for the remainder of the evening.

'PEN' COMMISSION YET TO BE NAMED

Ottawa, Aug. 7—(CP)—War and the Dominion election interfered with establishment of the Penitentiary Commission authorized by legislation passed at the last session of Parliament, Justice Minister Lapointe told the House of Commons Tuesday but he said he expects to find suitable men for the job shortly.

The commission would have been set up last fall but the war called away men who were being considered for appointment, the minister said.

"Then there was a Dominion election," the minister continued.

"That should not have made any difference," interjected Howard Green, Conservative - Vancouver south, who was questioning the minister.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—
And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

NAZI AIR RAIDERS DRIVEN OFF BY BRITISH

Parties in India Invited to Join Viceroy's Executive Council

War Committee Will Represent All India's Life

India Takes Further Step Forward to Dominion Status

By J. F. SANDERSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Aug. 8 (CP Cable)—India was taken another step along the road toward dominion status today in constitutional changes announced by L. S. Amery, Secretary for India, in the House of Commons.

To promote national unity in British India and attempt to appease the strong voice for autonomy, representatives of the different political parties will be invited to join the Governor-General's executive council.

A war advisory committee will be established representative of all India's national life, including the Indian states.

The Secretary for India reiterated Britain's promise of dominion status for India at the end of the war. With this promise he coupled a declaration that as soon as possible after peace is established a constitutional assembly would be convened "to devise the framework of a new constitution."

Growth of Bond of Union

Mr. Amery expressed the British Government's hope that for the period of the war all parties and interests in India would combine to co-operate in making a notable contribution to the empire's war effort and that in the process new bonds of union and understanding would develop paving the way "toward attainment by India of that free and equal partnership in the British Commonwealth which remains the proclaimed and accepted goal of the Imperial Crown and the British Parliament."

Representative of National Life

The Government's promise that a body representing the principal elements in Indian national life would be convened after the war to devise a new constitution was designed to appeal to the leaders of the all-India Congress Party, the Nationalist Group which insistently has demanded a "constituent assembly of Indians alone to decide how India should be governed.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen

Inches and tons! These measures seem far apart in application, but the amount of rain that has fallen in any particular instance may be expressed in either unit. For so many years we have been told that so many inches and parts of an inch have fallen that we are no longer impressed. But if the same amount is expressed in tons, then we are properly awed. Recently there fell in Washington, D.C., in one day 2.5 inches of water, an unusual amount that caused no particular comment. That rain expressed in tons amounted to 283 tons per acre—a square piece of land only 208 feet on a side. One inch of rain evenly distributed over an acre weighs 113 tons.

Noted Speakers Listed For "Let's Face the Facts" Radio Series

Ottawa, Aug. 8—(CP)— Florence Reed, American actress well-known on Broadway, and Frederick Griffin of the Toronto Star will speak on the 30-minute "Let's Face the Facts" broadcast over the National Network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation next Sunday night from 10 to 10.30 p.m. EDT.

The series is sponsored by the Director of Public Information.

The following Sunday, Aug. 18, Col. Henry Breckinridge, outstanding American who broke his close friendship with Col. Charles Lindbergh over the latter's views on the war situation, will be the speaker.

Robert E. Sherwood, American playwright whose current success is "There shall be no night," will speak on Aug. 25.

WINDSORS PAY BERMUDA VISIT

Hamilton, Capital City of Island Colony En Fete Though Visit is Unofficial

(By Morton P. Gudebrod Associated Press Staff Writer).

Hamilton, Bermuda, Aug. 8 (AP)—The ordinarily placid life of this British island colony will be thrown only slightly out of routine by the arrival today of the Duke and Duchess of Windsor.

The lack of pageantry was due partially to the fact that, while the Duke is en route to take over his post of Governor and Commander-in-Chief of the Bahamas, this is an unofficial visit.

Still, the city was decked in flags, and the regular Thursday half-holiday gave Bermudians a chance to see the Duke and his wife on their drive from the Royal Yacht Club landing in Hamilton to Government House, where they will live until they leave for the Bahamas.

First Visit Since 1931

Captain Groves of the American export liner Excalibur, making a special stop here on its trip from Lisbon to New York, had been instructed to reach Grassy Bay, outside Hamilton harbor, in time for the Windsors to land in Hamilton at 2:49 p.m. EDT. It was the Duke's first visit to Bermuda since 1931 when he was Prince of Wales.

After coming ashore with their retinue aboard the admiral's barge, the Windsors were to be greeted by the Governor, his sister, Mrs. Hastings Brooke, and Admiral Purvis. No official reception speech was planned but a military guard of 100 men was detailed to present the royal salute.

RUMANIA URGES COMPROMISE OVER DOBRUJA

Argues With Bulgaria Sacrifice On Both Sides Can Alone Attain Peace

HUNGARY'S STAND

Official Sources Say Hungary Wants Three-Quarters of Transylvania

Bucharest, Rumania, Aug. 8 (AP)—Rumania, opening territorial negotiations with Bulgaria today at Craiova, hoped to hold her neighbor's claims on the province of Dobruja to a minimum by arguing that a permanent peace can be attained only through compromise and sacrifice on both sides.

At the same time Raoul Bossy, special Rumanian delegate to Hungary, was expected to return from Budapest with Hungarian terms for settlement of the dispute over the Rumanian province of Transylvania which Rumania gained in the break-up of the Austro-Hungarian Empire at the end of the first great war.

Transylvanian Issue

(In Budapest a high authority reported that Bossy in a half-hour conference with Hungarian Premier Count Pal Teleky was informed Hungary would agree to nothing less than cession of 75 per cent of Transylvania.

(Official sources said Hungary would remain on full war footing until final settlement had been reached.)

Bucharest newspapers have dropped their demands for resistance to Hungary's claims. Yesterday, they reprinted a Berlin foreign office article criticizing Rumanians "who have assumed an attitude of false heroism in settling relations with Hungary.")

PERSONAL EQUIPMENT BOUGHT IN ADVANCE OF FORCES' NEEDS

Ottawa, Aug. 8—(CP)— All personal equipment for the Canadian armed forces is being purchased months in advance of actual needs, Munitions Minister Howe announced Wedesday.

Orders have been placed for 4,800 miles of drill cloth which will be used to clothe the Canadian forces next summer. Other supplies required for the next eight or nine months include eight miles of puttee cloth, more than 2,000,000 pairs of socks and more than 1,000,000 shirts.

Toronto, Aug. 8—(CP)—Discovered hiding under a bed when the residents of a Toronto home arrived unexpectedly, Milton Levey, 17, was held at bay by 82-year-old Eugene O. McCrohan yesterday until police arrived. Mr. McCrohan and his two daughters arrived from their Port Whitby summer residence and found the intruder.

Win-the-War Organizations Live Upto Slogan 'Nothing Willbe Wasted'

(By the Canadian Press)

Leaning more and more each day to the slogan that "nothing will be wasted," Ontario's men, women and children continue to pour donations of money and goods into the coffers of win-the-war organizations.

Little gestures that show purpose and determination of provincial citizens continue to creep into the news. For instance, at one Muskoka district summer hotel, the 80-odd guests are collecting tin foil which is wrapped about cigarettes, chocolate bars and camera films.

At Brantford, the local council of Women's Save for Victory Salvage Campaign for Red Cross and war work has been redoubled this week in sorting, packing and baling huge quantities of waste material. Response to householders is termed "magnificent" with such articles as newspapers, metals, magazines and tinfoil being donated. Other articles include equipment from the First Great War, including shells, tin hats and bayonets.

The Sarnia Lions' Club has opened a mile-of-pennies drive with proceeds to be devoted to the city's community war chest.

At Chatham, various Ontario lodges of the Loyal Order of Moose in convention decided $1 of each entrance fee collected from new members shall in future be retained by the lodges to be devoted to war activities.

Five Stratford children sold tickets on a cake and donated the proceeds—$7.50—to the Red Cross. Several other groups of children took up the idea and a big "Sell-a-Cake" campaign is in progress.

One of the most enthusiastic supporters of the local council of Women's Salvage Scheme in Kitchener is six-year-old Bob Berry. He volunteered for service, spends most of his time lending a helping hand to adult workers and has been termed "one of the best workers in the council."

At Sudbury, it was announced that district residents have contributed $50,000 to war services since the outbreak of hostilities.

Registration Regulations Broadened and Tightened

Ottawa, Aug. 8—(CP)—Regulations broadening and tightening national registration which starts Aug. 19, were issued Wednesday in an order-in-council.

Exempted classes—Nuns, citizens on active service inmates and asylums and penitentiaries—are now ordered to be registered.

Employers are required on penalty of $200 fine or three months in jail to require their employees on Aug. 21 to produce registration cards.

Employers are also required to report to the National War Services Department and the "nearest police officer" the name and address and occupation of any unregistered employee. The same penalty is provided for failure to carry out this instruction.

The new regulation governing registration of formerly exempted classes instructs the chief registrar to "arrange for the taking of registration so far as this is possible" under such procedure as he deems adviseable.

Other changes in the regulations permit the registration of employees in plants having more than 100 employees at polling booths to be established in the plants, and the registration of a citizen absent from his ordinary place of residence at the nearest booth.

The citizen registering away from home must satisfy the registrar that he is unable to attend at the polling booth in his home district.

The chief registrar is empowered to rule that registration of any "special class or classes of persons" may be taken otherwise than according to regulations.

Italians in Libya May Try to Break Blockade of Coast

By LARRY ALLEN
Associated Press Staff Writer

Cairo, Egypt, Aug. 8—(AP)—Italian armies in Libya, fearing intensification of the British naval blockade and faced with dwindling water and war supplies, are expected to launch a grand offensive by mid-August in an attempt to break Britain's stranglehold on the North African coast.

Somaliland Move

The Italian push into British Somaliland, which resulted yesterady in the fall of the port of Zeila, is looked upon here as more or less a move to divert British power to defence of that territory, preliminary to the big push.

British warships, patrolling almost the entire length of the Libyan coast, form a line of steel blocking attempts of Italian water tankers and supply ships to get through from Italy to Libya.

Practically all the water used by the Italians in eastern Libya has been transported from Italy, since Libya largely is a stretch of desert.

Water And Oil Supply

Italy's desperate desire to attempt to crack British lines along the Egyptian frontier apparently is influenced largely by the vital necessity of keeping water and oil flowing in for her Libyan fighters.

A deep thrust into Egypt would open the way for new water supplies.

LANDING FIELDS ON ICELAND WERE MAPPED BY NAZIS

Germans Had Worked Two Years Before War On Scientific Pretext

CANUCKS POPULAR

(By A. B. Garrett, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Winnipeg, Aug. 8—(CP)—Working in the guise of scientists studying the possibility Iceland might split in two, German surveyors mapped possible airplane landing fields all over the island two years ago and even marked some with flags, Arni Eggertson of Winnipeg said on his return from a visit to Iceland.

These fields were ploughed up and markers, some of which had been placed on mountain tops, destroyed.

Along the 4,000-mile coast line, part of which is lighted for two months each year by the midnight sun, British and Canadian troops are on guard. Stone gun emplacements were built and certain fjords were mined, he said.

The Icelanders had taken the British occupation favorably and were very friendly towards the soldiers, Eggertson said.

"They know the British will leave when the war is over. Then the Icelanders hope to go about declaring their independence from Denmark in a business-like way as had been planned before the war." This would require three successive plebiscites in 1941, '42 and '43.

The husky Canadian soldiers were popular with the blond, blue-eyed Icelandic girls, he remarked. To assist in solving linguistic difficulties, the Canadian Legion had recently supplied the men with Icelandic handbooks.

450 ARE SAVED, 19 PERISH WHEN ACCRA TORPEDOED

Passengers And Crew Line Up For Lifeboats As If Waiting For More

NO TRACE OF PANIC

London, Aug. 8—(CP)—Passengers and crew aboard the sinking 9,337-ton liner Accra, torpedoed off the west coast of Ireland, lined up to board the lifeboats as if they were waiting to see a movie, Capt. John Joseph Smith said on reaching Britain today.

He pointed to the fact that 450 were saved and only 19 perished—11 passengers and eight crewmen—to show how efficiently the rescue operations had been carried out. Loss of the Accra was announced by the Admiralty yesterday.

"I hope I have the same crew when next I sail," said Capt. Smith proudly. "If Hitler thinks he's going to win the war against men like this he'd better think again."

(A New York report claimed that refugee children had been aboard the vessel en route to Canada but this was denied by Elder and Dempster Lines, operators of the ship.)

ARRESTED FOR BIGAMY

Toronto, Aug. 8—(CP)—Newton Simmons, 36, of Toronto, was arrested on a bigamy charge yesterday when he appeared in a welfare office to obtain a relief voucher for the support of himself, a woman known as his wife and their four children. Police allege he has gone through marriage ceremonies with two other women living in Toronto.

Frenchmen Know How to Revolt, 'Real France' to Live—Mme. Tabouis

New York, Aug. 8—(CP)—Genevieve Tabouis said Wednesday Frenchmen know how to revolt and predicted that the "real France" will come to life again, "perhaps sooner than any one expects."

Former political writer of the Paris L'Oeuvre, Mme. Habouis arrived here from England July 29, a refugee from France. She spoke at the Overseas Press Club of America.

With the coming of the Spanish civil war, "which divided the Frenchmen more perhaps than a civil war in France might have, appeared the 'fifth column'," she said. After that "it soon was possible to distinguish two Frances in my country, that France which remained loyal to traditional policies of liberty and to an alliance with England and all the other democracies against the dictators, and that France which preferred to give up the entire existing order of society to something more or less resembling dictatorship."

STOUT DEFENCE SEEN OF PORT OF BERBERA

'Natural Lines of Defence' Found In Hills South of Port

ITALIANS TAKE ZEILA

Value of Port of Berbera Is Discussed By Expert On Somaliland

London, Aug. 8—(CP)— British military authorities predicted today that Berbera, principal port of British Somaliland, would be stoutly defended by forces holding the hills south of the city against Italian columns which already have penetrated deep into that British possession.

It was explained that the British would let the Italians extend their lines still further before real resistance was offered.

"It is not sound tactics for us to attempt to stop superior forces on a long frontier," these circles said. "It is far better to wait until the enemy is harassed by poor communications and is far from his base."

Frontier of 750 Miles

The frontier of British Somaliland is long—about 750 miles—these circles pointed out, and an attempted counterblow on the border would be dangerous since it might easily be sidestepped or smothered by the invading force.

Military authorities here said the hills south of Berbera were "natural lines of defence," and neutral military circles were unanimous in the opinion that the first stiff British resistance would be encountered there.

Officers familiar with the terrain however, said it would be interesting to see whether the Italian force of about two battalions which took Zeila would attempt to advance southeastward along the coastal plain to Berbera.

Air Raid Warden Given O. B. E.

London, Aug. 8—(CP)— Donald Louis Jones of Kent is the first air raid warden to be awarded the O. B. E. medal of the civil division. Announcing the award "for meritorious service," the London Gazette said that Jones sheltered air raid victims with his own body for four hours when heavy building material seemed likely to collapse during a raid on a Kentish town.

9 Nazi Planes Downed in Battle Off S. E. England

Struggle Follows Nazi Raid On British Shipping

London, Aug. 8.—(CP)—At least nine German planes—six dive bombers and three fighters—were shot down in a huge air battle which raged along England's southeastern coast this morning, an official announcement said.

Two British fighter pilots were missing after the battle, which followed a German bombing attack on shipping in the narrow waters of the English channel.

The air battle raged far over the Channel, with planes darting in and out of the clouds, sometimes fighting in formation, sometimes in individual dog fights.

One of the German planes shot down was a Messerschmitt 109, forming a part of the fighter escort of the heavy bombers. It plunged into the Channel in flames.

Lasts One Hour

The battle, which grew out of the second raid along the southeast coast during the morning, lasted exactly an hour. An hour and a half after it was over an Air Ministry Communique put the German plane losses at nine.

During the batte planes often swooped within 1,000 feet of rooftops but no bombs were dropped.

Large clouds of smoke were seen near two ports where it was believed two raiders crashed.

The air was split with almost continuous cannon fire from the Messerschmitts, the sharp crackle of answering machine-gun fire from the British spitfires and an unusually heavy barrage of anti-aircraft fire.

Londonderry, Northern Ireland, Aug. 8—(AP)—Two rescued Portuguese sailors paid their debt promptly. Members of the crew of the torpedoed Greek steamship Pindos, were on a pier here when they noticed two Irish bathers in difficulty. Diving 30 feet, the Portuguese brought the bathers to safety.

TEST WHITE POWDER

London, Aug. 8—(CP)—Chemists were trying today to identify a white powder found in the streets of a northwestern town after a German raider passed over during the night. A preliminary examination established that the powder was harmless. A report will be sent to the Ministry of Home Security.

N. P. A. M. Ranks Swell Daily, Present Strength is 70,000

(By Ross Munro Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Ottawa, Aug. 8 (CP)—All across Canada young men these days are turning to part-time soldiery and swelling by many thousands the ranks of the non-permanent active militia before voluntary enlistment in militia units is suspended a week from today.

Ninety-one infantry battalions have been authorized to recruit to full wartime strength, along with 85 batteries of artillery, and are carrying on training at local headquarters all across Canada.

Total N.P.A.M strength of these units on June 20 was 8,000 and it has now jumped to about 70,000, a National Defence Department spokesman told The Canadian Press.

In addition some specialized units such as the army service corps have been ordered to war strength.

More specialized units will start recruiting to war establishment when facilities for training in their particular branches become available, the defence spokesman said.

Total Strength 110,000

Total war strength of all N.P.A.M. units is about 110,000 and at the rate Canadians are flocking to this part-time army it should not take long to fill up the complement. This will provide enough men for four army divisions.

Authorization to go to war strength is made on the recommendation of the District Officer Commanding in the various military districts and training is carried out several nights a week at the units' local headquarters. A two-week camp for the units is scheduled sometime between now and early fall.

There is no immediate plan to mobilize any more N.P.A.M. units into the Canadian Active Service Force. On mobilization officers and men leave their civil jobs and become full-time soldiers. But when the demand for more men arises non-permanent units will be called into the C.A.S.F. on a voluntary basis for service at home or overseas.

Opinion in Military Circles

The general opinion in military circles here is that some units might be mobilized this fall to be assigned to the new Atlantic army command under Maj-Gen. W. H. P. Elkins.

It is considered possible that the 3rd and 4th divisions of the C.A.S.F. may be included in this command along with some national infantry battalions and corps troops. This would create an army corps in the command.

The decision to put the majority of N.P.A.M. units on war strength is associated with the general policy to train Canadians for military service and to make openings for thousands of men who want to enlist voluntarily now.

In most of these units, the officer commanding, his adjutant and several non-commissioned officers have gone on active service to handle recruiting and training of the new men.

Clothing issues of the new battle dress are planned even for the men taking drill several nights a week and rifles likely will be available shortly for musketry practice. At present evening parades consist generally of drill and route marches through city streets.

EMPIRE NATIONS HAVE GREAT TASK IN WAR EFFORTS

British Minister of Supply Appeals To Them To Continue And Increase Efforts.

PROSECUTION OF WAR

London, Aug. 8 — (CP-Cable)—Herbert Morrison, Minister of Supply, appealed to the Empire companies yesterday "to continue and still further increase your efforts" towards successful prosecution of the war.

In a broadcast to the Empire, Mr. Morrison said: "Though the outcome of the war will have most immediate and far reaching effects upon the fortunes of every state and territory in the Empire, you are remote from the immediate shock of the contest."

It is natural that in the circumstances normal civilian interests and activities should loom larger than is the case in the United Kingdom where "almost every waking thought and almost every waking hour of every citizen in the country is filled with thoughts and pursuits of war," the Minister said.

"This means that you have at present a greater margin of capacity and effort over and above the war activity than we have. Perhaps you will ask yourself whether there may not be some part of this margin that you can bring over and harness to the war effort, whether it be a margin of production or of money or of personal service and effort."

MAN-POWER ENROLLMENT

Wellington, New Zealand, Aug. 8—(CP Reuters)—The government issued a proclamation today for enrollment of general reserve manpower which will be liable to compulsory National Service. Minister of National Service Semple announced the first division of the reserve will comprise single men between the ages of 19 and 45. The native Maoris are exempt.

Lloyd George Warns Of Approaching Storm That May Break Soon

London, Aug. 8—(CP) — David Lloyd George warned his fellow Welshmen in a broadcast yesterday that "such a tempest as Britain has never before encountered is about to break upon her and all that she stands for."

"But if the people are worthy of their forefathers," he continued, "Britain will pass through this hurricane fearless and erect and will emerge from its rage mightier and more honored and more powerful than ever for the good of mankind."

The occasion of the message asking the Welsh to steel themselves was to express sympathy on cancellation of the Eisteddfod, the Welsh national music festival.

"Today the valleys of South Wales where this year's Eisteddfod was to be celebrated are bombed night and day by enemy planes," he said.

"The festival is therefore postponed until the tumult and terror of war have ceased to spread dismay and destruction on the world."

SENTENCED TO SEVEN YEARS

Alexandria, Ont., Aug. 8—(CP)—Maxime Latreille, 42, of St. Eugene, Ont., yesterday was sentenced to seven years in Kingston penitentiary when he appeared in Magistrate's Court on a charge of being found in a house while armed with intent to commit an indictable offence.

Last Friday Latreille was captured by residents of nearby Dalkeith who discovered him prowling about the home of Allan Campbell.

BULL KICKS MAN

Painfully injured when he was kicked by a bull, Delbert Shaw, employee of George Graham, Trent Road, was admitted to Belleville General Hospital today. His injuries however, proved not serious and after treatment Shaw was allowed to return to his home.

FRUIT INSPECTOR UNDERGOES OPERATION

Mr. C. T. Stevenson, senior fruit inspector for the Dominion Department of Agriculture in Eastern Ontario, was admitted to Belleville General Hospital on Wednesday where he underwent a tonsilectomy. Mr. Stevenson is recuperating satisfactorily.

FEWER FISHING LICENCES SOLD

"There should not be any shortage of fish in the waters of Hastings County next year," mourned George Finch, local issuer of fishing licences today.

Thus far, approximately fifty per cent. of the licences issued during the corresponding period of a year ago, have found their way into the hands of fishing devotees.

Many regular "customers" of other years have failed to put in an appearance as yet, Mr. Finch said, and this has had some effect on the usual number of licences issued.

FINE BLACK DOG IN CITY POUND

A handsome black dog, believed to be part hound, and with two white front feet and a white breast, was found running at large on Front Street last night by City Poundkeeper Thomas Thorne. The dog was removed to the city pound where it will be held for 48 hours pending ownership.

WILD MORNING GLORY WEEDS HINDER CUTTING OF GRAIN

Heavy grain crops, and the prevalence of wild morning glory, a reedy weed, is causing plenty of trouble to farmers and their harvesting machinery, according to implement dealers. The morning glory becomes entwined in the mechanical parts of the binders and the resulting damage to tying apparatus is causing lengthy delays. One dealer reported that he was called upon to service no less than four binders in one afternoon.

Boy Nearly Drowns In Unusual Accident

Tweed (Special)—Vern Pattison, eleven year old son of Mr. and Mrs. George Pattison, Tweed, had a narrow escape from drowning at Memorial Park on Monday. Wearing a shirt over his bathing suit, he jumped into the water from the top of the diving tower, causing the shirt to fly up over his head. Unable to remove it on rising to the surface and finding breathing difficult, he threshed about until he attracted attention of nearby swimmers who soon extricated him from his predicament. He was little the worse for his experience, but it is safe to say the youngster will in future go swimming in orthodox swimming apparel.

Visits Tweed After Long Absence

Mr. Chas. LaBerge of Winnipeg is renewing acquaintances in Tweed after an absence of forty years in the western metropolis. He left Tweed as a lad of 15 to make his fortune and has prospered in the Great West where he has been engaged in railroading. Mr. LaBerge noted a great many changes in the village which he left four decades ago, changes which he notes have greatly enhanced the beauty and prosperous appearance of the village.

"Forty years have brought about other great changes," observed Mr. LaBerge. "There are few left of the older inhabitants while most of the business places are under new managements."

Oddfellows Held Picnic

The annual picnic of the Oddfellows Lodges of District No. 45 was held in Tweed Memorial Park on Civic Holiday, August 5th. The members of the Lodges with their wives and families enjoyed the outing which was held under ideal conditions and pleasant surroundings.

The lodges of District 45 include Thomasburg, Stirling, Madoc, Frankford, Campbellford and Tweed. Some members of Havelock Lodge were also present. Mr. Newton Foster and family of Kingston motored to Tweed for the day.

A program of sports was arranged by Noble Grand Alex. Nicolson and L. A. MacDougal, Recording Secretary of Tweed Lodge No. 290. The following were the winners:

Girls, five years and under—Vera Martin, Thomasburg.

Boys, five years and under—1st, Jack Countryman; 2nd Jack Fisher, Tweed.

Girls, seven and under—1st, Vivian Vance, Thomasburg; 2nd, Jean Martin, Thomasburg.

Boys, seven and under—1st, Donald Foster, Kingston; 2nd, Ross Bradshaw, Stirling.

Girls, ten and under—1st, Vivian Vance; 2nd, Ruby Bateman, Thomasburg.

Noble Grands' Race—Alex. Nicolson, Tweed.

Fat Men's Race—Newton Foster, Kingston.

Fat Women's Race—Mrs. L. A. MacDougal, Tweed.

A prize was given to the oldest Oddfellow present. Mr. Albert Beatty, who is in his 82nd year, was the recipient of this prize.

Another feature of the afternoon's sport was a softball game between two teams of Oddfellows, the Blues and the Reds. The former were winners by a score of 31 to 17. The line-up:

Blues—E. Jones, M. Tanner, Wes. Farrell, G. Smith, C. Jones, L. A. MacDougal, Geo. Carlisle, D. Vance, A. Martin.

Reds—T. Graham, A. A. Nicholson, Bill Edwards, H. Coulter, N. Foster, D. Porter, H. Geen, S. Lee, H. Way.

History of H. and P. E. Regiment Summarized in English Paper

Stirling, (Special)—A copy of the English military publication, "The Rally" was recently received by Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Wood of Stirling from their son, Frank, now serving with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment in England and the following history and data set forth may be of interest to many in the territory from which the regiment was recruited:

The Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, C.A.S.F. takes its name from the two counties of Hastings and Prince Edward in Central Ontario. The regiment is an amalgamation of two of the oldest regiments in Canada, the 16th Prince Edward Regiment, formed in 1862 and the 49th Hastings Rifles formed in 1864. The Regiment is allied to the Royal Sussex Regiment which served under Wolfe on the Plains of Abraham, Quebec, when the impossible was achieved by the scaling of the Heights at midnight and the troops were assembled for battle at dawn. The Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment will live up to the tradition of their sister regiment, the Royal Sussex.

Lieut.-Col. H. L. N. Salmon, M. C., with bar, Commanding, served with 28th Battalion, 1916-18, won his battle honor at Courcellette, 1916, and the bar to the medal at Passchendael, 1917. He was twice wounded on the Somme, 1916 and at Arras, 1918, and served with R.C.R. permanent force for 20 years. Since 1929 he was G.S.O. on H.Q., M.D. No. 3 at Kingston. On the declaration of war he was in the War Office, London, and on February 5th took over Command.

Major H. D. Graham, second in command, attested with the 155th and served with the 15th Battalion and the 21st Battalion and on Corps Headquarters in France as a private and N.C.O. He was educated at Osgoode Hall, Toronto. Called to the bar in 1921, he was a practicing lawyer in Trenton on the outbreak of hostilities. He served continuously with the regiment since 1923 and is a graduate of the advanced militia staff course at R. M.C., Kingston.

R.S.M., A. B. Duffy, served with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment N.P.A.M. since 1930, attesting as a signaller. He advanced step by step to the rank of C.S.M. until December 1939, when he was appointed Regimental Sergt.-Major at the age of 26, the first soldier in a family of seven. His father, for over twenty-five years, was with the C.N.R., Trenton. He attended the coronation representing the unit and wears the ribbon.

Lt. D. B. Whytock, Adjt., joined the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, N.P.A.M., 1939, as a private. He received his commission shortly after attestation and attended the Small Arms School of Musketry and the School of Military Administration. He graduated from Queen's University, Kingston, with the Bachelor of Commerce Degree in 1933. He was born at Madoc, Ont.

C.Q.M.S., R. L. Montgomery, "A" Coy., with the Bodyguards, Toronto, attested Aug. 1, 1914, with the 4th C.M.R. He was wounded at Ypres, 1916, when C.Q.M.S. at Sanctuary Wood. He was presented to H.M. the King on inspection of the First Canadian Division. He was assistant manager Famous Players Canadian Corporation, Ltd., Trenton, Ont. He attested with the Hastings-Prince Edward, 5th Sept., 1939. He has just returned from France. In his last job he destroyed trucks and equipment of the whole regiment. Jerry is welcome to the junk left.

Sergt. A. E. Storms, H. Q. Company, Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, attested Sept. 29th as a private and was promoted to Sergeant Oct. 3, 1939. He has the distinction of being the last Canadian to leave France. Lieut. Bruce Peterkin of a British unit, called for volunteers to stay behind and assist in the destruction of transports, equipment, material, stores and fuel, etc.

"Returnnig with convoy at Brest," he said, "I was asked by the lieutenant to assist him in his work. On receiving authority I was attached to their unit until we landed at a south coast port."

C.Q.M.S. H. W. Fox attested 1915 with the 4th Canadian Field Ambulance attached to the 18th Battalion. He was wounded four days before the Armistice, Nov. 7th, 1918. He attested 11th Sept. with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regt. "D" Coy. He has just returned from France.

Garage Operators Association Holds Annual Picnic at Oak Lake

250 Members and Families Gather For Fun and Frolic At Popular Resort

MANY FINE PRIZES

Approximately 250 persons, members of the Garage Operators' Association, their wives and families, crowded to Searles' Beach, Oak Lake, on Wednesday afternoon as the Garage Operators of Hastings and Prince Edward Counties staged their annual picnic. From the distant parts of both counties, the men who keep the wheels of motordom rolling, the mechanic, the salesmen, the dealer and the service station attendant with their loved ones were just one big family as the garagemen all got together for their one big social event of the year.

With softball games, foot races, swimming races, water slides and swings with candy scrambles and free ice cream and pop for the kiddies and a delightful picnic luncheon to top off the afternoon's program of sports fun and frolic and a grand time for everyone, both young and old, was assured.

Judging from the quality and numbers of prizes given for participation in the various sporting events the Garage Operators permit no fooling when it comes to making a success of their annual picnic. Prizes there were for everyone with the drawing for the grand prize of a portable radio and consolation prizes topping off the sports program.

To the following firms go the appreciation of the Garage Operators for their generosity in donating the special prizes: Portable radio, donated by General Motors. Coffee maker, by Ford Motors. Tension wrench, by Perfect Circle Piston Ring Co. Storage Battery, by Hastings Motors. Toaster by Trudeau Motors. Pfleuger fishing reel, by McQuay Norriss Co. Set of spark plugs by Champion Spark Plug Co. Set of brake lining by Canadian Raybestos Company. Six flashlights by Keyes Supply and a toaster by Big "A" Company.

Sports Program

A full program of sports were enjoyed by the children with winners of the novelty races for grown-ups being: Men's wheelbarrow race, Clayton Gilroy and Ed Younge; Fat men's race (200 pounds and over) Toots Holway and Jim Elliott; Married women's race, Mrs. Ed. Younge and Mrs. Clayton Gilroy; Obstacle race, Clayton Gilroy and Ed. Younge. Egg and spoon race, Mrs. Kenneth Vivian and Mildred Twiddy. Women's three-legged race, Mildred Twiddy and Mrs. Ken Vivian; Men's three-legged race, Clayton Gilroy and Ed. Younge; Girls' 50 yard swim, Eileen Bradshaw, Doris Jandrew, both of Stirling; Boys' 50 yard swim, Bill Holway and Ken Whitney; Boys' swim (15 years and over), Bill Ketcheson and Fred Bly.

A softball game between the "grease monkeys" and the "gas boys" was productive of more fun than good ball playing. After five innings of comedy however during which time the players were guilty of several departures from the rules, "Toots" Holway's "gas boys" proved the lustiest hitters as they rolled up a decisive 32-12 score.

Mr. Jack Trudeau was the lucky winner in the draw for the portable radio, which climaxed the afternoon's sporting activities, with Al Hitchon taking the second prize of the coffee maker. Consolation prizes of a toaster and set of spark plugs were won by Ed Younge and Frank Sherman respectively.

Music and dancing in the pavilion until late in the evening brought the afternoon's fun to a close.

OBITUARY

HARRY LIDDLE

(Tyendinaga Township)

Harry Liddle, residence in the 4th concession of Tyendinaga Township, died in the Belleville General Hospital on Wednesday, August 7th., after a brief illness.

The late Mr. Liddle, who was in his 42nd year, was born in Tyendinaga Township, being a son of Mr. and Mrs. William Liddle. All his life was passed in the township where he was born and he was engaged in farming. In the community he was well known and highly respected and his sudden passing has brought sincere regret to many friends. In religion he was a member of the United Church at Melrose.

Surviving him are his wife; two sons and one daughter; his parents, and one sister, Miss Eva Liddle.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

LATE STEPHEN G. THURSTON, (Picton).

Picton, Aug. 8—(Special) — The funeral of Stephen G. Thurston was held this afternoon at the A. M. Palmatier funeral home. Rev. J. B. Creeggan officiated and interment was in Glenwood cemetery.

Mr. Thurston was in his 93rd year and had been ill for some months. He was widely known as a blacksmith, following this occupation for 45 years. He was also widely known as an old time fiddler and played at hundreds of dances.

His wife passed away in 1916. Surviving are two sons, Edward with whom he made his home and Merton in Calgary. Two daughters predeceased him.

LATE CHARLES HENRY SCOTT (Stirling)

Stirling, Aug. 8— (Special)—Friends and relatives from all parts of the district gathered to pay their final tribute of respect at the funeral of the late Charles Henry Scott, held at the family residence West Front Street, Stirling, on Friday, August 2, 1940. Death came suddenly while deceased apparently in good health was at work in the fields on Wednesday, July 31st. Born in Napanee in 1877 he was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Scott. A resident of the Stirling district for the past thirty-eight years, he moved to the village twelve years ago from his farm just west of Stirling.

The funeral service was conducted by Rev. W. H. V. Walker of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Stirling and Rev. James E. Beckel of Rawdon United Church Circuit. A message of comfort to the sorrowing ones was delivered by Mr. Beckel and during the service Mr. Arthur Duncan sang "Some Day We'll Understand."

Left to mourn the loss of a loving husband and kind father are his wife formerly Mrs. Blanche Carr, one son Mr. John Scott, Prince Edward County, and two daughters (Geraldine) Mrs. Harry Keller, Stirling; (Marjorie) Mrs. Sidney Gibson, Smithfield.

The pall bearers were Messrs. George Meggison, Arthur Vandervoort, Harry Sheridan, H. Dafoe, Claude Tucker and Archie McGee. Interment was made in the Stirling cemetery.

LATE MALCOLM DELYEA

(Queensboro)

Queensboro, Aug. 8—(Special)—After an illness of some months' duration, Mr. Malcolm Delyea passed away at his home near Queensboro on Sunday, Aug. 4th.

The deceased, who was in his eighty-fourth year, was a life-long resident of this community.

Surviving him are his wife and four sons, Robert of Bancroft, Frank of British Columbia, William, United States and Edward at home, also four daughters, Margaret, (Mrs. S. Hinds), Lindsay, Jennie, (Mrs. Fox), Toronto, Lizzie in the west and Georgina at home.

The funeral service which was held in the home on Tuesday afternoon was in charge of Rev. E. D. Snelgrove, pastor of the United Church. The bearers were Messrs. George Glover, Felix Lapalm, Garry Barry, Fred Sager, George Gordon and Harlan Sexsmith.

Interment was made in Greenwood cemetery.

KIWANIAN SHOW ON FOR AUG. 14-15

'Karnival' Will Be Featured With Draw For War Savings Stamps—Tickets On Sale

Belleville Kiwanis, long noted as one of the outstanding service clubs in this district have again thrown the gauntlet into the ring in a challenge against Hitlerism, and an urgent desire to maintain their traditions and "help others".

Next week, August 14th and 15th they launch their annual "Kiwanis Street Karnival," long noted as a funfest for everyone.

The clubmen in their efforts to not only provide high class entertainment for the general public are not forgetting their duties individually and collectively to Canada. Handsome prizes amounting to $350.00 in War Savings Stamps will be given away and will be drawn for on both nights.

Tickets for the draw which also admits one to the Karnival will be on sale on the streets starting today and Kiwanis members urge the general public to buy them not only to assist the club to help others but to help Canada in her war effort.

As for the entertainment, it will be of typical Kiwanis calibre. A section of Front Street will be segregated and there the jovial clubmen will hold sway. Games, and more games, novelty attractions, music, mirth and melody not to mention hilarious comedy will be part of the hodge-podge of entertainment served up by the club.

And lest we forget, before leaving the ticket subject, Kiwanians stress the point that each ticket will entitle its owner to eight draws on the eight War Savings Certificates to be given away. Buy your tickets from any clubman or the young ladies on the street.

It is expected that an important surprise will await the public on each night but these cannot be divulged as yet. Members are leaving no stone unturned to make their 1940 Karnival the biggest and best in its history and a large crowd is anticipated.

ECONOMIC RESOURCES

One of the strong bonds and great defences of Britain is the economic strength of the Empire and the greatness of the goodwill of world nations toward Britain. Hitler's Germany and Mussolini's Italy have not the goodwill of any state nor have they economic strength.

How important this is to be was indicated in the remarks of Arthur Greenwood, on the formation of the British Economic War Policy Committee. Britain thoroughly knows the economic situation and these great realities stand at her side along with her strength in army and navy and air fleet.

MINES' HELP IN WARTIME

Canadian mines are being appreciated in these days when their output is doing so much for the war effort of the Dominion in conjunction with the Empire to rid the world of Nazism. Canada is producing the gold and the base metals which go a long way towards making Britain strong. According to the North Bay Nugget some of the mines are even sacrificing their life expectancy in this effort. Production is at the highest.

Canada has been privileged to be rich in the natural and material wealth which serve an important part in building up a nation in the time when the sinews of wealth must be at their strongest.

The men who have prospected and helped to develop the mines of the Dominion deserve the gratitude of the people on what they have accomplished.

Incidentally the mines have in times of peace been one of the great sources of employment and distribution of wealth.

INTEREST IN AFRICA

Is the Italian dictator going to try a blitzkrieg of his own against Egypt, as some observers are inclined to think? Reports during the past few days may indicate some attempt on the part of the Italians to try to cross the desert of Libya. One writer suggests that an attempt of this nature would be as difficult in its way as an attempt at invasion of England by the Germans.

One of the defences which guards the British interests is the heat of the country through which the enemy would have to come, with temperature rising as high as 120 degrees, to many men something impossible to face. Britain's desert troops are well trained and hardened to the type of campaign which would be useful in such a country.

The Fascists have looked with longing eyes upon Africa, the northern part of which was in ancient days associated with the life of the old world and part of the Roman empire or in intimate contact with it. Today Africa is vastly more important than it was in the days of the ancient Romans. Britain has made one of the great benefactions of history by the manner in which she has gone ahead to develop and not exploit the various parts of Africa. Italy, which has African colonies and Germany which had colonies but does not now possess them did not develop their colonies, but rather endeavored to extract from them wealth without making this wealth serve in developing the peoples of the colonies. To Britain's glory it must be said that she has fostered the peoples of the colonies for their good as their attitude in times of stress shows, for they are appreciative of the work which Britain has done for them. For the Germans and the Italians there is no expression of loyalty that comes from the heart.

BRITISH POLICY

Britain will not deviate from her policy of keeping food shipments out of German-occupied territory, it has been stated by the British Ministry of Economic Warfare. With this goes the expression of the view that there need not be any famine in Europe this winter, for Ministry experts have declared the continent's harvests and reserves ought to be adequate with distribution to prevent any general famine.

But the Germans must not take the best of everything for themselves and leave the conquered populations hungry.

The belief is that Germany would take advantage of any food shipments into the German-occupied territory to seize such and that much of it would go to feed the war machine of the Nazis which Britain is trying to crush.

One authoritative source in London yesterday that food shipments would not be allowed through the blockade even if they were to be distributed by an organization which Britain could trust completely. As a press dispatch stated the British view is that any such food would make the whole situation that much easier for the Germans, relieving them of their troubles with hungry people.

Letter to the Editor

The Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer,
Belleville, Ont.
Dear Sir,-

May I draw attention through your valuable columns to the weed menace. Our main highways are the chief breeding ground of cornflower, blue devil, sow thistle and sweet clover, and in some cases the adjacent fields are a national disgrace. The fire hazard is also serious from these uncut weeds and hay at the roadside.

Our Minister of Highways spends millions around Hamilton and Niagara Falls, but here everything goes to seed, not only metaphorically, but actually.

However I know from long experience that nothing will be done about this, or about anything else that might improve our lot in life. The war is no excuse because this sort of thing has been going on unchecked for years. We are all resolute" but nobody "acts." Thousands of unemployed and no one to cut weeds or hay.

In another decade or two we will all be Indians again. Fishing, hunting and catering one way or another to tourists. There is nothing more certain—for there will be nothing else to do, and most of us are doing it now. The degeneration of this wonderful country during the last 30 years is pathetic.

Yours very truly,
Jamieson Bone.

Getting Along With Cows

(Brandon Sun)

Big city newspapermen are often recruited from rural sections. How else would the editor of the New York Herald-Tribune know so much about cows as to say that anyone who has ever had to deal with cows—those ordinarily placid but occasionally exasperating creatures — must sympathize with the London woman who when applying to join the Woman's Land Army, organized to provide agricultural labor to replace the men, said: "It's only 'itler 'as driven me to cows. I 'ate 'em". It must come as a severe wrench to a city woman who knows nothing and cares less about farm life to be assigned to a task which forces her to be the handmaiden of a cow. In this case, however, it is one of the rigors of war which must be undertaken in the name of patriotism.

And yet, if one brings to the task a willingness to learn, and some desire to understand the vagaries of the beasts of the field, communion with cows can be anything but an unpleasant part of life. Milkmaids throughout history have been famous in fact and fiction as sturdy, dependable, and in some instances as rather romantic figures. They lead a healthful life. The work, while forcing one to keep a pretty strict schedule, and in some respects a bit onerous, is by no means backbreaking.

Moreover, some persons, fresh from the city pavements, appear to have a hitherto undisclosed "way" with cows, just as other persons have the knack of getting along with horses, dogs or other animals. Who knows but that the London woman who berates Hitler for forcing her to the cow sheds may turn out to be one of these. If so, she will come to have a certain affection for the cows' sweet-scented breath and the sight of the placid herd coming home at dusk. Yes, there are plenty of worse things than tending cows. Tending mules is one of them.

Poles Remember

(Windsor Star)

Michigan's Poles in their thousands attended Mass on Sunday, too, another privilege which it is hard for their compatriots in Poland to maintain, although all indications are that Nazi efforts to crush religion in the "old country" have failed. Only one Mass is allowed on Sunday, except in Warsaw, where there are two. On weekdays the churches may stay open for only three hours, before 7 in the morning. But more people go to church than ever before. Recently in Poznan, when the Huns ordered prayers for Hitler to be said in the churches, no priest complied. Poles cannot marry without the consent of the German marriage bureau. Baptism is forbidden for Poles in the part of Poland incorporated into the Reich and extreme unction cannot be given to the dying except in secret. Michigan's Poles — Canada's, too—have something to cherish and hang onto.

Huge Oil Tanks Bombed Near Bergen

London, Aug. 8 (CP)—An Admiralty announcement said that British planes had carried the war to the German-occupied coast of Norway, with units of the fleet air arm successfully attacking a gasoline storage depot five miles south of Bergen.

The Admiralty's statement:

"Aircraft of the fleet air arm have carried out a successful attack on a petrol storage depot at Dolvik, about five miles south of Bergen. There were three petrol storage tanks with a total capacity of 7,200 tons at this depot.

"The largest of the three tanks was seen to blow up. The second largest was badly damaged and set on fire. The smallest tank, the pumping station and the jetty were severely damaged.

MASCOTS GO TO WAR WITH THE MEN, THEY PLAY THEIR PART (In The Canadian Veteran)

Ask any old soldier how many British regiments have mascots. He will begin by telling you about the Welch goat, the wolfhound of the Irish Guards, the antelope of the Royal Warwicks.

Today there are only two regiments whose mascots are officially recognized and taken on the ration strength, the Royal Welch Fusiliers and the Welch Regiment. The mascot of each is a goat. They have regimental numbers and carry identity disc in wartime, a field service dressing.

The earliest mention of a regimental mascot is in Donkin's "Military Recollections and Remarks," published in 1777. He records:

"The Royal Regiment of Welch fusiliers has a privileged honor of passing in review preceded by a goat with gilded horns and adorned with ringlets of flowers; and although this may not come immediately under the denomination of a reward for merit, yet the corps values itself much on the ancientness of the custom."

The original goat of the Welch Regiment was a pet belonging to Major (afterwards Sir Thomas) Gore-Browne, commanding the 41st Regiment (Welch Regiment) in 1841. This goat marched with the regiment into Afghanistan in 1842 and died in the Bolan Pass.

Goat Was Mascot

After this a goat became the regimental mascot and was officially recognized just before the outbreak of the Crimean War in 1854. The goat of those days accompanied the regiment throughout the war and died in 1861.

Two of the Welch Regiment's goats have died on "active service". "Cwilym Jenkins" (the goats were named for the purpose of drawing rations), after marching with the regiment from Graspan to Bloemfontein, being present at the actions at Paardeberg and Driefontein, died of colic on the march from Bloemfontein to Springfield.

The other, "Taffy IV", died at Bethune on January 20, 1915, after going through the Retreat from Mons and being with the regiment at the battles of the Marne and Aisne.

A few years ago his successor "mutinied" on parade. The regiment was ready to move off on church parade led by the goat, Rex. When the commanding officer gave the order to march, Rex calmly sat down and refused to move. The regiment was halted. Rex was placed under arrest and led away.

The reason for his insubordination was that the goat major was away and Rex would take orders from nobody else.

The goats of both these regiments have for many years been presented by the reigning Sovereign from the herd at Windsor. On parade their horns and hooves are gilded and they wear light harness.

During the Peninsular War nearly every British regiment had a live mascot. The 1st Grenadier Guards adopted a poodle belonging to Sir Arthur Ponsonby. At the battle of the Niva this dog remained with its master in the front of the attack and was wounded. Minus a leg it returned to England, apparently proud of being a war-disabled Grenadier.

Tried to Arrest Dog

When the 1st Leinsters (Prince of Wales, Royal Canadians) first came to England (1858) they brought a black Newfoundland dog, Sam. Dogs were against Aldershot orders, so the military police tried to arrest Sam. The Canadians had a different idea. The result of the scrap was that authority gave permission for Sam to be kept but not seen.

Sam strictly observed the permanent C.B. until a divisional field day, when the regiment was in line in front of the staff of the whole command. Then he suddenly appeared trailing a chewed rope.

In the return march to the barracks, Sam insisted on marching in front of the band. The claim was never afterwards disputed.

The largest regimental mascot on record appears to be the elephant adopted in 1838 by the 78th Highlanders (now the Seaforths). The regimental badge, an elephant, was granted for distinguished service at the Battle of Assaye, India, in 1803.

Of course many regiments now have unofficial mascots. One that has been recently photographed by the press like a film star is Cruachan, the Shetland pony presented by Princess Louise, their Colonel-in-Chief, to the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders.

Notable among these was the Irish-terrier-cum-collie, Prince, who accomplished the remarkable canine feat of finding his way alone from London to the French trench in which his master, James Brown, was serving with the 1st North Staffords. Incidentally, this story, which received a good deal of publicity at the time, was verified by the R. S. P. C. A., who set out to prove that Prince must have been taken up to the front line

Surviving all the actions in which the 1st North Staffords were engaged for the remainder of the war, Prince stayed with the battalion until he was demobilized to quarantine in 1918, after which he joined his master in Stafford.

It would be pleasant to say that Prince died comfortably in his bed of serene old age, but his war experiences had prematurely aged him, and the exertion of chasing a mouse one day killed him.

Mac, a mongrel, attached himself at the age of six weeks to Sergeant-Major Balcombe of the 449th Siege Battery.

Buried By a Shell

Mac, who always insisted on being at the side of his master's battery, got buried one day by a shell. The experience failed to cure him of his habit and he remained with the battery until it was forced to retire with the 4th Army.

In that retreat Mac was lost and was last seen running toward the enemy. Four days later he turned up at his master's side as usual, and eventually went with him to Germany with the Army of Occupation.

Those who served in H.M.S. Iron Duke during the war will remember their bulldog mascot, Peggy, who joined the ship in 1915 and was under fire at Jutland.

In 1919 Peggy went to Harrod's to collect for St. Bartholomew's Hospital. A few months later she was auctioned by Mr. George Robey in aid of the same hospital. "Lot 21" as she had become, was sold for one hundred and thirty-five guineas. Her new owner gave her back to the Iron Duke, then with the Mediterranean Fleet. It is said that when she had recovered from an illness at Malta, a destroyer made a special trip to restore her to the Iron Duke.

Rags of Gallipoli, a mongrel sheep dog, joined a regiment of Fusiliers. With this regiment he landed on V Beach the day the campaign began. An A.P.M. ordered his destruction. From this death he was saved by the late Lieutenant-Commander H. M. S. Forbes, then a midshipman in H.M.S. Cornwallis. He remained with his rescuer throughout the campaign, partly in the Cornwallis, partly in the transport River Clyde, and ashore. His favorite game was chasing shells which fell in the sea near the shore.

Made Lucky Escape

One of Rags' many escapes from death was when he and his master were taking cover in a shellhole. Forbes saw a brother officer in another shellhole and, with Rags, joined him. Immediately they had left a 12-inch shell obliterated all trace of their late shelter.

Later Rags went with Mr. Forbes to the sloop Aster. She was blown up by a mine off the Maltese coast. All hands—and Rags—were saved. His next ship was H.M.S. Vampire, of a destroyer flotilla in the North Sea. Rags felt the confinement and lack of exercise, became ill, and was put ashore.

After the Armistice, Rags went to Buckingham Palace with his master, who was decorated with the D.S.C. for gallantry at Gallipoli. Rags died in Malta in 1926.

Strange mascots were those, Jimmy and Jane, gander and goose, who served with "A Battery," 52nd Brigade, R.F.A. in France, 1915-1919.

They were originally purchased to be fattend up for providing dinner in the officers' mess on Christmas Day, 1915. Someone in the battery adopted them as pets and instead of being eaten they were kept as mascots. After many battlefield adventures they were sent to the London Zoo. Jimmy died there in 1920, his wife in 1931, on a farm in Berkshire.

Rin Tin Tin, the famous Alsatian dog of the films, was a Great War veteran. This dog, known the world over, was born in a German trench at Metz. He was left behind when the Germans retreated and was found by an American officer. Lieutenant Lee-Duncan, who kept him until the war was over. He then traveled with his master to America, where he soon became world famous. Rin Tin Tin died in 1932 while, strangely enough, taking part in a film called "The Pride of the Regiment."

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Many Uses for Extract of Ovary

All physicians today use insulin or protamine zink insulin in the treatment of diabetes. Insulin is an extract of the pancreatic glands, situated one on top of each kidney. Extract of the thyroid gland in the neck and extract of the pituitary gland lying on the floor of the skull are also in everyday use for various conditions of the body.

Another gland extract that is coming more and more into everyday use is extract of the ovaries or female sex glands. It has been a real blessing to women approaching, at, and following the menopause. It "steadies" or quiets the nerves so that many patients are spared the necessity of mental treatment in an institution, relieves shock, and lessens the number and severity of hot flushes or flashes. That it can be of great help in other body disturbances is not as yet recognized by many physicians.

I have mentioned the work of Dr. I. H. Blaisdell, Boston, who reported excellent results in the treatment of 60 cases of dry catarrh with the very disagreeable odor, by use of a spray of ovary extract (estrin) into the nose. The dry crusts causing the odor disappeared in all 30 cases where onset of catarrh occurred after age of 20, and in 84 per cent of the 30 cases which occurred before the age of 20.

I have also mentioned the excellent results obtained in chronic catarrhal deafness by use of ovary extract, also used in the form of a spray into the nose. "Because of the wide variety of its effects on the body, it seems possible that estrin, properly used, may be of value in combating diseases and disorders which have been heretofore obscure". "The action of estrin is more far-reaching than insulin and more powerful than adrenalin".

Just how estrin acts on the nose is not at present known.

If, then, extract of ovary has shown itself to give great relief from symptoms at menopause, in the treatment of that distressing ailment—the dry form of catarrh, and also in catarrhal deafness, do not hesitate to use it in any form prescribed by your physician for other obscure or persistent disturbances of your body.

At the present time, ovary extract is prescribed in tablet form taken by mouth, by injection into the skin, and in the form of a nasal spray.

TAMING BOMB

"The approved methods of destroying or rendering a bomb harmless appear to be soaking it in water or oil, or carrying it to a vacant lot and shooting at it with a rifle, all of which are more or less uncertain, depending on the bomb's construction," states R. W. Wood, research professor of physics at Johns Hopkins University.

"I have repeatedly emphasized, both in my lectures on 'Bombs and Explosives' at J. Edgar Hoover's police training school in Washington, and at the various police laboratories that I have visited, that, in my opinion, fire was the easiest, most certain and safest method of detonating or rendering harmless a suspected box or parcel.

"My advice has been to lay a small bonfire behind a large tree, wall or good-sized rock; place the suspected bomb on top of it, lighting the paper kindling and retreating to a safe distance before the flame reaches the package. No bomb will fail to declare itself in a hot fire, and if dynamite is present the chances are that most of it will burn harmlessly if the flame reaches it before setting off the detonator."—(Windsor Star.)

PLEDGE OF GOOD CITIZEN

(Hamilton Spectator-

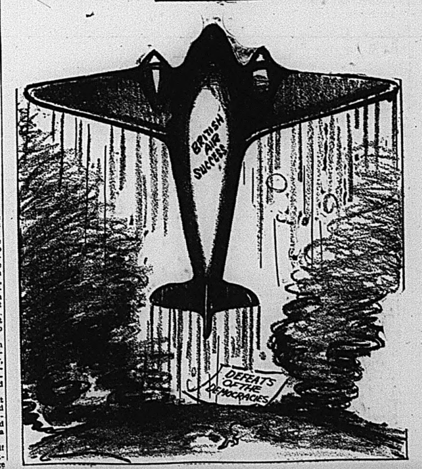
We will never bring disgrace to this city by any act of dishonesty or cowardice, nor ever desert our suffering comrades in the ranks.

"We will fight for the ideals and the sacred things of the city, both singly and together. We will revere and obey the city's laws and do our best to incite a like respect and reverence in those above us who are prone to annul or set them at naught.

"We will strive unceasingly to quicken the public sense of civic duty. Thus in all these ways we will transmit this city not only not less, but greater, better and more beautiful than it was transmitted to us."

(The ancient Athenian fathers taught their sons this pledge of a good citizen, which they afterwards recited in public.)

THE PHOENIX!



Neighbours' Aid Of Thurlow Arranges Successful Picnic

NEIGHBORS AID Gbrem

2nd. Thurlow — The Neighbors' Aid held a very successful picnic at Bird's Beach, Oak Lake, on Tuesday, July 30th. About 68 members and their families, old neighbors and friends of 2nd line sat down to well laden tables. The President, Mrs. A. Greatrix called the gathering to order and in remembrance of the unfortunate folk where war has made it impossible to hold family gatherings, asked that one minute silence be held, after which Grace was sung. Later a clothes pin scramble for older folk and a peanut scramble for the younger ones were enjoyed. Swimming and social chat completed a very happy outing.

BRITAIN'S MECHANIZED ARMY AWAITS NAZIS

These pictures were made somewhere in England, and they depict the activities of a former famous British cavalry regiment which has been equipped with new armored cars aptly called "Ironsides," and in which the soldiers can proceed at high speed to the scene of invasion by the enemy. At the TOP the troops have received news of an attack in a nerby sector and dash for their motorized "steeds." BELOW the regiment sets out at full speed for the objective and at the BOTTOM the soldiers leap from their tiny cars prepared to destroy the enemy.

The Products of Canada's Fisheries constitute one of the greatest sources of Canada's Wealth. The more Sea Foods we consume, the more purchasing power we place in the hands of thousands of Canada's Citizens engaged in the Fishing Industry. The Loss of Export Markets is seriously affecting earnings of the fishermen, and the Canadian Government has therefore undertaken to help market excess stocks of Canned Lobster ordinarily exported to Great Britain and France.

By using more of this Health Giving Sea Food in Summer Salads, etc., you are contributing to the earnings of Canadian Fishermen and helping them carry on during the War, which is the cause of the present loss on overseas markets.

WEDDINGS

MARSHALL—THOMPSON

A quiet wedding was solemnized Tuesday evening, at the home of the Rev. Mr. Knox, when Miss Effie Thompson, daughter of Mr. Marshall Thompson and the late Mrs. Pearl Thompson of Arden, was united in marriage to Douglas Marshall, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Marshall of Coe Hill.

After the ceremony a buffet lunch was served at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Soules of 83 South Church Street. Among the guests were Mrs. Ernest Woodcock of Arden, Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Thompson, Mrs. Isabel Soules of Corbyville and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Navin.

The bride and groom are taking an eastern trip after which they will reside near Shannonville.

SUMMERS—BUCKINGHAM

A quiet wedding took place at Bancroft Anglican Church at twelve o'clock on Monday, August 5th., when Joan Eileen daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Buckingham, Toronto, became the bride of Reginald Summers, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Westley Summers, Bancroft. Rev. G. A. Gordier officiated.

The bride was attended by Miss Kay Bennett, Toronto, and Mrs. V. L. Doig, Belleville. Mr. Ralph Hornbeck, R.C.A., Petawawa, was groomsman.

Wedding luncheon was served, following the ceremony, at the summer home of the bride's parents, "Edenswold", Baptiste Lake. The bride and groom left on a wedding trip to Ottawa.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Superstitions

Since I began, some months ago, to discuss various superstitions about child and maternal care in this column I have had correspondence with a large number of persons who have sent me stories of superstitions common in their locality. Some of these superstitions were new to me but most of them I had encountered before. The letters showed that most medical superstitions are rather generally held.

One of these concerns what are called "Madstones". These stones removed from the abdomens of animals, have always been looked on as being endowed with magical properties. [I suppose this is because the uneducated people couldn't understand how these stones got inside the abdomen of man or beast and concluded they must have been put there by magic.

"Madstones", are given credit for performing all sorts of miracle cures. Around here when I began practise over thirty years ago, those madstones were common. I haven't run across one lately. In those days, a madstone if rubbed over a cut, or wound, was supposed to heal the spot, and prevent the formation of pus, or blood-poisoning.

Of course, this is ridiculous, and could lead to a great deal of trouble, for if someone with a bad wound depended on a madstone for treatment when he should have a doctor, he might very easily pay for his folly with his life. Madstones were also supposed to be a sure cure for hydrophobia, an equally ridiculous belief.

A letter tells me about a superstition in central States about butternut trees. Bark from these trees is supposed to be good for the stomach and bowels. But, great care must be taken in removing that bark from the tree. If it is to be used as a laxative, then the bark must be peeled DOWN. If, whoever removes the bark scrapes the tree up then the resultant medicine wouldn't act as a laxative, but will be an emetic! When a patient was given some of this medicine and it made him really ill, then the champions of the potion declared that whoever had secured the bark had scraped it off with both upward and downward strokes.

As I have said before, most old wives' superstitions are usually harmless. But beliefs like those we referred to above are actually dangerous and should be combatted wherever found. I know many persons in cities today probably smile at these superstitions in the belief that nobody takes any stock in them these days. If they were a country doctor they would know differently.

REEKS—GRAVES

A quiet but pretty wedding took place on Tuesday, July 30th., at St. Patricks Church, Quebec City, Que., when Miss Margaret Graves, daughter of Mr. Jesse P. Graves, Picton, and the late Mrs. Graves, became the bride of Mr. William Thomas Reeks, son of Mrs. Ernest J. Reeks, Toronto, and the late Mr. Reeks. Rev. P. J. Gallery, C.SS.R., was the officiating clergyman.

The bride was given away by her father, Mr. J. P. Graves, and was attended by her sister, Mrs. Thomas Flurey, Belleville. Mr. Ennis Graves, brother of the bride, acted as groomsman. The bride wore a chic pressed rose silk and wool suit with brown accessories and a corsage of harmonizing orchids. The matron of honour was dressed in Queen's blue crepe with navy accessories and a corsage of roses and sweetpeas.

After a wedding breakfast at the Normandie, the happy couple left on a motor trip which included Ste. Anne de Beaupre and Levis. They will reside in Picton.

WICKENS—FRENCH

Frankford, Aug. 8.—(Special)— A very pretty wedding took place at the United Church parsonage, on Saturday, August 3rd., when Lena Maxine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Percy French of Stockdale, became the bride of Harold Wesley Wickens, son of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Wickens, Glen Miller. They were attended by Private Earl C. French of Camp Borden, brother of the bride and Miss Betty M. Brown of Toronto.

The bride looked handsome in a floor length gown of embroidered white net over satin, with matching veil of embroidered net.

The bridesmaid wore a full length dress of pink sheer made in princess lines and lace trimmed. Both carried arm bouquets of pink and white roses with fern.

WALLACE—RUTTER

Frankford, Aug. 8.—(Special)—A very pretty wedding took place at the United Church parsonage on Saturday, August 3rd., when Miss Rose Anna Rutter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. W. Rutter, Belleville, became the bride of Aircraftsman James Eaton Wallace of Trenton.

LATER ON there'll be gay afternoons in town and the need for smart after-dark things. A charming little cocktail hat is of black velvet, with a cluster of chartreuse and pink ostrich tips in front of the shallow crown, tied with blue velvet ribbons. A lacy veil is arranged in back of the shallow brim.

Physical Handicap May Be Turned Into Asset

An unhappy girl has written to this column that, because she is cross-eyed, she's given up the fight to have friends and be a success. These days young people are operated on successfully for strabismus, the medical term for this condition. My correspondent should seek the best advice and have her eyes operated on, if operative measures are indicated; or she might, like other people with defective eyes, cash in on what she regards as a disfigurement.

Several weeks ago newspapers were flooded with pictures of Ben Turpin, funmaker of the silent films. His crossed eyes were his fortune, even as Eddie Cantor's pop-eyes have been one of his greatest screen assets. Speaking of eyes, Toscanini is so near-sighted that he became impatient reading notes. This handicap put a baton in his hand and made him the greatest of modern conductors.

Would President Roosevelt ever have attained the highest office in the gift of the nation if it hadn't been for his physical handicap? There is a story to the effect that his wife and the late Louis Howe, his secretary, would not let him for a moment consider himself an invalid after he had fallen a victim to infantile paralysis. They took turns at reading to him all night long, heartening him, minimizing his illness. And whether you're pro-Roosevelt or anti-Roosevelt, you've got to admit the magnificence with which F.D.R. has never allowed this handicap to curtail his work as President of the United States.

John Barrymore was not a howling success as a cartoonist. He shifted to acting—you know the rest. In the beginning it was thought that Ethel's husky voice might not take with the public. But it scored above the usual feminine squeaks and tremolos and made her a conspicuous favorite.

Speaking of voices, the great Mrs. Fiske had no voice at all from the standpoint of vocal experts. Her words ran together, and yet Alexander Woollcott, in his laments for things that have passed, wrote: "I shall never again hear the wonder of Mrs. Fiske's voice in the theatre." Her voice was hypnotic; you felt rather than heard the things she interpreted.

O. Henry, most successful of short story writers, mastered the art of writing while serving a prison sentence, now conceded to have been unjust.

Helen Hayes, when a child, was destined by her ambitious mother to be a dancer. Slightly pigeon-toed she didn't succeed in that art, but became the splendid actress she is.

Clarence Day, who wrote "Life With Father", was terribly handicapped with arthritis. Robert Louis Stevenson fought tuberculosis while he turned out books that were the joy of his generation.

Greig, famous composer-pianist, has a defective hand.

Helen Keller has surmounted the triple handicap of blindness, deafness and the inability to speak, which goes with lack of hearing.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

What Kind of Guest Are You?

What kind of guest does the hostess enjoy having in her home?

Let's begin at the beginning. The perfect guest arrives when she is expected to arrive. She brings with her all the equipment necessary for her visit—appropriate clothes, all necessary toilet articles, equipment for her favorite sports. No household enjoys a "borrowing" guest! tucked in her luggage is some thought-gift for her hostess or something for the household, and, if there are children in the family, some toy or trinket to delight each child.

Co-operation, complete and gracious should be your watchword as a guest. Be interested in everything, be interested in everyone in the family, every friend of the family whom you meet. Contribute your share in conversation, in general participation in social plans that are made for you. Aways be appropriately dressed, meticulously groomed, so that your hostess will be proud to have you in her home and to introduce you to her friends. In your manner and in your ready words, show your appreciation of everything that is suggested to give you pleasure.

Don't please, expect to have every hour of every day planned for you. Adapt yourself to the family routine, leaving your hostess time for her household duties or for anything else she has to do. Be alert to sense when it would be convenient for your hostess or for the household if you absented yourself.

Be a tidy guest. Even if you are a customarily untidy person don't drive your hostess to despair, the way you perhaps drive your family to despair. Keep your room in perfect order, keep the bathroom in perfect order. When you leave don't leave any of your belongings behind.

Aways keep in mind that most important rule—watch what you say. Family discussions are not for you; don't offer any opinions as to their solution. Don't make comparisons that your hosts may interpret as being unfavorable to them as to the way households are run the way the children behave, the way of this or that in the homes of your other friends. If anything goes wrong in the family, or in the household schedule, take no notice of it, or at least pass it over as lightly as possible.

Don't, in even the tiniest way, criticise your hostess friends or get into religious or political controversies. Have idea, but don't be opinionated. Don't always know all the answers! Don't give all your charming attention to a clever or distinguished guest, a personage, and disregard a shy guest. Don't ardently concentrate your glamour on your host—this technic has, alas, too often had tragic consequences.

The lowest form of guest is the disloyal guest, the one who, after having accepted hospitality, criticises her hostess or host, tells of some unpleasant thing that happened during the visit, indulges in unkind tale-bearing.

The considerate guest in a servantless household offers to help with the work. If the hostess refuses the offer, there are still many ways in which an observant guest can cooperate in causing the minimum of "extra work". You can easily, for example, take complete care of your own room.

Don't forget the appreciative bread-and-butter letter that you should write to your hostess within a day or two after you have arrived home. With it, it is generous to send a gift to your hostess, a personal one for her or one for the household, whether or not you brought a gift when you went for the visit.

Courtesy Tip

It is atrocious taste to send a "ready-made" card, printed or engraved, to express your thanks or to express your sympathy. You should write a note of thanks, a note of sympathy.

Snake Bites 3 Culturists At Service

Cincinnati, (AP)—Bitten by a copperhead snake at the height of a frenzied religious service, Mrs. Ethel Sheeby, a 48-year-old nurse, was in a serious condition and two men, all members of a cult, bore lesser wounds today.

"We'll use snakes in our services whenever the Lord requires," declared Robert Sears, railroad worker, who, as pastor of the "True Church of God," employs the title "brother."

He added that Mrs. Sheeby was in a hospital because "she didn't feel the power of the Lord" as the poisonous reptile was passed to her and other members of the congregation at services last night. Police invaded the meeting and seized two snakes.

"We only handle them when the Lord gives us power," he asserted. "At any other time we suffer from the poison, too."

Mrs. Sheeby's right arm was swollen almost twice its normal size, hospital attaches reported, and anti-toxin was administered.

Roy Fowler, about 18, of Cincinnati, who lives at Sear's home, exhibited an ankle swelling which he said resulted from a snakebite during a revival in nearby Moscow, Ohio.

"It's nothin'," he said. "I felt the power. It'll get well. I got faith."

Cleveland Hensley, middle-aged evangelist from Harlan County, Ky., who has been conducting cult services in this area, showed a badly swollen right hand and affirmed that "faith'll make it well ag'in."

Dagwood, Blondie, Baby Dumpling and Daisy the pooch, the Bumstead family, who are now on the McCarthy Theatre screen in their newest laugh hit, "Blondie Has Servant Trouble." Tommy Ryan in "Military Academy" is also playing.

Harold Community Fetes Bridal Couple

On Thursday evening, Aug. 1st, nearly two hundred friends and neighbours gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Tanner, Harold, in honor of their daughter Edith, a recent bride and to tender her a miscellaneous shower. The gifts were lovely and numerous and consisted of cut glass, silver, pyrex, wool blankets, linen, money, etc.

Mr. Percy Ray acted as chairman and called the gathering to order. The following program was presented: Duet by Mary and Betty Lou Hagerman; Reading by Mac Sarles; Piano solo by Phyliss Twiddy; Reading by Della McMaster; Duet by Gwen and Irene Ray.

An address was read by Mrs. Thos. Clements and was signed on behalf of the community by Irma Sine, Jean Morgan, Ethel Hagerman and Letha Colden.

The bride and groom made suitable replies thanking all for the beautiful gifts and kind thoughts and invited all to visit them in Sudbury. Lunch and orangeade was served and everyone left for their homes wishing the young couple every success and best wishes in their new home.

On Thursday afternoon, July 25th Mrs. Kenneth Mumby was hostess to a girls' shower in honor of the bride-to-be, Miss Edith Tanner.

Progressive euchre and Chinese checkers were played, the winner's being Doris Cooke and Jean Ray. During the afternoon an address was read by Mrs. Lindsay Tanner and Edith was presented with an electric sandwich toaster and salad bowl and plate on behalf of the 30 guests present. Edith replied in a few well chosen words thanking the girls for the lovely gifts. A dainty lunch was served by Mrs. Mumby.

Events Every Family Should Celebrate

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

Wedding anniversaries and birthdays should be celebrated. They have inestimable family values.

Let me urge the young couples just married to remember each other's birthday and plan long ahead for celebrating the first and every subsequent wedding anniversary. The wedding anniversary should not merely be a gift for the wife but a trip together or party in which both husband and wife share the honors. With some parties there may well be small gifts by each to the other.

This celebration, like birthdays, need not be expensive. When the expenditure is excessive, one of the pair may have the joy of the occasion lessened because of worry over the cost. Anyway, it is the simple celebration which can afford greatest happiness, as a rule.

And when the first baby begins to have birthdays it is a great event for the parents who care to make it so. During the first and other early birthdays the celebration may have but little meaning to the child. The chief good is to his parents. It heightens his value to them.

Parents are tempted to put on elaborate birthday parties for the tot, even the child of eight or ten. If many other children are present the child in whose home the event is held may not only be over-excited but overwhelmed indeed. The shy, timid child has a hard time at such a party. As a rule, the young guests should not number over four or five for the pre-school child.

Up to adolescence the birthday party is about the only one of a formal nature the child should have. For the timid, non-social young child formal parties do far more harm, as a rule, than good, since they cause this type of child to feel more inferior. Informal gatherings of a few children in the home, coming and going freely, boys and girls, have, typically, greatest social values. And the longer these boys and girls come and go without consciousness of sex the better.

Wise mothers avoid pairing of young children at parties until the children reach their teens. Why so many will pair mere babies at parties is more than I can understand.

Let there be some games and good group fun planned for the birthday party, non-running games indoors; more active games out of doors or in a large play room. The mother owes it to her child as well as to the guest children, not to let them move and destroy furniture. Some parents, alas, must figure on buying some new furniture following a birthday party at their home.

The Stars Say

For Friday, August 9

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

ACCORDING to the lunar transits, social, domestic or affectional matters will engage paramount attention. Other affairs are adversely aspected. There is menace of fraud, duplicity as well as loss through careless signatures. Reckless or drastic action may bring considerable penalty. In difficulties or tight financial crises it is probable that feminine generosity will come to the fore. But parties, festivities and sentimental values are uppermost.

Those whose birthday it is may have a more pleasant than prosperous year. The attention may be devoted to celebrations, sentimental atachments or good times generally. Business is jeopardized by fraud, treachery, careless signatures and documents, and also by rash and impractical moves. Study correspondence lest there be misconstruction and trouble. Be discreet in group action.

A child born on this day may be disposed to stretch the truth or exhibit other forms of duplicity or "shrewdness," to its detriment. But it will be socially gracious, refined, and lovable.

Cut That Apron String

"Baby" No Longer a Baby at School Age

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

Many a tot who will enter school for the first time next September is tied tightly to his mother's apron strings. He will face a vast deal of sorrow and his mother and teacher no end of worry if these strings are not untied or cut before the first day of school.

Between now and then is the time for this weaning process. Done with thoughtfulness and skill, it can be accomplished without very much pain to the child and his mother. She should do less and less in his care and the father or other adults should do relatively more. The child should learn to do more for himself.

Let the mother leave him more often, first for short periods, then for longer and longer ones. She should spend an occasional night, later week-ends away from him. In the meanwhile the child should spend more and more time with other children of his age. Sunday school attendance should prove very helpful, as he will meet other children there. This social experience is most essential for his preparation to get on happily when he enters school next fall.

In the mother's letter printed below we see what can, with proper procedure, be prevented. My advice to her on correcting this problem was essentially the same as that which I have suggested for prevention. But I know the correction will have to be slow and costly. "An ounce of prevention is better than a pound of cure."

"Dear Dr. Myers: I have a boy six years of age, an only child. When I started him to kindergarten he was so attached to me that it took three days to get him started, he would get so nervous and upset that he would become ill.

"After he got started he liked it so well that he wouldn't miss a day, but I had to take him and he would not go in unless the teacher was in her room, and I would have to stay with him. Soon as he saw the teacher he walked right in. Now he is in the first grade and he likes it very much. He was taken ill with scarlet fever and was home six weeks. Couldn't wait until he got back to school. Now my problem is this. I dress him for school and he won't go with the other children. I must take him.

"He knows the children well because he plays with them all the time. He's very bright and active and is doing fairly well at school. Now these past three weeks he has been a problem. I take him to school. Soon as we get there he finds excuses such as, 'I don't want to go in myself, I will wait for one of the boys in my room.' . . .

"I could see that he looked so nervous and upset but I walked right out and came home. He will come home for lunch just as happy as can be and then maybe do the same thing after lunch. Monday afternoon he followed me home from school, so I sent him to bed all afternoon. At three the children came home from school and he wanted to go out and play, but I kept him in. He promised faithfully he would never do it again.

"But this morning it's the same old story. I have asked him over and over again, 'Why do you act that way? You are not a baby.' He says, 'I don't know why I do it.' Please help me."

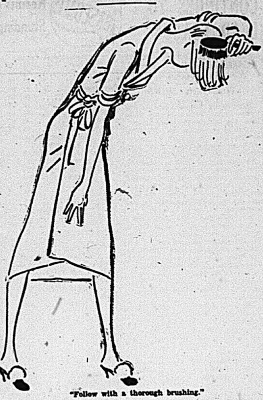
Spare the Hat and Save Your Hair



"Follow with a thorough brushing."

By HELEN FOLLETT

There are women who have their hats on so much of the time you wonder if they sleep in them. They're hat mad. Usually have a flock of bonnets. If the pretty chapeau is muffin size, stuck over one eye, well and good; let 'em revel in millinery. But when the hat is of felt and a tight fit the hair is likely to be sick a-bed.

To keep the scalp moist and warm is not conducive to its health and well being. Sweat glands and sebaceous glands are over stimulated. Hair shafts become oily, ringlets do a faint-away. Perspiration deposits upon the scalp horrid chemicals and wastes that give the hair an unpleasant odor.

A devitalized scalp means that your glorious crown is likely to moult. Give it a weekly shampoo. Every night tuck fingers and thumbs under your tresses, friction the flesh to a glow. Follow with a thorough brushing. Some waves are improved by brushing, lines becoming wider and more fluent. Arrange rolls or ringlets and slip on your wave cap.

Hair is dependent upon circulation; circulation is dependent upon a balanced diet. Look after your health and beauty griefs will vanish.

• • •

Have your tummy muscles gone slack and is there a little shelf below your belt? Maybe the price you are paying for poor posture. Maybe you've been dipping into the bonbon box too often. Never mind, something can be done about it. Stand erect, chest up, feet fairly far apart. Clasp the hands behind the neck, force the head and elbows back, taking a deep, long breath, coming up on the toes. Try to pull yourself apart at the waist line. This tugging of the fibers will strengthen them and adipose tissues will go into a decline.

One Chin Enough for Beauty

By HELEN FOLLETT

Put up a fight for your facial rights at the first signs of the coming of an extra chin. Don't let it get the best of you. That ugly bulge abaft the chin proper is an eyesore and it gets bigger but not better as the years pile up. It is the penalty one pays for partaking of the good things of the table that contain fat, sweets or starches. Adipose tissue appears, causing the outer skin to stretch. When tissues lose tone the flesh gets crepelike.

Massage is Helpful

Here is a massage movement that will discourage a double chin. Anoint your hands with a heavy cream, one of such thick consistency that it won't permit the fingers to slide over the flesh. Place the fingers just under the ear lobes, thumbs meeting under the chin. Keep the fingers where they were placed, rub upward with the thumbs with heavy pressure. Move inward toward the neck, upward toward the ears. Soon the flesh will be glowing, showing that the blood streams have heard the alarm clock go off and are up and doing.

Roll the flesh lightly to dissolve the fat cells. Don't fail to iron with an ice cube afterwards. Let the cream remain on over night.

• • •

Ankles as slender as those of a deer! That's what a girl wants. Some girls had 'em but, because they wore spiked heels which gave a side to side motion of the ankles, there came about an enlargement and ugly lines formed. Why didn't they listen to beauty preachers? Spikes don't give a solid foothold and that's one of many reasons why they are a menace.

To reduce large ankles sit on a low stool, one knee over the other, swing the upper foot in circles. Follow with an up and down movement of the foot which strengthens the fibres. Clasp the hands around the ankles and thumb the flesh. Sponge with ice cold salt water.

Still the Same Children

(New York Times)

The newspapers have published many photographs of the newly arrived refugee children from England. Anyone who has studied them must have been struck with the unusual beauty of most of these young visitors. They are not laughing or care-free groups, but rather grave and wistful, as would be natural under the circumstances. A certain restraint and dignity which even the youngest of them manage to achieve before the camera seems to become them.

Many of them might have stepped directly from the canvases of Reynolds, Gainsborough, Romney or Hoppner. One arrival on the Britannic, a little lass of two and a half, was snapped through a porthole as she caught her first glimpse of this bewildering city. With a background of greeny-brown eighteenth century park she would have been a perfect replica of Sir Joshua's famous "Age of Innocence," with the same features, the same look of round-eyed wonder and almost the same costume. The groups of older boys and girls might easily be taken for Lawrence's "The Calmady Children" or Hoppner's "The Sackville Children," if they were not identified under their own names.

The passage of a couple of centuries has changed only the details of their dress. The generations of these English town and country houses apparently do not change at all. The persistence of type is remarkable. The young folk in the English fortress of today who look up at German bombers in the sky might well be the same children who watched the sails of the Spanish Armada bellying past Plymouth and Dover, serious but not afraid.

NO GETTING AWAY FROM IT the frocks just coming in are pencil slim. This line is used for a black crepe frock with a fringed skirt border, the black silk fringe applied in Greek key design. Short sleeves entirely of the fringe.

SO IMPORTANT for the smart woman is the long-sleeved, slim dinner dress. A beauty is in black crepe, the slim bodice buttoned with tiny jeweled buttons, the slightly-trained skirt in three tiers. Curved low neckline in front.

SAVE MONEY! Ask for Kellogg's Corn Flakes in the new family-size package! Remember, Canada's favourite cereal costs only a few pennies for the whole family's breakfast or supper.

FIVE TO ONE VOTE records family choice. In a recent Dominion-wide survey, housewives were asked "What ready-to-eat cereal is favourite in your family?" As compared with any other corn flake mentioned, the vote was Kellogg's five to one! Taste experts check with housewives. After a blindfold taste-test of all four brands of corn flakes Mr. W. B. Cross, Tea Taster for Mellocup Tea, writes: "I found it easy to decide which rated first with me . . . the sample which later proved to be Kellogg's!"

BELLEVILLE PAIR WINS DISTRICT BOWLING TROPHY

Mrs. C. Argue and Rod. Mitchell Capture Open Lawn Bowling Mixed Doubles

72 COMPETE

Teams From Kingston To Toronto Compete In Tournament Held Here

With players present from Toronto to Kingston, 36 teams competed in the annual district open mixed lawn bowling doubles played at the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club yesterday. Each team competed in three matches and extra draws were necessary to complete the day's tournament, that saw two matches per team played in the afternoon and the remainder completed during the evening to terminate one of the outstanding lawn bowling events of the season.

Games Chairman Cliff Argue was busy throughout the tournament completing the tabulations and results with 21 teams representing Belleville, six from Kingston, three from Campbellford, two from Tweed and one each from Toronto, Deseronto, Stirling and Peterboro entered in the competition. Valuable prizes were awarded the winners of the district open mixed doubles as staged by the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club with President Frank Correll and his able executive assisting in culminating the most successful tournament of the year.

The Winners

The Belleville rink of Mrs. C. Argue and Rod Mitchell took the top-flight honours of the tournament and first prize with three high wins and a score of 36 plus 11.

Second with three high wins came Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Topping of Kingston with a score of 36 plus two and third came a local team of Ernie Vanner and Mrs. Scott with a score of 35 plus six, while next in the class was Mr. and Mrs. Percy Locke of Campbellford and following Mr. and Mrs. Harry Heagle of Kingston. High with two wins were Mr. and Mrs. Edney of Kingston and high with one win was Mr. Wagar and Mrs. Kerr of Tweed.

The Belleville Club won first prize and one other, while Kingston pairs took three prizes and Tweed and Campbellford one each. The tournament was one of the largest attended in the district this year and saw keen bowling competition throughout, according to games chairman Cliff Argue, who was in charge.

Pirates Going Places Fastest In Majors, Take Three Straight From Cards to Win Last Seven

Famous August Foldups Have Won 16 Out of Last 20 Games Under Frisch

REDS LOSE

No Change In American League As Indians And Tigers Both Win

By JUDSON BAILEY

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Pittsburgh Pirates, famous August foldups, are unfolding finally into some semblance of the flower everybody expected from Frankie Frisch. The club is no marvelous machine, but it's going places faster than any other outfit in the major leagues at the moment. In two days it has swept three games from St. Louis Cardinals.

It took a long time for the Pirates to find themselves under Frisch's experimentation. Early in the season they lost 16 of 18 games. Now they have won seven straight and 16 of their last 20 to get a grip on fifth place, one game out of the first division.

They nosed out the Cardinals 10-9 in the first game yesterday although they were outhit 18-9. Frisch kept up a stream of substitutions and Spud Davis delivered a pinch single scoring two runs in the eighth to win the game. In the nightcap the bold buccos made a dozen runs on 13 hits to win 12-6. Pitcher Max Butcher batted in four of the tallies.

Reds Give Ground

Cincinnati Reds gave more ground as they dropped a 5-3 10-inning battle to Chicago Cubs who thus broke Paul Derringer's winning string at seven games. Jim Gleeson and Bill Nicholson hit homers for the Cubs' only runs in the reular route, but in the 10th, Chicago grouped four singles for three runs.

Brooklyn Dodgers overwhelmed New York Giants 8-4 in a night game that was intended to honor Mel Ott and drew a crowd of 53,997 to the polo grounds. For six innings the affair followed the pattern planned by the committee on arrangements, with Carl Hubbell hurling masterfully and the Giants leading 3-1. Then Brooklyn blasted out five runs in the seventh and kept right on rolling.

It was the Dodgers' sixth win in six games on the Giants, grounds and was credited as Fred Fitzsimmons' 11th victory against two defeats.

Boston Bees continued to plague the poor Phillies, taking a night game 6-3 with Eddie Miller and Carvel Rowell each hitting homers with a mate aboard.

Unchanged

The American League remained unchanged. The pace-setting Detroit Tigers outlasted St. Louis Browns to win 7-5. The Tigers tallied five runs in the third and the Browns got four in the last three frames, but were finally set down by relief pitcher Alf Benton with the bases loaded.

Cleveland Indians crushed Chicago White Sox 9-3 with Lou Boudreau staging a one-man show. He hit two home runs and a single, batting in six runs.

New York's tottering Yankees divided a doubleheader at Boston, but it took a three-run rally in the ninth inning of the nightcap to end their five-game losing streak. The Red Sox won the opener 10-7 with a 16-hit offensive concentrated in the middle innings, but in the second game were slowed down to eight hits by Lefty Marius Russo. In the final frame Tom Henrich batted across two Yankee runs with a triple and then scored on a single.

NEW TENNIS GRIP IS TRIED BY F. X. SHIELDS

Veteran Nettster Uses Western Clasp To Beat Gil Hunt In Three Sets

Rye, N.Y., Aug. 8 (AP)—Gil Hunt, the Washington figure-filbert who doesn't want to win the National Tennis championship until he is 27, has only a rooting interest in the Eastern Grass Court championships today.

Hunt was eliminated short of the quarter-final round yesterday by Frank X. Shields of New York, who wouldn't mind winning at Forest Hills now that he is 29. Frank, despite his decade on the courts of Wimbledon, Forest Hills, and other way stations, has this year begun to experiment with his game and has come up with a new grip.

He formerly used the eastern clasp, but at the suggestion last week of a friend he changed to the western grip, which he claims gives him greater follow-through from the wrist to the elbow on his forehand strokes.

Jubilating in a quiet way over his 6-3, 5-7, 9-7 job against Hunt yesterday, Shields explained: "I just had to beat Gil today. Two weeks ago at Sea Bright, he defeated Sid Wood, my partner in the laundry business, so by taking Hunt today, I now become senior partner of the concern."

Shields will meet Bobby Riggs in the round of eight. Riggs defeated Seymour Greenberg, of Chicago, 6-4, 6-3. The other upper bracket match brings together Frank Parker and Hank Prusoff, while in the lower bracket Don McNeill faces Gardnar Mulloy and Joe Hunt meets Bitsy Grant.

QUINTE CLUB CONTINUES TO LEAD LEAGUE

Local Tennis Crowd Divides Matches With Tweed, Who Are Second

TRENTON WINS

By dividing yesterday's scheduled Trent Valley Tennis League matches, the Quinte Tennis Club continued to dominate the league as leaders when they split six games with the Tweed Tennis Club here yesterday. As a result of the matches the Quinte Club have yet to lose a series of matches this year and are league leaders, while Tweed are in the same position, but having played one less match, are second to the local nettsters in the standing.

The Belleville team won both sets of men's doubles, while Tweed took the men's singles and ladies' doubles plus one set of mixed doubles, giving the local nettsters the other. Two extra set matches were necessary during the play.

The results were:

Men's singles — Cotton, Tweed, defeated H. Kerr, Quinte, 3-6, 6-4 and 6-0.

Men's doubles—1. T. Barnett and G. Bucher, Quinte, defeated R. Petterly and W. Cronkwright, Tweed, 6-2 and 6-0; 2. D. McLean and E. Wickerson, Quinte, defeated G. Elwood and W. Arber, Tweed, 6-1 and 6-2.

Mixed doubles—1. G. Atyeo and J. Cruji, Quinte, defeated G. Wagar and F. Graham, Tweed, 6-3 and 6-3; 2. T. Moffatt and Mrs. Moffat, Tweed, defeated A. Wilkes and Muriel M. Wardner, Quinte, 6-3, 7-9 and 6-4.

Ladies' doubles—Mrs. Allen and Bessie Gordon, Tweed, defeated Marion McLean and Madge Howard, Quinte, 6-4 and 6-3.

Trenton Wins

Only one match was played in the Trenton at West Sides schedule series here yesterday, which saw the Trenton team win the one set of men's doubles when Ken Flett and Gord Ackerman of Trenton, defeated Doug Maybee and Les Lennox, West Sides, 6-3, 8-6 and 6-3.

GOLF

Winning all but two matches of their tournament, the Belleville Golf Club defeated the Port Hope Golf Club 31½ to 7½ in an exhibition golf match played at the Belleville Golf Club yesterday. S. R. BURROWS WINS TIP TOP GOLF TROPHY

Sandy's Net Score Is One Less Than That of Dave Payne at Country Club Tourney

JEWELLERS' CUP WON

S. R. "Sandy" Burrows was returned winner of the Tip Top Trophy, a 36-hole medal play golf match played annually at the Bay of Quinte Country and Golf Club this year. The Tip Top Trophy match is open to all members of the Bay of Quinte Country Club for the lowest net score during the tournament.

The result of the Tip Top cup tournament, recently completed, was as follows:

S. R. Burrows	143
D. Payne	144
Jack Hartwick	145
A. P. Allen	145
W. J. Cook	146

Mixed 2-Ball

The annual competition for the Jewellers' Trophy, a mixed two-ball foursome tournament, was won by Miss Joyce Porritt and David Payne this year following keen competition for this coveted cup. The remaining two club championships at the Bay of Quinte Country Club for the season are the club handicap and the club championships.

Those qualifying for the club championship tournament are S. R. Burrows, David Payne, Jack Hartwick, A. P. Allen, W. J. Cook, O. Alyea, J. S. McKeown, G. H. Gillespie, J. Kirkwood, R. Walshe and Chas. Spalding.

Newark Only 2½ Games Behind Leading Red Wings, Who Lose To Montreal

LEAFS LOSE AGAIN

One of the main factors in the drive of the second place Newark Bears toward the leadership of the International League has been the steady hitting of their leadoff man Tommy Holmes.

Batting slightly over .300, Holmes has the third highest average on the club and packs plenty of extra-base wallops at the plate.

This was emphasized yesterday as Holmes collected a triple and a double in four times at bat to back up Hank Borowy's three-hit hurling and bag Baltimore Orioles 1-0.

Roy Bruner Limited Bears to four hits, but Holmes' triple, with George Scharein on base in the third inning, gave Borowy all the margin he needed.

The victory boosted Newark to within 2 1-2 games of the league-leading Rochester Red Wings who went down 3-1 before Montreal last night.

Kemp Wicker held Wings to seven hits and collected two of the ten safeties given up by Charley Brumbeloe in winning his 16th of the year. Rochester bunched three singles in the sixth for its only run and left nine runners on the bases.

Jersey City maintained its half-game lead over Montreal in fourth place by turning back Syracuse Chiefs 5-3 to even the series at one all.

Bill Harris went the distance for the winners, blanking the Chiefs with one hit for the last six innings.

Buffalo Bisons won their fourth straight, 4-2, at the expense of Toronto Maple Leafs in the series opener at Buffalo. Ollie Carnegie and Clyde McCullough paced the Herd's 12-hit attack on Pat McLaughlin with three hits apiece.

CONN FAVOURITE OVER PASTOR

Bob's Manager, Jimmy Johnson, Says Odds of 3 To 1 On Conn Are 'Crazy'

New York, Aug. 8—(AP)—As befits a man who has been knocked down by Joe Louis six or seven times and knows, therefore, that nothing much worse can possibly happen to him, Bob Pastor is amazingly calm about his approaching fight with Billy Conn, the light heavyweight champion.

Most of the ballyhoo has centred about Conn's chances of licking Louis after he has disposed of Pastor next Tuesday night. Pastor has been more or less neglected, yet he isn't resentful. He thinks it's funny. His manager, the voluble Jimmy Johnston, thinks it's crazy.

"In all my years in the game this is the silliest thing I ever ran into," said Jim as he watched Pastor work out. Bob ought to be a 3-to-1 favorite over that kid from Pittsburgh. He'll probably win every round. But they've made Conn a favorite. It beats me."

Pastor has had two bouts with mediocre opponents since Louis flattened him in Detroit last summer. He won both easily, and close observers, such as Ray Arcel, say they can't see that he has gone back in any way.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with Ken J. Colling

Did you know that—they are skiing at Jasper National Park this week?....Also, it is nice summer recreation, if you can get it....That J. H. Sharpe, of the Bay of Quinte Country Club won the Whig-Standard golf trophy, emblematic to the Eastern Ontario amateur golf championship with a score of 151 for 36 holes in 1935?....And that Boeckh Toronto Downs, winner of the cup this year, is the only golfer to better Sharpe's score made during the first competition for the trophy over the picturesque Cataraqui golf course?.. And that Donald McGowan, the Stirling lad who won the All-Canadian "Soap Box Derby" championship last month, is anxiously awaiting to leave for Akron, Ohio, and a shot at the world "Soap Box Derby" title over the week end?....That this will be the fourth Belleville representative to compete at Akron? ....And that the Shell "Oilers" were royally entertained in Kingston following Monday's war benefit softball game at a banquet and all of the trimmings?

According to rumours we hear, Skipper Gerald Barriage, of the Corbys A.C., is anything but happy with the decision of the local Softball League executive in postponing last night's sixth game between Corbys and the Shell "Oilers." Officials of the Corby A.C. were in touch with President Ken Edgecombe yesterday afternoon and threatened to toss in the sponge. "All that happened is we had the "Oilers" on the run and Manager Harold Bawden slipped a fast one over the executive and we're sore," shouted Skipper Barriage in disgusting tones over the telephone to Secretary Harry Knott. This corner happens to enjoy the misfortune of being a member of that executive and we are not telling tales or secrets to say the executive unanimously voted and agreed to the postponement of last night's game, after Manager Bawden declared he could not possibly field nine Shell players. The executive did the same thing in favor of Corbys on July 25th, after Corbys had lost their first two starts. Skipper Barriage claimed he could not field a team on July 25 owing to military training and therefore concessions were granted Corbys at that time. The same concessions were granted the "Oilers" last night, but we hear that is the last of such extensions or postponements regardless as to who it may impair.

Today Corbys have a two-to-one chance to win the series, as they're one game up in five played, in a best-in-seven play-off. The executive voted unanimously to play the sixth game on Saturday and a possible seventh next Wednesday evening, knowing full well that Art Cole, the Oilers' first baseman, is in military training on Wednesdays, but unfortunately for Cole and the Oilers, he is the only player affected on Wednesday nights. Frankly speaking we feel our executive, including this corner, erred in permitting the first postponement, as Secretary Vern McIlwraithe, of the O.A.S.A., recently pointed out that all clubs have the right to sign 15 players and therefore should be able to field nine players in a pinch, regardless as to military training. However, when concessions were given one team the executive could hardly refuse the other, so the ruling of the executive stands. The local league must declare a winner to meet the Trenton winners one week from tomorrow night in Trenton and there'll be no postponements permitted there.

Bill Cook, one of the greatest right wing players in N.H.L. history and now manager of the Cleveland Barons, has enlisted in the Princess of Wales Own Rifles (N.P.A.M.) at Kingston. Bill is a veteran of the last war, having served in Siberia after the armistice. Incidentally Lou LeBarr, veteran Peterborough umpire, has also enlisted, while Umpire Don Thomas of Belleville, is paymaster in the 3-47th Battery (C.A.S.F.). All of this reminds us that the Corbys softball team has three of its members, Reid, Carson and McGuire, with the 3-47th and still five others with the Argyll Light Infantry here, while the Shell "Oilers" have six with the local (N.P.A.M.) unit drilling here four nights a week, which is a creditable record for any two softball teams of the same loop in the country.

Do you remember when Kid Chocolate sensational Cuban negro lightweight, ran into his first defeat in 160 engagements when he lost a 10-round bout at New York 10 years ago tonight. The fight won by Jack Berg of England, attracted 25,000 spectators.

Dick Rudolph, one of the three crack pitchers of George Stallings' miracle Boston Braves of 1914, still does an occasional bit of pitching for a company team in Wollaston, Mass., which he manages. Dick, who is 52 years old, recently did a five-inning hitch on the mound for his club.

Maybe it's just as well that the Corby's-Shell game was called off last night, that is just as well for Gerald Barriage's charges. When it was definitely decided that the "Oilers" could not field nine men last night, the Corby management phoned Point Anne seeking a practice game. Bubby Gaulin and company willingly accepted the invitation and then came to town and beat the Barriage-Simpson nine 7 to 2 in a practice game. The way the Corby's were waving at "Ding" Luffman's slants last night looked anything but prolific, so maybe it's just as well they didn't meet Johnnie Bawden's fireball, especially last evening. "Oh well, we got a lot of bad ball out of our system anyhow," remarked outfielder Jimmie Barriage after the game.

SPORT SPICE — Detroit and Cleveland won yesterday to continue the domination of their league and make the American League race the most thrilling in many years. . . . Jack Dempsey now says his so-called comeback was only a gag and he's given up the whole thing. . . . Could be, but the urge to make money is human and we wouldn't be surprised to see him back in the leather-pushing business before the end of the month. . . . They do say that Promoter Mike Jacobs, the boxing czar, would like to get the ownership of the Brooklyn Dodgers. . . The Reds lost another yesterday and are only five and a half games ahead of the "Daffiness lads." . . Last night was "Mel Ott night" at the Polo Grounds and the veteran of 17 summers with the Giants finally convinced the Gotham fans he had made good as a pupil of the late John McGraw. . . Some people are hard to convince.

Two Missing Girls Located by Police

City police were busied Wednesday night with humanitarian acts, that proved quite helpful to a young girl and also to a newly married couple.

Shortly after 3.30 a.m. today Constables Arnott and Ellis found a teen aged girl loitering on Victoria Park as they were patrolling their beats. The girl was taken to the police station, where it was learned she had run away from her home in Prince Edward County. Today Acting Chief Constable Harman placed her in the custody of the local Salvation Army.

Toronto police sought the whereabouts of Verna Cattell, of that city yesterday, who had apparently run away from home. Early Monday evening Constables Ellis and Arnott found the young lady, along with Gordon Stapley of this city, sitting quietly on Victoria Park. At the police station, however, the young couple proved to Sergeant Arthur Booth they had been married early yesterday and came to Belleville.

The girl's parents in Toronto were notified and upon learning of the marriage, the parents gave their blessing over the long distance telephone and the newly married couple left enroute for the bride's home in Toronto little disturbed by their detention.

Otherwise activities were purely routine in local police circles.

Communiques

CAIRO

Cairo, Egypt, Aug. 8—(AP)—The Royal Air Force issued the following communique today:

"There was considerable air activity on all fronts yesterday, many valuable reconnaissance flights being undertaken.

"At Bardia (in Italian Libya) the shipping harbor and store buildings were attacked. One large building was demolished."

"While carrying out reconnaissance work in the Tobruk area. Aug. 6, one of our flying boats was shot down and one of the crew killed. The remainder, three of whom were wounded, were taken prisoner.

"The Italian East Africa submarine base at Massaua was raided by R.A.F. bombers Aug. 6 and Aug. 7. Reports indicate direct hits were registered on a naval vessel, the Quay and one submarine. All our aircraft returned safely.

"During another raid, buildings were damaged. All our aircraft returned safely. Enemy fighters approached Malta yesterday, but turned back before our fighters could engage them."

ROME

Rome, Aug. 8—(AP)— Today's Italian communique:

"One of our columns which three days ago had crossed the frontier of British Somaliland reached the sea and occupied the Port of Zeila.

(The British command announced Italian occupation of Zeila yesterday.)

"In East Africa our bomber formations attacked the airfield at Wajir, destroying three planes on the ground and causing serious damage and setting fire to works of the base. One British fighter plane was shot down in combat.

(There was no confirmation of these claims from British sources.)

"Enemy raids on Diradawa and Massaua caused unimportant damage.

(The R.A.F. in Cairo said a submarine and another vessel were hit in the raid on Massaua).

"In the eastern Mediterranean a British convoy of five vessels escorted by warships was bombed by our aviation. Two vessels were hit and severely damaged."

FRANCE BEGINS PROBE OF CAUSE OF HER DEFEAT

Court May Not Reach 'Defeat Responsibility' Inquiry For Some Days

LONG INVESTIGATION

Vichy, France, Aug. 8—(AP) — Fallen France called her new supreme court to its opening session today at nearby Rion to fix the blame and penalties for military defeat.

The opening session was not expected to go beyond inaugural formalities and the actual "defeat responsibility" inquiry probably will not come up for four or five days. Even then there will be weeks, probably months, of investigation in strict secrecy before actual defendants are named.

The seven-man court, from whose sentences only Chief of State Marshal Petain may grant reprieve, has been charged with far-reaching inquiry to learn why unprepared France went to war, to identify those who led the way to doom and to make them pay.

The maximum penalty would be life imprisonment; those fighting on against the axis powers are liable to the death penalty.
France went to war, to identify

There have been hints the investigation might reach back into actions of French governments for the past 10 years.

The press, which has kept up the cry that those to blame must pay dearly, has heaped most of its criticisms on former Premier Edouard Daladier, the war-declarer. Mentioned with him have been former Premiers Paul Reynaud and Leon Blum, Gen, Maurice Gamelin, and former Ministers Pierre Cot, Georges Mandel, Cesar Campinchi, Yvon Delbos and others.

FAMILY PICNIC ATTENDED BY 125

Members of Thompson, Demorest and Reid Families Meet at Fairfield's Bridge

Stirling (Special)—Approximately 125 people representing pioneer families of Hastings County under the well-known names of Thompson, Demorest and Reid, gathered for their annual re-union and picnic on the original family property at Fairfield's Bridge on Tuesday, August 6th. Following the dinner prepared and served by the ladies, Mr. Percy McDavid, vice president of the organization, took over the duties of master of ceremonies and introduced the various numbers that made up the interesting program.

A unique feature of this annual gathering is that it is always held on the property once owned by Robert Thompson who settled there on coming to Upper Canada from Ireland 133 years ago. He was one of the first settlers to locate as far north as the fifth concession of Sidney which was then a wilderness. He came there with his wife, whose maiden name was Kilpatrick, and their eight children, four sons and four daughters. He journeyed in a sailing vessel which is believed to have taken three months for the crossing due to bad weather.

Featuring splendid musical numbers and interesting addresses the program Tuesday moved forward rapidly in the following order: Address by Mr. Joe Gow; secretary's report, Mrs. Pollard; instrumental duet by, the Fox sisters; vocal duet by Joe Gow and Mrs. Cavanagh; speeches by D. Thompson, Geo. Pollard and Mr. Fox; comic numbers by Joe Gow; vocal selections by Fox sisters.

The election of officers resulted in the following officers and committee workers being appointed: Past President, R. Reid; President, Percy McDavid; Vice President, Addison Thompson; Secretary, Mrs. Geo. Pollard; Treasurer, Dr. Demorest; Program and Sports Committee, Evelyn Fox, Joe Gow, and Addison Thompson.

Excellent weather gave leeway to the program committee in the promotion of an interesting sports program which held the interest of all present. The prize for the guest present from the most distant point was awarded to Mrs. S. Waller, Roseneath, Ont. The oldest lady present was Mrs. Lorne Reid, aged 76 years and the oldest gentleman was W. S. Thompson, Belleville, aged 84 years. The youngest child was Dennis Thompson, aged 3 months. Mrs. Egbert Demorest of Madoc was the winner of the ladies' nail driving contest. Most recent bridal couple present were Mr. and Mrs. B. Acker.

Races and Winners

Boys' under 14 years, Dayton Reid; Boys' over fourteen, Harold Elliott; Girls' under fourteen, Ethel Fox; Girls' over fourteen, Helen Thompson; Race of couples, Mr. and Mrs. B. Ackers; Guessing contest, Mrs. H. Reid; Men's button sewing contest, Mr. J. Elliott.

The entire program was officially closed with the singing of the National Anthem climaxing an event that is looked forward to by each member of these famous families with justifiable eagerness.

'Fifth Column Fumbling' Loses For Canuck Cricketters

(By Edwin S. Johnson Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Somewhere in England, Aug. 8—(CP)—Lack of practice and what some members of the team described as "fifth column fumbling," brought defeat upon a Canadian cricket team which accepted a challenge from a crack village club in their area of operations.

The score, kept by a village belle, showed the challengers leading by 150 runs to 92 when stumps were drawn.

The Canadians were compelled to enlist assistance from the "gallery" and the move was subsequently regretted. The substitutes dropped no less than five catches, which provoked the "fifth column" charge.

But even the regulars found their long lay-off from active play a considerable handicap, apart from solving the tricky bowling of Capt. Cyril Bowring, who starred for the village side. Nearly a quarter of a century ago, Capt. Bowring was one of the leading cricketers of the British army. He played for England against an Australian army team in Egypt back in 1917, scoring 126 runs.

Capt. C. F. J. Finlay, of Niagara Falls, Ont., paced the Canadian batsmen with 47 runs, not out. Other members of the team were: Major A. H. Evans, Port Arthur; Major E. C. Plow, Kingston, Lt.-Col. G. A. F. Townesend, Victoria; Maj. F. A. Murihy, Toronto; Capt. L. J. St. Laurent, Ottawa; Lieut. A. Roberts, Sarnia and Lieut. W. F. Backman, Edmonton.

A chain saw for logs that will work under water has been invented that can be operated by gasoline or electrical motors or compressed air.

INSTALMENT 27.

"I want Paul and me to be different," she presently added. "I'd like to do things, now and then, and wear clothes like that. But—well, when he drove me down here on Sunday somehow it seemed——" Joyce stopped to laugh. "Of course it was getting home!" she said. "I was going to say that it seemed like getting home. I mean, I wanted to hear about Dodo and everything and I felt I'd missed something!"

"I think that's perhaps because you and Paul haven't seen each other for so long, Joy," her father said after a moment. "You'll grow together in a few weeks; the strangeness will wear off. I'd visit there, and have him visit here; he's only been home ten days, after all. In any case you've decided not to announce your engagement until just before the marriage, so you've time to think it over."

"But, Dad," the girl persisted, "that's the trouble! Or well, no, there's no trouble," she corrected herself hastily. "But that's the—the thing. I do love Paul. I've never liked anyone else half so well and I never will. He's got the most marvelous disposition—he's always laughing, and he's generous—I mean, he's generous in the way he thinks!

"No, it's not Paul. It's just—the way they live, the way they talk. I think I'm like you, Dad. I don't want to be doing things all the time.

"That's not it exactly, either. If they all say, 'Let's go down to Santa Barbara next week-end!' or 'Let's go up to the Mark hop and dance,' I want to go. Or if Paul says: 'We're all having dinner with Pidgie tonight,' I'm delighted; I think, 'What fun we have!'

"But then when we get started, it's always the same thing. Jammed in with a boy you don't like and someone's arm about you, ignoring red lights and watching out for cops, and cocktails and too much food——

"You see, all that makes me unhappy, Dad. I can't help it. I like a good time, and I can be extravagant too about a hat or a party. But to do it all the time—it makes me nervous!"

"It's one of those things you have to think out for yourself, Joy," her father said slowly.

"I know. And I know Paul and I will be married in the fall," she answered confidently. "Only—now, for instance, his father and Claire are lending us their apartment until January. It's a beautiful place. They'd leave three servants in it, and Paul says we'll have cocktail parties two or three times a week and have the crowd drop in whenever it likes. And he says his mother'll come up for a visit and that seems queer; she's been married to two men since she was his father's wife. I sound prudish but it's just that I want to start right."

"You're right. That isn't a very good start, Joycie," her father presently said somewhat hesitantly. "But if you love each other, and the first excitement of it all wears off, and you find some little place down Burlingame way, you'll work it out! You could always be here at home in two hours, you know, if you wanted to see the babies and Dodo——"

"And Dad! Yes, I know," she finished it for him smilingly. She went over and kissed him on the forehead, and picked up her lamp. "I guess all the rushing and excitement tire me, that's all," she said. "I ought to be thanking God for being so lucky!" she ended, at the foot of the stairs.

x x x

Joyce lay in her bed, stretched straight and slim beneath the fine linen sheet, her hands locked on the pillow under her head, her eyes fixed upon the ceiling. The clock had struck ten on a hot July morning. There was no hurry, nobody would be stirring in the household of Emylie Bent-Crowder for another hour at least.

Emylie Bent-Crowder was Paul's mother. She had begun life as Emily Bent, she had worn three different names since and had picked Crowder from among them for momentary use as being perhaps the prettiest. She was forty-eight, dashing undaunted; just now she was extremely rich, and had taken the Knight place at Santa Barbara for the summer.

It was in one of the beautiful guest rooms of the Knight place that Joyce was lying. She had been a guest of Paul's mother for six exciting amusing astonishing days; tomorrow would be the last of them. Tomorrow Paul would take her home and a month later their quiet wedding would take place.

It was a beautiful room in which she lay, part of a beautiful house. The Knights had built the place before his affairs crashed and had not spared expense. In the twenty or more different apartments there were such beauties of furniture and drapery as Joyce had never imagined. Flowers glowed everywhere, indoors and out. Joyce's room had a grilled balcony above an enclosed court on the eastern side, and on the west windows that looked straight out over the sea.

"Jimble Place," as Jim and Belle Knight had ingeniously named their home, was set in three acres of garden, close to the sea. Here Emylie held court, her son the chief among her adorers. Every one who was prominent at all in Santa Barbara drove down to see her; movie stars came; every one came. Dance music went on incessantly; bridge tables were always waiting; maids went about filling boxes with cigarettes and taking away ashes and dirty glasses and rumpled napkins.

Meals came at any time. At eleven, at two, at nine in the evening Emylie might say to some attendant: "Oh, by the way, we'll all lunch here—in about twenty minutes. You'd better count us!"

The servants never counted; there was no counting this shifting crowd that moved so indifferently to and fro. They set the tables for eighteen, twenty, with glasses and damask and flowers, and if only six sat down there was no harm done.

Into all this, armed with the two new linens and the organdie, Joyce had plunged fearfully. She had known that her clothes were not quite right; she had been anxiously conscious that she was the stranger among them all.

But it had all turned out to be quite simple and delightful. Everyone was having too good a time to notice her much at first, and before the third day had ended, the attentions Paul von Schwerin was paying her had established her once and for all. Paul was in high favor with this group, ringleader in plans and escapades; Paul's girl could not but be important.

They rode sometimes before breakfast, when it was not too warm, a dozen of them cantering along the green roads near the sea; they played tennis and golf; they ate ravenously, and went into Santa Barbara for movies, giggling all through them, and some mornings and often late in the afternoon they swam. With meals interspersed between all these diversions, and some little sleep at odd moments, the time raced by. Everything was laughter and fun, compliments, nonsense, movement. A sense of popularity that was absolutely intoxicating after years of exile made the sun seem brighter to Joyce than it ever had seemed before, the sea bluer, the magic of moonlight and the scent of flowers' sweetness almost unbearably sweet.

Paul's mother and Joyce were of exactly the same figure. Joyce found herself an embarrassed happy recipient of many a beautiful frock, a loose soft mustard-yellow coat, broad hats, transparent evening wraps. Emylie Bent-Crowder was going to New York in September to "go dotty," as she herself expressed it, among the shops. She quickly tired of her clothes anyway, and Joyce's round-eyed delight in them pleased her. It was her mood at the moment to win the heart of Paul's girl, and to a great extent she succeeded.

Emylie had had two husbands not counting the last mate, whose union to her she had herself caused to be proved illegal. Emylie wanted money, position, excitement and nothing else. In her almost half century of living she had attained these things in many forms and ways.

But it was impossible not to like her. She made life gay. She wanted every one to be happy. She shrieked with joy at any good joke, screamed and laughed like a parakeet over the bridge table, was affected, noisy, generous, vital all at once. And she really liked Joyce.

"You have a good effect on Paul," she told the girl. "I've always adored him and never got on with him. But you're a one-man girl; you'll straighten him out."

It was no thought of Emylie as a mother-in-law that was making Joyce serious on the last morning but one of her stay as she lay in bed with her hands locked under her head and stared at the ceiling. It was no thought of Paul's father, handsome Victor von Schwerin, or of Claire—they were up in their cabin on the Rogue River. It was no criticism of this wonderful visit. Throughout it, she had felt herself just what every visiting girl longs to be; lovely, popular, adequate; she had felt that everything, herself included, was just right.

No; it was something much more serious than that. Joyce had come quite simply and definitely to the realization that she did not love Paul.

World's Most Valuable Stamp Bought by Unknown Purchaser

New York, Aug. 8.—(AP)—A tiny, black-and- magenta bit of paper valued at $50,000 changed hands yesterday after an 84-year-old history rivalled by only the most precious of diamonds.

It was the world's most valuable stamp—the only known one-cent British Guiana cover of 1856 in existence.

Macy's Department store purchased it for an unnamed client at an undisclosed price from Mrs. Ann Hind Scala of Utica, N.Y.

Thus the little sticker sought by leading collectors the world over entered a new chapter of romantic peregrinations that might be envied by the Hope or Jonker diamonds.

Chronologically the Saga of the stamp, catalogued at $50,000, leads through several unidentified owners before its discovery in 1873 as something out of the ordinary.

That year L. Vernon Vaughn of Demarara, British Guiana, found it while looking over some old family papers. He sold it to a collector for six shillings.

It found its way into the collection of Count Philippe La Renoitiere Von Ferrary. It remained there for 44 years—the Count shrugging off incredible offers for it. He never sold a stamp.

In 1917, however, Count Ferrary died and willed his collection—valued as high as $25,000,000—to the Postal Museum in Berlin. At the close of the First Great War, the French Government announced the collection would be sold for the reparations account.

Three years later the auction was held. The bidding was spirited for the world's rarest stamp, with Arthur Hind (late husband of Mrs. Scala) competing with a wealthy Alsatian manufacturer.

After a dispute in which Hind's agent and the manufacturer both claimed the Seal the latter backed down and it went to Hind for $32,500. Later Hind disclosed he had authorized his agent to bid $80,000 for it.

Before his death, Hind gave the stamp to his wife, who since has turned down offers of $38,000 for it.

Among those who had sought the stamp was the late King George V. When the present war broke out, a movement had been started in England to puchase it by popular subscription for the Royal collection and $32,000 was raised.

The stamp is the only one of a British possession that is missing from the Royal collection.

'Never Met A Finer Lot' Says Padre

Roman Catholic Chaplain Says Canada May Well Be Proud of Her Troops

By EDWIN S. JOHNSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Somewhere in England, Aug. 8—(CP)—"I have never met a finer lot of boys both spiritually and morally. Canada may well be proud of them."

This tribute, paid to the Dominion's men overseas, comes from Capt. Alfred Schimnowski, Roman Catholic Padre, attached to headquarters of the 1st division. He has lived with the men at work and play, endured their hardships and shared their joys.

In charge of the largest Roman Catholic parish in Western Canada —St. Mary's Regina—at the outbreak of war, the popular padre counts himself honored in being a member of the Dominion's overseas forces.

Father Schimnowski is convinced the Canadians will not only play a prominent and heroic role in the ultimate defeat of Nazism but also in the larger task of reconstructing a stronger, more united post-war British Empire.

The padre, who before coming to divisional headquarters was attached to the Army Service Corps and the artillery, was loud in his praise of the good behavior of the Canucks since they arrived in England. They had been received by the people with open arms and by their gentlemanly conduct had not only won lasting personal friendship but also friends for Canada, he said.

"Today the boys are ready for any call of duty," the padre declared. "They are facing up to realities with determination and courage. Actually, I have had more communicants here than in Canada."

Monteagle Resident Convicted of Having Pelts Out of Season

Charles Jarrett, Monteagle Township, was convicted on two counts of infractions of the Game Laws of Ontario when he appeared before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd at Bancroft yesterday. Jarrett was fined one dollar and $7.20 costs after being found in possession of one mink skin. On a second count of being found in possession of a portion of a beaver, out of season, Jarrett was assessed $20.00 and costs.

A charge of cutting a boom and releasing some 400 saw-logs was dismissed against David Woodcock of Bancroft. The offence was alleged to have taken place last May, but His Worship held there was not sufficient evidence to register a conviction and dismissed the accused. Woodcock was remanded to jail on a second count of receiving stolen goods, however.

Robt. W. Robinson, Bancroft, appeared on a charge of being found in the possession of a quantity of illicit liquor. The case was enlarged for one week at the request of Robt. Pringle, local barrister, who represented the accused yesterday.

S. Gordon Robertson, Crown Attorney for Hastings County, conducted the prosecution in all cases. The charges preferred under the Game and Fisheries Act were laid by Game Overseer W. J. Wood, while the R.C.M.P. of Belleville, laid the charge against Robinson.

MODERN "PAUL REVERES" AND "MINUTE MEN" GUARD AGAINST PARACHUTISTS

The modern version of the famous "minute men" of 1776 are these women of England, RIGHT, who are preparing themselves to meet the menace of Nazi parachutists. Members of a women's parashot organization, they are brushing up on their markmanship. A modern version of Paul Revere is the young lady LEFT, who is one of the army of mounted coast-watchers who keep eyes peeled on the English Channel and the North Sea for the first sign of invaders. An inland branch of the lady Paul Reveres watch for parachutists and have ways and means of warning proper authorities.

Basra May be New Door Of Trade With Near East

Turkey Investigates Possibilities of Use For Trade With Britain

NEW TRADE OUTLETS

London, Aug. 8—(CP)—New trade horizons opening in the Near East as a result of the Mediterranean war are likely eventually to prove of importance to the British Empire.

A Turkish transport expert has gone to Basra at head of the Gulf Persia to investigate possibilities of using it as a regular port for Turkish trade with Britain, the Empire, the United States and Japan. He will proceed also to India to attempt development of Turkish economic relations with that country.

It appears that for the first time since ancient days Basra may become the real door to the Near East and British enterprise, which led to foundation of the Basra port of Maqil during the Mesopotamian expedition in the first Great War, and its subsequent administration by a British port authority, will prove more jutsified than ever.

Trade With Baghdad

Three times weekly the Taurus express pulls out of Istanbul bearing its new destination label "Baghdad." As a result of the completion of the railway line in July, it can now collect, on the two-day journey through Turkey, goods destined for all parts of the world because another railway line connects Baghdad with Basra.

The new outlets for Turkish trade are being achieved despite frantic German efforts to convince Turkish business men that their true interests lie in the exchange of goods with central Europe.

The Germans are dismayed because Turkey sends them only about five per cent of her exports, compared with the 52 per cent going to the Reich before the Anglo-French-Turkish pact was signed last year.

One factor tending to give the Germans a considerable hold on Turkey is the fact that, following the last war, they played a great part in supplying Turkey with her industrial machinery, railway equipment and armaments. Turkey is largely dependent on Germany for replacements and spare parts for such items.

It is assumed that one subject being examined by the British Trade Commission, under Lord Glenconner, now in Turkey, is how Britain can best step into Germany's shoes in that respect.

GUARD DETACHMENT TO TOUR DISTRICT TO TOWN DISTRICT

Cobourg, Ont., Aug. 8—(CP) —A guard detachment of the Midland Regiment, on duty for the past 11 months at Trenton Airport under Major Floyd Dudley, 2nd in command of the 1st Midland Battalion C.A.S.F., will make a four day tour of this district, starting tomorrow. Accompanied by the regimental band of 25 pieces, the detachment will visit Brighton, Colborne, Cobourg, Newcastle, Orono, Millbrook, Lindsay, Bowmanville, Port Hope, Cobourg, Norwood, Havelock and Campbellford.

Ships Have to Lie Off Shore

An expert on Somaliland said Berbera could hardly be called a port at all by civilized standards since ships cannot come alongside, but have to lie off shore about a quarter of a mile. The only other "port" is Zella, and only small boats can use it.

The burning hot monsoon which blows across the country with "almost clocklike" regularity from June 15 to Sept. 15 reaches hurricane force and makes concentrated work almost impossible, he said.

This expert said Somaliland has practically no economic value, the principal export being sheepskins.

21 REPUBLICS SEEK REMEDIES

Consideration of Economic Problems Occupies Attention of American Nations

Washington, Aug. 8—(AP)— The American republics began formal consideration today of methods to relieve and develop the economy of the western hemisphere under the broad program adopted at the Havana Conference of Foreign Ministers.

The inter-American financial and economic committee, composed of representatives of 21 nations, set aside its weekly meeting to a detailed study of the measures approved at Havana and steps necessary to carry them out.

Sumner Welles, Acting Secretary of State and Committee Chairman, said that it would canvas the field of existing and prospective economic problems growing out of the war and the application of proposed remendies.

Surplus of Commodities

Heading the list was the mounting surplus of commodities of some Latin American countries to which former European markets have been closed by the war.

Spearhead of the United States attack on this is the administration bill before Congress to increase the lending power of the export-import bank of $500,000,000.

Looking beyond the immediate surplus emergency to further trade dislocations resulting from the war, the Havana conference instructed the inter-American committee to develop long-range plans to protect and strengtnen continental economy.

Equitable Terms of Trade

These included development of commodity arrangements among the American countries to assure "equitable terms of trade for both producers and consumers," and credit or other measures of assistance which might be necessary in the fields of economics, finance, money and foreign exchange.

Camp Borden Man Pays Fine for Speeding

County traffic court held before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., at the Court House this morning, was short and rather pointed when Crown Attorney S. G. Robertson announced that all but one case listed for trial had been settled prior to the proceedings with written pleas of guilty being accepted.

William MacKinnon, Camp Borden, paid $10.00 and costs for speeding and was also assessed the minimum on a second charge of being found in the illegal possession of liquor. Motorcycle Patrolman H. Caldwell preferred the charges.

Court authorities were informed the police could not locate William Copsey of the Rockliffe R.C.A.F. camp. Constable Caldwell had preferred a charge of operating a motor car without first having obtained a driver's licence. Further efforts to locate the man were ordered.

Two other minor traffic cases concluded the proceedings.

Tomatoes Show Further Decline

A gradual decline in the price of tomatoes is being noted on the Belleville market with Thursday morning's quotations being 50c the six-quart basket with quart boxes being quoted at 2 for 25c.

Raspberries still held at 15c the box with the blue variety at 2 for 25c. Huckleberries retailed at 60c the six-quart basket or $1.25 for eleven quarts. Long blackberries were 25c as were black currants with the red variety quoted at 3 boxes for 25c. Gooseberries were 3 boxes for 25c. Cherries held at 75c the basket.

Squash began to make its appearance on the market selling at 10c and three for 25c while a full line of vegetables were to be had at the usual prices. Potatoes were 25c the peck or 90c the bushel with corn selling for 25c the dozen. Apples were 25c to six-quart basket.

Lake trout sold at 25c the pound or at 28c sliced with white fish being held at 18c.

Hog Quotations

Toronto, Aug. 8—(CP) — Unchanged prices were reported early today by Bacon-Hog Markets at Brantford, Hull, Peterboourgh and Stratford.

Dressedweight: Brantford $10.50 Hull $10.50, Peterborough $10.60, Stratford $10.50 plus transportation.

Chatham later reported prices unchanged there at $7.50 liveweight and $10.25 dressedweight.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Aug. 8 (CP)—Only 47,000 shares were traded in the first three hours of the session on Toronto Exchange today and the price tone remained practically steady. A minor index loss for the industrials off-set a small gain for the golds and the base metal and western oil stocks remained unchanged.

Hollinger, Lake Shore and East Malartic were firmer while San Antonio, Leitch and Toburn were down.

Most of the industrial groups were dull and unchanged. Utilities, including Shawinigan and Union Gas were down slightly. Hiram Walkers Common firmed 3-4 to 40 1-4. Modern containers advanced 2 1-2 to 15.

Home Oil held steady at 1.60 and Extension Oil was 3-4 of a point up at 20.

WALL STREET

New York, Aug. 8 (AP) — Both buyers and sellers again hugged neutral territory in today's stock market and few issues were able to develop a definite trend.

Given a feeble boost occasionally were such stocks as General Motors, Republic Steel, Standard Oil of N.J., Santa Fe, American Can, Glen Martin, Sears Roebuck, and DuPont.

Backward most of the time were U.S. Steel, Douglas Aircraft, Anaconda, Kennecott, U.S. Rubber, Socony, American Telephone, and Consolidated Edison.

Among Canadian issues International Nickel dipped a fraction while Canadian Pacific came back as much. Others were inactive.

LIVESTOCK

Toronto, Aug. 8—(CP) — Cattle trade was slow at steady prices at the opening of the Livestock Market here today. A few good butcher steers and heifers brought $8 to $8.26. Common to medium butcher steers sold at $7 to $7.50. Sheep sales were too few to establish prices. No price was established for hogs. No veal calf or lamb sales were reported. The cattle holdover from Wednesday was 700 head. Hogs sold previously at $8.25 off trucks for bacons and $11 dressed-weight.

Receipts reported by Dominion Marketing Service were: Cattle 196, hogs 15, sheep and lambs 13.

Toronto, Aug 8—(CP)— Good cattle in today's fresh receipts sold readily at firm prices up to mid-session on the livestock market today. The light offering of veal calves sold steady. No price was established for hogs. Lambs sold firm and sheep were steady. The cattle holdover from Wednesday was 700 head.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Marketing Service were: Cattle 250, calves 10, hogs 150, sheep and lambs 90.

Good to choice weighty steers brought $8.25-$8.75 with plain selling downward to $7.50. One load of good butcher steers brought $8.40. A few other sales were made at $8-$8.25. Most of the offering was common to medium selling from $6.50-$7.75. Common to medium butcher cows sold at $4-$4.75. Canners and cutters ranged from $2.75-$3.50. Odd lots of good stockers sold at $7-$7.25 with a few loads of common to medium bringing $5.50-$6.75

Veal calves sold at $9-$10 for good to choice with common selling downward to $6.

Lambs sold at $10-$10.50 for good ewes and wethers with bucks at $1 discount and culls at $8-$8.50.

Sheep sold at $2.50 for culls up to $5 for good light ewes.

Hogs sold previously at $8.25 off trucks for bacons and $11 dressed-weight.

HANDSOME SUMS STILL GO UNCLAIMED

Absence may make the heart grow fonder and [illegible] modern theatre parlance it likewise makes the purse slimmer.

Two young Belleville ladies can count themselves poorer today through their absence at the Capitol theatre on Wednesday night when their names were selected by the audience as being eligible to sell their photographs to the management for handsome sums of money.

Miss Clara Tee, 157 Bridge Street East, missed $200.00 when she failed to put in an appearance after her name was selected and by the same token Miss Alethe Mackie, 22 Grier Street missed the sum of $50.00.

A novel soft-drink contest with four boys inhaling the liquid through four-foot straws evoked much merriment previous to the selection of the names. Manager Tommy Mascaro acted as master-of-ceremonies.

Eggs Prices Higher, Butter Goes Lower

Toronto, Aug. 8 — Butter again drifted toward lower price levels on the Toronto open produce market, while eggs extended their sharp Tuesday gains.

With trading light, first-grade Ontario creamery solids eased to 22 1-4c in the afternoon after selling at 22 1-2c during the morning. Sellers appeared unable to arouse any buying interest. Prices to retailers on No. 1 creamery prints also declined, moving to a range of 23 1-2c to 24c.

A-large eggs advanced to 25c in the morning under light receipts and a good demand. During the afternoon supplies were barely sufficient to meet buyers' requirements. This grade sold to retailers at 27c, up 1c from Tuesday. Other grades also registered gains. A premium of 1-2c to 1c was obtainable on Government - inspected shipments of A-large and A-medium eggs tailed 47,141 boxes, bringing total during the week ended Aug. 3 totalled 47,141 bixes, bringing total cheese exports since May 1 to 441,614 boxes, as compared with 322,656 boxes reported in the same period last year. Only 275 packages of butter were exported during the week. Total butter exports since May 1st amounted to 2,207 packages, as against 73,917 packages exported in the same period of 1939.

WAR COMMITTEE

History of Recent Years

Provincial autonomy worked smoothly at first, keeping the political parties busy in working out their local reforms. But soon the larger question of Dominion status came to the surface again. The Viceroy worked unremittingly to find an acceptable formula for bringing the federal scheme envisaged in the 1935 Act into effect, but quarrelling between the political factions prevented progress.

The chief internal dispute is between the predominantly Hindu Congress Party and the All-India Moslem League, which fears that in any federal scheme the former, because of the numerical superiority of the Hindus, would gain a degree of control harmful to the interests of the Moslem community.

Government's Statement

Today's statement, recalling the government's offer last October of Dominion status at the end of the war, said efforts to "attain some measure of agreement" between the political parties had failed.

"It is clear that earlier differences which had prevented the achievement of national unity remain unbridged," the statement said. It declared the government's concern that "full weight should be given to the views of minorities" in any constitutional revision, and added:

"It goes without saying that they (the government) could not contemplate the transfer of their present responsibilities for the peace and welfare of India to any system of government whose authority is directly denied by large and powerful elements in India's national life."

WEALTHY CHINESE KIDNAPPED

Shanghai, Aug. 8—(AP)— Six Chinese, including three wealthy merchants and a four-year-old boy of a prosperous family, were kidnapped within two hours here today, but two of the victims subsequently were released. A woman was among the three persons participating in the abduction of the child, who still is held. The kidnappings were believed solely for ransom and without political implications.

9 NAZI PLANES

50 Planes Engaged

It was estimated that some 50 planes were engaged in the battle, which spread inland over the coastal area.

In one town, where the Germans and low-flying British Spitfires dived at full throttle with machine-guns blazing, a local court continued to hear cases while the windows of the courtroom rattled to the burst of gunfire.

Observers said that Nazi fighters could be seen speeding out to sea as Spitfires dived on their tails from the clouds above.

One Messerschmitt, tackled by Spitfires, dived down toward the sea, righting itself at a height of only a few hundred feet. Then it streaked off toward France—still pursued.

Earlier a German bomber attack on a small shipping convoy off England's southeastern coast had been reported, with indications that the Nazi raids were increasing in intensity with particular attention to that area.

British Statement

The Air Ministry's communique follows:

"During an attack on shipping in the channel this morning a number of engagements took place between our fighters and enemy aircraft.

"Reports so far received show that two enemy bombers are confirmed as having been shot down and the destruction of several others is reported but not yet confirmed."

Watchers on the shore saw a number of bombs drop in the sea and heard heavy gunfire before British pursuit planes drove off the bombers.

Attacks Limited in Scope

Other bombers appeared twice over a southeast town. Attacks, however, appeared to be limited in scope, and most of the invaders flew at high altitudes, apparently on reconnaissance. British fighters went up to intercept them, then begin a continuous patrol.

Bombs were dropped over other sections, apparently by lone planes. No particular damage was reported.

The day's air activity followed a night of raids on English, Welsh and Scottish points.

In the night raids, the government announced, casualties were "very few," though some women walking on a country road wree seriously injured. Damage was slight except in one town in the northeast England were "a sanitarium and shop property suffered considerably."

Bombs Fall Into Sea

Southwest Scotland was raided but most of the bombs were believed to have fallen into the sea. In raids over southwest England and Wales bombs fell on some cliffs near a famous castle, which was undamaged.

The raiders also repeated their barrage of leaflets containing extracts from Adolf Hitler's Reichstag speech threatening Britain with destruction unless she surrenders.

450 ARE SAVED,

Absence of Panic

The passengers were at lunch when a terrific explosion shook the vessel. There was no panic. They filed out in orderly fashion. A 16-year old bellhop stood at his post lining up the passengers quietly.

A crewman hoisted the British ensign and it fluttered from the mast as the ship went down.

Most of those lost were killed in the torpedo's explosion. A few were lost when a motor launch overturned on the choppy sea.

Plenty of Room in Lifeboats

There was an abundance of room in the lifeboats. One passenger attempted a fruitless rescue when he saw a man struggling in the water. He jumped overboard and tied a rope around him and both were hauled to safety, but the rescued man died.

It was a familiar experience to Stewart Herbert Enright, torpedoed twice before in this war, and rescued from the Lusitania in the last.

The torpedo "shook the ship from stem to stern," he said. "I immediately knew what it was. There was no trace of panic at all and passengers and crew behaved marvellously. None saw the submarine."

The submarine was believed to have been sunk shortly afterward, the Admiralty said.

For Capt. Smith it was also an old experience. He was aboard a vessel torpedoed in the last war—the Aburi—and on that occasion drifted in a small open boat in the Atlantic for a week without food and little water.

"I must say we had more luck this time," he declared.

BACON SQUARES lb. 12½c

New Ideas Sought For Chorine's Garb

San Francisco (AP)—With experts of "Gay Paree" apparently out of the running, a highly-paid career awaits anyone who can think up a new way to undrape the American showgirl.

The opportunity is apparent at the San Francisco World's Fair, where many girl shows—some costly and elaborate—are competing for the public eye.

Although some of the best designers have had a hand in the costumes, they seem to have reached the end of their rope in the way of originality. Present day chorines trip onto the stage in adaptations of costumes their mothers might have worn in the palmy days of Flo Ziegfeld.

Even the Folies Berger, noted for the opulence and the daring with which it decks its beauties, admits that a truly original costume is hard to find.

"Our designs were done in Paris, largely by Freddie Wittop," said Manager Eddie Lewis. "They represent a high percentage of the cost of the production. And it's mighty hard to get new ideas. The man who can consistently work them out has a future. Naturally the designs for the chorus are the most difficult in this regard. In decorating a slow-moving showgirl one has more leeway."

Exposition showmen agree that most costumes in American revues must continue to fall into familiar classes—the military, ballet, nationalistic and the lingerie; those based on sports outfits, those simulating animals, those suggesting a period such as the Gay Nineties and so on.

Most of the ingenuity and expense goes into the elaborate individual creations for the footlight parades largely associated with Ziegfeld and his "glorifying" of the American girl. Today Will Rogers' remark still applies to these spectacles:

"I don't know about glorifying her, but Ziggy has certainly undressed her."

EMPIRE PRAISED BY N.Y. TIMES

Solidarity of British Commonwealth of Nations Attests To Fineness of British Character

New York, Aug. 8—(CP)— The colonies and the Dominions of the British Empire were praised editorially today by the New York Times for the aid they are extending to the Motherland to fight "the monster that Germany is today."

The Times said:

"When what was commonly spoken of as 'England' was transformed into "the British Commonwealth of Nations," following the World War, there were many who forecast the gradual dissolution of that mighty empire. But today that Empire, in a period perhaps more critical than any other in its long history, is thanks to British character and British statesmanship, more solidly a unit than ever before. What Canada, Australia and New Zealand have done, and are doing, is in no need of the telling. They are Dominions. But there are also colonies. Within a recent five-week period Hong Kong, Jamaica, the Gold Coast, Malaya, Trinidad, Cyprus, Ceylon, British Guiana have quietly sent nearly $8,000,000 to what is still the 'Mother Country.' For the purchase of airplanes. More is steadily following. Not much, perhaps, in these days of billions; yet it illustrates the determination of the Britishers, wherever he is, to fight the monster that Germany is today."

APPRECIATES THE NAVY

London, Aug. 8—(CP)—At least one Australian values the work of the Royal Navy in guarding the seas. On an envelope arriving here was a label bearing the white ensign and the words: "We realize in Australia the safe arrival of this letter is due to the British navy."

Business Executive Urges U. S. Tourists To Come to Canada

Allan Ross, Pres. of Canadian Wrigley Co., Gives Address Over Radio This Week

Following is text of address given by Mr. Ross:—

"For the second week I am venturing to take a few minutes of the pleasure-giving time of "Treasure Trail" to talk directly to our American listeners.

That this program had a tremendous listening audience in Canada, I knew, but I must admit, I did not fully realize how many friends we have in the United States.

A flood of letters has confirmed that fact, and all of them comment favourably on our efforts to foster happiness and closer relationships between the two countries.

Particularly, I am glad that I have been able (to some degree) to remove misunderstandings which had caused many United States citizens to believe they would meet with difficulties and unpleasant incidents if they ventured to spend their holidays in Canada.

As an American-born citizen who has adopted Canada as his home and place of business I am glad to lend my support to the invitation which all Canada is extending to American friends to COME TO CANADA in August or September and spend your holidays here.

Those of you who have already been here in recent months, know for a fact that while, quietly there is going on a gigantic effort toward the winning of the war, outwardly there are few indications that Canada is at war, and so far as tourists advantages are concerned, there are few holiday places so ideal as this Dominion of ours.

I want to quite deliberately spike the fantastic rumors which have been current within some parts of the United States, and are thus creating fear in the minds of many who had planned to spend their holidays in Canada.

The first of these rumors is that great difficulties exist in crossing the border-line into Canada.

That is NOT TRUE.

The same courtesy and helpfulness which has greeted American tourists at the border for so many years continues today and I am positive will continue always.

No passport or visa is needed. You can drive across the border as you have always done. You will be welcomed everywhere—with perhaps the one exception of military zones, and these are clearly marked.

All you need to bring by way of identification are the things you would likely carry in your pocket—a driving licence, a club membership card, a tax receipt—anything that will satisfy the immigration officer that you are the person you say you are.

The second product of the rumor factory is a false story of difficulties and embarrassment which face American tourists after they have entered Canada. I am not going to repeat idle gossip. I am just going to say quite emphatically that these stories are NOT TRUE.

The same kindliness and hospitality extended to visitors in peacetime is yours if you come to Canada this summer.

The third rumor is that once in Canada you may have difficulty in returning to the United States.

Now, that's an idle, silly tale. We know you won't believe that one if you have heard it.

I am glad that in the United States there is a distinct effort being made to remove the misunderstandings which I have spoken of. A California Bank used one of its regular advertisements to tell of the attractions of Canada and to urge its customers and friends to visit the Dominion. Newspapers in the United States are devoting editorials to the same purpose and are doing untold good in cementing more firmly the friendship which has always existed between the two countries.

I cannot emphasize too strongly that in coming to Canada for your holidays, you are helping the cause of liberty and decency and truth. Canada needs American dollars. Your coming here not only gives these dollars to us and helps us to pay for the war equipment ordered in the United States—but incidentally your holiday in Canada gives you an extra 10 per cent. on every dollar you spend.

So I say to you friends in the United States:

Come to Canada in August or September. Drive on our wide, clean highways. Fish in our streams. Ride in our mountains. Come and visit the five little Dionne sisters at Callander. Come to French Canada. Visit the Maritimes. Come and see the lovely Rocky Mountains. Plan a few days in the Old Country Atmosphere of British Columbia. Come to Canada—and so help Canada to carry on her brave part in the struggle for the preservation of democracy.

Come any way you like—by bus, or train, or car, but COME—COME SOON—WE NEED YOU.

WANT SPEECH TEXT

Washington, Aug. 8—(AP) — The State Department asked Ambassador Joseph Kennedy in London yesterday for a complete text of the interview given there yesterday by John P. Cudahy, Ambassador to Belgium.

Sumner Welles, Acting Secretary of State, said Cudahy's interview in which he described the food situation in Belgium as approaching a famine condition, was granted without prior consultation with or authority from the State Department. The interview was criticized in the British press.

Trenton and District

TRAFFIC LIGHTS EASE DUTIES OF TRENTON POLICE

Trenton, (Special)—Traffic lights installed at the corner of Dundas and Front street are relieving the Trenton police of a great deal of traffic duty during the rush hours of the day. Chief William Bain stated today that the lights had been greatly needed for some time and they would relieve his force of extra duty, especially on Saturdays. Lights have also been installed at the Dundas Street and Dufferin Avenue corner. These lights were installed at this corner to cut down the number of accidents. During the past two months there have been three serious accidents at this corner, one being fatal.

250 Recruits in H. Q. Co'y.

Headquarters Company of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment now has an enrollment of 250 recruits, according to Major Angus Mowat, Officer Commanding the company. Thirty recruits were signed on last night, following their medical examination, by Dr. F. L. Reid, Lt. Col. of the R.C.A.M.C.

Flyers Win Over Wooler

The R.C.A.F. Flyers made it three straight last night over the Wooler softball team to win the Trenton District Softball Championship and the Cobley Cup. The Flyers defeated Wooler 10 to 6, in one of the best games of the season.

The two teams fought on even basis throughout the greater part of the game with the lead moving from one team to another. Wooler took the lead in the first frame by scoring two runs but the Flyers evened the score with another two. Wooler added two in the fourth and the Flyers added five to take the lead for the first time. A homer by Austin in the sixth again placed the teams on even terms. The Flyers again took the lead in the eighth with an eight-run splurge, when Weaver clouted out a homer with three on.

Walker, on the mound for the Flyers, had a slight edge over his opponent Stacey. The former pitcher allowed 8 hits, struck out 5 and handed out two free trips to first base. Stacey allowed 12 hits, struck out three and walked one.

Weaver, centrefield for the Flyers, wielded the most potent bat, collecting a homer, a double and two singles. Austin with a homer and two singles was the best for the Woolerites.

Principal MacLaurin Believes Plan For School Opening Will be Modified

The feeling that some modified form of the present plan regarding the reopening of schools on the first of October instead of the usual date around the 3rd of September, would be made by the authorities before the date of reopening was expressed by P. C. MacLaurin, principal of the Belleville Collegiate, this morning when questioned regarding his attitude toward the scheme adopted by provincial authorities to permit school children to help relieve an acute farm labor shortage.

During the last great war there was a scheme adopted whereby children living in rural districts were let out of school early to assist in farm work and undoubtedly this proved of great benefit, stated Mr. MacLaurin. Undoubtedly there was much work that such pupils living on farms could do, but a great many of the city children would be absolutely at loss on a farm was the opinion of Mr. MacLaurin, as he doubted the actual benefits which would be derived from the provincial adoption of the present scheme.

On the other hand, Mr. MacLaurin was of the opinion that there would be no particular advantage in reopening the schools on the regular date with only a small part of the regular class attending as with the return of the balance of the pupils the work would have to be reviewed. As far as the expense was concerned there would be no material difference as the staff would be paid anyway, and in the case of the Belleville Collegiate the staff would be expected to report on the 3rd of September as there would be much work that could be done preparing lessons etc.

Mr. MacLaurin was unaware of any plan for the registration of school pupils as a means of discovering their adaptability as farm laborers, and neither, he concluded had the local school board received any official confirmation from provincial authorities regarding the delayed opening of schools. All information received had come through the press or over the radio he stated.

Street Carnival Held at Marmora

Marmora (Special)—Under auspices of Marmora Agricultural Society and Marmora Branch No. 237 Canadian Legion the ninth annual street carnival and dance was held on Forsyth Street on Wednesday evening, the fine weather assuring an excellent attendance. Appearing on the program were Red Newman famous singing comedian of the "Dumbells" the Lowells in a novelty acrobatic act Betty Robertson, piano accordian player and singer, a two girl dance team and Pat Gibson cowboy singer. Music for square and round dancing was supplied by Austin's Arcadians. Booths and games were well patronized to add to the success of the venture.

OF HEAVEN'S BENEDICTION

CHAPTER 5
Mrs. Kingsbury

Brooke sat down in the faded cretonne covered chair beside the bed and considered seriously what she had failed as yet to consider at all—the task of being Mrs. Kingsbury's secretary and companion. The self-lecture began and ended with a series of don'ts. But it was impossible to do more than scratch the surface, having only scratched the surface of the personality and character of the old lady during a few weeks several summers ago.

A light tap at her door and Brooke crossed the room and opened it.

"She'll see you," Ellen said.

Mrs. Kingsbury's room, large, airy, sunny, was furnished with massive mahogany pieces. Mrs. Kingsbury, a pink woolen bed jacket half concealing the high-necked, long-sleeved old-fashioned nightgown, sat upright in the bed, her breakfast tray on her lap. A green down comfort concealed her spare fame. Her color was good, her rather abundant white hair was piled high and held fast by a knot, gold-rimmed spectacles rested on an aquiline nose, and her thin lips were drawn to a grim straight line. Brooke thought, "Why, she's just like any other New England housewife." Surprising, that, after so many years of luxury and travel. It occurred to the girl too, and for the first time, that perhaps Mrs. Kingsbury had formed a habit for change which she could not break.

"Good morning, Brooke," the old lady said stiffly, looking her up and down.

"Good morning, Mrs. Kingsbury." She did not know where to begin.

"If you'll sit down," she said with a bored look as if this were something which must be borne.

Brooke sat down. The old lady surveyed her cooly and said, "I'm always at my best in the morning. So we'll attend to my correspondence and business at this hour. If you'll hand me the portfolio from the dresser....You'll find note paper and pencil on the desk."

At the end of two hours Brooke not only knew more about Mrs. Kingsbury's business but more about the lady herself. These details of her life were attended to not as a pleasure but as a duty, accompanied by many sighs. The people to whom she wrote were, Brooke guessed, women like herself, widowed, wealthy, alone and homeless, products of years of wandering. In the letters were many complaints of the climate and food. But several times Brooke saw a tired wistfulness in the old lady's eyes.

To a man in Baltimore, who obviously owed her money, she wrote a cryptic, demanding note, murmuring, "If only the people who owe me would pay me! I'm too soft. That's the trouble with me."

Brooke as yet could detect no softness, only a passion for duty and method. Her frugality and her belief that she was being duped were evident. The high cost of living disturbed her, and the cost of repairs to her car were beyond her comprehension. Brooke wondered if she were as wealthy as the imaginations of Chatham made her. She was frugal too with words, and her attitude toward Brooke was aloof, impersonal. And since Brooke was certain that Mrs. Kingsbury's habits were the same from New Hampshire to Cairo, she wondered what was behind her desire to spend the remainder of the winter in New York.

At last the old lady said, "There's a portable typewriter there in the closet. Take it to your room. And this afternoon I'm expecting my lawyer and I won't need you."

"Shall I get some books for you?"

"Books?" She brightened a little. "Yes! And..that's all. And tell Ellen that I'd like some ice cream for lunch. Chocolate." Giving Brooke a frozen smile of dismissal, she added again, "That's all."

During luncheon she did not appear and Ellen talked quietly as she served.

"Her husband had asthma," she said. "They were always looking for a place where he could breathe. It was hard on her."

When Ellen said, "I hope you'll stay," Brooke suspected that there had been other secretary-companions who had not. However, the knowledge of Mrs. Kingsbury's personality and character was important to her only in that she must serve them for a few months. Questions to Ellen concerning herself revealed that Ellen had raised two generations of ungrateful Boston Smiths, then had been cruelly "let out" five years ago and an advertisement led her to Mrs. Kingsbury. Smiling, Ellen said, "I'd always wanted to go to Europe."

After two days Brooke knew that the sight of beautiful things and places had obviously left no stamp upon Mrs. Kingsbury's practical mind. As she had driven through the country with her employee the previous day, Mrs. Kingsbury was not aware of the beauty of stark trees against a blue winter sky, but of the fact that the houses were in need of paint and that Francis, the swarthy little chauffeur who spoke five languages, was driving too fast. Upright she had sat, the collar of her seal coat buttoned high, an antiquated black hat on her white head. It was not to see that she went, Brooke thought, but just to be going.......

After three days of self-discipline and service, Brooke welcomed Rod's coming with joy. Dressed in a new black suit and a white silk blouse, a year-old but still good, she joined Mrs. Kingsbury for dinner. For only in the evening did the old lady come to the small dining-room.

"You're going out?" she asked.

Brooke took her place and smiled between the tall brass candlesticks.

"Didn't Mrs. Westover tell you that I am going to marry her son?"

"Yes, yes, she did. I'd forgotten." Wistfulness in the gray eyes again though her voice was sharp. "You're too young to get married."

"I'm twenty-one."

"Still a child. Nothing but a child."

"Would you like to meet Rod? He's coming at nine."

"Very well. I'll come out to meet him."

To look him over, Brooke thought.

For an hour she read a blood-curling mystery story, the old lady listening attentively. She liked a challenge to the sharpness of her mind, Brooke thought. For twice during the reading she was interrupted by, "Do you think he did it?" Brooke feigned both interest and ignorance.

Her heart stopped and started crazily when she returned to the living-room and Rod arose to greet her.

"Darling......"

He looked amused. She said, "Wait." She hurried to Mrs. Kingsbury's room and followed her back into the living-room.

Mrs. Kingsbury was aloof and formal and after a short time returned to her room.

Outside in the cold night air Brooke took Rod's arm, feeling that she was out of bondage.

In a quiet restaurant she recalled the happenings of the past three days, for him, saying, "She isn't so terrible, really. Just inhibited. She gives nothing out. I like to think of old people being mellow and wise and tolerant. Ellen, her maid, is. She was telling me how beautiful Italy is. "Loving the sight of his dear dark head and eyes, wanting his voice more than the sound of her own, she said, "Let's not talk about it any more."

She was too happy to realize that it was a patronizing pat he gave her hand.

"You should have friends here, Brooke."

"I could call Mrs. Davies."

She sensed his uneasiness at once. "You could but—but I don't think I'd advise it. She's a good bit older than you and...."

She smiled, said lightly. "Do you think she'd look down on me because my position is somewhat that of a servant?"

"Good heavens, don't say that!"

Have you seen her since Saturday, Rod? Questions and conflicts, temporarily put aside while she accustomed herself to Mrs. Kingsbury's methodical menace, arose again.

She said almost gaily, "This job lasts only until June and then I shall probably get another where I shall get to know all the girls."

"I can get you a place, I'm sure, if you want to stay...."

She thought, "You could marry me, Rod." She said, "I believe I have come to stay. To go back would be retreating. Besides, I want to be near you."

"Darling...."

The restaurant was empty now except for them.

"I love you...."

"I've never doubted it. And it's more than I deserve."

"Not more than you're worthy of." It was so good to speak the words that were in her heart.

They talked about his work, his mother, home, and danced a little. It was he who mentioned that it was getting late. Coming out, it was she who suggested that they walk, not realising the distance, so that when they stood at the apartment door she turned a cold, pink face to him and luminous eyes in which there was no desire for sleep. Her heart quickened. They had said good night so often, parting....

He kissed her briefly but with feeling. "I'll call you," and smiled tenderly at her and walked away.

She watched him until he turned the corner in the hall before she went tiptoeing to her room. There wasn't a sound. Old lady in the next room, have you ever felt like this? Your heart full and aching a little because hearts that love always ache a little?

Snow had fallen twice during the past month, the first time postponing Mrs. Kingsbury's motor trip to Washington. But the trip to Washington, accomplished at last, had been eventful for Brooke in that she had never seen the capital before.

By now Brooke knew that the only motion pictures the old lady would see were those of high adventure and that, by brief remarks half-mumbled, she had a deep sympathy for her own sex and a deep distrust of the opposite sex. One word uttered one morning when, sitting in bed, she heard Brooke read a polite letter from a man in Baltimore who regretted that he could not pay her the money he owed her, proved Brook's suspicions that either Mrs. Kingsbury had once had an unhappy love affair or an unhappy marriage. For the old lady had lifted her voice to utter vehemently, "Men!"

To Brooke she was neither kind nor unkind but as the days went on, she entrusted more of her affairs to her so that by the end of the first month she knew that although Mrs. Kingsbury's income fell far below the imaginations of Chatham, it was still ample.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was sitting on Shorty Judge's front steps talking to him about different subjects, and Shorty said, Here comes Reddy Merfy, I wish I was a head taller and a few mussels stronger, I'd show that guy a few things.

Hay, do you know his real name is Allowishes? I said. Good night, canyou imagine how he would kid us about it if our name was Allowishes? I said and Shorty said, Well anyways, we can ask him about it, a guy cant get insulted for just being asked about his own name, can he?

Sure not, we'll both ask him, that's safe enough, I said.

Wich we started to when Reddy came up, Shorty saying, Hay Reddy, is your name really Allowishes?

Yes it is, what about it? Reddy said, and Shorty said, Nothing about it, I just heard that's what it was so I just thought I'd ask you about it, do you mean it's Allowishes to rime with fishes?

It's not to rime with anything, it's just Allowishes and you lay off of it, Reddy said, and I said, But G, Reddy, if it's Allowishes it cant help riming with fishes, and dishes too.

Sure, and how about suspicious? Shorty said, and Reddy said, If you really want to know what it rimes with, it rimes with push in the face.

And he quick gave us both a push in the face, saying, It rimes with berry your head too.

And he pulled our caps down so far over our faces we couldn't hardly push them up again, and we said, Hay, cut that out, hay, it does not, it doesn't rime with any such of a thing.

The result being he started to accuse us of calling him a liar and we both ran in Shorty's house to end the argument.

Proving nothing is safe enough if you're a weaker country.

ITALIAN COLUMNS IN BR. SOMALILAND HAVE HALTED

Air Reconnaissance Over Western Part of Protectorate Shows Little Movement

Cairo, Egypt, Aug. 8—(AP)—The Italian columns driving into British Somaliland from Ethiopia halted after their capture of Oadweina and Hargeisa "as anticipated", a British communique announced tonight.

Air reconnaissance over those towns in the Western part of the protectorate "showed little movement", the communique said.

It reported continued movement of Italian forces, particularly "motorized transport", in the Libyan-Egyptian border region, "The Western Desert" where the British Command expects a large-scale Italian offensive shortly.

This offensive predicted for mid-August, is linked to Italian fears of intensification of the British Naval blockade and dwinding water and war supplies in Libya. It would be aimed at breaking Britain's stranglehold on the North African coast.

Military Statement

British military headquarters issued the following communique today:—

"All quiet in the Western Desert August 7. Enemy movements parciularly of motorized transport, continued to be reported.

258 Civilians Die in Air Raids During July

London, Aug. 8— (CP)—Two hundred and fifty eight civilians were killed and 321 injured seriously during air raids on Britain during the month of July it was reported today in a written answer to a House of Commons question.

Want British Influence Driven From East Asia

Tokyo, Aug. 8—(AP)—One hundred and twenty-six members of the Diet, (parliament) adopted a resolution today urging the government to take "all available and effective measures to drive British influence from East Asia."

The resolution claimed Britain's arrest of prominent Japanese business men were "purely retaliatory" and "unpardionably atrocious" acts.

There are 466 members in the Japanese Diet.

SEEKS TO RALLY AMERICAN NEGROES TO AID ETHIOPIANS

London, Aug. 8 (CP)—Sylvia Pankhurst, Suffragist aide of Haile Selassie, whom Britain has recognized as the rightful ruler of Ethiopia, said today she was seeking to rally American negroes to a movement to overthrow the Italians in Ethiopia.

"American negroes can strike a blow not only to help their own race by aiding the Ethiopians, but also for all democracy by enabling these great fighters to become active allies of Britain in the African campaign," she declared.

She said she wants to enlist negro fliers and get planes and funds for the Ethiopians.

Britain Increases Pay of Lower Ranks

London, Aug. 8—(CP Cable) — The government increased by sixpence a day the pay of warrant officers, non-commissioned officers and men in the imperial forces today. The measure was taken to balance the increased taxation on tobacco and beer and the increased postal and railway charges.

The increase, which will go to soldiers, sailors and airmen, will cost the country approximately £9,000,000 ($40,050,000) annually for each 1,000,000 men.

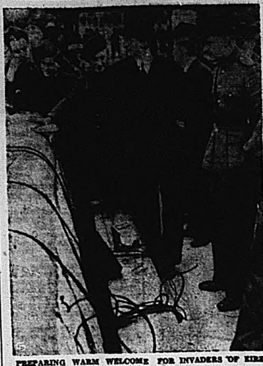
Drunk Reclines At Ease While Charge is Laid

"If the mountain won't come to Mohammed, then Mohammed will have to go to the mountain"—is a well known eastern proverb that had to be put into practice at the Belleville police station this morning.

Shortly after 5.00 a.m. today P.C. Thompson apprehended a transient, who had been imbibing freely, but not well. The man gave his name as Michael Lane, no address necessary, he said.

However when H. B. Wilson local Justice of the Peace arrived at the police station to remand Lane on a charge of intoxication the accused man flatly refused to arise from his reclining position where he was "quite comfortable" he assured Acting Chief Farman as no amount of persuasion could induce Lane to arise from his bed and face the charge.

The outcome of it all resulted in Mr. Wilson having to carry the information papers into the cell block and remand Lane as he reclined unconcerned and still in an apparent joyous mood. His case will be heard Friday.



PREPARING WARM WELCOME FOR INVADERS OF EIRE

Prime Minister De Valera, of Eire, waits for the resulting explosion after touching off one of the new coastal defence mines off Eire's coast. The entire coast has been mined with mines of the "controlled" type, which are set off from shore, to foil any Nazi attempt at invading Ireland so as to drive at Britain's "back door."

P. E. County Farmers Make Fine Showing in Field Crop Competition

Prince Edward County farmers headed the Belleville Agricultural Society's 1940 Field Crop Competitions, according to results released today by Judge Gordon Hancock, Peterborough.

Mr. Holmes Matthie, Bloomfield, took top honors in the barley competitions with the score of 89, easing out Sam Danford, Consecon, by 1-2 point. Mr. Danford, however, came back to win in the oats competition with the fine score of 94, defeating L. J. Ketcheson, Foxboro, last year's winner by a single point.

All entries were of exceptionally high class quality, with the crops rating the highest percentage in years. Judge Hancock stated that competition was very keen and actual judging to the finest points was necessary before final awards were made.

Mr. Hancock was accompanied by Secretary Arthur L. Burke of the Belleville Agricultural Society, who during the judging, secured a number of new entries for next year's competition.

Following are the standing of contestants:—

Oats

Sam W. Danford, Consecon, 94; L. J. Ketcheson, Foxboro, 93; Roscoe Vandewater, Foxboro, 92; Geo. Sutherland, Belleville, R. 5, 91; Ralph Campbell, Foxboro, 90 1-2; Jas. E. Robinson, Belleville R.R. 7, 90; Norway Maracle, Shannonville, 89 1-2; Holmes Matthie, Bloomfield, 89; J. P. Treverton and Son, Plainfield, 88; H. Talcott, Bloomfield 87 1-2; Clem H. Ketcheson, Belleville, R. 2, 87; E. E. Bonter, Carrying Place 84; Herman Claus, Shannonville 82; E. E. Alexander, Hillier, 81; J. M. Carl, Stirling, 79; D. A. Thrasher, Belleville, R. 2, 78; P. R. Boulton, Belleville, R. 3, 70.

Barley

The War Today

By GUY RHOADES
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The roar of aerial warfare resounded along England's south-eastern coast again today and nine enemy planes were downed, while, in far-off North Africa, Italian forces pressed into British Somaliland against a resilient defence.

The air battle raged for an hour after German squadrons crossed from France and sought to attack a small convoy. Two Royal Air Force machines were lost.

Object of the Nazi raid obviously was to make good Hitler's threat to blockade Britain. The Germans, bereft of their own navy in the Norwegian campaign, must depend on aircraft in their blockade attempt. So far it has not worked, and Britain appears to be gaining strength both in the air and in anti-aircraft defences.

This is natural. Factories are running at greater speed and more planes have been imported from the United States. The aircraft industry now has Lord Beaverbrook, Canadian-born newspaper peer, to ginger it up. Anti-aircraft gunners have had considerable practice and their efficiency is increasing as a consequence.

Italian Drive of Desperation

The Italian drive against British Somaliland was believed born partly of desperation, as troops in Eritrea and Italian Somaliland have been cut off from their sources of supply ever since Italy entered the war and Britain closed the Suez Canal to Italian traffic.

The first Italian success, expected in British quarters, was the seizure of the inconsequential port of Zeila after a march through French Somaliland which Il Duce obtained as part of his cut in the Franco-Axis armistice agreement.

British strategists in London said it would be silly for British troops in Africa to offer too vigorous resistance at the moment. They suggested a far better course, and one they expected would be adopted, would be to let the Italians advance fairly rapidly for a while and then turn on them after their lines of communication have been extended and weakened.

In the far north of the Dark Continent the expected Italian assault on Egypt appeared held up, but it was expected to develop soon in view of the fact the largest part of Italy's African forces is concentrated in Libya.

Obstacles Against Italians

To do themselves any good the Italian must reach the Nile Valley and to reach it they must cross the Libyan Desert, a terrific undertaking in ghastly temperatures with the British controlling all the oases and water holes on the way.

In Somaliland the Italians are expected to try to reach Berbera, the principal port but they would have to march through rough country with only one road for 150 miles. Even if they took Berbera it would be useless to them as they have no ships in the vicinity.

To help themselves in that region they would have to cross the Strait of Bab-el-Mandeb, and seize Aden, blocking the entrance to the Red Sea. Aden, however, is strongly protected and the Italians have nothing to cross the strait in.

Mother of Lady Tweedsmuir Dies

London, Aug. 8. (CP Cable)—Hon. Mrs. Norman Grosvenor, the mother of Lady Tweedsmuir, died yesterday.

Mrs. Grosvenor was a daughter of Rt. Hon. James Stuart-Wortley, who was Solicitor General under Lord Palmerston. In 1881 she married Hon. Norman Grosvenor, who died in 1898.

She started the Colonial Intelligence League for educated women, which is now incorporated into the Society for Overseas Settlement of British women, the Women's Branch of the Colonial office. For this work she was made a Commander of the Order of the British Empire.

Mrs. Grosvenor did miniatures and water colors, which she exhibited, and wrote three novels and, in co-operation with a member of her family, wrote the "Memoirs of the First Lady Wharncliffe".

New Vessel 'Jasper' Is Christened at Western Coast Port

At a West Coast Canadian Port, Aug. 8.—(CP) — Another addition to the Empire's naval strength slid down the ways of a shipbuilding yard here last night after Mrs. Brodeur, wife of Commodore V. G. Brodeur, senior naval officer on Canada's Pacific Coast, christened the vessel "His Majesty's ship Jasper".

The sleek vessel was of the Corvette class.

AT THE CAPITOL

"The Man Who Wouldn't Talk"

Picture a man with no family, no friends, no personal connections whatsoever; with no money, no position and no past. Picture such a man, if you can, confessing to a startled court about to try an innocent man for murder that he committed the crime. Finally imagine this man who even gets his name from a calendar and calls himself Joe Monday, on trial for his life and refusing to reveal why he committeed the crime or speak in his own defense.

"Chip of the Flying U"

Adventures of a handome, hard-riding, straight-shooting ranch foreman, and his desparate struggle with a new menace to the peace of the western frontier — munitions smugglers—are said to be found in "Chip of the Flying U".

Johnny Mack Brown has the starring role in the famous story which is described as blending comedy, romance and unexpected thrills. Featured in the supporting cast are Bob Baker, singing star; Fuzzy Knight, cowboy comedian; Doris Weston and The Texas Rangers, popular radio musicians. Character roles are carried by Forrest Taylor, Anthony Warde, Karl Hackett, Henry Hall and Ferris Taylor.

The extra added attraction is the fourth of the Canada Carries On series "The Front of Steel" showing authentic scenes of the German war machine in action, Canadian Industries' Answer; Machines of War Forged by Skilled Canadian Workmen. The 4th Chapter of the thrilling serial "Buck Rogers", and the News complete this big show.

AT THE BELLE

"Susan and God."

The new dramatic promise which Joan Crawford evidenced in "The Women" reaches a surprising culmination in "Susan and God" picturization of the Rachel Crothers' fast and funny romantic comedy hit which has become an even greater screen success. The film, co-starring Fredric March and featuring one of the season's strongest supporting casts, is now on the Belle Theatre screen.

Despite the magnificent handling of the theme by Director George Cukor, the brilliant screen play by Anita Loos and the individual gems of characterization turned in by March and others, "Susan and God" is a personal triumph for Miss Crawford, for the delicacy and assurance of her work places her on an acting pedestal which she has never previously approached.

As Susan, the scatterbrained, self-centered gadabout who adopts a new social movement as a fad and makes a complete botch of the lives of her friends and herself by her meddling, the star over-shadows every other item of critical consideration. As the inebriate husband, Barrie, who finally wins the battle with himself and Susan, March turns in a matching performance which makes his return to films a welcome event following his Broadway success in "The American Way."

Surprise Performance

Another surprise of the film is the performance of the youngster, Rita Quigley, who makes her screen debut as Blossom, the lonely, unwanted daughter of Susan and Barrie, and makes Blossom the most sympathetic character in the script.

Warm and understanding is Ruth Hussey's Charlotte, the family friend in love with Barrie. Appropriately glamorous is Rita Hayworth as the young actress, Leonora, married to the pompous and much older Hutchins Stubbs (Nigel Bruce) but regretting it for the sake of the young actor, Clyde Rochester (John Carroll). Also deserving of singling out for the conviction of their performances are Rose Hobart as Irene, hostess at the Long Island house party where much of the action of the piece takes place; Bruce Cabot as her lover. Mike O'Hara and Constance Collier as Lady Wigstaff, leader of the new movement.

During the action of the story Joan Crawford, Rose Hobart and Rita Hayworth wear Adrian's most startling gown creations — tomorrow's modes!

Canada Carries On

"Front of Steel" is the title of the latest and probably the best of the Canada Carries on Series. The film reveals authentic scenes of the German war machine in action and Canadian industry's answer!

AT THE McCARTHY

"Blondie Has Servant Trouble"

The Bumsteads newest comedy "Blondie Has Servant Trouble" now showing at the McCarthy Theatre is by far the funniest of all their great laugh provoking hits. Dagwood (Arthur Lake), Blondie (Penny Singleton), Baby Dumpling (Larry Simms) and Daisy have come through with another top-notch group of performances as the Chic Young comic strip characters come to life.

Like its predecessors, "Blondie Has Servant Trouble" deals with the very things everyone of us encounters during our daily lives. This time, Blondie wants a maid and tells Dagwood he'd better get a raise in order to pay for this added convenience. Then begins the typical Bumstead adventures of hilarious proportions. Every member of the family is dragged in, of course, as well as old friends like Alvin, the boy next door, and the poor postman who is always getting knocked down by the daily Dagwood rush to work.

"Blondie Has Servant Troubles" brings the Bumsteads back to remind us al lthat there's lots to be gay about. It's a grand film treat for every member of the family. Be sure to see it soon and laugh your cares away.

"Military Academy"

A swell companion feature "Military Academy" with an excellent cast headed by Tommy Kelly, of "Tom Sawyer" fame, Bobby Jordon one of the original "Dead End" kids, Jackie Searl and David Holt make the film a timely and thrilling document. Set against the colorful back-ground of a military school, "Military School" is concerned with the drills, athletics and fun that boys are mostly concerned with and for this reason "Military Academy" is just the type of entertainment which makes wholesome and pleasing screen-fare, to the perfect satisfaction of all moviegoers.

"Blondie Has Servant Trouble" and "Military Academy" is a two feature show which in this reviewer's estimation is as perfectly balanced and delightful as though they were two hits made for each person's individual taste in a screen offering and it is to be hoped that all who read this column will now without fail take advantage of attending the McCarthy Theatre. A real treat in entertainment from start to finish, is the parting word, which again means go to the McCarthy.

Military Experts Change Opinion Of Poland's Army After Quick Collapse of France

Poles Held Out For 4 Weeks While Low Countries And France Cracked In 38 Days of Warfare

POLISH TROOPS BETTER DISCIPLINED

(By Charles Foltz)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Berne, Switzerland, Aug. 8.—(AP)—A lot of qualified military experts attached to Swiss Legations as the military attaches of foreign powers, and some of the Swiss, too, have revised their opinion of Poland's army.

These things contributed to the new turn of opinion.

First was the new realization of the power of Germany's war machine and its strength in the air.

Second was the way France cracked up along with Belgium, Holland, and the low countries in 38 days of warfare. Poland alone lasted four weeks.

Third were the Poles themselves—even in internment.

On the night of June 19-20 alone some 28,000 troops crossed into Switzerland in the region of the Franches Montagnes in the Jura.

First to cross were about 12,000 French troops of various branches of the army. Some had their rifles. Some didn't. Many had never even seen a German. Few had participated in active fighting. All came because the Germans cut off their retreat to the south.

Later came the main units of 18,000 Poles. They, too had been cut off in their retreat, but they came across with all their arms and even most of their motorized equipment. They were disciplined. They had not only almost all seen Germans but their units were all heavily carved up by casualties.

Return to Use of Ammunition

One Polish unit about 2,000 strong dashed up to the frontier with several batteries of 75's and 101's. A group of commanding officers conferred briefly with the Swiss command and were told that they would have to surrender both arms and ammunition.

The whole unit turned around and dashed off again. The commanding officer explained that they "still had same ammunition left" and were going to "give it to the Germans".

They "gave" it to the Germans and the Germans gave them the same back again. They came into Switzerland with all their guns and rifles—but with not a shell, not a cartridge and with many casualties.

Poles, in little groups of three and four, have been drifting into Switzerland ever since the Armistice. Some have come from channel ports all the way through German occupied territory. They hide in farm houses or deserted town houses during the day and travel by night. They escape from internment camps.

Swiss police stopped four recently headed back into occupied France. Yes, they knew it was occupied, but they wanted to get to England—somehow. They didn't know how.

City Hall 'Big Ben' Feels 'Increased Production' Urge

Merry Marathon of a Mad Minute Hand Has Residents Annoyed

NOVEL SITUATIONS

(By G.H.C.)

When the history of the present war is written, it will be recorded that Belleville responded to the call for increased production fully one hundred per cent. Her men and women, sons and daughters are doing a noble job in this phase of the country's war effort as are her industries businesses and professions.

The latest to join the ranks of the "increased productionists" is the venerable City Hall clock. The four-faced local Big Ben has gone into its new activity with a vengeance and for the past three days has succeeded in crowding sixty-one valuable minutes into each hour.

However the surplus thus accumulated has not been stored away for future needs but of necessity been crowded into the following sixty minutes and the result is a lot of wrathy citizens.

The merry marathon of mad minute hand in its attempt to put the city on a sort of super-daylight saving time had residents scratching puzzled heads today.

Stenographers stood outside offices fully ten minutes before "opening time". Clerks did likewise. One habitual latecomer to work arose at seven by the clock, shaved, breakfasted and gave the boss heart-failure when he showed up on time.

Bank clientele looked at closed doors from beneath puzzled brows. The City Clock "said" ten minutes after ten. "What's wrong?" one queried, "are the bankers taking the half-holiday in the mornings now?"

Time On His Hands

A jeweller gazed at the clock with an enlightened expression on his face. "So that's the reason" he said to himself. Later he revealed that customers who had had their watches repaired at his place of business had brought the time pieces back saying they were running too fast. "Four of them yesterday" he moaned. "I showed them radio time and they were satisfied."

And bus-patrons are arriving at the various bus stands in plenty of time. As a matter of fact they have to wait a few minutes now for the buses apparently are operating on the correct time.

A Church Street resident swore gently at the antics of Belleville's Big Ben. "I left for the station this morning" he wailed, "and en route scraped my fenders against those of another car. Had that cussed clock been right, I would not have started for another ten minutes, and my fenders would have been all right."

However, the oldtimers think the whole business is a joke, and a possible benefit. I have to wait another two years before I am eligible for the old-age pension one laughed, "now, if they only leave the clock alone I'll get in a year sooner."

The clock according to radio time, was sixteen minutes fast at ten o'clock today

French Refugees Wait Weary Hours To Get Back to Their Homes

By LLOYD LEHHBAS
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moulins, France, Aug. 8 (AP)—Only trickles of refugees, mostly plodding afoot or riding bicycles, are allowed to pass through this bottleneck of the jealously guarded pathway to their former homes in German-occupied territory.

A day of watching the lines of war-wanderers seeking to return to their home towns or farms—travelling on foot, in automobiles, bicycles, and wagons—discloses that a major element in the slowness of the rigid control the Germans exercise along the border between the occupied and unoccupied zones.

(Moulins lies along the Alliers River in central France, about 160 miles north of Vichy, temporary camiles north of ichy, temporary capital of the Petain government.)

Every returning refugee must have papers approved by French and German control stations and must undergo examinations by the Germans before being permitted to pass the barriers.

Under German instructions, the French have established control barriers two miles from Moulins, leaving a "no man's land" between these barriers and a German control station at a bridge over the Alliers River outside Moulins.

Refugees have piled up at these barriers like driftwood while waiting long periods for examination of their papers.

Automobiles piled high with baggage and bedding are permitted to pass in convoys of five, averaging ten cars an hour. Throughout the day, there is an average of 25 to 30 cars awaiting instructions.

Refugees afoot or riding bicycles are given numbers which are called out when the German control station sends word to permit another group to pass.

When the numbers are given out, the recipients are informed they probably will be forced to wait at least ten hours. Consequently, many sleep along the roadside or in nearby woods so they may be first in line the next morning.

Wants Every 'Undesirable' Jail or Chased Out of City

Mayor of Atlantic City Orders Police To Hunt Up Everyone With Criminal Record

Atlantic City, Aug. 8—(AP)—With the city jail already crowded, police continued to scour the town today for every man they could find with a "known criminal record."

The search was instituted by guntotin' Mayor Tom Taggart, who told the cops he wanted every "undesirable" chased out of town or put in jail.

Eighty policemen roared applause last night when Taggart promised them that "henceforward nobody shall interfere with any of you in the performance of your duties."

"Investigation during the past two weeks," said the Mayor "shows that men with police records have been moving in and out of the city unmolested, and I intend to put a stop to it. The people of Atlantic City don't want criminals in their midst, and neither do the city's visitors."

Cops promptly raced in and out of night clubs and other buildings in search of prisoners, and an hour later Mayor Taggart announced 11 persons had been brought to city hall.

Some 'Undesirables' Flee

Asserting some "undesirables" fled town before the round-up, the burly, recently-elected Mayor exclaimed:

"They had better stay away, because as soon as they come back they will be arrested."

Taggart began his clean-up two weeks ago when, without the knowledge of high police officials, he personally led raids on four gaming spots. He earned the "gun-totin" title by equipping himself with an old-fashioned six-shooter before setting forth.

Ten days later he swooped down on another gambling establishment and picked up 75 prisoners, including Max (Boo-Boo) Hoff, well-known Philadelphia promoter.

Canadian Mechanics Seen At Work on War Munitions

Official Film 'The Front of Steel', Currently Shown at Local Theatres, Depicts War Industries at Work

The answer of Canada's "Home Front" to the Empire's call is graphically portrayed in the picture "Front of Steel," the fourth of the series "Canada at War." The picture is being shown in conjunction with regular programs at the Belle Theatre Thursday and Friday and at the Capitol Theatre on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week.

The film portrays in startling fashion Canada's mechanics of twentieth century warfare. It shows in graphic detail the highly mechanized efficiency of the nation's munitions plants, where shells of all calibres roll off machines in an unending stream.

The grim muzzles and streamlined barrels of guns, which will belch death and defiance to the common enemy in the near future, are shown in the process of construction. The naval yards of the country where skilled artisans blend their abilities into an efficient whole to produce the armaments and ships so necessary to the defence of the Dominion and the augmentation of the Royal Navy, are also shown.

Efficiency of the mobilization of Canada's industries is another highlight of the film which gives the direct lie to Nazi propagandists that Canada's effort at home is a puny one.

All loyal Britishers should see the film, which brings home with a startling clarity the exemplification of the Dominion's decision to back the Empire with all her resources, industries and labor.

ANOTHER PROBLEM IN REGISTRATION

One of the many problems confronting registrars in the forthcoming national registration which will take place starting August 19th, will be how to register persons who are away from the polling booths during the three days set aside for purpose of registration. This morning Fred W. Wiggins, Chief Assistant Registrar for this district, received a phone call from Point Anne, from a sailor who will be away from port during registration inquiring how he could be registered before sailing.

If that man were here now we could register him commented Mr. Wiggins but as he will be on the water during the time of registration undoubtedly he will have to be registered at his nearest post office upon his return to port.

'Sam', Canadian Mechanic, Is Fighter Pilot After All

Is Type of Canadian Who 'Just Cannot Be Kept Out'

'SAM' TRIUMPHS

By D. E. BURRITT
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Aug. 7—(CP)—"These Canadians," the Royal Air Force officer said with mock exasperation, "just cannot be kept out. They are too anxious to fight."

As he spoke he had in mind particularly the case of a 35-year-old hard-boiled Canadian mechanic who can be identified only as 'Sam' and who had made up his mind he was going to pilot a fighter plane.

Sam first applied to the R. A. F. nine months ago explaining that he had his civil pilot's licence—obtained in his spare time through the civil air guard. He wanted to fly behind a battery of machine guns. Everything was against him— his age and the fact that he was in reserved occupation. Even if he abandoned his present post he would be confined to the ground crew, since he was a first class mechanic.

"To hell with that," said Sam with patent disgust. "I hate this job but I'll stay here until they do need guys who want to get up there in a fighter. I'll fly one of those things or nothing at all."

Advised to be Air Gunner

He remained on the job, cursing the luck that kept him there. The only encouragement he found was in the casualty lists. After each one, he would race to headquarters and try to convince them they needed replacements. Of those, however, they had plenty and they finally convinced Sam he should try for an air gunner's berth.

With heavy heart he agreed to the compromise and turned up at 5.30 in the morning for his interview and examination. When they let him in at the regular 9 o'clock opening, Sam saw with elation the following blackboard notice: "State in order of preference your desire to become a pilot, observer or air-gunner."

Preference to Be Pilot

He knew they had agreed to give him a trial as airgunner. "But," he argued, "it says there to express my preference and my only preference is to be a pilot." That was the only preference he did express.

'Sam' Gets Surprise

With amazement he heard his name called for an interview with the selection committee, composed of officers, tough, strict, apparently without humor and supposedly without sentiment.

Now Sam is a tousled-haired guy, built like a concrete pillbox and has a deep raucous voice that he exercised to capacity at numerous sporting events in and around Toronto, London and other Ontario cities. He stuck his fingers in his vest pockets and waited for his judges to fire a barrage of questions about his schooling, studies, sports background and his current ambitions.

'Sam' Fires Back Answer

His replies to technical questions were not too impressive and one officer scribbled down as a trial an elementary question in trigonometry. Sam, unabashed, sneaked a glance at the question being written and recognized it as the same one he had pondered when glancing through his old schoolbooks the night before. The officers looked as if they had judged too hastily when Sam fired back the answer as soon as the paper was shown to him. Numerous other questions were asked and then:

"Ever use a gun?"

"Sure, every Canadian does as a kid," said Sam.

"Yes, I know, but I mean real shooting. What kind of gun?"

Sam who had never fired anything more lethal than a .22, advertised...."303."

"Hummm," said the interviewer, "big stuff eh? Do you like to fight?"

'Fight, That's My Hobby'

"Fight," echoed Sam, breaking into a grin that opened up half his big rugged face now that the conversation had swung for the first time into language he really understood. "Fight, hell, that's my hobby!"

The officers turned and whispered momentarily. Then they leaned back and one said to Sam:

"Well, you haven't much to offer academically speaking. But here's your card. Report where it tells you....and good luck....I think you're going to feel pretty much at home up there in a fighter.."

Expect Wheat Yield Lower Than Average

Toronto, Aug. 7 (CP)—Grain crops are ripening fast all over Ontario and in most sections cutting and harvesting of wheat is general, according to the weekly crop report issued by the Ontario Department of Agriculture today.

The department's representatives throughout the province report some lodging and rust as a result of unseasonal weather earlier in the summer and in the late spring, but wheat yields will average 35 to 45 bushels per acre. This is generally below average, but a few districts report as good if not better than average yield. Quality is somewhat below average in some districts.

Harvesting of crops has been thrown out of ordinary routine in some districts as farmers are pressing to make up for time lost in the early unseasonal weather. In Haldimand county in the southern part of the province, some farmers are harvesting first cutting hay, others are taking in second cut alfalfa while still others are cutting wheat and some oats and barley.

Haying appears to have been completed in western Ontario, but in the eastern counties farmers are still working on that crop. Much hay remains to be harvested in some southern districts, also, particularly in Lincoln county. Some fields in Oxford still have to be cut.

Livestock in Good Condition

Livestock is reported to be in excellent condition throughout the dairying districts. There has been an abundance of pasture throughout the summer.

Corn is reported to be making excellent growth as a result of recent hot weather, although in some districts it will be below average.

From the representative in Renfrew County comes word that the Spring grain crop there is considerably above average and that many fields of barley and a few oat fields were cut last week.

In the north a badly-needed rain in the Thunder Bay district helped grain, vegetables, potatoes and roots to improve in a district where the hay crop is only two-thirds normal. Most clovers were killed in the Winter owing to lack of snow protection. In other northern districts, grain crops have improved lately and in Algoma the Spring variety are headed out and filling satisfactorily. Cutting of fall wheat has started in Manitoulin.

USUAL CHANNELS RELIED ON FOR WAR EFFORT NEWS

Federal Gov't Decides Against Centralization of Its Public Information Offices

Ottawa, Aug. 7 (CP)—The Government has decided against centralization of its public information offices and will continue to rely on regular channels of public information for distribution of news of the war effort.

Hon. J. G. Gardiner, Minister of National War Services, under whose administration public information is included, said in a statement issued today that "the Goverment agree that public interest can be served best by collection and distribution of news bearing on Canada's war effort through regular functioning channels, particularly when the medium is the press."

He was commenting on advice received from D. B. Rogers, editor of the Regina Leader-Spot, who had been asked by the Minister to conduct a study of existing public information facilities in Ottawa.

High-Powered Publicity Failure

Mr. Gardiner stated that it was the expressed opinion of Mr. Rogers that high-powered publicity and propaganda organizations whose aim was to control and point the news in a given direction had failed utterly in all democracies to satisfy either the people, the newspapers, or the governments involved.

"There is no more justification for interference with the normal flow of news in time of war than in times of peace," Mr. Rogers said, 'and governments which were truly interested in securing an intelligently-informed public opinion could best bring this about by increasing the accessibility of news at its source."

The Minister pointed out that in general Mr. Rogers advised against centralization and emphasized the importance of relying on utilization of existing channels of public information to as great an extent as possible.

"Mr. Rogers' main conclusion might be stated in his own words, 'Let the news be released in the regular way while it is news,' said Mr. Gardiner. "The government considers it wise to continue to proceed along that line in its relationship with the press."

OLD POLITICIANS ARE ASSAILED

French Press Attacks Them Charging Propaganda Against Petain Regime

Vichy, France, Aug. 7 (AP)—The French press charged today that "old politicians" continue to make propaganda to create a troubled atmosphere for the new post-armistice government of Premier Marshal Henri Petain.

The newspaper Le Journal said those who do not love the Petain government must "fear it."

Declaring that "accomplices" of men to be tried for responsibility for France's defeat still were at work, Le Journal said that "by striking the leaders quickly and severely the Supreme Court will put an end to this dangerous situation."

The Supreme Court is to meet at Riom, near Vichy, tomorrow for formal opening of the case of those accused of plunging France into war unprepared.

Punishment of the leaders, said Le Journal today, will be a warning to "accomplices."

The names of persons to come before the Riom court still have not been announced, although former Premiers Edouard Daladier and Paul Reynaud are the chief figures around whom press comment continues to centre.

TROTSKY MAKES HOME INTO FORT

Concrete Towers, Floodlights And Special Entrance Used To Guard Russian Exile After Attempt On Life

Mexico City, Aug. 7 (AP)—Leon Trotsky, Russian exile who escaped machine-gunning by would-be assassins May 24, is transforming his estate at suburban Coyoacan into a veritable fortress to guard against any future attempt on his life.

Workmen are erecting three brick and concrete towers equipped with narrow slits through which riflemen could dominate the walls encircling the estate.

Another tower atop the residence is being remodelled along similar lines, windows nearest the street have been barred, and the guards have been equipped with floodflights. Trees and shrubbery have been trimmed or removed to offer any intruder little cover.

There is only one entrance to the estate. Visitors, admitted through the lone gate by a guard-secretary, find themselves in a steel cage, the inner door of which may be opened only by an electric switch controlled by another guard inside the grounds.

NEWFOUNDLAND'S DEFENCE LINKED WITH CANADA'S

Political Implications of Participation In Defence of Island Territories Rouse Speculation

MUTUAL RELATIONS

Presence of Canadian Troops Will Make Canadians Familiar With Oldest Colony

(By Frank Flaherty Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Ottawa, Aug. 9 (CP)—The future political implications of Canada's active participation in the defence of British Island territories on this side of the Atlantic give rise to speculation in many quarters, particularly in regard to Newfoundland.

Canadian troops now are doing garrison duty in Newfoundland, the British West Indies and Iceland. Iceland, of course, is an independent state under the King of Denmark and its future after the war is unlikely to be affected by the service of Canadian or British troops there during hostilities.

But Newfoundland's defences will be closely integrated with the Canadian system when the Atlantic army command becomes effective. Just how close the Newfoundland-Canada tie becomes remains to be seen.

Under the plan for the Atlantic command, the officer appointed to it, Maj.- Gen. W. H. P. Elkins will be responsible for all troops on operational duty in the Maritime provinces and the approaches to the St. Lawrence River, including the troops in Newfoundland.

Jurisdiction of the command does not extend to the West Indies, probably for the reason that these island outposts of Empir are not directly associated with the problem of the defence of Canada's eastern seaboard. The duties performed by Canadian troops are in the nature of a contribution to the defence of the Empire as a whole rather than the self-defence of Canada.

Moreover the distance of the West Indies garrisons from Canada makes it less practical to integrate them into an operational command.

In the days when Canada was less troubled by larger problems, the relationship of this Dominion to Newfoundland was frequently discussed. Many people both in Canada and Newfoundland held the view the "oldest British colony" should enter confederation as the 10th Canadian Province.

Sunburn! It seems that only a small part of the sunshine is most influential in causing sunburn and tanning. If a beam of sunshine were passed through a prism of glass, the beam would be spread out, fan-like, showing rainbow colors. It is called the spectrum. The colored part is called the visible spectrum. If an instrument used to detect heat were passed over the spectrum, heat would be observed not only in the visible part but even beyond the red and violet ends. The part beyond the visible violet is called the ultraviolet. This is the part responsible for suntan and sunburn. This effect is increased with elevation, as less of the ultra-violet light is filtered out.

Mongrel Is Freed Of Federal Charge

Swampscott, Mass., Aug. 9 (AP)—Mars, one of the few dogs ever to face United States Federal charges, is a free canine today.

Haled before the board of selectmen last night to answer charges preferred by Postmaster Wilkinson of the Lynn postal district, Mars charmed the whole board with the friendliness of his ceaselessly wagging tail and won complete exoneration.

Wilkinson complained that Mars chased and bit the mailmen, and demanded town action.

The dog, a mongrel German shepherd owned by Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Terhune's two sons, walked into the hearing last night in company with all the boys of his neighborhood. They told the selectmen Mars was their friend and that they would be brokenhearted if he was destroyed. Representatives of the animal rescue league and the Swampscott dog officer also defended him.

P. A. CHESTER TO OCCUPY POST

General Manager of Hudson Bay Company Named Acting Master General of Ordnance

Ottawa, Aug. 9—(CP)—P. A. Chester, of Winnipeg, General Manager of the Hudson's Bay Company, has been appointed Acting Master General of the Ordnance, the National Defence Department announced today. He succeeds Maj.-Gen. W. H. P. Elkins, recently appointed head of the Atlantic military command.

Mr. Chester's services have been made available to the government for a limited period without charge by the company. He will assume no military rank but will have full charge of the expanding ordnance services of the Canadian army.

Businessman in Army Post

The appointment marks a new departure in that it brings a businessman into a high military post for the first time. The position of Master General of the Ordnance calls for a high degree of organising ability and Mr. Chester's experience in large scale merchandizing will be of value.

The ordnance branch is responsible for all clothing and equipment for the fighting forces, guns, tanks, ammunition, tractors, scientific equipment, everything from huge machines to tooth brushes.

Served With British in Great War

The new Master General of the Ordnance served in the British army in the first Great War. He enlisted in the ranks of the 9th battalion, King's Royal Rifles in August, 1914 and served continuously in France until 1919 with the exception of two short periods when he was wounded He left the army with the rank of Captain.

Joining the staff of the Hudson's Bay Company in 1923 he was appointed general manager for all the company's operations in North America in 1930.

PRELIMINARY HEARING ADJOURNED

Trenton, Ont., Aug. 9.—(CP)—A further adjournment until Aug. 16 took place today in the preliminary hearing of murder charges against Robert McFarlane, 21, and his 18-year-old wife, Alice. The youthful couple, married July 12, are facing the charges as a result of the finding of the body of Mrs. McFarlane's two-year-old son, Gordon Archer, in Trent River near here July 26.

Rumania Favors Migrations, Wants to Yield Little Area

Bucharest, Rumania, Aug. 9 —(AP)—A proposal for "definite separation" of the Rumanian and Hungarian peoples was Rumania's answer today to Hungarian demands for three-fourths of the Province of Transylvania.

The plan would involve vast transfers of people but only a small cession of territory by Rumania to Hungary, as outlined in a broadcast last night by Premier Ion Gigurtu.

The Premier said Rumania, which already has ceded Bessarabia and Northern Bucovina to Russia, had been called on by the Rome-Berlin axis to make further sacrifices in order to preserve peace in southeastern Europe, and was ready to do so.

He made it clear the country was not ready to yield to Hungary's present demands for the lion's share of Transylvania, which Rumania gained through the first Great War break-up of the Austro-Hungarian Empire.

Territory Cession

In declaring the territory ceded to Hungary need only be very small, Gigurtu cited the following figures:

That in the 22,312 square miles of Transylvania there are only 1,800,000 Hungarians, compared to 3,700,000 Rumanians, while there are 50,000,000 to 80,000 Rumanians in Hungary.

The Premier declared Rumania in her own interests was following whole-heartedly a pro-German and pro-Italian policy and that in the past those interests had been served best by collaboration with Germany.

In making the sacrifices demanded by Rome and Berlin, he said, Rumania would gain a more homogeneous country and benefits through collaboration with the axis powers. Through this "salvation policy," he asserted, Rumania would be saved from "the evils of Judaism."

BRITISH TROOPS IN SHANGHAI TO BE WITHDRAWN

Total of Troops In Shanghai And North China Affected About 1,500

NO REPLACEMENTS

While Destination Is Unknown Shanghai Opinion Suggests Hong Kong Or Singapore

London, Aug. 9—(AP)—The War Office announced today that "British troops at present stationed in Shanghai and in north China are being withdrawn for service elsewhere."

Authoritative sources said both Japan and the United States have been notified of Britain's intention of withdrawing the troops.

These sources said the total number of troops affected was about 1,500, and that protection of British interests would be left to the international police force commanded by the municipal council which governs the Shanghai international settlement.

No replacements for the British troops were planned, it was reported.

While the designation of the men was not given it was considered unlikely they would be taken from the Far East. (Shanghai reports suggested Hong Kong or Singapore as the destination).

BRITAIN BUYS EGYPT'S COTTON

Press of Egypt Hails Forthcoming Flow of Money Into Country

London, Aug. 9 (CP)—Financial circles declared today the Government's purchase of the entire 1940 Egyptian cotton crop probably would result in a net loss, although the British and Egyptian Governments realized a profit on a similar deal during the last war.

The crop, of 1,600,000 bales (800,000,000 pounds), is to be bought at prices of about 14.25 to 15.25 a pound.

Financial quarters pointed out that conditions differ from those of the last war, when both France and Italy, as British allies, were large consumers and the Mediterranean Sea was open to traffic.

India, Japan and some Balkan countries are expected to be the principal consumers this time.

Cairo, Egypt, Aug. 9 (CP)—The press today hailed the forthcoming flow of money into the country under Britain's agreement to take the entire cotton crop, coming at a time, the Egyptian Mail said, when Egypt's finances are "in seriously disordered condition."

The Mail said the deal would involve £30,000,000 to £40,000,000 (about $120,000,000 to $160,000,000).

Britain Offers Correspondents Opportunity to Visit Any Port To Disprove Erroneous Reports

By SAM ROBERTSON

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Aug. 9 (CP Cable)—As a result of publication in the United States of irresponsible reports implying that Nazi bombers had wrought wholesale damage at British ports and disrupted sea-borne trade, the Ministry of Information has invited American correspondents to visit any port and "see for yourself."

The blanket invitation asked correspondents to decide collectively which port they prefer to visit.

I visited two of the United Kingdom's busiest ports in the last fortnight and did not find any damage to shipping facilities due to air raids. A few bombs had been dropped but not a single vital target had been found.

In addition to the teeming shipping, at one of these ports shipbuilding yards buzzed with activity. Raiders had been over the harbor and vicinity several times but a minute tour did not reveal a vestige of damage. The only crater I found was in a farm field two miles from the port.

Small Swift Armed Boats Form Britain's Inland Navy

Help To Guard Waterways of Motherland From Invasion

HOUSEBOAT G. H. Q.

By DOUGLAS AMARON

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Somewhere in England, Aug. 9 (CP)—Small, speedy armed boats, flying the white ensign of the Royal Navy, help to guard the inland waterways of England's eastern counties against invasion.

This inland navy, which can be turned into a 100 per cent. striking force at a moment's notice, is part of the British defences so tremendously strengthened during the last few weeks that now they are ready to meet any invasion on better than equal terms.

Confidence in the preparations is expressed in the words of a commanding officer who said: "We have become stronger every 24 hours and the Germans will have to be very clever to get through here."

"One thing is certain," he added, "if they come, thousands of them will be killed and I do not think any support they may receive from the air will save them."

Mixed Naval and Military Force

O. C. of the inland waterways main defence unit is a young naval commander who, from his G.H.Q—a houseboat—directed a demonstration that showed just how efficient is his small, self-contained, mixed naval and military force.

At one quick word of command the peaceful setting of the English countryside was changed to that of war as steel-helmeted sailors and soldiers came in a human flood from a big barn as fast as their legs could carry them.

They all wore canvas shoes, enabling them to gain a better foothold in the boats into which they jumped. Within 30 seconds they were out in the broad stream, heading for the scene of action at 30 knots with guns already mounted.

For Use on Lakes and Rivers

These "fighter boats" have been devised for use on lakes and rivers upon which troop-carrying seaplanes might land.

"They are ideal for their purpose and most difficult to hit from the air because of their speed and manoeuvrability," the naval officer said. "It would be most difficult for troops to land in the inland waters of this area."

Men of the Home Guard, the 1,250,000 local defence volunteers who form Britain's citizens' army, are playing an important part in the defence of these waterways.

They are the scouts, the eyes and ears of the main defence unit, providing a ceaseless patrol that makes it possible for the sailors and soldiers to throw their full weight against the enemy wherever he may appear.

'GRANDFATHER' BEDBUG CARRIES GERM OF SLEEPING SICKNESS

Washington, Aug. 9 (AP)—Discovery of a bedbug which insures sound sleep—but the wrong kind—was reported today by the Public Health Service.

The bug, which is the "grandfather" of all bedbugs because it is several times larger than the ordinary insects, carries the germ of sleeping sickness from man to man and from animals to men, said Dr. Arzroony Packchanian of the National Institute of Health.

In Texas, where the insects was found in a systematic check of infestations of homes and fields, it is known as the "bloodsucker," "Mexican bedbug" and "kissing bug." Its danger as a carrier of trypanosome germ which causes sleeping sickness had not been recognized before.

FIFTEEN ITALIAN PLANES DOWN IN LIBYAN BATTLE

British Press Attacks Though Outnumbered Two To One By Italians

'BIGGEST AIR BATTLE'

Only Two British Planes Have Not Yet Returned, Says Statement

Cairo, Aug. 9—(AP)—The official Royal Air Force communique announced today 15 Italian fighter planes were shot down in the "biggest aerial battle over Libya" in which the British were outnumbered two to one. Two British planes have not yet returned, the communique added. The battle took place yesterday some distance west of Sidi Omar.

The Statement

The statement follows:

"The biggest aerial battle so far fought in Libya between fighter aircraft took place yesterday when a formation of gladiators engaged a much larger force of Italian CR32S and 42S.

"Although outnumbered more than two to one, the Gladiators engaged the enemy and pressed home their attack with such determination that 15 Italian aircraft were destroyed.

"Two of our aircraft so far have failed to return to their bases. This air battle took place some distance west of Sidi Omar.

"Berbera was raided yesterday by three CR42S and later by a small formation of enemy bombers. It was reported that one of the bombers was damaged by ground defence fire. There were no British casualties.

"On Aug. 7 our bombers attacked Hargeisa. Hits were registered on barracks and bungalows believed to contain troops. The frontier post of Elwak was raided by bombers of the South African Air Force."

Greatest Bag of Enemy Planes by R. A. F. in One Day

Britons Warned to 'Stay Put' as Nazis May Send Raids of 500 Planes

London, Aug. 9—(CP)—Germany paid with loss of at least 60 planes for Thursday's wholesale aerial assaults on British shores and shipping, the Air Ministry announced today, as Nazi air attacks continued.

In all, the Ministry said, 60 German planes were destroyed "and many others damaged"—a total of about one in seven of "some 400" Nazi raiders it counted in the raids—the greatest air attack on Britain of the war.

A loss of 16 British planes was acknowledged, but the Air Ministry said three pilots previously counted as missing now are reported safe, two of them wounded.

Nazis 'Multiply by Three'

An authoritative source said a German communique claiming 12 merchant ships totalling 55,000 tons sunk in the forays "multiplied by three" the British losses.

Contrary to the German claim, this source said, the attacked convoy "contained no tanker nor, indeed, any ship approaching the tonnage figures for single ships given in the German claim," which mentioned an 8,000-ton tanker and two steamers of 5,000 and 4,000 tons.

Two German bombers were shot down today, one by an anti-aircraft fire after it had bombed a northeast coastal town and the other by three spitfires off the northeast coast. Three of the crew of the second Nazi plane were captured in a rubber boat.

GROCERIES LOST IN LONDON FIRE

British Plane Patrols Sky Against Chance Nazi Planes Would Be Attracted

London, Aug. 9—(CP)— A huge quantity of groceries and other provisions were destroyed today by a fire in a Thames-side warehouse which broke out shortly after midnight and did not die down until just before dawn.

Cause of the fire could not be determined immediately. Two firemen were taken to a hospital, one overcome by smoke and the other injured in a fall.

Throughout the blackout hours a British plane patrolled overhead, presumably guarding against the possibility German warplanes would be drawn by the blaze.

INDIAN RIGHTS TO CAMPING GROUND

Philadelphia, Aug. 9. —(CP) — The Indians still have full rights to their Central Philadelphia camping ground. Operators of a new parking lot nearby promised they would not "invade" a 30-by-100 plot at Watts and Chancellor Streets set aside in 1682 for visiting Redskins.

Half Total Exports of U. S. Now Taken by British Empire

New York Aug. 9.—(AP)—British Empire markets are taking about half the United States' total exports as a result of expanded war purchases highest since the United Statesa became continental Europe to shipping, foreign trade sources said today.

One trade authority said the percentage of exports now going to Britain, Canada and other British Empire markets probably is the highest since the United States became an important trading nation. Before the war approximately one-third of foreign sales went to Britain, the Dominions and British possessions.

Trade trends announcement of British plans for widening war purchases in the United States, it was said indicate Britain and Canada may take an even larger share of the exports in coming months.

Out of about $2,000,000,000 in war orders placed by British agents, an informed source said, less than half actually have been shipped. The bulk of the unfilled business is aircraft orders.

The "Iron Age" reported Britain was buying steel here at the rate of 500,000 to 600,000 tons a month, or nearly 10 per cent of the current output.

Out of $350,000,000 in exports in June, the United Kingdom took $77,868,000 compared with $36,066,000 in June, 1939 and Canada $66,796,000 against $39,829,000 in the 1939 month.

Exercise of Law Of Foreign Powers To Apply to Forces

London, Aug. 9—(CP Cable) — Provision for the discipline and internal administration of the Allied and associated forces and the visiting forces of the British Commonwealth is made in the Allied Forces Bill, the text of which was published today.

The bill, introduced in the House of Lords by Lord Croft, Under-secretary for War, permits the exercise of the law of foreign powers to apply to their forces serving with the British army.

The jurisdiction of British civil courts is not affected and the naval discipline act, the army act and the air force act may also apply to such forces.

No man, however, may be punished both under one of those acts and under the new bill for the same offence, and proceedings under the acts may be taken only with the authority of the board of admiralty, the army council, or the air council.

MASSEY RECITES BIG AIR BATTLE TO CANADIANS

High Commissioner For Canada Visits First Fighter Squadron

TALKS WITH MEN

By D. E. BURRITT

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Somewhere in England, Aug. 9 (C.P. Cable)—Members of Canada's First Fighter Squadron stood within the shadow of their hangars today and heard a recital by Hon. Vincent Massey, Canadian High Commissioners, of the exploits by British airmen in the war's largest air battle over the English Channel.

"It is rather a good moment to come to visit you," said the High Commissioner, who inspected personnel and planes nestled in bushes amid rolling hills. And he went on to tell them how British pilots had brought down at least 60 enemy planes in a tremendous series of battles.

"I know," he said, "that you would want me to send them your congratulations."

But while he paid tribute to the valour of the British airmen, Mr. Massey expressed the conviction

RE-GERMANIZING ALSACE-LORRAINE

Basel Dispatch Says Pen Stroke Only Necessary To Add Them To Reich

Basel, Switzerland, Aug. 9 —(AP)—The German army of occupation and Nazi civilian officials in Alsace-Lorraine rapidly are putting the finishing touches on re-Germanization of the two provinces which apparently await only the stroke of a pen on a peace treaty to make them officially part of the German Reich again.

They are proceeding thoroughly in transformation of the area won for Germany by Chancellor Bismarck, lost by Kaiser Wilhelm in the last war and now taken again by Hitler.

Berlin reported only this week that Hitler had turned over the entire civil administration of the provinces, hitherto in military hands, to civilian officials.

French no longer is recognized as the official language of the two provinces, where it formerly shared a place with German in courts under the French rule.

Last night German soldiers removed the signs on Wildemann Strasse (Wildman Street), one of the main thoroughfares of Mulhouse and put up new signs naming it Adolf Hitler Street.

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

GIRL INJURED NEAR NAPANEE

Miss Colleen Fitzgerald, 13-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Fitzgerald, Brockville, was injured while on her way to Belleville Saturday evening to visit her aunt, Mrs. Frank Beehler. Miss Fitzgerald was one of four passengers in a car when their car was sideswiped by another auto driven by Harry Armstrong, Ottawa. Traffic Officer J. A. Morden investigated the accident, and the injured were taken to a nearby home and attended by a Napanee doctor. The accident took place a mile east of Napanee. The Brockville car was completely wrecked all the occupants receiving some injuries. Miss Fitzgerald had several teeth knocked out, a cut in her lip which required four stitches, and her face and knee badly cut. Mrs. Fitzgerald left late Saturday night for Belleville, and took her daughter home Sunday.

LETTER OF CONDOLENCE SENT TO F. ZUFELT

Word was received at the Belleville Cheese Board last evening of the death of Mrs. L. A. Zufelt, wife of Mr. Zufelt, ex-superintendent of the Kingston Dairy School, who was widely known throughout this district by the many cheesemakers and agriculturists. Mr. Zufelt has been a regular attendant at the Belleville Cheese Exhibition, which is staged annually here. The secretary of the Cheese Board, Mr. Fred Mallory, was instructed to write a letter of condolence to Mr. Zufelt.

MASONS TO ATTEND MASONIC CELEBRATION

Among the members of the local Masonic Lodge who will attend the Masonic celebration being sponsored in Bancroft, on Saturday, August 10th, by the R.B.P. No. 614 will be Grand Master, Murney Reynolds of Foxboro, Mr. Richard Arnott, M.L.A., Mr. W. E. Tummon, ex-M.P. and Mr George Reid.

GIVEN TWO YEARS IN "PEN" FOR THEFT

"You have a pretty bad record. How would you like to serve a term in Kingston, or would you prefer the Ontario Reformatory?" asked Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C., of Leonard Orton, Brockville, transient, who appeared in city police court here today for sentence after pleading guilty to two charges of theft in a previous court.

"I'll take the penitentiary sentence", promptly replied Orton and His Worship obliged by sentencing the accused to two years in the Portsmouth Penitentiary.

Orton was arrested near Leavens' airport east of the city a fortnight ago following a police search for a man, who was said to have stolen a number of carpenter tools. Later in police court he was charged with the theft of tools from a local contractor and also of stealing similar articles at Picton. In both cases the tools were recovered by Belleville police. Orton had served many lengthy terms after being convicted of theft on previous occasions.

MORE U. S. TOURISTS SEEN ON STREETS

Increased numbers of automobiles bearing American licence plates are being seen on the city streets. Hotels and tourists places are also reporting increased numbers of Americans stopping over. Mr. J. O. Herity of the Chamber of Commerce reports more frequent calls at the local office from visitors from across the line.

"Apparently the advertising which the Canadian Gvernment did throughout the United States during the late spring and early summer is taking effect" said Mr. Herity this morning, "and it looks as though would-be tourists from over the lines are beginning to get over their fear of their reception in Canada under war-time conditions".

A FEW CANS WATER PUTS OUT GRASS FIRE

Answering their first alarm since the beginning of the week, the Belleville Fire Brigade, were called to East Moira Street on Thursday afternoon to extinguish a grass fire. With the application of a few cans of water however the fire was promptly extinguished with no damage being reported.

CANNERY FINISHES RASPBERRY PACKING

Regarded as a light crop in this district, raspberry canning at the Canada Packers factory on Albion Street will conclude seasonal operations in this phase of preserving tomorrow, officials said today.

The plant in this, its first year of operation under the present management, will go into extensive canning of tomatoes and tomato juice. New machinery has been installed and preparations are now under way to take care of the large acreage contracted by the firm with farmers in this district.

DESERONTO FARMER FALLS FROM MOW

Seriously injured when he fell in his barn while threshing, Percy Maracle, 42-year-old Deseronto farmer, was admitted to Belleville General Hospital on Wednesday suffering with a fractured leg.

Maracle fell from a mow and incurred head injuries and bruises besides his major hurt. He was treated by Dr. Bredner and was said to be resting comfortably today.

Warplanes at Rate of 10,800 Year Now Being Built in U. S.

Rate of 18,000 Planes Year Will Be Passed Next January, Says Knudsen

INCREASE THEREAFTER

Washington, Aug. 9—(AP)— Expanding aircraft factories of the United States are reported by the defence commission to be turning out warplanes at the rate of 10,800 annually.

By next January the 18,000-a-year mark will be passed, William S. Knudsen, the commission's production chief, said last night in a radio broadcast in which he and the other commissioners described their work during the last 10 weeks.

"Present production is approximately 900 planes per month," said Knudsen.

"By Jan. 1 the number will have risen to 1,500 planes and the volume will increase steadily thereafter. You might also be interested in knowing that in January 56,800 persons were employed in aircraft factories. Today the number is nearer 75,000."

The commission announced that $1,792,000,000 in army and navy contracts—including $7,000,000 for combat planes—had been let in the last two months.

Asked when deliveries could be expected on combat materials, Knudsen replied:

"I expect that the tooling up process will more or less take up the balance of this fall, but by January substantial deliveries of most of the material should commence and by spring 1941 production should be going at a good rate."

CAPT. PEARSON GIVEN APPOINTMENT ON GENERAL STAFF

Captain Harry Pearson, Brockville, formerly on the inspection and instructional staff of Military District No. 3, Kingston, has been transferred to the General Staff, Ottawa, according to an announcement today.

Captain Pearson is well known in Belleville, having lived in this city for several years during his tenure as government seeds inspector. He moved to Brockville where he acted in a similar capacity before offering his services to King and Empire when war was declared. He was posted to the staff of M.D. 3 where he has remained as a Bren gun instructor until his recent appointment.

He was in Belleville early this summer where he assisted in the inspections of the various public school and Collegiate Institute cadet corps.

A son, Flying Officer Bruce Pearson, received the coveted "wings" of a pilot in the Royal Canadian Air Force, at Camp Borden a few days ago.

SAYS DUTCH W. I. OFFICIALS 'COLD'

AP Dispatch Quotes Officials On Act of Havana On Trusteeship

New York, Aug. 9—(CP)— The Associated Press said last night that Netherlands officials in the West Indies view with "cold suspicion" the United States-sponsored act of Havana providing for an American trusteeship over any European possession in the western hemisphere which might be threatened with change of ownership or loss of autonomy because of the war.

Saying that officials in The Netherlands West Indies, loyal to Queen Wilhelmina and The Netherlands government now in exile in Britain, are officially silent, the news agency quotes "unquestionably good sources" in New York as saying that while a protectorate by the United States alone might be acceptable in case of actual military aggression, the same would not be true of a general Latin-American trusteeship "and a British protectorate would be preferable to either."

'No Formal Comment'

The Associated Press' story continues:

"West Indian officials, army men and leading newspapers were represented as feeling the act of Havana might result in control of the islands by Colombia or Venezuela, which would never be acceptable, especially in view of the conflict between oil interests of Venezuela and Aruba....

"There has been no formal comment from officials of British and French possessions in the western hemisphere on the act of Havana, the British expressing informal confidence that the war result would make such plans unnecessary, and the French at Martinique maintaining silence.

"British and French 'protective' troops landed on Aruba and Curacao after the German invasion of Holland, and there have been reports that guns were mounted to protect Aruba's oil tanks from any roving sea raider."

NEW FRONT OF C. D. S. BLDG. NEARLY FINISHED

The front of the new Canadian Department Stores building on Front Street is nearing completion. Workmen today are putting finishing touches on the dark glass front that borders the windows. Interior work, however, will take some time, and no definite date was set today for the completion of the store as a whole.

Conditions Favorable For Grain Harvesting

Intermittent showers, together with the high temperatures prevalent during the past two weeks, have contributed greatly toward the rapid ripening of grain throughout the Hastings and Prince Edward district and before the week is out, practically the entire oat crop will be ready for the binders. Threshing of fall grains has been started in numerous localities with farmers reporting exceptionally good returns of fall wheat and rye.

Considerable anxiety is being felt by many farmers as the exceptionally heavy straw of the oat crop in some cases shows signs of crinkling, while in many places lodging has already commenced. The oat crop in general, however, appears headed for record yield should harvesting be completed before excessive lodging or shelling take place. Indicative of the splendid crop which is general throughout the district, a Foxboro farmer recently counted 72 individual kernels on one stalk of Erban oats.

Huge Quantities Milk Turned into Milk-sugar

Hastings and Prince Edward County's milk is finding its way to war-torn Britain in other forms than butter and cheese.

According to Manager Jack Hartwick, of the Quinte Milk Products Co., Ltd., Wellington, thousands of pounds of milk daily are being converted into milk-sugar and rushed to the British market as quickly as possible. This product is utilized to manufacture covers for medicinal capsules and other medical aids.

The sharp increase in demand for the Canadian product came after the German occupation of Holland and Denmark, where England secured the bigger portion of her milk-sugar. Orders are flowing in to the Wellington company daily and the present output is not by any means supplying the demand.

Upwards of 80,000 pounds of milk are being utilized daily by the company with the larger portion being converted into the valuable sugar. Other products are butter and ice-cream.

The recent appeal for the production of more cheese in this district may have far-reaching effects on the output of the sugar, it was stated today, but farmers will be asked to co-operate in the manufacture of this important war material, as well as in increased outputs of cheese.

War Veterans to Hold Decoration Day Aug. 18

Augmented by various kindred societies, the annual war veterans' Decoration Day will be held locally on Aug. 18th this year. President Fred Wiggins of the local branch of the Army and Navy Veterans in Canada, Post 201, announced today that this year members of the Non-Permanent Active Militia would be requested to affiliate themselves with the various societies representing war veterans in the decorations of the graves of war veterans in Belleville. Active Service men, veterans and others connected with Canada's past and present militia will be asked to assist this year in the plans for Belleville's annual decoration day services and the placing of flowers on the graves of Belleville's "glorious dead."

Consolidated M. and S. Co. Suspends Work At Cordova Mines

Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company are departing from Cordova, approximately eight miles north-west of Marmora, as unceremoniously as they came, according to a news item in the Peterboro Examiner.

The last gold brick was poured about one week ago and many men have been discharged and are looking for work elsewhere. The reducing mill is being dismantled for use in some other district and apparently smelters are packing up for keeps.

C. A. Seaton, manager of the mine, has confirmed this information, saying that the facts embraced the whole story.

Smelters have been unable to produce gold at a profit from the Cordova property with persistent losses, forcing the company to abandon the work. A few men are still engaged in removing usable equipment. The report is regarded as marking the end of mining prospects in the Cordova district, the termination of another period of investment and survey, the thorough working of the old veins, together with the examination of others.

Voluntary Workers Needed to Aid in Taking Registration

The national registration of every person in Canada aged sixteen years and over is due to take place on August 19, 20 and 21 and the government is counting greatly upon voluntary help to make it a success.

In Belleville alone it is estimated that there will be required at least 300 voluntary workers to assist the deputy registrars in the various polling places if this tremendous task of registering all persons is accomplished in the three days set aside for this purpose. These volunteers need not necessarily act for the whole three days. But a few hours after supper, in the morning or during the afternoon would be of great help and much appreciated.

Volunteer workers for this electoral district have been coming in fairly well according to Registrar, W. R. Rierdon, but more are needed as is the case in many other constituencies. The qualifications are an ability to write well, to handle people tactfully, and to fill in the forms accurately. Men and women with clerical experience can be of real service to their country in undertaking this duty, and it is a war service which many can, if they will, perform.

Those willing to do so should get in touch with their local member of parliament or, preferably, with Registrar, W. R. Rierdon or Chief Assistant Registrar, Fred Wiggins, at their office at Shire Hall, Belleville.

E. R. ZUERRER, SWISS TRADE COMMISSIONER VISITS LOCAL C. OF C.

Mr. E. R. Zuerrer, Director of Swiss Trade Commission for Canada, called at the Belleville Chamber of Commerce on Thursday afternoon. Mr. Zuerrer is a native of Switzerland but has been stationed in Canada with the above commission for the past twenty-six years. Although residing in Toronto, this was Mr. Zuerrer's first official visit to Belleville.

GOVT. INSPECTORS VISIT LOCAL PLANTS

Government inspectors converged on the city today and are busy checking details of industries that are engaged in war contracts.

BRIDGE SPAN STOLEN

Marion, Ill., Aug. 9.—(AP)— Thieves hereabouts either are defying the heat or are affected by it. Within a week, these odds and ends were stolen; a 80-foot span bridge; a boat dock and a lawn mower.

OBITUARY

LATE WILLIAM HENDERSON

The funeral of William Henderson, late residence 194 Pinnacle Street, took place from the Martin Funeral Home, Church Street, on Thursday afternoon, August 8th. The service in the chapel and at the graveside in Belleville cemetery was conducted by the Rev. W. J. Walker, minister of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

The bearers were Messrs. Archie Winters, James Clarke, Joseph Semain, Harry Robertson, J. D. O'Flynn and William Moynes.

ERNEST ARTHUR BROWN

(Rawdon)

Stirling, Aug. 9 (Special)—Death, which followed an illness of about three years, on Thursday, August 8th, removed one of Rawdon's best known residents, Mr. Ernest Arthur Brown of the 8th concession Rawdon. He was in his 67th year and was born and had lived his entire life at the home in which he passed away. He was the son of the late Mr. Henry E. Brown and Nancy Matilda McMaster.

Continually interested in the welfare of his fellow-citizens he served them in many official capacities. For several years he was on the township council as councillor, reeve and deputy-reeve. In religion he was a faithful member of the Church of England and fraternally was associated with the L.O.L. lodge No. 509, the Black Knights and also the Masonic Order.

He is survived by his widow formerly Miss Flora Barnett, one daughter, Mrs. John Wood of Madoc, and one brother Mr. T. H. Brown of Salmon Island, B.C.

Funeral service will be held in St. John's Anglican Church, Stirling, Saturday, Aug. 10th at 2.30 (Standard Time) leaving the family residence at 2 p.m. (Standard Time) and will be under the auspices of L.O.L. No. 509 of which he was a prominent member.

MRS. JOHN J. DUNN

(Deseronto)

The death of Mrs. John J. Dunn of Deseronto, occurred at an Ottawa hospital Wednesday morning. She was in her 47th year and had been ill for some months.

Born in Deseronto, she was the daughter of the late Edward McKenny and Ann Leonard. She attended school in Deseronto and Peterborough. She taught at both the Public and High schools in Deseronto. In 1918 she married John James Dunn.

She was a Roman Catholic and was organist of St. Vincent de Paul Church, Deseronto. She was a member of the Altar Society of that church and of the Deseronto Women's Citizen League.

In addition to her husband, she is survived by one daughter, Mary Loreto, at home, and three brothers, James M. McKenny, 36 Iona Street, Ottawa; John McKenny, Trenton and Edward McKenny, Niagara Falls, Ont.

Picton and District

Preparation of Sites for Bombing Schools Progressing at Rapid Rate

Several Buildings Will Also Be Erected At Picton And Mt. View Sites

24-HOUR SCHEDULE

Picton—Work on the Bombing and Gunnery Schools at both Picton and Mountain View is progressing at a rapid rate, with day and night shifts engaged in the task of levelling the grounds and preparing to lay the long runways. Many spectators view with interest the large machines which crash against the trees, tearing them out by the roots, and also those which scoop up the earth to be used in filling in at other spots. The ground is unusually level at both sites, workmen say and this assists in getting the contracts completed on time.

It had previously been indicated that no buildings would be erected on either site this year but yesterday word was received here that contracts have been called for the erection of buildings on the Picton site.

According to the Ministry of Information at Ottawa, some fifty buildings are to be erected on each site before completion. These include six hangars, each 224 by 160 feet; a 34-bed hospital; 6 blocks of barracks for airmen; recreation room; messes and quarters for officers, N.C.O.'s and civilians; rooms for instruction; indoor ranges and sports pavilion. In addition there are to be numerous buildings on the scene of bombing operations, the location of which has not been announced.

Not only will these schools benefit the town of Picton but Belleville as well as it is expected most of the men at the Mountain View school will find their way to the city, it being nearer than Picton.

To Increase Wages

Town Council met Wednesday evening and decided to endorse the suggestion of the street committee regarding the wages of men employed by the town. A few days ago some of the men went on strike for wages of sixty cents an hour, the same as those being paid at the gunnery and bombing school. The committee recommended that the men being paid thirty cents an hour, an increase of five cents an hour and that the street foreman be allowed to decide which of those workmen he thought were deserving of the higher rate.

Offer to Assist Registration

Members of Sir Thomas Picton Chapter I.O.D.E., will give any assistance possible to local officials in the national registration to take place soon, it was decided at their July meeting Tuesday afternoon at the home of Miss Violet McLean. A letter from the National Chapter asking all members to co-operate in this, was read by the Regent, Miss Lilliam Boulter. A report of the committee showed that a quantity of hospital supplies had been sent to Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment overseas. Donations to the Bomber Fund from Miss Eleanor Holmes and Mrs. Patterson Dever were acknowledged. It was decided to hold the draw on the desk and chair, originally costing $550, and donated to the Chapter, on August 15th.

Bride Tendered a Shower

Mrs. W. K. Reeks, who was recently married, was tendered a miscellaneous shower Thursday night at the home of Mrs. Rodney Rundle, with Misses Florence and Maude Purtelle as associate hostesses. Many lovely gifts were presented and a social time was spent. Mrs. Reeks was formerly Margaret Graves.

Dance at Yacht Club

A dance was held at Prince Edward Yacht Clubhouse Thursday night and in attendance were many of the sailors here for the regatta of the Eastern Yachting Circuit, which is being sponsored by the Prince Edward Yacht Club. The races are continuing here until Saturday. Owing to lack of a breeze the races yesterday, were unable to be held. There is a large fleet of all types of sailing craft here and they present a beautiful sight on the lovely Bay of Quinte.

Holds Annual Picnic

The Baptist Church held their annual picnic at the Outlet Beach on Wednesday afternoon and a program of sports with prizes proved popular. Five long tables were filled at the supper hour.

Miss Mary Leavens, B.A., has accepted a position on the staff of the Picton Collegiate Institute as a teacher of Moderns.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Fraser and Mr. and Mrs. Conant of Montreal, who were here with their cruiser, were guests while in town of Mr. and Mrs. I. P. Fraser and Mrs. W. S. Fraser. Mr. Conant is a son of Attorney-General Gordon Conant.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Wilkins entertained at tea on Wednesday afternoon in honor of their guests, Mr. and Mrs. S. V. Hamly of Miami, Florida.

Friends of Mrs. Creighton Lockyer gathered at the home of her mother, Mrs. Robert Sayers, Wednesday night and presented her with a pantry shelf shower.

Mrs. Albert Powers is visiting in Kingston, a guest of her sister, Mrs. E. J. Lake.

Mrs. A. M. Thompson of Wellington entertained at the Picton Golf Club tea on Wednesday afternoon in honor of Mrs. H. W. Brown of Wellington who will be leaving soon for Timmins where Mr. Brown will make his headquarters as public school inspector for that district. Mrs. Brown was presented with a pretty gift.

Mrs. Mel Mason has returned from a visit with Mrs. J. Gardiner at Goderich.

Miss Mary Hobson of Perth is a guest of her aunts, the Misses Purtelle.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Shannon, Miss Margaret Goodwin and Michael Finnigan will be week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Dan Goodwin, Papineau Lake.

Fire Destroys Truck

While gasoline was being poured into the tank a dump truck at the gunnery and bombing school caught fire this week and was totally destroyed. The driver was out of the cab at the time.

Picnic Held at Sandbanks

Picton employees of the Burford Transport Co., and their families, numbering eighty-five enjoyed a picnic at the Sandbanks on Sunday.

'Lunge Caught

Fishing in Picton harbor on Monday Dr. C. H. Leavens and D. A. Fournia landed a fair sized 'lunge. These fish have been scarce in these waters so far this season

Mrs. David Brennan, and Miss Helen Brennan, are expected on Friday, from Westmount, P.Q., to visit the Misses Bradley, Centre Street.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Jubey and two children of Trenton are holidaying with Mr. Patrick McManus and Mrs. Ron Church, Union Street.

Dr. and Mrs. W. H. Wilkin entertained a party of friends at their home "The Nook", Washburn Street in honor of their house guests Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Hambly of Florida.

Church Picnic Held

The Anglican and Baptist churches held their Sunday School picnics at the Outlet Beach on Wednesday afternoon. The children enjoyed bathing and a fine sports program. Later they were treated to ice cream, followed by a picnic supper. Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Cook entertained the Anglican children and their parents at the Regent theatre in the evening as is their custom yearly.

"Pantry Shelf" Shower

Friends of Mrs. Creighton Lockyer (Grace Sayers) tendered her a charmingly arranged "pantry shelf shower" at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bob Sayers on Tuesday evening.

Local Insurance Agent Completes 25 Years Service With Company

MR. GEORGE A. REID, Who Completes 25 Years' Service with The Great - West Life Assurance Company

Twenty-five years ago today, Mr. George A. Reid, was appointed representative of the Great-West Life Assurance Company for Belleville and the surrounding district. His record has been one of outstanding achievement and his steady production year by year, has resulted in a total of four million, five hundred thousand dollars life insurance being placed on the books of his company during this period.

This splendid contribution to the success of the Great-West Life has been acknowledged by Head Office officials and a special tribute was paid Mr. Reid by Mr. T. Milton Taylor, manager and Mr. A. G. Smith, supervisor, of the Central Ontario Branch.

His many friends throughout the Belleville district join with the Great-West Life Assurance Company in wishing Mr. Reid continuance of health, happiness and success throughout the years which lie ahead.

Judging Competitions For Junior Farmers Held at Rednersville

Picton, Aug. 9.— Seventy-one junior farm boys and girls gathered at Quinte Inn, Rednersville, Tuesday, the boys holding judging competitions and the girls their achievement day.

The men visited the farms of E. E. Bonter, Don Spencer and Thompson Bros., in the district, to judge classes of horses, sheep and swine. They returned to Albury church where reasons for their placing of the animals were given.

The girls had a large exhibit of work done by the various clubs on display in Quinte Inn, where they held their demonstrations and competitions.

In charge of this were Miss Jean Scott, Home Economic Coach, assisted by Miss McCurchy of the department. The display of work was very fine and showed proper ways of entertaining guests, sleeping garments and bedroom ensembles. County honor pins were presented to Betra Fairman, Loretta Fairman, Frances Wallbridge and Audrey Johnson of Huff's Island, who had completed four years of project work. The girls chosen for a trip to the C.N.E. were Evelyn Richards, Miriam Keebel, Connie Wood, Betty Bongard.

Results of the boys' competitions were as follows:

High Junior boy, winner C.N.E. Shield, Alex Carman, Picton.

Trip to Kemptville with all expenses paid, awarded five high boys in competition—Vernon Striker, Alex Carman, Ross Benway, Howard Lough, David Ackerman.

Cash prizes won in individual classes by juniors; horses, Earle Cook, Howard Gyde, Jack Ackerman; cattle, Wilfred Motley, Clifford Walker, Freeman Thompson; swine, Robert Redner, Clayton Thompson, Carl Ackerman.

In the senior boys' competition, teams to judge at the Royal and Ottawa fairs were chosen—Royal team, David Smith, Donald Walker William Nightingale; Ottawa team, John McCaw, Ralph Richards, Lewis Wight and Elmer Young.

Cash prizes to seniors: horses Wm. Nightingale, David Smith; dairy cattle, Ralph Richards, Lewis Wight, Elmer Young; swine, Donald Walker, John McCaw.

Five seniors who coached five high teams of juniors were Keith Walker, Wm. Nightingale, Donald Walker, Elmer Young, Lewis Wight. They receive a free trip to the C.N. Exhibition.

In the evening both boys and girls gathered at Albury for a banquet when Prof. G. M. Rhunke, Dept. of Chemistry, O.A.C., Guelph, spoke of work carried on there. He stressed the special courses being given to train girls as ambulance drivers, the conservation of food and training chefs. Reeve Howard Weese welcomed the group to Ameliasburg and pointed out how junior farmers and girls could aid in Canada's war effort. A dance followed at Quinte Inn.

The boys' competitions were in charge of Agricultural Representative F. J. Webster and his assistant, John Campbell. Assisting were Agricultural Representatives Fair of Stirling; McLeod of Brighton and Buchanan of Napanee also Grover Smith, M. McCartney and D. Clark, County graduates of the O.A.C.

25 Polling Booths Will be Used for National Registration

There will be around 25 polling places in the city of Belleville where residents 16 years and over will register on the three days of National Registration, August 19, 20 and 21, with schools, church halls and public buildings being used for this purpose instead of the regular polling booths as used in civic elections.

This registration is compulsory, warns Col. W. R. Rierdon, Registrar for South Hastings electoral district, and it must be thoroughly understood that every person, regardless of their sex, creed or occupation, must visit the place of registration, must answer the questions, and must secure the registration card.

As the act reads it calls for the registration of all persons during the registration period at the polling booth in which each person ordinarily resides. It is provided however that Canadians absent from home, but within Canada, may register at their nearest booth. They must give the registrar their correct permanent address.

Canadians absent from Canada during the time of registration must register at their nearest post office within thirty days after their return home.

Visitors from the United States in Canada during registration are not in any way affected by the act, provided, it is their intention to return to their own country as soon as their holiday or business trip is completed.

Provisions are made for residents who are too sick to leave their homes during registration time to receive special attention by an army of volunteer workers. The registrar in each district will delegate a special officer to their bedside and take down particulars.

FIRE DESTROYS SHIP IN HARBOR

Sabotage Suspected In Destruction of Loaded Vessel At N. Y.

New York, Aug. 9.— (AP)—The small Norwegian Freighter Lista and its cargo of war supplies for Great Britain smouldered in a lower Bay shallow today wrecked by fire and explosions.

As federal and local agencies continued investigations of the blaze, a preliminary report of the police sabotage squad discounted possibility of sabotage.

The fire, originating in a piece of waste in the engine room, spread from bow to stern when it exploded a fuel tank and a kerosene drum, Detectives said.

The crew of 27, all rescued unhurt, was unable to fight the blaze because lack of steam deprived the vessel of water pressure.

The seamen—Norwegians, South Americans and Filipinos—faced additional investigation today from the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation. Agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and Naval Intelligence Service were aiding the inquiry.

Norwegian Consular officials also said there was no evidence of sabotage but added the investigation "is still in its early stages".

Operators of the 3,671-ton ship, the Cosmopolitan Shipping Company, denied there were munitions aboard. They said the cargo was "general" which could include foodstuffs, machine tools, farm implements or even airplanes.

NAZI LOSSES HEAVY IN AIR

Official British reports of the losses of German planes in the battling over the English Channel while attacking British convoys place the number at 60, a very heavy loss, while the British were placed at sixteen.

Here is indicated the power of Britain in her defences. Germany has very little left in the way of a fleet and must do her work with warplanes. Therefore she must throw squadrons of planes into the effort to halt the flow of provisions and armaments to Britain, while British warships go about their far-flung duties of keeping the seas clear. Hitler some time ago began to devote more and more attention to the movement of British shipping in the vicinity of the British Isles. Blockaded himself, it appeared as if he would attempt to show he could blockade the blockader.

But his loss in planes which is so large are compared with the British losses and the fact that the damage to British shipping is not large in comparison indicate that he is meeting with no success but rather receiving very heavy blows as these raids of his on British craft bring to the merchant ships' assistance the aid of anti-aircraft guns and the warplanes which are on duty in the defence of Britain.

The comparative losses of planes is something which has been observed since the war began—a superiority in trained personnel and in the efficiency of the aircraft of Britain. The ratio continues to the great disadvantage of the enemy.

A new feature of the present stage of the war is that barrage balloons are now being used by British ships in convoy. Britishers have an inventiveness and an application of the inventions to such things as war which do them credit for their resourcefulness.

NOT MERE ARMED RECONNAISSANCE

The claim of Goering that the attacks by German planes so far have been armed reconnaissance flights will have to be supplemented after yesterday's raids on British convoys in the English Channel. These were desperate attempts of the German air force to cripple British shipping. Nothing else would explain the determination with which the attacks were pressed with the result of sixty enemy planes destroyed. Goebbels, the propagandist, can not explain this fact away.

THE ITALIANS IN NORTH AFRICA

Observers are inclined to believe that the moves of Italians in Libya and in British Somaliland are due to the effect of the blockade which has been exercising an ever increasing restriction upon the oil and water supplies which the Italian armies need. One report yesterday said it was desperation which guided the enemy's activity.

With Italy in the war, the situation has intensified. That goods before Italy entered the war were reaching Germany because of Italy's friendship was clear enough. With Italy a declared enemy of Britain, Italy herself was blockaded and she necessarily was shut off and Germany felt the pinch too.

BUSINESS CONDITIONS IN FIRST HALF OF YEAR

The factors indicating the trend of business conditions were favorable during the first half of 1940 compared with the same period of the preceding year. The most constructive factor was the continued advance in business operations. The index of physical volume of business averaged 137.6 during the first six months of the present year compared with 116.2, a gain of no less than 18.4 p.c. The net result was that in June the business index was higher for that month than in any other year during the period of observation from 1919 to the present.

A development of some importance was the shift from the production of consumers' good to producers' was well indicated by the indexes of production in these lines in June compared with the preceding month. War orders persistently placed since the outbreak are now having an important bearing on industrial activity. A number of new plants under construction and existing plants engaged on war demands are accelerating operations.

Mineral production, measured by an index based on nine factors rose about 14 p.c. The index was 236.7 against 207.6. Advances were shown in gold, silver and coal production. The output of coal was 8.1 million tons against 6.7 million in the first half of 1939.

The construction industry was more successful in obtaining new business, the amount of contracts being $125.4 million, a gain of 50 p. c., while building permits rose 27.75 p.c. Industrial expansion was reflected in greater production of electric power which rose from 13.7 billion kilowatt hours to nearly 15 billion, a gain of nearly 9 p. c.

The expansion in the railway traffic movement was 17 p. c., while the gross revenue on the Canadian lines of the C. N. R. rose about 32 p. c. and the gross revenue of the C. P. R. was 21 p. c. higher.

Employment in economic pursuits was more than 7 p. c. greater in the elapsed period of 1940, the average of the index of employment for the first seven reporting dates being 116.6 against 108.7. The working forces in manufacturing were 15 p. c. greater, while mining absorbed about 4 p. c. more than in the same period 12 months ago. A marked increase was shown in logging operations, the index aver- 101. Building construction rose 14 p. c., while a decline of considerable proportions was shown in highway construction.

'Golden Opportunity To India' View Of New York Times

New York, Aug. 9—(CP)— The New York Times commended today Britain's offer to India of equal partnership in the Empire after the war, saying it "gives a golden opportunity to India to find her own salvation if Great Britain survives this war."

Declaring editorially that "if the opportunity is lost, it may never be offered again," the Times in general approved Britain's proposal. However, it foresaw some difficulty in determining who is to choose the "body representative of all elements of Indian national life" which is to frame the new constiution when the war is over.

It suggested this "would seem to be one test of the merit" of the offer.

Drugs Used in Treating Attacks of Asthma

Notwithstanding the fact that the cause can now be found in many cases of asthma, there is a great number in whom none of the usual causes—sensitiveness to various substances in the air or in food, and nose and throat defects—is the cause. This means that some method of treating the attack must be used.

In outlining the use or value of drugs to be used during an attack, Dr. Francis M. Rackemann, Boston, in the Journal of the American Medical Association states that in mild attacks the simple methods now in use will give relief. "The burning of "asthma powder", best made from equal parts of dried powdered stramonium leaves and potassium nitrate (salte petre) gives off a smoke which, when inhaled, is often quite effective".

For a number of years past, the most successful treatment of an attack has been the injection of a solution of epinephrine (adrenalin) 1 to 1000. More recently a much stronger solution 1 to 100 adrenalin has been used as a spray. This requires a special type of glass atomiser which is made for the purpose and is ordinarily sold by the druggist as an "outfit". Dr. Rackemann warns that this 1 to 100 solution is "strong stuff" to be used only in the form of a spray, because there are reports of serious consequences following the use of this strong solution by hypodermic, instead of the usual strength used by hypodermic, that is 1 to 1000. Two or three squeezes of the bulb of the inhaler is usually enough to bring relief of an attack within a few minutes. Some asthmatics obtain relief by pouring a few drops of the 1 to 100 solution in a handkerchief and inhaling two or three times.

A more recent method of treating severe attacks is the use of a half teaspoon of ether to 1 or 2 ounces of olive oil used as an enema.

If, despite the use of any or all of these drugs, no relief is obtained, the breathing in of 40 or even 100 per cent oxygen may be "life saving".

Dr. Rackemann points out finally that the patient's general health must be maintained. "The physician must rid the patient of all sources of irritation, physical and mental, for then the asthma will be much easier to deal with".

Civil Defence In Britain Against Raid

(A. P. L. Whyte in Strand Magazine.)

Day and night an army of half a million civil defence workers guards Britain from air bombardment and its consequences. Observers, wardens, ambulance drivers, firefighters, rescue and first-aid workers, decontamination and demolition squads—all units in an intricate web which is itself connected with the webs of fighter command, searchlight and anti-aircraft units, police, public utilities and a dozen other civil and military departments.

How is this vast civil defence machine controlled? How, during the uproar and confusion of bombardment, can the "chess players" at headquarters move their pieces smoothly over the board?

The answer lies far below the streets of Britain's cities where, armored against bombs, fire and gas, lie buried a few dozen key control rooms, constantly manned, from which the defence of the whole country can be directed without interruption throughout the fiercest attack.

The country is divided into 13 regions, each under a commissioner, each directed from a secret, heavily-protected control room. Under the regional headquarters come the lesser commands, the groups and districts. These are concerned with immediate "tactics" during raids. They remain in touch with the righer commands, from which they may ask help when their own resources are over-strained.

The regions are concerned with the general strategy of their large area, moving forces from one group or district to another as occasion demands.

The country is also divided under another classification into A, B, C and D areas, of decreasing importance and vulnerability. The A areas, to which London and some of the big industrial cities belong, naturally have the strongest civil defence forces and the largest proportion of full-time paid workers. The isolated, rural D areas are protected entirely by part-time volunteers.

Buried far below the surface somewhere in London is the regional control room which commands the whole area. Scattered through, or rather under, the Greater London area are nine group control rooms, each one commanding several boroughs. And in each of London's scores of boroughs is a district control room.

In London alone there are 50,000 volunteer and thousands of paid civil defence workers. The control rooms are fully staffed and ready to snap into action day and night. So are the depots, where rescue parties and others sleep fully clothed next door to their equipped lorries and ambulances. Even the wardens' posts are manned or can instantly be manned, at all times.

The fire-fighting side of civil defence, though closely connected with the A.R.P. control rooms, is actually run from a wonderful new secret headquarters of its own. Buried deep in the earth and protected by an 8-foot thick layer of concrete, it is proof against direct hits by heavy bombs. From this room are controlled the 350-odd fire stations in the London fire area.

Naval Activity Leads War Work On West Coast

VANCOUVER, Aug. 9—(CP) — British Columbia, one of the most defence-conscious of Canadian provinces in the days of peace, threw its full weight into the Empire effort on the outbreak of war last September.

The fortifications and defence batteries which were installed in the Pacific coast area in the years leading up to the outbreak of the conflict have not yet been employed but a steady flow of men and materials moves from British Columbia eastward into the areas where war is waged or threatens.

A few hours after the outbreak of hostilities ships of the Royal Canadian Navy stationed on the west coast were on their way to the Atlantic by way of the Panama Canal. Some of them have since crossed the Atlantic to work in British waters and the Fraser, named after the British Columbia river, went to the bottom, the first Canadian naval loss.

While Canadian preparations for action overseas and for the defence of the Eastern shores somewhat overshadowed the Pacific defence problem, the latter has not been neglected. Military, naval and air effort in British Columbia is directed towards local defence as well as combat in Europe.

For the army, recruiting started with the outbreak of war and slackened off when units for the 1st and 2nd divisions reached war strength. It started again in June when units were mobilized for the 3rd and 4th divisions and continued actively as the non-permanent active militia prepared to send all volunteers who offered themselves to summer training camps.

Naval headquarters at Esquimalt on Vancouver Island were kept busy taking on men for the Royal Canadian Navy, many of whom moved eastwards to man destroyers, patrol ships and minesweepers serving on the Atlantic.

Air Activity.

So far British Columbia has not bulked large in the allotment of schools under the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan. An elementary flying training school was set up at Vancouver. The province falls under the direction of No. 4 Air Training Command with headquarters at Regina.

Headquarters of Western Air Command, responsible for the air defence of western Canada, is at Victoria and under it an extensive program of bettering defences is under way. At Patricia Bay, east of Victoria, an air base to cost $1,500,000 is under construction. It will accommodate squadrons of both sea and land planes. Other bases are contemplated at Ucluelet on the west coast of Vancouver Island and in the Queen Charlotte Islands.

Factories and shipyards on the west coast are busy on war orders. Work under way in marine industrial establishments includes construction of antisubmarine boats, minesweepers, refueling scows and cranes.

Other factories are producing army uniforms, overcoats, boots, aircraft, rope, and diesel engines.

B. C. mines and forests are important sources of essential materials. Large quantities of timber are tents, flags and ensigns, blankets being shipped to Great Britain and to Eastern Canada. Copper and other base metals are produced at Trail and British Columbia's gold production helps to maintain Canada's foreign exchange position.

Veterans of the last war, of whom British Columbia has many, responded generously to the call for volunteers for the Veteran's Home Guard and its reserve companies and many found places in the Canadian Active Service Force. The most notable is Maj.-Gen. Victor W. Odlum of Vancouver, commander of the 2nd overseas division.

WATER TRANSPORTATION IS HALTED

Hong Kong, Aug. 8—(CP)—Water transportation between Canton, China, and this British Crown colony was halted today, at least temporarily, when the British refused to allow the entry into Hong Kong of two Japanese vessels regularly engaged in the Pearl River service.

It was said unofficially that the action followed upon Japanese refusal to remove obstacles to pilotage and stevedoring which held a British steamship at Canton for a week, causing disruption of the British - operated Canton - Hong Kong shipping service.

The British consulate at Canton was reported negotiating for settlement of the present difficulty.

RADIO PATHWAY LINKS AMERICAS, DISCOVERY MADE

Radio Signals 25 Times Greater Going North and South Than Those Going East and West

VALUE OF CHANNEL

By STEPHEN J. McDONOUGH
Associated Press Science Writer

Washington, Aug. 9—(AP)— Discovery of a radio pathway linking all of the Americas was reported today by scientists of Argentina and the United States.

Dr. A. T. Cosentino of the Argentine Ministry of the Interior and Dr. J. H. Dellinger of the United States Bureau of Standards declared in a joint article that during the northern winter and southern summer radio signals going north and south are 25 times greater and 15 times less variable than broadcasts between the United States and Europe.

They declined to comment on the economic and political value of this radio link. But others pointed out that it makes possible closer radio and telephone communication in the western hemisphere.

Phenemenen Described

Scientists declared that the phenomenon of a radio channel north and south instead of east and west is due to disturbances in the ionosphere—the reflecting layers of electrified air in the upper atmosphere which bounce radio signals back to the earth.

Electric storms occur constantly in the ionosphere and interfere with radio communication. They are attributed by Dr. Cosentino and Dr. Dellinger to influences of the magnetic field of the earth near the north magnetic pole and the aurora borealis, the effect being more pronounced in high lattitudes.

Relation to Seasons

As a result during periods of great storminess in the ionosphere direct radio communication between the United States and Europe may be cut off or seriously interfered with. When this occurs radio messages are relayed to Europe by way of Buenos Aires, Argentina, because little interference occurs in broadcasts sent southward.

Both long and short wave radio signals are affected alike in the natural western hemisphere channel, making a mutual exchange of commercial messages, broadcast programs, and contacts between radio amateurs easier during the coming winter than similar exchanges between the Americas and Europe.

No Person 16 Years or Over Who Fails to Register May Hold Job in the Dominion

Ottawa, Aug. 9—(CP)—Nobody of 16 years or more, having failed to register during national registration Aug. 19, 20 and 21, may hold a job in Canada.

This, it was said authoritatively today, is the effect of regulations contained in an order-in-council printed in the latest extra edition of the Canada Gazette.

The order-in-council decrees a $200 fine for any employer who, after Aug. 21, employs or continues in his employment, any person required by regulations to register and has failed to do so.

An official charged with high responsibility for national registration said it hardly seemed likely any employer would wish to leave himself open to $200 fine or the alternative of three months imprisonment or both for employing an unregistered person of 16 years or more.

"It means anybody required to register who fails to do so will not be able to hold a job in Canada," he said.

Registration Cards Must be Produced

The order-in-council also directs that employers, when hiring anybody after the last date for registration, must require new employees of 16 or more years to produce their registration cards.

Every employer must also require employees to produce, after Aug. 21, their registration cards. Those breaking the regulations by failure to register must be reported to the nearest police authority.

Other dates than Aug. 19, 20, and 21 will be announced for registration in the North West Territories, the sparseness of the population in the Territories and the great distances to be covered making it virtually impossible to conduct registration there in three days.

Registration in Religious Institutes

Already registration of persons in some religious institutions and business and industrial plants is underway. Mr. Justice C. C. Davis, Deputy Minister of National War Service Department which is in charge of the registration, made known that registration cards have been sent out to religious institutions and similar provisions have been made for industrial and business plants with more than 100 employees.

In these cases deputy registrars appointed within the institutions or places of business will be responsible for registering their colleagues. Thus many people will have been registered by the time general registration opens Aug. 19.

The male population must answer 18 questions and the female registrants must reply to 19. When these answers have been sorted and catalogued the government will have a complete record of all persons, their age, their health and their ability to fit into various aspects of the war effort.

CLERGYMAN SEES HEROIC SAILORS

Was Only Passenger On Vessel Sunk Off Coast of Ireland

Charlottetown, Aug. 9 (CP)—Rev. W. J. Phillips of Milton, P.E.I., told of a ship on which he was travelling to England being sunk by a torpedo

Mr. Phillips, Rector of the Anglican Church at Milton, went to England to bring his mother to Prince Edward Island. The ship on which he was an only passenger was sunk when it was within a day's sail of the coast of Ireland, he said.

The young sailors on the ship forced the older men into the lifeboats, Mr. Phillips said. He was "immensely impressed" with their bravery. The survivors were picked up by a British destroyer and taken to England.

He said he had "no doubt of the outcome" in the war.

Everyone in Britain was confident of a British victory. "The common man has a spirit of confidence which is not foolhardiness."

The Canadians were popular on the other side, he said. They attracted special notice when they were on the streets of the cities and "thank God for Canada" was a common expression.

TRAMPLED BY BULL

Buckingham, Que. Aug. 9. (CP) —Peter Osborne Lamb, 78, of Buckingham, was trampled to death by a bull yesterday on a nearby farm. Miss R. A. Reid of Moosejaw and Miss Helen Lamb of Regina are daughters.

RETAIN POSITIONS

Ottawa, Aug. 9.—(CP)— Since parliament had adjourned and not prorogued, 300 odd temporary House of Commons employees will retain their positions instead of losing them as is the custom at the end of a session. However, they will be laid off for three months until the new session starts.

SOLDIERS LOOK FORWARD TO VISIT BY NEW GOVERNOR

Promise Made To Canadian Soldiers At Bermuda By Duke's Aide

NO TIME SET

Hamilton, Bermuda, Aug. 9—(C. P. Cable)—Canadian fighting men garrisoned in this mid-ocean colony looked forward today to a visit from the Duke of Windsor, new Governor of the Bahamas.

The brother of King George VI. will pay a call on the Canadian troops before he sails for the Bahamas. His aide-de-camp, Capt. George Wood, made the announcement a few hours after the Duke and Duchess arrived here Thursday but did not indicate when the visit would take place.

The Canadians, who have been relieving the regular British garrison here, were on duty when the Duke and Duchess arrived yesterday aboard the American export liner Excalibur from Lisbon. Their task was to see that only those authorized to do so left the ship.

Today, the Duke and Duchess settled down in Government House for a stay as guests of Governor Sir Denis Bernard. It was not known when they would leave for Nassau, capital of the Bahamas. Capt. Wood said last night he had "not the slightest" idea of the time of departure.

The Duke and Duchess are not likely to visit the U.S. in the near future, according to the aide-de-camp. "I should very much doubt they are going over," Capt. Wood said.

WOMAN IS ROBBED OF $450 IN HANDBAG

Toronto Aug. 8 (CP)—Gladys McDermott told police she was robbed last night of $450 she carried in a handbag because she felt it was safer than leaving the money at home.

She said she was going to be married next week and the money, left her by an uncle, would have paid for the honeymoon. She was on her way home from an amusement park, she said, when she noticed both zippers had been pulled back on the bag and her change purse with the money was gone.

22 PERSONS FLEE FROM 3 HOUSES

Dog's Barking Arouses Them As Homes Are Threatened

Toronto, Aug. 8 (CP)—Twenty-two persons, including several small children, were forced to flee from three houses in West Toronto early today when fire of unknown origin threatened the buildings. All reached safety, due in part to the barking of a dog, which awakened most of them. Total damage was estimated at $1,075.

The fire started in a shed at the rear of Frederick Harris' home and spread to houses occupied by Frank Haas and W. J. Buckland. The dog, owned by Buckland, was trapped in a shed adjoining the source of the flames. His frantic barking spread the alarm so quickly that most of the people sleeping in the three houses reached the street before firemen arrived.

TRAINING CENTRE OF RESERVE MILITIA AT BROCKVILLE

Brockville, Ont., Aug. 9.—(CP) —Brockville will be one of three centres in Military District No. 3 with headquarters in Kingston, Ont., for a reserve militia training centre, it was announced Thursday. The defence department has already taken over the Brockville Fair Grounds for this purpose and the work of erecting 25 buildings to house some 900 men will start immediately.

Other reserve training centres in District No. 3 will be at Kingston and Peterborough.

The Brockville Fair Grounds, not used for several years, were utilized by the militia department during the First Great War as winter quarters for men in training. New buildings to be erected here will be completed by Sept. 21.

FIRE LOSSES LOWER

TORONTO, Aug. 8.—(CP)—Fire losses in Canada during July were estimated today by the Monetary Times at $1,289,090, compared with $1,779,250 for the same months a year ago. Fire losses throughout the Dominion in the week ended Aug. 3 were estimated at $141,550, compared with $41,500 recorded in the previous week, and with $221,400 reported for the corresponding week of 1939.

IF GASOLINE PRICES
Make You Think — Think of This!

Do you believe that costs of production and distribution are all so equal that selling prices of different gasolines should not vary? Of course you don't.

Do you believe that savings in cost of production and distribution should be passed along to motorists? Of course you do.

Then why pay more than necessary for First Grade Quality Gasoline?

GOOD RICH "GOLD STAR" is a First Grade Premium Quality Gasoline—80 Octane. It equals or excels in all round efficiency, gasolines costing considerably more. Try a tankful—prove it for yourself.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Blondie Has Servant Trouble"

A comedy with a million laughs is about the only way this reviewer can describe the new Blondie hit, "Blondie Has Servant Trouble" now showing at the McCarthy theatre, because it is almost an unbelievable fact that everyone who so far has come from the McCarthy after enjoying this grand movie (has had aching sides) from laughing so heartily.

Penny Singleton as Blondie, Arthur Lake as Dagwood, Larry Simms as Baby Dumpling, Daisy as herself, the postman. Mr. Dithers Dagwood's boss, and a new colored-boy Ray Turner as Horatio never let the fun stop, every minute from the opening there is something amusing or very funny taking place and all the while the characters are so natural, in their respective roles, it gives the impression that instead of watching a motion picture, you are looking through a peek-hole at the goings-on, of a family who might be living right next door to yourself.

"Blondie Has Servant Trouble" surpasses and practically is entirely different from any one of the past five Blondie films made and anyone who seen any of these know how good they were, well here is something in a nut-shell no one has seen a real great Blondie comedy until they attend the McCarthy now "Blondie Has Servant Trouble" is the wow of them all.

"Military Academy"

In addition to the above, the McCarthy program brings another swell feature to Belleville theatregoers entitled "Military Academy" with Tommy Kelly of "Tom Sawyer" fame, Bobby Jordon one of the original "Dead End" kids, David Holt and Jackie Searl, heading the fine cast. "Military Academy" and "Blondie Has Servant Trouble" is the last word in good clean entertainment and it is indeed fortunate that both features can be enjoyed at the same time and the McCarthy should be packed to the rafters the rest of the week by all appreciative moviegoers from five to seventy-five years young.

AT THE BELLE

"New Moon"

The trio that made possible such outstanding screen successes as "Girl of the Golden West" and "Maytime" has been reunited to bring to the audience the greatest musical romance of all time, "New Moon," starring Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy, and produced and directed by Robert Z. Leonard comes next to the Belle Theatre.

"New Moon" alive with such song hits as "Lover Come Back to Me," "One Kiss," "Wanting You," "Softly as in a Morning Sunrise," "Rondolet," "Largo," "Marianne," "Paree," "Shoe Shine Song," and the stirring "Stout Hearted Men," tells the story of Marianne de Beaumanoir, lovely lady of France portrayed by Jeannette MacDonald, and Charles Michon, otherwise known as the dashing political enemy to the King, Charles, Duc de Villiers, portrayed by Nelson Eddy.

Charles and Marianne meet on board a ship en route from Paris to New Orleans. Marianne is going to the new world to take over an estate left by an uncle. Charles, in disguise, is escaping the guillotine by joining a group of men who are to be sold into slavery. The meeting of these two, their love, their life on an island when the boat is shipwrecked, all makes for the type of entertainment that keeps audiences entertained from the fade-in to the conclusion.

Mary Boland Comedy

A brilliant supporting cast has been assembled for the production. In the humorous role of Valerie de Rossac, aunt to Miss MacDonald, is Mary Boland, who scored recently as the eccentric Countess de Lage of "The Women." Others prominently cast in a supporting group of more than fifty speaking parts are George Zucco as the Vicomte Ribaud, H. B. Warner as Father Michel and Grant Mitchell as the governor of New Orleans.

"NeNw Moon" marks the screen debut of a newcomer, Bunty Cutler, cast in the role of Julie, maid to Miss MacDonald. Miss Cutler was discovered in Little Theatre productions and was signed for the role in spite of the fact that she had no previous screen experience. Appearing opposite Miss Cutler is Richard Purcell, who scored a decided hit in a number of short subjects, most recent among them "Drunk Driving." Purcell is seen as Alexander, friend to Nelson Eddy, his most important screen assignment to date. Stanley Fields, John Miljan, Ivan Simpson, William Tannen, Claude King, Cecil Cunningham, Joe Yule, George Irving, Edwin Maxwell, Paul E. Burns, Rafael Storm and Winifred Harris are others in the large cast.

"New Moon" is based on the successful Broadway musical operetta, the book and lyrics of which are the work of Oscar Hammerstein 2nd, Frank Mandel and Laurence Schwab, with Sigmund Romberg, composer of the songs. The screen play was written by Jacques Deval and Robert Arthur with the film's musical direction by Herbert Stothart.

A clever and funny Pete Smith comedy "Doctor I. Q." and the popular Belle News of the hour precede the feature attraction.

"Susan and God" Funny

Rachel Crothers' fast and funny comedy drama "Susan and God," featuring Joan Crawford and Fredric March, Rita Hayworth and John Carroll is now closing a successful engagement at the Belle.

Canada Carries On

"Front of Steel" is the title of the latest and probably the best of the Canada Carries On series. The film reveals authentic scenes of the German war machine in action—Canadian industry's answer—machines of war forged by skilled Canadian workmen in the arsenal of democracy.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Elderly Husband Still Indulges in Eye Antics

Dear Miss Fairfax,

What's the matter with these old men who become more and more silly the older they grow? My husband is not far from 60, but he constantly indulges in eye antics, whether his game is Sweet Sixteen or Sixty-Six.

He "bugs his eyes" at every girl he meets and I feel so ashamed of him that I've stopped seeing my friends, given up my church work and Sunday School class.

When he's home and has no one to stare at, or indulge in these eye calisthenics, he just stares at the wall. Do you think he's going crazy?

Terribly Worried

Not unless a multitude of men no longer young are going crazy along with your husband. They have that desperate feeling of making hay before the last ray of sunshine vanishes, or the sudden emptiness the hungry passenger has when the waiter bangs his gong and shouts, 'Last call for dinner in the dining-car".

No, my dear, they're no more crazy than women of the same age who imagine boys, young enough to be their sons and grandsons, are in love with them, and to speed up their attractions buy a doll hat to go forth to conquer. It's pretty bad, this belief in our powers to charm when charming has nothing to do with pushing back the clock. But I suppose it keeps the old hopefuls going, enables the trade to sell hats and cosmetics, and gentlemen no longer young to "bug their eyes".

Bless you for reminding me of that expression. I haven't heard it since my old nurse used it when I was in pinafores.

Dropped Him Because of His Table Manners

Dear Miss Fairfax:

No, I'm not one of those guys who do a sword swallowing act and eat with my knife but the girl friend objected to the way I held my fork and, as she said, "made a dump-cart out of it". She objected to other things about the way I ate. I tried to laugh this off, but it was no good. She gave me my walking papers. I'm pretty sore about the whole thing. What was wrong with the way I held my fork?

Jack

Not having seen you use your fork, my dear Jack, it's pretty hard to say what was wrong with your technique. The knife is held in the right hand when cutting meat, and the fork is held much as a pencil is held in writing, only the fingers are placed near the top. The next time you're near a public library, ask for a book on table etiquette which gives a diagram of the proper use of knife and fork.

I think your girl was unduly fussy; what she should have done was to have instructed you in table art, as tactfully as possible.

She'd Like Him to Learn to Swim and Dance

Dear Miss Fairfax:

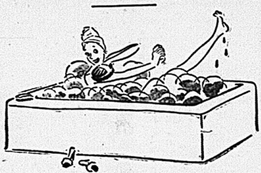
I'm 17 years old and going with a boy about the same age. I'm a reader of your column and like the advice you give others, so thought you might help me. I'm very fond of swimming and dancing, but my boy friend doesn't do either. How can I persuade him to learn? I want to keep on going with him, but since I like to swim and dance, I can't enjoy his company as much as if he did the things I like.

Undecided

It's too bad your boy friend won't learn how to swim and dance, because he's certainly missing a lot of fun. You might just tell him that if he doesn't want to learn these two things you'll have to go with some other boy, as they mean a great deal to you.

Swimming isn't hard to learn, and he can take lessons at the Y.M.C.A. or at a public swimming pool. He can learn to dance by taking a few lesson in any good dancing school.

Wise Living Brings Beauty



"The daily bath should be a period of relaxation."

By HELEN FOLLETT

Scientists and medical men are helping along the campaign for good looks, though of course they don't realize it, not being interested in such a trifling matter.

They've taught women to fight germs, urged them to find homes where there is sunlight, explained to them the benefits of fresh air and outdoor life. They have educated women in food values; more and more is being learned about the balanced diet. All that means that the next generation will do less lamenting about poor complexions and tresses that do not qualify for beauty acclaim.

They offer interesting information concerning the teeth, dangers that can beset the eyes, the profitable rewards for hygienic living. Beautifying is based on health and health banners are carried high these days.

Mental health is a subject in which every woman should be interested. All of us have our low moments which deplete our forces, have a deplorable effect upon the nervous system.

Play with your rouge pads and lipsticks. Curl your hair and put on your pretty dry goods. But obey the laws of health and live wisely.

Bath salts not only impart a delightful fragrance to the flesh but they soften the water and react upon the skin so favorably that it is satin smooth.

Toilet articles for the bath will snake money out of any woman's purse. They are delightful and refreshing luxuries. Soap, bath salts, powders, tonic rubs. Elegant!

The daily bath should not be a chore, but a period of relaxation. Lie in the warm water and relax. Have an alternating hot and cold shower, a brisk rub down, a powder friction or a tonic rub. You'll feel fightin' fit and your complexion will be colorful and fresh.

The Stars Say

For Saturday, August 10

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

RATHER adverse planetary conditions prevail on this day. There may be delays, reversals and obstacles of a most determined nature and difficult to cope with. There may also be situations of a belligerent character, taking self-restraint, patience and fortitude. Amiability and strategy will succeed in such strained relations rather than strife, recklessness and tumult. A sign recommending compromise and finesse may help break down resistance and hostility. All passessions should be definitely safeguarded.

Those whose birthday it is may have a year of difficulties, with tenacious obstacles, delays, hostility and vindictive opposition. This may come from superiors, employers, elders and may best be placated by compromise and tact rather than turbulence and strife. As well there is need for protecting all sorts of possessions.

A child born on this day may be difficult to understand and guide, having at once a turbulent and fiery nature and also much reserve and restraint. It will probably be enterprising, strenuous and have much creative ability.

Pilot Loses Life To Save Town

London, Aur. 9—(CP)—Heroism of a British pilot who crashed to his death in the sea in a blazing plane saved a southeast coast town from a disaster today.

The pilot remained at his controls to avert what appeared to be an inevitable crash into buildings of the town. As a result of his guidance, the plane fell in the water 50 yards from shore.

Be Good Listeners

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

Below I quote from a letter typical of many I am receiving from boys and girls, young men and women:

"Dear Dr. Myers: I sometimes read your articles in our local paper about helping people with their troubles and I wonder if you can help me. I am a young man and my trouble is that I have an inferiority complex and a lack of speech. I never seem able to converse freely with most people. Most of the time I am under a tension when talking to some one and it is difficult for me to converse steadily for any great length of time. I seldom go anywhere because I always get nervous in front of people and it seems as though I am at a loss to be able to say anything. So please write to me and tell me what I can do to overcome this and I will be greatly appreciative of it. I enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for your reply."

My reply in part:

"I know how you feel. I also know that your anxiety about carrying on a conversation is caused chiefly by your notion that you must talk much to be liked and prove agreeably sociable. Let me tell you that I have received a tremendous amount of personal relief by discovering after many years of needless suffering, that I don't have to talk much; that, indeed, I can be most attractive socially many times by just listening earnestly (and learning something, too); that all persons who converse well are greatly delighted to have an animated listener.

"I have also discovered that often in a group who are discussing matters of which I am partly or wholly ignorant, I can find comfort and relief by studying the conversation enough to ask a question which will keep the person speaking most confidently going on —sort of winds him up when he runs down, and lets me rest. When by this procedure I can attain composure, I have no disturbing emotions to hinder my expression when, perchance, an idea does come into my little head. Seriously, I commend a similar scheme to you.

"Of course you won't expect to get relief all at once. If you accomplish some noticeable progress after several months be very happy for I still have my own trouble, and I have been working at it for a number of years. But I am as sure as I know my hair is light, that the method I described has helped me. And make yourself go places."

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am to be married at an afternoon church ceremony, and I would be grateful if you will answer a few questions for me.

1.—May I have my fourteen-year-old niece as my only attendant? She is tall, and appears older than her age. If you tell me that it is proper for me to have her, I would like to have her wear a blue dress. I am planning to wear a long white wedding dress and fingertip veil.

2.—Is it permissible to include the At Home address on the wedding invitation, or should it be engraved on a separate card to be enclosed with the invitation?

3.—How do I send an invitation to a family when I wish to include each person individually?

4.—When is the inside envelope used for a person's name?

5.— Isn't it necessary to write "Thank you notes" for shower gifts as well as for weddnig presents?

6.—Are invitations sometimes sent to people who are invited to showers for the bride-elect?

7.—I'm asking three of my school friends (girls) to play and sing the wedding music. Is it necessary for me to remunerate them or is a gift sufficient?

R. J.

1.—Yes, it is qutie proper for you to have your fourteen-year-old niece as your only attendant, if you haven't a sister who would be expected to be given this honor.

Your plan to have your attendant wear blue would be all right.

2.—No, it is not permissible to put the At Home address on the invitation. This should be engraved on a card to be enclosed with the invitation, or with the announcement, if announcements are to be sent.

The At Home card enclosed with the invitation has no name on it, since, when the invitations are sent out, the bride has not the name she will have after her marriage. They usually read:

At home
after the first of October
Ten Home Place
Homeville, New York

3.—It is not correct to use the phrase "Mr. and Mrs. John Smith and family". If possible, send one invitation to Mr. and Mrs. John Smith, and a separate invitation to each grown member of the family. Or write Miss Mary Smith or The Misses Smith or Mr. Walter Smith under the names of the parents.

4.—Two envelopes are used for wedding invitations and announcements. The outside one is addressed in the usual fashion (with only necessary abbreviations, such as Mr. and Mrs.). On the inside envelope, which has no mucilage on the flap, is written only the name, without address: Mr. and Mrs. John Smith.

5.—The courteous bride-elect, a day or so after a shower, writes a note of thanks for every gift received at the shower.

6.—Since only the bride's intimate friends are customarily invited to showers given for her, it would be natural that these friends would be invited to the wedding. However, if it happens that other than close friends of hers are invited to a shower, it would be a proper gesture for her to make to invite these shower-guests to her wedding.

7.—This circumstance should be regarded as a social one, rather than as a professional one. Therefore, it would not be proper for you to give or send these girls money or a cheque. The thing to do is to give each girl a gift.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Infantile Paralysis

Anterior poliomyelitis, or infantile paralysis begins like any other acute infection—fever, chills, headache, vomiting. Often the first symptom is fretfulness and a resolute refusal of food.

The initial suggestion that the coming illness is polio, may come when the child complains of a stiff neck and sore back. Often the child won't volunteer these symptoms, and the first indications to the mother that something is wrong is that he sits very erect and stiff instead of slouching as usual.

I always advise mothers that this time of the year, when a child appears to be abnormal, it is a good idea to apply a simple test for infantile paralysis. Each morning, bend the child's head down so the chin touches the chest. If the child is developing polio, he will cry out with pain. Of course, this is not an infallible test, but if your child reacts to it, positively, a doctor should be called in at once.

After stiffness of the neck and soreness of the back the disease may indicate its progress with tenderness and stiffness in various parts of the body. The legs or arms may be affected and when the mother touches these parts the child will likely cry out in pain. Within a few hours he may be totally unable to move his affected parts.

In most cases of paralysis there is an involvement of the legs or arms first. Occasionally we see a case where the face and throat are involved first. Then we know we have an especially dangerous case on our hands. It is very often fatal, but a case of this type has one redeeming feature. If the child does recover, recovery is nearly certain to be complete without crippling or weakening of muscles.

Little slips in pronunciation and difficulty in swallowing food are sometimes the first symptoms that the disease has struck in throat area. I recall one young lad I attended who had this type of polio. He was nearly gone when I was first called, for when I got there, he couldn't swallow at all, and it was very difficult for him to say a word. I didn't think he would ever recover.

Fortunatey he had a mother who gave him every attention. She gave up everything else to nurse the boy. Today, he is completely recovered. Other children who were affected during the same epidemic and weren't as serious cases as he was, are so crippled they can't walk.

S. Louisiana Cities Flooded by Rainfall Of Nearly 20 Inches

Crowley, La., Aug. 9—(AP) — Southwest Louisiana cities, in some instances completely flooded by nearly 20 inches of continuous rain in the past 48 hours, called today for outside aid.

The business section of Crowley, a city of 10,000 population in the heart of the Louisiana rice belt, was under 15 to 24 inches of water. The rain continued this morning.

W. J. Cleveland, chairman of the emergency relief organization estimated that at least 3,000 persons were in need of food and clothing and that there was immediate need of health measures.

The War Today

By GUY RHOADES
Canadian Press Staff Writer

A single day's fighting on two fronts has toppled at least 75 aircraft out of the skies while the Royal Air Force has lost 18—a cheering result for Britons who have been warned they may expect heavy raids from now on.

Authorities in the United Kingdom apparently are convinced that the German attempt at a blitzkreig may not be far away, for they distributed circulars during the night advising the public how to behave in the event of invasion. The advice was summarized in the sentence "stay where you are." In other words don't clog the roads and hamper troop movements.

Over the Libyan desert Royal Air Force and Italian sky forces tangled in the biggest aerial battle fought in Africa and at the end fifteen Italian machines were sprawled out over the baking sands. Two British aircraft were lost.

Is Blitzkrieg Near?

Belief that the blitzkrieg was near was supported by more than one bit of edivence. The ferocity of the German air attack after a lull gave rise to belief that the preliminary pounding stage had arrived. This stage was expected to last for several days, perhaps as long as a fortnight, in a German effort to soften British resistance to a cross-Channel troop shipment.

The Italian activity in North Africa, apparently due in part to desperation of troops deprived of supplies and water by the British blockade, was believed to have been timed with the German onslaught in a move to divide British attention.

Nazi Attempt at Counter Blockade

The Germans, too, apparently were seeking to destroy as much British shipping as possible in order to make their counter blockade effective.

The effectiveness of the British blockade of practically all Europe was undoubted, but numerous stories of acute starvation in former Allied or neutral countries were believed premature and probably launched by Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels.

Goebbels, a smart propagandist in any league, appears to be trying to create the impression that Britain is heartlessly starving the innocent people of Europe and to bring pressure, particularly from the United States, to create gates in the blockade.

The idea is that food should be admitted to the hungry continent to feed the populations of countries like France, Belgium, Holland, Norway, Denmark, Poland, countries which fought on the side of the Allies or refrained from fighting at all.

Humanitarian Motives Doubted

British authorities, however, are extremely doubtful of the humanitarian motives of such a campaign. The blockade is one of Britain's most effective weapons and the Axis has proclaimed a "total" war.

It is unfortunate that total war must involve innocent persons.

5-Day Leave Granted Troops Of 2nd Canadian Division

Majority of New Arrivals Go To London Or Visit Friends

TRAVEL WITH RIFLES

By Edwin Johnson
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Somewhere in England, Aug. 9—(CP Cable)—Like overjoyed schoolboys about to start the long anticipated summer holidays, the first batch of troops of the Canadian 2nd Division waved a cheery farewell to their comrades this afternoon as they left for various parts of the United Kingdom on a five-day disembarkation leave.

All are subject to quick recall and they took their rifles and packs with them to be ready to face any emergency. A majority of the new arrivals had planned to pay a hurried call to Scotland or Ireland but changed plans to meet their purse when they discovered they had to foot transportation bills to their destinations. The next leave, however will be on the government.

As a result most of the lads are taking a flier to London or visiting friends and relatives within reasonable distance. En route across, the men were paid up until the end of the month, which limited the first leave of the group to those with private means and the thrifty or lucky who had managed to conserve their funds. In this category was large percentage of veterans of the last war.

One young man accepted leave but stayed right in camp. He is 19-year-old 2nd Lieut. J. C. Brick of Windsor, Ont., the youngest officer of a Western Ontario Scottish regiment.

"I was never overly fond of sightseeing or roaming around and I'll enjoy myself just as much puttering around camp", he said.

Pte. David Croll, Mayor of Windsor, Ont., who has accepted an invitation to visit historic Windsor on the banks of the winding Thames, is planning leave with the second flight next Thursday. He also intends to listen in on a debate or two in the British House of Commons and then "ramble around" London with the rest of the boys.

Those remaining behind in camp today concentrated on a routine program of training except members of a battalion of the motor transport section. They were busy tuning up their brand new vehicles and trying to adjust themselves to the business of driving on the left side of the road.

LIBERALS REQUEST ACCLAMATION

Kitchener, Ont., Aug. 9—(CP)—Official of the North Waterloo Liberal Association sent letters today to officials of the Conservative and C.C.F. organizations requesting an acclamation for the Liberal candidate, L. O. Breithaupt, in the August 19 federal by-election, it was learned today.

The letter to the Conservative Association said the Liberals are allowing a Conservative acclamation in Carleton constituency and the Conservatives are giving the Liberals an acclamation at Kingston.

Conservative officials said no reply will be sent until after the Conservative nominating convention tomorrow.

Duchess to Be Addressed as "Your Grace"

Nassau, Bahamas, Aug. 9—(CP)—Colonial officials, worried over forms of address for the Duke and Duchess of Windsor, disclosed today that London had let the proper forms be known.

The Duke will be "Your Royal Highness."

The Duchess will be "Your Grace."

Observers pointed out that in giving the form of address for the Duchess as "Your Grace" London had not extended to her the title of "Her Royal Highness" carried by the wives of the King's other brothers.

9-Year-Old Girl Walks into Path Of Slow-Moving Car

While crossing Cannifton Road near her home and attempting to evade an oncoming automobile, 9-year-old Pauline Russell, 76 Station Street, failed to see another motor car approaching in the opposite direction and the little lass walked directly into the path of a car driven by W. C. Richardson of this city.

Mr. Richardson immediately stopped his automobile and rendered what assistance possible, later driving the little girl home. Traffic Officers Ellis and Caldwell investigated and were told the girl only suffered minor leg and arm abrasions, as the car was only proceeding at a very slow rate of speed.

While employees at the City Battery were at work this morning, sneak thieves crept into the office and stole $6.00 from the company's cash drawer. Detective Fred Isard investigated and later questioned two teen-aged lads regarding the theft. As the boys were of a tender age their names were withheld by police.

EPIDEMIC STRIKES HAMILTON CATS

Hamilton, Ont., Aug. 9—(CP)—An epidemic of infectious gastritis is taking its toll of Hamilton cats—alley, pet and even quite valuable animals — Robert Inglis, Inspector for the Humane Society, said today.

"The general public seems to think their cats are being deliberately poisoned," he said, "but that is not the case. It is this infectious gastritis. There were 185 cats died of it last month."

He said the ravages of the disease were continuing into the present month. It is caused by the eating of tainted meat, generally from uncovered garbage cans. The principal systom is the refusal of the cat to eat, which results in death.

ELEMENTARY FLYING TRAINING SCHOOLS GIVE AIRMEN FIRST REAL TASTE OF FLYING

Airmen at the No. 4 Elementary Flying Training School at Windsor Mills, Que., start out at dawn, ABOVE, to take instruction in training aircraft. No. 4 school is one of 26 such schools located across the Dominion, where airmen receive their first real taste of flying after graduating from the Initial Training School where they studied theory of aeronautics. After completing their course at the Elementary Flying School, the airmen will be ready to proceed to one of the Service Flying Training Schools. Flight-Lieutenant C. P. Fee, chief supervisory officer of No. 4 E.F.T.S., is shown, RIGHT, studying a progress test chart with Captain W. T. Wrathall, chief flying instructor of the school.

Regimental Sgt.-Maj. Sam Johnson Well Qualified to Train "Rookies"

When the various regiments of the non-permanent active militia of Military District No. 3 go through their paces at an eastern training centre in the near future, they will be under the keen eyes of Regimental Sergeant-Major Sam Johnson, well-known Belleville veteran and resident of this city for the past fifteen years.

"Sam," as he is popularly known to a large circle of friends here, will bring a wealth of military experience and training to his new job. He enlisted with the 38th Battalion of Ottawa in the early days of the last war and saw service in Bermuda, England and France. Wounded at Vimy Ridge, he was invalided out, but returned again. Returning to England he took instructional courses at Bexhill and the Guards Drill Course in London.

Remaining in England for six years after the war, Sam came back to Canada and Belleville. He has been associated with the local branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce as messenger for the past ten years, and has received leave of absence from his duties from that institution for the duration of the war.

Sergeant-Major Johnson has just concluded a special course of instruction at Kingston and will leave on Aug. 17th for an eastern training centre where he will be in charge of instruction of non-permanent active militia units during the entire period of camp training.

He associated himself with the Argyll Light Infantry Regiment soon after returning to Canada and has been with that unit for the past fourteen years. Popular with the troops, Sam should prove of inestimable value to his superior officers during the training of Canada's civilian soldiers.

JOHN CUDAHY IS REPRIMANDED FOR INTERVIEW

Has Been Requested To Return Immediately To The United States

Washington, Aug. 9.— (AP) — John Cudahy, United States Ambassador to Belgium, was reprimanded publicly by the State Department today for his press interview in London on Belgian food conditions and other aspects of the German occupation of that country.

Sumner Welles, Acting Secretary of State, reading a formal statement at his press conference, said that Cudahy, by direction of President Roosevelt, had been requested to return to the United States immediately for consultation.

Cudahy, the statement said, had given the interview "in violation of standing instructions of the Department of State and certain of the views expressed by the Ambassador are not to be construed as representing the views of this government".

The incident, the statement continued, "illustrates once again the importance which must be attributed by American representatives abroad to the department's instructions to refrain at this critical time from making public statements other than those made in accordance with instructions of the Department of State".

BANDIT ROBS BANK OF $1,000

Gunman Wearing Dark Goggles, Carries Bank Notes Away In Pockets

Montreal, Aug. 9 — (CP) — A branch of the Banque Provinciale Du Canada, just around the corner from a police station, was held up today by an armed bandit who escaped with approximately $1,000 in $5 and $10 banknotes.

The gunman, wearing dark goggles, stuffed the banknates into his pockets as the teller, Rolland Gauthier, handed them over and then fled from the building. He disappeared down Notre Dame Street West, where the bank is located.

Police of the nearby station began a search for the bandit, who held the teller and two other employees at bay with a pistol. They were the only persons in the bank.

3 Canadian Volunteers Stranded in Finland

Toronto, Aug. 9 (CP)—Three Canadian volunteers still in Finland will probably "be stuck there" for the duration of the Second Great War, Eino Lackstrom, commander of the Finnish War Veterans' 'Association, said here today.

The men are: Edward Waller, veteran flier of the Great War; John Walker, anoher veteran, and Samuel Hall. No mail has been received from them since shortly after the end of the Finnish-Russian War.

"Finnish vessels dare not take these men, because, with Germany in command of Norway they are too vulnerable to German submarines," said Lackstrom.

"As far as we know they are all safe. They will certainly be well taken care of as long as they are in Finland."

Former Canadian Gives $445,000 to Replace Planes Lost Thursday

London, Aug. 9.—(CP)—Garfield Weston, formerly of Toronto and member of the British parliament for Macclesfield, today gave Lord Beaverbrook, Minister of Aircraft production, a cheque for £100,000 ($445,000) to help replace the 16 Royal Air Force fighter planes lost in yesterday's English Channel battle in which 60 German aircraft were shot down.

The gift was announced by the Ministry of Aircraft Production which said the Canadian presents to the Ministry "16 hurricanes and spitfires to replace the total losses sustained by Britain in Thursday's battle over the English Channel".

For the purpose, the announcement added Mr. Weston handed over his cheque with the remark: "The pilots we cannot replace".

SHOT TO DEATH IN INTERNATIONAL SETTLEMENT

Shanghai, Aug. 9 (AP)—Ma You-Feng, described as a lieutenant of Wang Ching-Wei, head of the Japanese-dominated Nanking regime, was shot to death tonight in the international settlement by an assassin who escaped. This was the first political killing in the settlement since extra police measures against terrorism were adopted August 6.

INJURED GIRL RESCUED FROM MOUNTAIN LEDGE

Anne Cedarquist, 22, mountain climber of Shelton, Wash., is about to be carried to safety from a narrow ledge 8,000 feet up the precipitous slope of Mt. Shuksan, where she lay injured nearly 24 hours. The girl roped together with other climbers, was nearing Shuksan's summit when she slipped and plunged past the others. The rope halted her fall. The life-saving rope may be seen still on her. She was brought back to civilization by stretcher.

DECREE ALLOTS BILLION FRANCS

Government at Vichy Makes Extra Allotment For Military Purposes

Vichy, France, Aug. 9.—(AP)—A decree allotting 1,005,179,000 francs for additional military expenses during the third quarter of 1940 was published in the official journal today.

The regular budget for 1940 already had authorized the government to spend 249,111,000,000 francs for war expenditures during the year.

(The Franc is not quoted on International Exchanges now. From the first of the year until the capitulation of France to Germany its value ranged from $.0173 to $.0227.)

Most of the new allotment—883,000,000 francs—is for the air force. A published tabulation indicated there are heavy bills left over from the war period still to be paid, one being of 400,000,000 francs for fuel and similar expenses.

An additional credit of 436,000,000 francs also has been obtained for payment of accumulated bills for powder used during the war.

A treasury bond issue has been authorized to cover these expenses.

An office of Foreign Commerce has been established, attached to the Ministry of Finance charged with planning importation and exportation, granting licenses and keeping accounts.

Norse Airmen Have Thrill Crossing North Sea in Small Boat

Toronto, Aug. 9 (CP)—A certain German U-boat commander may live to regret the day he decided a peaceful motorboat, bobbing in the North Sea with three poorly-dressed "fishermen" in it, wasn't worth wasting ammunition on.

For the "fishermen" were officers in the Norwegian naval air service and one of them, Lieut. Nils Steen, 28, told last night of the experience as he toured Toronto's airports with other Norse fliers. He is one of a large group of Norwegian airmen undergoing special training here for new war duty against the Nazis.

The U-boat incident happened while Steen and two companions were escaping from occupied Norway to Scotland. The journey took 48 hours in the open boat. Lieut. Steen, who has about 4,000 flying hours to his credit, said the machine-gun of the U-boat was trained on the motorboat for some anxious moments before the German commander judged them harmless.

"We looked very poor," he said, with a grin. "We felt a bit nervous, of course, after the submarine came up and looked us over for what seemed a long, long time. But evidently they thought we weren't worth the ammunition. They didn't even stop us for questioning."

Aged Woman Found Chained to Wall

Niagara Falls, N.Y., Aug. 9—(AP)—A Niagara Falls couple is under arrest today after, State Police Inspector Eugene F. Hoyt said, the man's aged mother was found chained to a wall in an unfinished room of their frame cottage.

Inspector Hoyt said Mrs. Louis Carpenter, 75, a native of Leeds County, Ontario, was discovered by troopers yesterday, sitting on a stool, her hands tied behind her back with cord, and a metal chain with padlock attached encircling her abdomen. The chain was nailed to a wall.

Her son, Gordon, 34, and his wife Marcella, 31, pleaded not guilty to charges of assault, second degree and coercion and were released on bail pending a hearing tonight before Justice of the Peace H. R. Alcorn.

The elderly woman, who came to the United States in 1912, was taken to a hospital for treatment. Hoyt said she was unkempt but apparently not in serious condition.

Hoyt said she had been chained at intervals for an undetermined period. He declined to discuss reasons given by the son for the situation, discovered by a Red Cross nurse.

SAYS CHAUTEMPS WILL FACE TRIBUNAL

Berlin, Aug. 9.—(AP via radio)—Former Premier Camille Chautemps will be taken before the "war guilt" tribunal, the German radio reported today from Vichy, France.

It said that Chautemps, who had mission in South America for Premier Philippe Petain's government, had been told to await the outcome of investigations concerning him.

Political circles, the radio said, believe that Chautemps, Vice Premier in the War Cabinet of Paul Reynaud, sided with opponents of capitulation when France was on the verge of giving up.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL WILL APPEAL CONVICTIONS

Toronto, Aug. 9—(CP) — Attorney-General Conant has filed notices of appeal in connection with two convictions for dangerous driving in which jail terms were not imposed.

The cases are those of Henry B. Black who was convicted at Lindsay and fined $50 and costs or 30 days, and Orval Henderson who was convicted at Napanee and fined $15 and costs or a month in jail. The Attorney-General considers the penalties were not severe enough.

DOMINION STATUS OF INDIA URGED

Two London Newspapers Say Britain Should Offer To Discuss Status 'Here and Now'

London, Aug. 9 (CP)—The Daily Herald today criticized the white paper offering India self-government after the war as not going far enough, and suggested that it be made the basis for negotiation of a settlement to get India to throw her full weight into the war.

"This is no time for hedging and haggling," the newspaper commented, "but for bold statesmanship, for swift and generous, not tardy and grudging, fulfillment of promises.

"If we had been wiser sooner the Italians would not be in Zeila today."

The News Chronicle took a similar view, saying that "at our back we need an united and self-respecting India." The newspaper said "nothing would contribute more to the fulfillment of that need than a specific offer by the British Government to discuss Dominion status here and now."

WAR BRIEFS

Vichy, France, Aug. 9—(AP)—The French Air Force lost 29 per cent of its effectives in the 46 days of the German western offensive, it was stated today by the newspaper Le Petit Parisien. The paper, in a special article said the German air material had been distinctly superior in quality to the French until the arrival of the American-made Curtiss pursuit planes.

Pictou, N.S., Aug. 9—Eddie Crowley is home again after a British oil tanker on which he was a member of the crew was mined and sunk near Le Havre shortly before the retreat through Dunkirk. The vessel was bound for France from Haiga, Palestine, with a cargo of oil at the time. Crowley said a submarine which had pursued his ship before it was sunk was destroyed by depth charges from another minesweeper.

Medicine Hat, Alta., Aug. 9—(CP)—Private W. Ponych, 23, of the Calgary Highlanders, on leave from Shilo Camp, Man., was killed here late yesterday when he fell under the wheels of a west-bound Canadian Pacific Railway freight train. Ponych, whose home was at Vauxhall, Alta., apparently had attempted to board the moving train as it left the city limits.

London, Ont., Aug. 9—(CP)—The entire band of Salvation Army citadel, No. 1, London, has joined the latest supply column of the Royal Canadian Army Service Corps, now being organized on a non-permanent basis, it was announced today.

The citadel band, ranked one of the finest in western Ontario, will take part in tonight's recruiting parade.

Toronto, Aug. 9—(CP) — Two Toronto members of the Royal Can. Air Force who were with a R.C.A.F. detachment accompany-A.F. detachment accompanying U.S. airplanes to France, on the French aircraft carrier Bearn, arrived in Toronto today but would not discuss their experiences.

The Bearn was still at sea when France capitulated to Germany and was returned to Martinique.

Morgenthau Urges Excess Profits Tax

Washington, Aug. 9—(AP) — Treasurer Secretary Henry Morgenthau, forecasting a $5,691,000,000 federal deficit this year, urged the United States Congress today to open another source of government revenue and provide a "better distribution" of defence costs by enacting an excess profits tax.

An eventual increase in the present $49,000,000,000 federal debt limit to permit more deficit financing was predicted by Morgenthau, while Daniel W. Bell, treasury undersecretary, said that at the present rate of defence expenditures it would be necessary to increase the limit by about $9,000,000,000 next summer unless new taxes were raised.

The excess profits tax has been estimated by experts to yield $300,000,000 to $500,000,000 a year.

REMOVAL OF JUDGES IN RUSSIA WHO FAIL TO PUNISH TARDY WORKERS.

Moscow, Aug. 9—(AP)—Justice Commissar N. M. Richkoff ordered today the removal of judges who fail to penalize tardy, idle or transient workers in the campaign to speed up production in Russia. Charges of criminal inefficiency were brought against two judges, including a woman, in Moscow district courts.

STATUS OF BALTIC DIPLOMATS TO VATICAN

Vatican City, Aug. 9.—(AP) — The question of the status of diplomats accredited to the Holy See from the three Baltic countries absorbed by Soviet Russia was raised today in foreign circles after Pope Pius received Stanislav Girdvainis, Lithuanian Minister of the Holy See, in private audience.

At the same time the Soviet Embassy in Italy took over diplomatic representation of Latvia, Estonia an Lithuanian in Rome.

Feller Chalks Up His 19th Win as Indians Split With Browns; Red Sox Also Win

"Rapid Robert" Stands Out As Baseball's Best Hurler In Business Today

YANKEES LOSE

Dodgers Beat Giants As Walters Hurls Reds To Win Over Chicago

(By Judson Bailey Associated Press Sports Writer).

It's evident that Bobby Feller can't pitch Cleveland Indians into the American League championship singlehanded—or even with two hands.

The famous fireballer stands out as the best hurler in baseball today, with 19 victories already in the bag, but the Indians are in second place just the same and unless they can figure out something else, may stay there.

Cleveland had a chance to take over the lead yesterday. Detroit Tigers were idle and the Tribe was down for a double-header with the seventh-place St. Louis Browns.

Feller took care of winning the first game 7-4, pitching shutout ball for the first five innings until his teammates got him a working margin. But then came the nightcap and even with Johnny Humphries pitching three-hit ball the Tribe couldn't capture the crucial game. Elden Auker of the Browns gave up eight hits, but he kept them scattered and singled home one of the runs that won the game 2-1.

Boston Red Sox reinforced their third-place position by whipping New York Yankees again 6-5, bunching seven of their 13 hits in the last two innings and finally notching the winning tally with two out in the ninth on Manager Joe Cronin's single. Jim Foxx hit his 26th homer and Dom DiMaggio made four hits in five trips.

Philadelphia Athletics beat Washington Senators 6-4 in 10 innings. Frank Hayes delivered a pinch double to tie the score in the ninth and in the 10th a single and two more doubles provided the winning margin.

An even more breathtaking spectacle was Brooklyn Dodgers' 6-3 triumph over New York Giants on Dolph Camilli's 12th home run in the 12th inning. Two were out and two were on at the time. Peewee Reese had hit a homer with one on to tie the score in the seventh and Nick Witek had put the Giants in the lead originally with a two-run circuit blow.

Bucky Walters checked the skid of Cincinnati Reds by scattering nine hits so effectively that he shut out Chicago Cubs after the first inning and won 3-1.

In the only other National League game Boston Bees prodded the Phillies into their ninth consecutive defeat 6-2. Jim Tobin allowed only seven hits and Eddie Miller helped with a homer.

ECCENTRIC OWNER GOOD AT PICKING POTENTIAL STARS

Joe Engel of Chattanooga Baseball Club Full of Tomfoolery But There's' Method In His Clowning

Chattanooga, Tenn.—(AP)—Fans who pack the Chattanooga ball park to be amused by Joe Engel's latest tomfoolery dream-up think Joe Engel is a clown.

Baseball's Mr. Bigs think he is one of the shrewdest business men in the game today. Not alone for his brainstorm stunts that draw the fans to see even a losing team—but mostly for his ability to pick up ballplayers at a song and then sell them for huge sums.

Consider this example and you get the idea: Connie Mack in 1938 gave Engel $25,000—and a ballplayer—for Dee Miles. One year later Engel sold that ballplayer, a mere throw-in on the Miles deal, for $36,000. His name is Bill Nicholson and the Chicago Cubs are his present proud owners.

Engel is known to fandom chiefly for his ballpark stunts. He once staged an elephant hunt, with natives and all the trimmings, in connection with a game at Chattanooga. Another time he rigged up canary cages in the stands, told the fans they could at least listen to the birdies sing if the play of his second-division club became too boring.

On one occasion he gave away a fully-furnished house and lot, value $15,000. Stunts like that pull in the fans and make his ball club a paying proposition no matter its position in the Southern Association race.

Smart in Trades

But that other angle, the business of acquiring and selling players, is the one that commands respect among baseball magnates.

With Kiki Cuyler, his manager, to develop diamonds in the rough, Engel has set up a phenomenal sales record in the last two years. In 1938 he sold five players for a total of $82,500. The sales: Sington to Brooklyn, $20,000; Millies to Baltimore, $7,500; Miles to Athletics, $25,000; Honeycutt to Giants, $25,000; Hayes to Washington $5,000.

In 1939 his sales total was $54,000. Lanahan went to Pittsburgh for $6,000, Nicholson to the Cubs for $36,000, Letchas and Benjamin to the Phillies for $10,000 and Williams to Washington for $2,500.

His latest big sale, that of Rightfielder Mike Dejan to the Cincinnati Reds for $30,000, brings his total to $176,000 since 1938.

Cincinnati Reds Again on the March To Another National League Pennant

Gene Thompson

William Werber

Linus Frey

By WALTER L. JOHNS

Central Press Canadian Writer

The old pennant cry is being heard around the Cincinnati street corners these days. And, judging from the league standings, there's not much left to it but the shouting.

Several items may be pointed out as to the why of the Cincinnati march to the pennant. Itemized they read:

(1) Pitching.
(2) Fielding.
(3) Hitting.
(4) Reserve strength.

Without doubt, the Redleg pitching staff is the best in the National League, and, with the possible exception of their Ohio brethren, the Cleveland Indians, the best in both loops.

Walters Stars

Bucky Walters, big winner last year, is equally as excellent this season. Already he has won 15 games. Paul Derringer, the other Cincy star, has won almost as many. Great help has come from Gene Thompson, who has won 70 games; Joe Beggs a Yankee cast-off; Jim Turner, once of the Boston Bees, and Lloyd Moore.

If Walters and Derringer continue their blistering pace, which they set last year when they won 45 games between them the Reds won't be headed unless their infield drops out.

And speaking of the infield the Cincinnati team has one of the best defence units in the senior circuit. Bill Werber at third is playing great baseball. Lonnie Frey continues to join with Billy Myers and Eddie Joost in piling up double plays. Frank McCormick is a steady first sacker and one of the big offensive guns on the team.

Great Support

Redleg players have made fewer errors than any other team in either loop. That means much in the long run where runs count in the payoff.

In the outfield, experts agree Harry Craft is one of the best fielders in the league. Flanked by Ival Goodman and Morrie Arnovich the Cincy boys have support where support is needed.

As for batting, the Reds aren't the class of the loop. But several of the boys are .300 hitters and others manage to hit in the clutches to keep the runs pouring across the plate. Frank McCormick and Ernie Lambardi all are hitting above the select .300 figure and Goodman is improving after a slow start.

Joost Good Sub

Injuries haven't proved detrimental to the Reds' 1940 pennant chances, as Gable Paul, secretary points out. Joost, called in to play when Bill Myers went down with injuries, made an excellent substitution both at the plate and in the field.

Lew Riggs supplanted Bill Werber at third when the latter tore a leg muscle. He too, made his presence known, getting six hits in two games.

Mike McCormick, rookie outfielder, isn't blasting down fences but his play has been steady and he hits in the pinches.

The Reds have completed more than 80 double plays. And that is 18 more than the opposition has made against them.

With the favor of Lady Luck, often called upon to play her hand in the baseball world, the Reds should come marching home with another league crown and perhaps a world series winner.

"Uncle Mike" Jacobs Wants Brooklyn Dodgers' Franchise?

New York, Aug. 9—(AP)—If and when Mike Jacobs buys the Brooklyn baseball Dodgers — and Mike says it's more "when" than "if" right now — the only "syndicate" involved will be Michael Strauss Jacobs, himself.

Laughing at the talk that he's only one of a group in the deal, "Uncle Mike" explained today that up to now it has been strictly a "lone wolf" proposition in all the negotiations, which he figures may wind up in time for him to take over the club before the end of the season.

"Why should I take a lot of other men in the thing?" he asked. "The bank (Brooklyn Trust Company, which controls 51 per cent of the Dodger stock) came to me as an individual and started the negotiations. We've reached the stage now where we're going to get down to talking price.

"If it looks a good thing from a business standpoint, I'd be pretty silly to cut a lot of other guys in. Sure, I may have to have help in the financing, but I know where to get the dough without getting tangled up with a lot of partners."

Incidentally, Mike has no idea of giving up fight promoting just because he may own a big league ball club.

"I get too much of a kick out of putting on fights, and manoeuvring around," he said. "Some guys are saying I don't know anything about baseball. Well, I wasn't a boxer, either, before I started promoting fights."

IT'S ALL BOBBY'S NOW

Bobby Riggs, of Chicago, retired the Seabright Bowl, symbol of victory in men's singles in annual Seabright tourney, when he scored his third successive win of the title by beating Frank Kovacs in epic final-round match, July 27. Riggs, RIGHT, and Kovacs are pictured with the bowl. The unseeded and unranked Kovacs carried Riggs to five sets before Bobby downed him 2-6, 0-6, 6-3, 11-9, 10-8.

ONTARIO GOLF FIELD PACED BY SNEAD AND KERR

Each Card a One-Under-Par 71 For First 18 Holes At Fort Erie

Fort Erie, Ont., Aug. 9—(CP)—Slammin' Sam Snead of Shawnee-on-Delaware, Pa., and stocky Bill Kerr of Toronto paced the field into the final 18 holes medal play today in the Ontario Open Golf championship.

Each carded a one-under-par 71 in the first 18 holes yesterday, and if Kerr had kept on going the way he started out he would be all alone in front of the pack. Kerr set a blazing pace over the first nine holes, making the turn in 33, three under regulation figures, while Snead carded a 37. On the back nine yesterday Kerr faded to take a 38, while Snead finally mastered his putting and came back in 34.

A trio who kept pace with par started the final round a stroke behind the leaders. These were Dick Borthwick of Toronto, Bobby Burns of Weston, Ont, and Joe Noble of Kitchener. An even half dozen had 73's and the rest of the 70 professional and amateur entrants were scattered down the list.

On the 73 runs were Hugh Borthwick of Toronto, Ben Norris of Fairmount, Willie Lamb of Toronto, Lloyd Tucker of Kitchener, Howard Swanson of Buffalo and Eddie Sams of Erie Downs. Sams, a Buffalo postal clerk, headed the amateurs in the fray.. Robert Kay of Erie Downs was second amateur with 75. Phil Farley of Toronto, the Ontario amateur titleholder, carded a 76.

WINS AUSSIE CUP

Flemington, Australia, (CP)—T. S. Ryder's Blackford won the $7,000 Australian Grand National steeplechase over 3 1-2 miles on the famous Flemington racecourse here, beating J. S. Ford's Man of Ayr by half a length.

Mike Jacobs: "When Dan Parker of the Mirror asked me about buying the Dodgers he laughed and said 'Did you ever play a game of baseball?' I said no—and I ain't ever even been in the ring, either."

SYRACUSE GIVES HOME TOWN FANS REASON TO CHEER

Chiefs Are Only Four Games Away From Top Rung In International League

ROYALS WIN

Marchildon Hurls Five-Hitter As Leafs Beat Bisons 7 to 2

Syracuse Chiefs, on the march toward a first-division berth in the International Baseball League, are giving the home town fans plenty to cheer about.

Only four games out of fourth place today, the Chiefs look like a new team compared with the club that was holding down last place only a month ago.

Playing the hard-fighting brand of ball for which Manager Dick Porter is famous, Syracuse has won 26 of 45 games since July 7, including a double victory over Jersey City Giants last night.

Led by Ed Longacre who collected four hits in eight trips to the plate, the Chiefs came through in the last inning of each game to win 3-2 and 6-5.

Trailing as they entered the seventh inning of the abbreviated twilight contest, the Chiefs bunched four hits off three Jersey pitchers for a pair of runs, with Longacre driving in the winning tally. In the nightcap, with the score tied at 5-5, Longacre led off the ninth with a single, advanced on Gene Hasson's sacrifice and slid home with the winning run on Chris Hartje's single to centre.

The double defeat dropped Jersey City into fifth place, one game behind the Montreal Royals, who moved ahead with a 7-3 triumph over the league leading Rochester Red Wings.

Royals pounded Hank Gornicki for 12 hits to sweep the three game series with the Wings and make it seven in a row over the pace-setters. Bob Pastor and Steve Rachunok limited Rochester to eight scattered hits, the latter receiving credit for the win. The setback cut the Wings' lead to two games over the idle Newark Bears.

While Marchildon was hand-cuffing the Bisons, his mates fell on Lynn Nelson and Ken Trexler for 15 hits to even the series at one-all.

DID YOU KUOW THAT — the Brooklyn Dodgers have a juggling act trio composed of "Fat Freddie" Fitzimmons, Dolph Camilli and Vito Tamulis?....That in the Bantam, Midget, Juvenile and junior series in the Ontario Baseball Association there is only one team entered between Toronto and Kingston?....and that is the Kingston juniors, who meet the T.A.B.A. winners at home on Aug. 28th in the first round play-offs?.... And that the Lake Yacht Racing Association is holding a sailing regatta, under the auspices of the Prince Edward Yacht Club, in Prinyer's Cove today and tomorrow?.... and that the regatta will conclude with a free-for-all handicap sailing race from Picton to Kingston late Saturday?....That the Quinte Tennis Club, holding forth at their Dufferin Ave. courts, have not lost a match in the Trent Valley League this year.... They tied twice with Tweed, however?....

After sailing on proverbial rough waters, the local softball craft floated out into rather calm waters last night when the management of the Corbys A. C. and Shell "Oilers" met on a common level with the executive of the Belleville Softball Association. All differences were cooly ironed out and the series will continue on Saturday night at Coleman Flats in the sixth game of the series, with Corbys enjoying a one game advantage. After much controversy it was agreed between Skippers Bawden and Barriage, that three umpires should officiate on Saturday, which should prove most satisfactory to both the players and the attending public. Manager Gerald Barriage was most congenial when the facts were placed before the meeting, while Skipper Harold Bawden agreed that both teams must be at full strength on Saturday or else he was willing to call off hostilities, but subsequent findings on our part assured that both squads will be well represented, so all roads lead to the Flats for the big game Saturday.

Secretary Harry Knott, of the Belleville Softball Association and under whose direction the local Neighborhood loop is operated, is trying to catch up on some loose ends and postponements in the latter league so that the "Naborhooders" can commence their league play-offs before the Belleville Fair opens on the 29th.

Do you remember when—Hundreds of sportsmen from Canada and the United States paid last tribute to Eddie Gerard, great Ottawa Senator defenceman and coach of three National Hockey League teams, buried at Ottawa three years ago today.

Thirty-nine-year-old Freddy Fitzsimmons' achievement of gaining his 200th National League victory in his sixteenth season brought back interesting memories to Daniel M. Daniel of New York World-Telegram. "It was at this stage of the 1925 campaign that Fitzsimmons joined the Giants" recalls Daniel.

"After having established a record with four consecutive pennants, the Polo Grounders, who were destined to finish second, had begun to falter. John J. McGraw knew the signs and dashed off to Indianapolis, where he bought Fitzsimmons. Fred had won 14 and lost six in the American Association and had not aroused a lot of talk. In fact, when Mac brought Fred into camp the war correspondents were amazed. After Fitz' debut with the Giants, the experts were more skeptical than ever. 'Why, that guy can't knock your hat off,' they wailed. The arrival of Fitzsimmons failed to stem the tide of defeat for the Giants. But he remained with the Giants until 1938, when, in a misguided hour, Bill Terry gave Fitz and $10,000 for Tom Baker, who is now pitching for Springfield, Mass.

"Fitzsimmons is the most accomplished knuckle-ball pitcher baseball yet has developed. He was the first to get complete control over that tricky delivery. And we believe he also was the first to pitch that ball with speed. Despite his size and weight, Fitz has carried through the years the invaluable will and ability to keep in fine physical shape. That's why he fooled Terry after Bill had tossed him to Flatbush."

'Member Joe Burk? He's ruled the sculling roost here, there and most everywhere for the past some years, but Joe has tossed in the sponge, that is as far as international sculling is concerned. "There is nothing to look forward to with the present world conditions prevailing" says Joe in reference to the singles rowing business. Also Joe admits it discourages youngsters to have one individual dominating the rowing world, which actually is more truth than poetry. Joe Burk captured the United States and Canadian singles title this year, after having won the Diamond Sculls in 1938 and '39 and also capturing the valuable $5,000 Philadelphia gold cup. He does not intend to turn professional, which after all is a good idea, that is especially when Bobby Pearce is around.

Sport Spice—The Reds came back to win in the clutch yesterday while the Browns stopped the Indians from taking over first place in the American by splitting a dual bill ...... Rapid Bob Feller chalked up his 19th win of the year as the Shaker Heights nine won the opener, but even though the Indians out-hit the Browns eight to three, they lost the nightcap 2-1 as the Tigers marked time when idle.... Don't forget, always remember, the local softball heads will present an abundance of softball equipment to Captain Ralph Bird and the 3-47th Battery lads at Coleman Flats just previous to Saturday night's sixth Corby-Shell game at the Flats....In a greater Gotham game the Dodgers beat the Giants 2-1 at the Polo Grounds yesterday to remind Bill Terry that the "Daffiness boys" are still in the National League.... Postmaster Jim Farley resigned his position yesterday to all but substantiate our report of many weeks ago, that "genial Jim" would head a group to purchase the New York Yankees' syndicate, which is nice business, that is if you have the peanuts, which we ain't, if you get what we mean.

Little Benny's Note Book

My cousin Artie was around this afternoon and ma gave us each money to go and get a ice cream soda on account of it being so hot she proberly thought it would cool her off to get rid of us a while, and we went around to White's drug store and both ordered chockilt, and 2 bewty looking girls with red shoes and white stockings came in and got up on the next stools and ordered strawberry, Artie saying, O boy, twins.

Being what they looked like, with long yellow hair and exactly the same expression, and we started to drink our ice cream sodas pretending we didn't know anybody special was sitting next to us, and the 2 girls started to drink theirs talking and giggeling, me whispering to Artie, O boy talk about sissiety.

Meaning the way they were holding their spoons to get out their ice cream with their little finger stuck out elegant, being a bewtiful picture to watch, and me and Artie got almost to the bottom of our sodas and we started to get the last layer up with our straws and it made a kind of a noise and we quick stopped on account of not wanting to sound too vulger, Artie whispering, Let's just kind of wait till they go and then finish ours.

Wich we started to do, just leaning over our straws without actually sucking, and Mr. White said, If you boys are through, there are some people waiting for stools, have you finished?

Us saying we had on account of not knowing what elts to say, and he took our glasses away and just then the 2 bewty looking girls started to drink the bottom of theirs through their straws, making the fiersest noise I ever heard coming out of 2 sodas, and it was too late to grab ours back and we walked out feeling mad at ourselves and it spoiled the rest of the afternoon for about an hour.

How To Overcome Piles And Rectal Soreness

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is highly recommended, is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

ATTACKS CUDAHY AS 'GARRULOUS'

New York, Aug. 9—(CP)— John Cudahy, United States Ambassador to Belgium, came under the fire of the New York Herald Tribune today for his London interview in which he forecast famine in Europe this winter unless American relief supplies are sent.

Saying that Cudahy "thus joins the already too numerous ranks of garrulous ambassadors and ex-ambassadors who seem unable to realize that it is their function to execute policy, not to make it," the paper said editorially that if famine results in Europe it will be the fault of the Nazis.

It added: "The prospect represents simply another horror of the war which the Nazis chose to unloose upon the world."

$18,000. Paid For Brown Colt by Mrs. Ethel Mars

Saratoga Springs, N.Y., Aug. 9—(AP)—A brown colt, whose father is Sickle, only once out of the money in 10 starts and the sire of such famed winners as Stagehand, Brevity, Reaping Reward and Cravat, holds the spotlight as the "glamor boy" of this year's Saratoga sales.

For the youngster brought the highest price of last night's sales and of the meeting.

He went for $18,000, first to Mrs. Ethel V. Mars, whose pocket-book is as open as the doors of her Milky Way stable during exercise time, and then to the Brookmeade stable.

When it was announced that Mrs. Mars had purchased the colt Hugh Fontaine, trainer for Brookmeade, protested, saying he had bid the $18,000 and was entitled to the colt. Roy Waldron, acting for Mrs. Mars, readily gave up the animal.

SHINING WINDOWS

by Kathleen Norris

INSTALMENT 28.

For a day or two Joyce had been shrinking away from the fear of it; she had been in a continual state of balancing the full wretchedness of it against its utter incredibility. She must love Paul. She did love Paul. Any other idea was completely absurd! But it had grown stronger in being denied; it had crept in upon her with an increasing conviction. She knew it now. She did not love Paul as a sweetheart should, as a wife should love her man. She could not marry him.

Joyce felt dazed and cold and sick at the discovery, but it was there, like losing an arm or getting the measles. Everything was changed; one could not do anything about it; it was simply that way.

The feeling of strangeness and doubt had come to her when she and Paul had been alone on the first night of her week-long visit. Before that it had all been perfect; their drive from the ranch, their luncheon together, their arrival in Santa Barbara for a fresh salty swim, for dressing in cool white for a big dinner at the hotel, for dancing, laughter, new faces, new friends.

But afterward, in the moon-drenched patio of the Knights' beautiful Spanish villa, he had suddenly been the lover and Joyce had begun to suspect even then that her utter lack of response to his kisses, her odd feeling of detachment and reluctance in his arms had been more than a girl's shy withdrawal from the unfamiliar thrill of the man's eager domination. She had not been able to respond to it; she had felt embarrassed, confused, her cheeks burning red in the cool night shadows. She had slipped away quietly pleading fatigue after the long day's drive.

It had been so ever since. The daytime hours had been swift and enchanted; the inevitable time of love-making, late at night, had continued to perplex and trouble her. And from this beginning the whole relationship between them had changed. Joyce had come to see that in no way could she feel what she must feel if she and Paul were really to be man and wife within a few weeks' time.

Splendid in white flannels and evening mess jackets, riding his polo ponies hard, keeping tennis balls flying in the sunshiny air, scowling over a golf drive, Paul was the darling of all hearts this year in Santa Barbara, as popular with the men as the women. And he was openly, eagerly the slave of Joyce Ballard; he made no secret of it. They were going to be married; it wasn't announced, but every one knew it. When Paul and Joyce were along he wanted to talk of the fun they would have. They would have his father's apartment in San Francisco for five months and then they would find some smaller place, and every summer come down to mother for a couple of months.

All that meant nothing. All this beauty and pleasure and excitement were only distractions that kept her from thinking, as she did think in every quiet moment: "I can't do it. I've got to tell him! Oh, what on earth shall I do!"

"And if I think this here," Joyce reflected, "here where half the girls in the place are madly in love with him, how much more I'll think it when I get home and can see the whole thing quietly! Home—" she said in her heart, over a sharp pang of longing for it.

Joyce sighed. Slowly she got up. They were all to meet at the club for lunch at one.

At the club where the Jimmy Holidays, motoring up from Los Angeles. The Holidays were old friends of all the Ballards, and they were delighted to see Joyce and to hear all the news. Quite suddenly on an impulse, Joyce asked them to take her with them when they started northward at three o'clock. And immediately afterward she drew Paul aside for a private talk.

They took two deep chairs at a deserted end of the club veranda.

"Paul, this is the hardest thing I ever said to any one in my life," Joyce began courageously. "I'm so sorry to say it! I know you'll make it as easy for me as you can. I'm going home with Jim and Anita tonight because—it's just simply this: I don't want to get married—I don't want to be engaged—not to any one—"

A halt. His laughing incredulous eyes gradually lost their amused look; he saw that this was serious.

"What's the matter, Joyce?"

"Nothing. That's the trouble. I mean that's what makes it seem so completely idiotic in me to change."

"You haven't changed."

"I have, Paul. You know there's a feeling that makes you want to marry a person," the girl floundered on uneasily, "and a feeling that makes it impossible. I—it's hard to explain, when I like you so—love you, really, but it wouldn't be honest not to say that I can't go on!"

Paul considered this a moment.

"What have I done, Joyce?"

"Oh, Paul, you haven't done anything! It's just that I don't want to marry any one," she explained feebly.

Paul was watching her attentively. He smiled. "All girls feel that."

"Yes; I know. And it may be, sometime, years from now—but I just want it understood that we're not engaged," Joyce said. "Now while there's time—while we're just friends—"

"We're a lot more than friends, Joyce," he said slowly.

"Yes, I know we are!" she admitted.

"I've never loved any woman except you, and I never will," Paul said. "What's happened? What have I done? I don't understand."

"Nothing's happened. It's nothing you've done—truly. I've never liked any one else either. But I can't leave my father—Dodo. I mean—I belong at home. It was different years ago; I didn't feel that way then. But now—now I want to be free—I mean I don't want to get married. You can't think how terribly hard it is for me to say this." Joyce got to her feet. The talk was over. "I'm going home with the Holidays; I'll leave a note for your mother," she added.

"I'll drive you home to Merriwell, of course," Paul said.

"Please—" the girl began, a hand on his arm.

"You mean you really don't want me to?" He was more puzzled than alarmed; he was infinitely gentle.

"Please not."

"Then I'll at least take you to our place now, and help you pack."

He would do it. He hardly spoke on the way; his eyes were always on the road ahead. But Joyce talked feverishly in explanation, in apology. Unless you felt sure of yourself, you might only make two people miserable. Paul had been just an angel to her; he had carried her over the hardest years of her life, and if he and she had been married four years ago it might have worked out all right. But now all Joyce Ballard wanted was the ranch and the problems to solve there.

Paul was very silent when they reached Jimble Lodge. He went upstairs with her to her bedroom and sat watching her while she packed.

"I've been lying awake thinking about it; I've been despising myself. I feel such a fool, Paul!" she pleaded.

"You'll straighten out when you get home; you're not used to the pace here," he said slowly after a while.

"It isn't that."

"It must be that, Joyce. Why, after all these years, you couldn't—I don't believe you could throw me down!"

"But it isn't throwing you down! It's the hardest thing I've ever done, but it isn't anything like that—like a quarrel or a change of feeling! It's just—just knowing that you and I aren't—aren't right—that I can't go on, not feeling more than I do. A girl has to feel—thrilled, sure of herself, Paul."

"Oh, but you do, Joyce, of course you do! You're tired now; we've been going too hard a pace. But this is our lives! Why, we were going to hunt houses and cruise around Chinatown looking for things. Don't speak as if we could end it all with just one talk, like this!"

"I'm not. I don't mean to. I mean, as far as friendship and liking you and loving to have you come down to the ranch, as far as all that goes—"

"Well, we'll not talk about it any more," he said finally. "I'll be down to see you Saturday and everything'll be different then. Just one thing, Joyce; there isn't any one else?"

"Good heavens, no!" she said, wide-eyed. "I'm not thinking of marriage. I'm happy as I am."

They joined the Holidays; bags were stowed; Joyce got in with Jim and Anita on the front seat.

"Good-bye, dear," Paul said. "I'll be down for lunch Saturday."

At nine the next morning she went into the Merriwell post office and spoke to Marie-Therese Sallock.

"Ma'tress, want to run me up the hill? The friends who were bringing me up from Santa Barbara got into engine trouble last night and we had to stay at King City. I took the bus the rest of the way."

They were not silent for one minute of the run up the hill. But Joyce was not talking so hard but that she was drinking it all in: the orchards simmering in early morning heat. When at last she was home and Marie-Therese had gone, it was delicious to go up to her own airy bedroom among the pear tree leaves, and change to comfortable cotton home wear and to sally forth in search of company.

She wandered on past the barn up to the orchard. Men were working at the ladders under the peach trees dressed only in jeans and canvas shoes. Farther up was the cutting shed—where a score of women and girls and children were seated with knives and pans, peeling the peaches as fast as their sticky fingers could fly.

Joyce saw her father, and went up to kiss him, greeting every one on all sides as she went. Many of these cutters came regularly to the ranch when the cherries began in May and stayed until the last of the prunes were in October; they were old friends.

"Joyce — well, welcome home!" William Ballard said.

There were blackened sticky knives in a little box up at one end of the table. Joyce took one to the water faucet and washed it. Isabelle was there, busy with lemons and sugar.

"Joyce, it seems good to see you back."

"What are you doing?"

"Why, we're givin' 'em sandwiches and iced tea up here this week, and they're workin' right through until four-thirty. Fruit's spoiling so fast we've had night shifts since Monday."

The hot afternoon hours flew by. It was four o'clock when Joyce and her father walked down to the house. She had not yet seen Michael.

In the quiet of the farmhouse she started dinner preparations. Presently all the grime and stickiness and weariness of the day were washed away in a luxurious bath, and Joyce came downstairs to set the supper table out under the oak.

Joyce went into the kitchen on some errand; Michael was there, taking a drink at the sink's tap.

He turned about and smiled at her.

"Well, hel-lo! I thought it was to be tomorrow."

The room went slowly about in enchanted circles.

POLICE COURT

After J. W. Bean, Belleville, had complained to local police that a strange man was acting peculiarly and loitering near a parked automobile at the upper end of Front street shortly after 1.00 a.m. today, the authorities arrested John Bowman, 34-year-old Kingston transient.

Today in local police court Bowman pleaded guilty to a charge of intoxication and was given 14 days in the common jail in the default of the payment of a fine.

When the name of Vincent McMahon, Frankford, was called in court today the accused failed to respond. "I believe you are a personal acquaintance of the accused," asked Robt. Pringle, local barrister who informed the court he was representing McMahon and addressing the words to the Bench.

"I did considerable legal business for this man's parents many years ago, but in this case your client had better be here next week or this court will issue a bench warrant for his arrest," replied Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C.

Must Get Dog Licences

Ten local citizens were summoned into court for failing to obtain their 1940 city dog tax. In each case the persons concerned were assessed the costs of the court and instructed to purchase a dog tag immediately.

Acting Chief Harman announced today that only 661 dog licences had been purchased in the city thus far this year. "This is a decrease from last year and unless those still delinquent in this matter obtain their dog tags soon, others will be summoned into court on similar charges," warned the Acting Chief today.

CHAPTER 6.

Brooke had gotten three letters from Grace, newsy and jolly. Since her house was filled and her cook overburdened, there was no possibility of her coming to New York soon. There were brief notes from Helen, her stepmother, (her father had not written a letter in years) of family news and the certainty that she was happy near Rod.

Not forgotten as the days passed was the afternoon at Barney Glass's. Nor were the three people she had met there—the vivacious Irene, the tall, sunburned Julian, the retund Barney. Rod had not proposed taking her there again and she preferred to think that Jim had been an alarmist; that her love for Rod had made her small and suspicious.

After Rod's first call, Mrs. Kingsbury had admitted, "He's a fine looking young man." Brooke had had one evening with Jim, telling Mrs. Kingsbury before he came that he was Rod's oldest friend. It was an evening similar to that first evening with him except that he had merely inquired about Rod but had not discussed him.

And so one day had slid evenly into the next. Surprising how short the days were, how filled, punctuated importantly by evenings with Rod. In the morning, after seeing him, she could not remember what they had said to each other, but she recalled vividly his smile, the darkness of his eyes and the contact of their lips before he left her. Not quick to laughter, her heart jumped when he laughed. But there was no one to whom to talk! And often, after an evening with Rod, she longed to say to the old woman enthroned in her bed, "I was so happy last night," and pour forth thoughts and feelings. Ellen was sweet but Brooke dared not risk a confidential chat with her lest Mrs. Kingsbury, as was her habit, sudenly appear noiselessly out of nowhere.

It was Saturday evening and past eight o'clock and Mrs. Kingsbury, Brooke hoped, had been lulled to sleep by the latest and goriest mystery story. Often, she suspected with amusement, that Mrs. Kingsbury's curiosity got the better of her and that after Brooke left her, she read on with the aid of her magnifying glass.

It had been Thursday, she thought since Rod last called. Pulling over her head a slim black wool frock bought with Mrs. Kingsbury's first cheque. She was thinking of the difference in equality in Chatham-purchased frocks and New York purchased frocks when the phone beside her bed rang. Was Rod delayed?"

"Hello, Brooke?"

"Yes, Jim. How are you?" He did not know that the sudden gaiety in her voice was actually relief that it was not Rod who had been delayed or, worse, telling her he could not come.

There was a pause. Then Jim said slowly, "I'm fine. But—but how are you?"

Stupid. . . . "I'm fine, too."

He seemed to gulp. "Well, I—I was just wondering how you were, and the job, and . . ."

"Everything is going along beautifully." This was so pointless. . . . "Subways don't frighten me any more and I haven't been lost for two weeks. And if you're interested in murder stories, I can give you a long list of titles."

He hesitated again. "Well, I'm not particularly interested. We'll—we'll have to get together soon. I've a new symphony that took almost half of my last pay. If you need me . . ."

"Thank you, Jim." He was acting in a very strange way. "When I want music and spaghetti and wine, I'll call you."

"Okay. Good-bye."

In a dull voice that sounded very far away he said, "Good-bye".
